SCENE.—ENGLAND.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

HENRY, WESTMORELAND, SIR WALTER BLUNT, and others.

So shaken as we are, so wan with care,
 A time for frightened peace to pant,
 The short-winded accents of new broils
 To ensue in strands<sup>a</sup> afar remote.
 O, that the thirsty entrance<sup>b</sup> of this soil
 Should with her lips with her own children's blood;
 That trenching war should channel her fields,
 And her flowrets with the armed hoofs
 Of paces: those opposed eyes,
 Like the meteors of a troubled heaven,
 Full of the mutability of their Nature, of one substance bred,
 Should meet in the intestine shock
 And ghastly clash of civil butchery,
 As in mutual well-beseeming ranks,
 Like some way; and be no more oppos'd
 Acquaintance, kindred, and allies:

 of construction of the text:—"No more the thirsty Erinyes of this soil."The text is somewhat obscure: but the obscurity is the manner of Shakspeare, and in great part arises from the metaphor. Entrance is put for mouth;
 see the note. "No more the thirsty mouth of this earth her lips with the blood of her own children," and little difficulty.

The edge of war, like an ill-sheathed knife,
 No more shall cut his master. Therefore, friends,
 As far as to the sepulchre of Christ,
 (Whose soldier now, under whose blessed cross
 We are impressed and engag'd to fight),
 Forthwith a power of English shall we levy;
 Whose arms were moulded in their mothers' womb
 To chase these pagans, in those holy fields,
 Over whose acres walk'd those blessed feet,
 Which, fourteen hundred years ago, were nail'd,
 For our advantage, on the bitter cross.
 But this our purpose is a twelvemonth old,
 And bootless 't is to tell you—we will go;
 Therefore we meet not now:—Then let me hear
 Of you, my gentle cousin Westmoreland,
 What yesternight our council did decree,
 In forwarding this dear expedience.

West. My liege, this haste was hot in question,
 And many limits<sup>b</sup> of the charge set down
 But yesternight: when, all athwart, there came
 A post from Wales, loaden with heavy news;
 Whose worst was,—that the noble Mortimer,
 Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight Against the irregular and wild Glendower,
 Was by the rude hands of that Welshman taken,

<sup>a</sup> Therefore we meet not now. We do not meet now on that account.<sup>b</sup> Limits. To limit is to define; and therefore the limits of the charge may be the calculations, the estimates.

And a thousand of his people butchered :
Upon whose dead corpses there was such misuse,
Such beastly, shameless transformation,
By those Welshwomen done, as may not be,
Without much shame, re-told or spoken of.

K. Hen. It seems, then, that the tidings of this broil Brake off our business for the Holy Land.

West. This, match'd with other like, my gracious lord.

For more uneven and unwelcome news
Came from the north, and thus it did report :
On Holy-rod day, the gallant Hotspur there,
Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald,
That ever-valiant and approved Scot,
At Holmedon met,

Where they did spend a sad and bloody hour ;
As by discharge of their artillery,
And shape of likelihood, the news was told ;
For he that brought them, in the very heat
And pride of their contention did take horse,
Uncertain of the issue any way.

K. Hen. Here is a dear and true-industrious friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his horse,
Stain'd with the variation of each soil
Betwixt that Holmedon and this seat of ours ;
And he hath brought us smooth and welcome news :
The earl of Douglas is discomfited ;
Ten thousand bold Scots, two-and-twenty knights, Balk'd<sup>a</sup> in their own blood, did sir Walter see On Holmedon's plains : Of prisoners, Hotspur took Mordake earl of Fife, and eldest son
To beuten Douglas ; and the earl of Athol,
Of Murray, Angus, and Menteith.
And is not this an honourable spoil ?
A gallant prize ? ha, cousin, is it not ?

West. In faith,
It is a conquest for a prince to boast of.

K. Hen. Yea, there thou mak'st me sad, and mak'st me sin

In envy that my lord Northumberland
Should be the father of so bless'd a son :
A son, who is the theme of honour's tongue ;
Amongst a grove, the very straightest plant ;
Who is sweet Fortune's minion, and her pride :
Whilst I, by looking on the praise of him,
See riot and dishonour stain the brow
Of my young Harry. O, that it could be prov'd,
That some night-tripping fairy had exchang'd
In cradle-clothes our children where they lay,
And call'd mine Percy, his Plantagenet !
Then would I have his Harry, and he mine.
But let him from my thoughts :—What think you, coz',
Of this young Percy's pride ? the prisoners,
Which be in this adventure hath surpris'd,
To his own use he keeps ; and sends me word,
I shall have none but Mordake earl of Fife.

West. This is his uncle's teaching, this is Worcester, Malevolent to you in all aspects ;
Which makes him prune himself, and bristle up
The crest of youth against your dignity.

K. Hen. But I have sent for him to answer this :
And, for this cause, awhile we must neglect
Our holy purpose to Jerusalem.

Cousin, on Wednesday next our council we
Will hold at Windsor ; and so inform the lords ;
But come yourself with speed to us again ;
For more is to be said, and to be done,
Than out of anger can be uttered.

West. I will, my liege.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. Another Room in the Palace.

HENRY PRINCE OF WALES, and FALSTAFF.

W. Hal, what time of day is it, lad ?

Balk'd. To balk is to raise into ridges.

P. Hen. Thou art so fat-witted, with drink sack, and unbuttoning thee after supper, upon benches after noon, that thou hast demand that truly which thou wouldst
What a devil hast thou to do with the day ? unless hours were cups of sack, and capons, and clocks the tongues of bawd, the signs of leaping-houses, and the blessed a fair hot wench in flame-coloured taffia reason why thou shouldst be so superfluous
the time of the day.

Fal. Indeed, you come near me, now, ;
that take purses, go by the moon and sever not by Phœbus,—he, that wandering knave
And, I prithee, sweet wag, when thou art God save thy grace, (majesty, I should say thou wilt have none,)—

P. Hen. What ! none ?

Fal. No, by my troth ; not so much as be prologue to an egg and butter.

P. Hen. Well, how then ? come, roundly.

Fal. Marry, then, sweet wag, when thou let not us that are squires of the night's bow thieves of the day's beauty ;<sup>a</sup> let us be Dia-gentlemen of the shade, minions of the mo-

P. Hen. Thou say'st well ; and it holdeth for the fortune of us, that are the moon's men and flow like the sea ; being governed as the moon. As for proof. Now, a purse resolutely snatched on Monday night, and lutely spent on Tuesday morning ; got w —lay by ;<sup>b</sup> and spent with crying—bring as low an ebb as the foot of the ladder : an in as high a flow as the ridge of the gallows

Fal. Thou say'st true, lad. And is not of the tavern a most sweet wench ?

P. Hen. As the honey of Hybla, my old castle. And is not a buff jerkin a most durance ?<sup>d</sup>

Fal. How now, how now, mad wag ? quips and thy quiddities ? what a plague with a buff jerkin ?

P. Hen. Why, what a pox have I to hostess of the tavern ?

Fal. Well, thou hast called her to a rec-a time and oft.

P. Hen. Did I ever call for thee to pay there ?

Fal. No ; I'll give thee thy due, thou
there.

P. Hen. Yea, and elsewhere, so far as my stretch ; and where it would not I have us

Fal. Yea, and so used it, that were it parent that thou art heir apparent,—But sweet wag, shall there be gallows standing when thou art king ? and resolution thus with the rusty curb of old father antic not thou, when thou art king, hang a thief

P. Hen. No ; thou shalt.

Fal. Shall I ? O rare ! I'll be a bra-

P. Hen. Thou judgest false already ; shalt have the hanging of the thieves, and rare hangman.

Fal. Well, Hal, well ; and in some <sup>a</sup> Day's beauty. Perhaps beauty is meant to be booty, as it is sometimes provincially.

<sup>d</sup> Robe of durance. The buff jerkin, the coat of mail was worn by sheriffs' officers. It was a robe of "everlasting garment," as in The Comedy of Errors was also a robe of "durance" in a sense that furnish an agreeable association to one who was and danger, as Falstaff was.

P. Hen. Well, come what will, I 'll tarry at home.

P. Hen. I care not.

Poins. Sir John, I prithee, leave the prince and me alone; I will lay him down such reasons for this adventure that he shall go.

Fal. Well, mayst thou have the spirit of persuasion and he the ears of profiting, that what thou speakest may move and what he hears may be believed, that the true prince may (for recreation sake) prove a false thief; for the poor abuses of the time want countenance. Farewell: You shall find me in Eastcheap.

P. Hen. Farewell, the latter spring! Farewell, Allhallowen summer!<sup>b</sup> [Exit Fal.]

Poins. Now, my good sweet honey lord, ride with us to-morrow; I have a jest to execute, that I cannot manage alone. Falstaff, Bardolph, Peto, and Gadshill, shall rob those men that we have already waylaid;
yourself and I will not be there: and when they have the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head from my shoulders.

P. Hen. But how shall we part with them in setting forth?

Poins. Why, we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to fail: and then will they adventure upon the exploit themselves: which they shall have no sooner achieved, but we 'll set upon them.

P. Hen. Ay, but 't is like that they will know us, by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment, to be ourselves.

Poins. Tut! our horses they shall not see, I 'll tie them in the wood; our visors we will change, after we leave them; and, sirrah,<sup>c</sup> I have cases of buckram for the nonce,<sup>d</sup> to immask our noted outward garments.

P. Hen. But, I doubt they will be too hard for us.

Poins. Well, for two of them, I know them to be as true-bred cowards as ever turned back; and for the third, if he fight longer than he sees reason I 'll forswear arms. The virtue of this jest will be, the incomprehensible lies that this fat rogue will tell us, when we meet at supper: how thirty, at least, he fought with;
what wards, what blows, what extremities he endured:
and in the reproof of this lies the jest.

P. Hen. Well, I 'll go with thee; provide us all things necessary and meet me. To-morrow night in Eastcheap, there I 'll sup. Farewell.

Poins. Farewell, my lord. [Exit POINS.]

P. Hen. I know you all, and will awhile uphold

The unyok'd humour of your idleness;

Yet herein will I imitate the sun,

Who doth permit the base contagious clouds

To smother up his beauty from the world,

That when he please again to be himself,

Being wanted, he may be more wonder'd at,

By breaking through the foul and ugly mists

Of vapours that did seem to strangle him.

To all the year were playing holidays,

If sport would be as tedious as to work;

<sup>b</sup> All-hallowen summer—summer in November, on the first of which month is the feast of All hallows, or All Saints.

<sup>c</sup> Sirrah, in this and other passages, is used familiarly, and even sharply, but not contemptuously. The word is supposed to have meant, originally, Sir, ha!

<sup>d</sup> For the nonce is simply for the once—for the one thing in question, whatever it be.

But when they seldom come they wish'd-for come,
 And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents.
 So, when this loose behaviour I throw off,
 And pay the debt I never promised,
 By how much better than my word I am
 By so much shall I falsify men's hopes;<sup>a</sup>
 And like bright metal on a sullen ground,
 My reformation, glittering o'er my fault,
 Shall show more goodly and attract more eyes
 Than that which hath no foil to set it off.
 I'll so offend to make offence a skill;
 Redeeming time when men think least I will. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, NORTHUMBERLAND, WORCESTER, HOTSPUR, SIR WALTER BLUNT, and others.

K. Hen. My blood hath been too cold and temperate,
 Unapt to stir at these indignities,
 And you have found me; for, accordingly,
 You tread upon my patience: but, be sure,
 I will from henceforth rather be myself,
 Mighty, and to be fear'd, than my condition;<sup>b</sup>
 Which hath been smooth as oil, soft as young down,
 And therefore lost that title of respect
 Which the proud soul ne'er pays but to the proud.

Wor. Our house, my sovereign liege, little deserves
 The scourge of greatness to be used on it;
 And that same greatness too which our own hands
 Have help to make so portly.

North. My lord,—

K. Hen. Worcester, get thee gone, for I do see Danger and disobedience in thine eye:
 O, sir, your presence is too bold and peremptory,
 And majesty might never yet endure
 The moody frontier<sup>c</sup> of a servant brow.
 You have good leave to leave us; when we need
 Your use and counsel we shall send for you.—

You were about to speak. [Exit WOR.]
 [To NORTH.]

North. Yea, my good lord.
 Those prisoners in your highness' name demanded,
 Which Harry Percy here at Holmedon took,
 Were, as he says, not with such strength denied
 As was deliver'd to your majesty:
 Either envy, therefore, or misprision,
 Is guilty of this fault, and not my son.

Hot. My liege, I did deny no prisoners.
 But, I remember, when the fight was done,
 When I was dry with rage and extreme toil,
 Breathless and faint, leaning upon my sword,
 Came there a certain lord, neat and trimly dress'd,
 Fresh as a bridegroom; and his chin, new reap'd,
 Show'd like a stubble-land at harvest-home;
 He was perfum'd like a milliner;
 And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held
 A pouncet-box, which ever and anon
 He gave his nose, and took 't away again;
 Who, therewith angry, when it next came there,
 Took it in snuff;<sup>d</sup> and still he smil'd and talk'd
 And as the soldiers bore dead bodies by
 He call'd them untaught knaves, unmannerly,
 To bring a slovenly unhandsome corse
 Betwixt the wind and his nobility.
 With many holiday and lady terms
 He question'd me; among the rest, demanded
 My prisoners, in your majesty's behalf.

I then, all smarting, with my wounds being cold,
 To be so pester'd with a popinjay,
 Out of my grief and my impatience
 Answer'd neglectingly, I know not what;
 He should, or should not;—for he made me mad,
 To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet,
 And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman
 Of guns, and drums, and wounds, (God save the man)
 And telling me, the sovereign'st thing on earth
 Was parmaceti for an inward bruise;
 And that it was great pity, so it was,
 That villainous saltpetre should be digg'd
 Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
 Which many a good tall fellow had destroy'd
 So cowardly; and but for these vile guns
 He would himself have been a soldier.
 This bald unjointed chat of his, my lord,
 I answer'd indirectly, as I said;
 And, I beseech you, let not this report
 Come current for an accusation,
 Betwixt my love and your high majesty.

Blunt. The circumstance consider'd, good my lord,
 Whatever Harry Percy then had said
 To such a person, and in such a place,
 At such a time, with all the rest re-told,
 May reasonably die, and never rise
 To do him wrong, or any way impeach
 What then he said, so he unsay it now.

K. Hen. Why, yet he doth deny his prisoners:
 But with proviso, and exception,
 That we, at our own charge, shall ransom straight
 His brother-in-law, the foolish Mortimer;
 Who, in my soul, hath wilfully betray'd
 The lives of those that he did lead to fight Against the great magician, damn'd Glendower;
 Whose daughter, as we hear, the earl of March Hath lately married. Shall our coffers then
 Be emptied, to redeem a traitor home?
 Shall we buy treason? and indent with fevers,<sup>e</sup>
 When they have lost and forfeit themselves?
 No, on the barren mountains let him starve;
 For I shall never hold that man my friend
 Whose tongue shall ask me for one penny cost
 To ransom home revolted Mortimer.

Hot. Revolted Mortimer!
 He never did fall off, my sovereign liege,
 But by the chance of war;—To prove that true
 Needs no more but one tongue for all those wounds,
 Those mouthed wounds, which valiantly he took
 When on the gentle Severn's sedgy bank,
 In single opposition, hand to hand,
 He did confound the best part of an hour
 In changing hardiment with great Glendower:
 Three times they breath'd, and three times did they die
 Upon agreement, of swift Severn's flood;
 Who then, affrighted with their bloody looks,
 Ran fearfully among the trembling reeds,
 And hid his crisp head in the hollow bank
 Blood-stained with these valiant combatants.
 Never did base and rotten policy
 Colour her working with such deadly wounds;
 Nor never could the noble Mortimer
 Receive so many, and all willingly:
 Then let him not be slander'd with revolt.

K. Hen. Thou dost belie him, Percy, thou dost lie
 him;
 He never did encounter with Glendower:
 I tell thee,
 He durst as well have met the devil alone,
 As Owen Glendower for an enemy.
 Art thou not asham'd? But, sirrah, henceforth

hear you speak of Mortimer :
 our prisoners with the speediest means,
 I'll hear in such a kind from me
 please you.—My lord Northumberland your departure with your son :—
 or prisoners, or you'll hear of it.
 [Exeunt KING HENRY, BLUNT, and Train.
 If the devil come and roar for them
 send them :—I will after straight, in so ; for I will ease my heart,
 to be with hazard of my head.
 What, drunk with choler? stay, and pause while ;
 your uncle.

Re-enter WORCESTER.

Speak of Mortimer? will speak of him ; and let my soul
 fly, if I do not join with him :
 if I'll empty all these veins,
 my dear blood drop by drop in the dust,
 lift the down-trod Mortimer
 the air as this unthankful king, rate and canker'd Bolingbroke.
 Brother, the king hath made your nephew
 mad. [To WORCESTER.
 Who struck this heat up, after I was gone?
 will, forsooth, have all my prisoners ;
 I urg'd the ransom once again for his brother, then his cheek look'd pale ;
 for face he turn'd an eye of death,
 even at the name of Mortimer.
 cannot blame him : Was he not proclaim'd, that dead is, the next of blood?
 He was : I heard the proclamation :
 it was, when the unhappy king sings in us God pardon!) did set forth his expedition ;
 we he, intercepted, did return
 mad, and shortly murdered.
 mad for whose death, we in the world's wide search solicit'd, and foully spoken of.
 soft, I pray you : Did king Richard then by butcher Mortimer crown?

He did ; myself did hear it.
 you, then I cannot blame his cousin king,
 for him on the barren mountains starv'd.
 to be that you, that set the crown mad of this forgetful man, for sake, wear the detested blot your subornation, shall it be, world of comes undergo,
 gentle, or base second means,
 the ladder, or the hangman rather?
 if that I descend so low,
 to line and the predicament
 as range under this subtle king.
 for shame, be spoken in these days, heretics in time to come,
 of your nobility and power seem both in an unjust behalf,— you, God pardon it! have done,— in Richard, that sweet lovely rose, this thorn, this canker,* Bolingbroke?
 to, in more shame, be further spoken,
 for fool'd, discarded, and shook off whom these shames ye underwent?
 me serves, wherein you may redeem his honours, and restore yourselves god thoughts of the world again :

side. The canker is the dog-rose—the rose of the of the garden.

Revenge the jeering and disdain'd contempt
 Of this proud king ; who studies, day and night,
 To answer all the debt he owes unto you,
 Even with the bloody payment of your deaths.
 Therefore, I say,—

Wor. Peace, cousin, say no more
 And now I will unclasp a secret book,
 And to your quick-conceiving discontents
 I'll read you matter deep and dangerous,
 As full of peril, and adventurous spirit,
 As to o'er-walk a current, roaring loud,
 On the unsteadfast footing of a spear.

Hot. If he fall in, good night :—or sink or swim :—
 Send danger from the east unto the west,
 So honour cross it from the north to south,
 And let them grapple :—the blood more stirs
 To rouse a lion than to start a hare.

North. Imagination of some great exploit Drives him beyond the bounds of patience.

Hot. By heaven, methinks, it were an easy leap
 To pluck bright honour from the pale-fac'd moon ;
 Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
 Where fathom-line could never touch the ground,
 And pluck up drowned honour by the locks ;
 So he, that doth redeem her thence, might wear,
 Without corrival, all her dignities :
 But out upon this half-fac'd fellowship!

Wor. He apprehends a world of figures here,
 But not the form of what he should attend.—
 Good cousin, give me audience for a while,
 And list to me.

Hot. I cry you mercy.

Wor. Those same noble Scots,
 That are your prisoners,—

Hot. I'll keep them all ;
 By heaven, he shall not have a Scot of them ;
 No, if a Scot would save his soul he shall not :
 I'll keep them, by this hand.

Wor. You start away,
 And lend no ear unto my purposes.—
 Those prisoners you shall keep.

Hot. Nay, I will ; that's flat :—
 He said he would not ransom Mortimer ;
 Forbad my tongue to speak of Mortimer
 But I will find him when he lies asleep,
 And in his ear I'll holla—Mortimer!

Nay, I'll have a starling shall be taught to speak
 Nothing but Mortimer, and give it him.
 To keep his anger still in motion.

Wor. Hear you, cousin ; a word.

Hot. All studies here I solemnly defy,
 Save how to gall and pinch this Bolingbroke :
 And that same sword-and-buckler prince of Wales,
 But that I think his father loves him not,
 And would be glad he met with some mischance,
 I'd have him poison'd with a pot of ale.

Wor. Farewell, kinsman! I will talk to you,
 When you are better temper'd to attend.

North. Why, what a wasp-tongued* and impatient fool

Art thou, to break into this woman's mood ;
 Tying thine ear to no tongue but thine own!

Hot. Why, look you, I am whipp'd and scourg'd with rods,

Nettled, and stung with pismires, when I hear
 Of this vile politician, Bolingbroke.
 In Richard's time,—What d'ye call the place?—
 A plague upon't—it is in Gloucestershire :—
 'T was where the madcap duke his uncle kept ;
 His uncle York ;—where I first bow'd my knee
 Unto this king of smiles, this Bolingbroke,
 When you and he came back from Ravenspurge.

* Wasp-tongued—having a tongue as peevish and mischievous as a wasp.

North. At Berkley castle.

Hot. You say true:—

Why, what a candy deal of courtesy
This fawning greyhound then did proffer me!
Look,—“when his infant fortune came to age,”
And,—“gentle Harry Percy,”—and, “kind cousin,”—
O, the devil take such cozeners!—God forgive me!—
Good uncle, tell your tale, for I have done.

Wor. Nay, if you have not, to 't again;
We'll stay your leisure.

Hot. I have done, in sooth.

Wor. Then once more to your Scottish prisoners.
Deliver them up without their ransom straight,
And make the Douglas' son your only mean
For powers in Scotland; which, for divers reasons,
Which I shall send you written, be assur'd,
Will easily be granted.—You, my lord, [To NORTH.]
Your son in Scotland being thus employ'd,
Shall secretly into the bosom creep
Of that same noble prelate, well belov'd,
The archbishop.

Hot. Of York, is 't not?

Wor. True; who bears hard
His brother's death at Bristol, the lord Scroop.
I speak not this in estimation<sup>a</sup>
As what I think might be, but what I know
Is ruminated, plotted, and set down;
And only stays but to behold the face
Of that occasion that shall bring it on.

Hot. I smell it.

Upon my life it will do wond'rous well.

North. Before the game's a-foot thou still

Wor. And 't is no little reason bids us
To save our heads by raising of a head
For, bear ourselves as even as we can,
The king will always think him in our debt
And think we think ourselves unsatisfied,
Till he hath found a time to pay us home.
And see already, how he doth begin
To make us strangers to his looks of love.

Wor. Cousin, farewell;—No further go
Than I by letters shall direct your course,
When time is ripe, which will be suddenly,
I'll steal to Glendower, and lord Mortimer
Where you and Douglas, and our powers at
(As I will fashion it,) shall happily meet,
To bear our fortunes in our own strong arm
Which now we hold at much uncertainty.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rochester. An Inn Yard.

Enter a Carrier, with a lantern in his hand.

1 Car. Heigh ho! An't be not four by the day, I'll be hang'd: Charles' wain<sup>b</sup> is over the new chimney, and yet our horse not packed. What, ostler!

Ost. [Within.] Anon, anon.

1 Car. I prithee, Tom, beat Cut's saddle, put a few flocks in the point; the poor jade is wrung in the withers out of all cess.<sup>c</sup>

Enter another Carrier.

2 Car. Peas and beans are as dank here as a dog, and this is the next way to give poor jades the bots:
this house is turned upside down since Robin ostler died.

1 Car. Poor fellow! never joyed since the price of oats rose; it was the death of him.

2 Car. I think this is the most villainous house in all London road for fleas: I am stung like a tench.

1 Car. Like a tench? by the mass, there is ne'er a king in Christendom could be better bit than I have been since the first cock.

2 Car. Why, you will allow us ne'er a jordan, and then we leak in your chimney; and your chamber-lie breeds fleas like a loach.

1 Car. What, ostler! come away, and be hanged, come away.

2 Car. I have a gammon of bacon, and two razes of ginger,<sup>d</sup> to be delivered as far as Charing Cross.

1 Car. 'Odsbody! the turkeys in my pannier are quite starved.—What, ostler!—A plague on thee! hast ome, shelter, shelter: I have removed Fal-and he frets like a gummed velvet.

Stand close.

Enter FALSTAFF.

s! Poins, and he hanged! Poins!

Peace, ye fat-kidneyed rascal; What a

He is walked up to the top of the hill; I'll fair death for all this, if I'scape hanging that rogue. I have forsworn his company siders—drunkards.

Johnson thinks that great oneyers is merely a for great ones.

h. This was a soft name for a theft, of the same squire—by the title.

Bardolph!—Peto!—I'll starve, ere I'll rob a foot further. An't were not as good a deed as drink, to turn true man, and leave these rogues, I am the veriest varlet that ever chewed with a tooth. Eight yards of uneven ground is threescore and ten miles afoot with me; and the stony-hearted villains know it well enough: A plague upon't, when thieves cannot be true one to another! [They whistle.] Whew!—A plague light upon you all! Give me my horse, you rogues; give me my horse, and be hanged.

P. Hen. Peace, ye fat-guts! lie down; lay thine ear close to the ground, and list if thou canst hear the tread of travellers.

Fal. Have you any levers to lift me up again, being down? 'Sblood, I'll not bear mine own flesh so far afoot again, for all the coin in thy father's exchequer.
What a plague mean ye to colt<sup>a</sup> me thus?

P. Hen. Thou liest, thou art not colted, thou art un-colted.

Fal. I prithee, good prince Hal, help me to my horse, good king's son.

P. Hen. Out, you rogue! shall I be your ostler?

Fal. Go, hang thyself in thine own heir-apparent garters! If I be ta'en, I'll peach for this. An I have not ballads made on you all, and sung to filthy tunes, let a cup of sack be my poison: When a jest is so forward, and afoot too,—I hate it.

Enter GADSHILL.

Gads. Stand.

Fal. So I do, against my will.

Poins. O, 't is our setter: I know his voice.

Enter BARDOLPH.

Bard. What news?

Gads. Case ye, case ye; on with your visors; there's money of the king's coming down the hill; 't is going to the king's exchequer.

Fal. You lie, you rogue; 't is going to the king's tavern.

Gads. There's enough to make us all.

Fal. To be hanged.

P. Hen. You four shall front them in the narrow lane; Ned and I will walk lower: if they'scape from your encounter, then they light on us.

Peto. How many be there of them?

Gads. Some eight, or ten.

Fal. Zounds! will they not rob us?

P. Hen. What, a coward, sir John Paunch?

Fal. Indeed, I am not John of Gaunt, your grandfather: but yet no coward, Hal.

P. Hen. We'll leave that to the proof.

Poins. Sirrah Jack, thy horse stands behind the hedge; when thou need'st him, there thou shalt find him. Farewell, and stand fast.

Fal. Now cannot I strike him if I should be hanged.

P. Hen. Ned, where are our disguises?

Poins. Here, hard by; stand close.

[Exeunt P. HENRY and POINS.]

Fal. Now, my masters, happy man be his dole, say
I; every man to his business.

Enter Travellers.

I Trav. Come, neighbour; the boy shall lead our horses down the hill: we'll walk afoot awhile, and ease our legs.

Thievs. Stand.

Trav. Jesu bless us!

Fal. Strike; down with them; cut the villains' throats: Ah! whoreson caterpillars! bacon-fed knaves!
they hate us youth: down with them; fleece them.

I Trav. O, we are undone, both we and ours, for ever.

* To colt—to trick.

Fal. Hang ye, gorb'lied knaves; Are ye undone? No, ye fat chuffs;<sup>a</sup> I would your store were here! On, bacons, on! What, ye knaves, young men must live: You are grand-jurors, are ye? We'll jure ye, i' faith.

[Exeunt FALS., &c., driving the Travellers out.]

Re-enter PRINCE HENRY and POINS.

P. Hen. The thieves have bound the true men: Now could thou and I rob the thieves, and go merrily to London, it would be argument for a week, laughter for a month, and a good jest for ever.

Poins. Stand close, I hear them coming.

Re-enter Thieves.

Fal. Come, my masters, let us share, and then to horse before day. An the prince and Poins be not two arrant cowards, there's no equity stirring: there's no more valour in that Poins than in a wild duck.

P. Hen. Your money. [Rushing out upon them.]
Poins. Villains.

[As they are sharing, the PRINCE and POINS set upon them. They all run away; and FALSTAFF, after a blow or two, runs away too, leaving the booty behind.]<sup>b</sup>

P. Hen. Got with much ease. Now merrily to horse: The thieves are scatter'd, and possess'd with fear So strongly, that they dare not meet each other; Each takes his fellow for an officer.

Away, good Ned. Falstaff sweats to death, And lards the lean earth as he walks along: Were 't not for laughing, I should pity him.

Poins. How the rogue roar'd! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Warkworth. A Room in the Castle.

Enter HOTSPUR, reading a letter.

—“But, for mine own part, my lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the love I bear your house.”—He could be contented,—Why is he not then? In respect of the love he bears our house:—he shows in this, he loves his own barn better than he loves our house. Let me see some more. “The purpose you undertake is dangerous;”—Why, that's certain; 't is dangerous to take a cold, to sleep, to drink: but I tell you, my lord fool, out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this flower, safety. “The purpose you undertake is dangerous; the friends you have named uncertain; the time itself unsorted; and your whole plot too light for the counterpoise of so great an opposition.”—Say you so, my you so? I say unto you again, you are a shallow, cowardly hind, and you lie. What a lack-brain is this! I protest, our plot is as good a plot as ever was laid; our friends true and constant: a good plot, good friends, and full of expectation; an excellent plot, very good friends. What a frosty-spirited rogue is this! Why, my lord of York commends the plot and the general course of the action. By this hand, if I were now by this rascal I could brain him with his lady's fan. Is there not my father, my uncle, and myself? lord Edmund Mortimer, my lord of York, and Owen Glendower? Is there not, besides, the Douglas? Have I not all their letters, to meet me in arms by the ninth of the next month? and are they not, some of them, set forward already? What a pagan rascal is this! an infidel! Ha! you shall see now, in very sincerity of fear and cold heart, will he to the king and lay open all our proceedings. O, I

<sup>b</sup> The original stage-direction has been inconsiderately deviated from in the modern editions, which read, “Falstaff, after a blow or two, and the rest, run away;” whereas Falstaff, staying behind after the rest have run away, and giving “a blow or two,” is clearly not the coward which it has been the fashion to consider him.

could divide myself and go to buffets, for moving a dish of skimmed milk with so honourable an act Hang him! Let him tell the king: We are prepared I will set forward to-night.

Enter LADY PERCY.

How now, Kate? I must leave you within these hours.

Lady. O, my good lord, why are you thus alone For what offence have I, this fortnight, been A banish'd woman from my Harry's bed? Tell me, sweet lord, what is 't that takes from thee Thy stomach, pleasure, and thy golden sleep? Why dost thou bend thine eyes upon the earth; And start so often when thou sitt'st alone? Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy cheeks; And given my treasures, and my rights of thee, To thick-ey'd musing and curs'd melancholy? In thy faint slumbers I by thee have watch'd, And heard thee murmur tales of iron wars; Speak terms of manage to thy bounding steed; Cry, Courage!—to the field! And thou hast talk'd Of sallies and retires;<sup>a</sup> of trenches, tents; Of palisadoes, frontiers,<sup>b</sup> parapets; Of basilisks, of cannon, culverin; Of prisoners' ransom, and of soldiers slain, And all the current of a heady fight. Thy spirit within thee hath been so at war, And thus hath so bestir'd thee in thy sleep, That beads of sweat have stood upon thy brow, Like bubbles in a late disturbed stream: And in thy face strange motions have appear'd, Such as we see when men restrain their breath On some great sudden haste. O, what portents these?

Some heavy business hath my lord in hand, And I must know it, else he loves me not.

Hot. What, ho! is Gilliams with the packet gone?

Enter Servant.

Serv. He is, my lord, an hour ago.

Hot. Hath Butler brought those horses from the sheriff?

Serv. One horse, my lord, he brought even now.

Hot. What horse? a roan, a crop-ear, is it not?

Serv. It is, my lord.

Hot. That roan shall be my theme. Well, I will back him straight: Esperancé!<sup>c</sup>— Bid Butler lead him forth into the park. [Exit Servant.]

Lady. But hear you, my lord.

Hot. What say'st thou, my lady?

Lady. What is it carries you away?

Hot. Why, my horse, my love, my horse.

Lady. Out, you mad-headed ape!

A weasel hath not such a deal of spleen As you are toss'd with. In sooth, I'll know your business, Harry, that I will. I fear, my brother Mortimer doth stir About his title; and hath sent for you, To line his enterprise: But if you go—

Hot. So far afoot, I shall be weary, love.

Lady. Come, come, you paraquito, answer me Directly to this question that I shall ask. In faith, I'll break thy little finger, Harry, An if thou wilt not tell me all things true.

IV.—Eastcheap. *A Room in the Boar's

Enter PRINCE HENRY and POINS.

Ned, prithee, come out of that fat room, and hand to laugh a little.
There hast been, Hal?
With three or four loggerheads, amongst score hogsheads. I have sounded the very of humility. Sirrah, I am sworn brother to trawers; and can call them all by their mes, as—Tom, Dick, and Francis. They dy upon their salvation, that, though I be of Wales, yet I am the king of courtesy;

Enter FRANCIS.

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.—Look down into the Pomegranate, Ralph.

P. Hen. Come hither, Francis.

Fran. My lord.

P. Hen. How long hast thou to serve, Francis?

Fran. Forsooth, five years, and as much as to—

Poins. [Within] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. Five years! by'r lady, a long lease for the clinking of pewter. But, Francis, darest thou be so valiant as to play the coward with thy indenture, and show it a fair pair of heels, and run from it?

Fran. O lord, sir, I'll be sworn upon all the books in England I could find in my heart—

Poins. [Within] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. How old art thou, Francis?

Fran. Let me see,—About Michaelmas next I shall be—

Poins. [Within] Francis!

Fran. Anon, sir.—Pray you stay a little, my lord.

P. Hen. Nay, but hark you, Francis: For the sugar thou gavest me,—'t was a pennyworth, was 't not?

Fran. O lord, sir! I would it had been two.

P. Hen. I will give thee for it a thousand pound:
ask me when thou wilt and thou shalt have it.

Poins. [Within] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon.

P. Hen. Anon, Francis? No, Francis: but tomorrow, Francis; or, Francis, on Thursday; or, indeed, Francis, when thou wilt. But, Francis,—

Fran. My lord?

P. Hen. Wilt thou rob this leathern jerkin, crystal button, nott-pated,<sup>a</sup> agate-ring, puke-stocking,<sup>b</sup> caddis-garter, smooth-tongue, Spanish-pouch,—

Fran. O lord, sir, who do you mean?

P. Hen. Why, then, your brown bastard is your only drink: for, look you, Francis, your white canvas doublet will sully: in Barbary, sir, it cannot come to so much.

Fran. What, sir?

Poins. [Within] Francis!

P. Hen. Away, you rogue; Dost thou not hear them call?

[Here they both call him; the Drawer stands amazed, not knowing which way to go.]

Enter Vintner.

Vint. What! stand'st thou still and hear'st such a calling? Look to the guests within. [Exit FRANCIS.] My lord, old sir John, with half a dozen more, are at the door; Shall I let them in?

P. Hen. Let them alone awhile, and then open the door. [Exit Vintner.] Poins!

Re-enter POINS.

Poins. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. Sirrah, Falstaff and the rest of the thieves are at the door. Shall we be merry?

Poins. As merry as crickets, my lad. But, hark ye;
What cunning match have you made with this jest of the drawer? come, what 's the issue?

P. Hen. I am now of all humours that have showed themselves humours, since the old days of Goodman Adam, to the pupil age<sup>c</sup> of this present twelve o'clock at midnight. [Re-enter FRANCIS with wine.] What 's o'clock, Francis?

trasted with the old days of Goodman Adam.

P. Hen. That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman! His industry is—up-stairs, and down-stairs; his eloquence, the parcel of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percy's mind, the Hotspur of the north; he that kills me some six or seven dozen of Scots at a breakfast, washes his hands, and says to his wife,—“Fie upon this quiet life! I want work.” “O my sweet Harry,” says she, “how many hast thou killed to-day?” “Give my roan horse a drench,” says he; and answers, “Some fourteen”—an hour after; “a trifle, a trifle.” I prithee, call in Falstaff: I'll play Percy, and that damned brawn shall play dame Mortimer his wife. “Rivo,” says the drunkard. Call in ribs, call in tallow.

Enter FALSTAFF, GADSHILL, BARDOLPH, and PETO.

Poins. Welcome, Jack. Where hast thou been?

Fal. A plague of all cowards, I say, and a vengeance too! marry, and amen!—Give me a cup of sack, boy.—Ere I lead this life long, I'll sew nether-stocks, and mend them, and foot them too. A plague of all cowards!—Give me a cup of sack, rogue.—Is there no virtue extant?

[He drinks.]

P. Hen. Didst thou never see Titan kiss a dish of butter (pitiful-hearted Titan) that melted at the sweet tale of the sun? If thou didst, then behold that compound.

Fal. You rogue, here 's lime in this sack too. There is nothing but roguery to be found in villainous man: Yet a coward is worse than a cup of sack with lime in it: a villainous coward.—Go thy ways, old Jack; die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten herring. There live not three good men unchanged in England; and one of them is fat, and grows old: God help the while! a bad world, I say! I would I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or anything: A plague of all cowards, I say still.

P. Hen. How now, woosack? what mutter you?

Fal. A king's son! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath,<sup>a</sup> and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild geese, I'll never wear hair on my face more. You prince of Wales!

P. Hen. Why, you whoreson round man! what 's the matter?

Fal. Are you not a coward? answer me to that; and Poins there?

Poins. 'Zounds, ye fat paunch, an ye call me coward, I'll stab thee.

Fal. I call thee coward! I'll see thee damned ere I call thee coward: but I would give a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders, you care not who sees your back: Call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing! give me them that will face me. Give me a cup of sack:—I am a rogue if I drunk to-day.

P. Hen. O villain! thy lips are scarce wiped since thou drunk'st last.

Fal. All 's one for that. A plague of all cowards, still say I.

[He drinks.]

P. Hen. What 's the matter?

Fal. What 's the matter? there be four of us here have ta'en a thousand pound this morning.

P. Hen. Where is it, Jack? where is it?

Fal. Where is it? taken from us it is: a hundred upon poor four us.

P. Hen. What, a hundred, man?

Fal. I am a rogue if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have 'scaped by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet; four through the hose; my buckler cut through and oper of lath. The Vice in the old moralities was thus through; my sword hacked like a hand-saw, I never dealt better since I was a man: all do. A plague of all cowards!—Let them speak more or less than truth they are villainous sons of darkness.

P. Hen. Speak, sirs; how was it?

Gads. We four set upon some dozen,—

Fal. Sixteen, at least, my lord.

Gads. And bound them.

Peto. No, no, they were not bound.

Fal. You rogue, they were bound, every man or I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.

Gads. As we were sharing, some six or men set upon us,—

Fal. And unbound the rest, and then co other.

P. Hen. What, fought ye with them all?

Fal. All? I know not what ye call all fought not with fifty of them I am a bunch if there were not two or three and fifty upon Jack, then am I no two-legged creature.

Poins. Pray Heaven you have not murthered them.

Fal. Nay, that 's past praying for: I have two of them: two, I am sure, I have paid: two in buckram suits. I tell thee what, Hal,—if a lie, spit in my face, call me horse. Thou know'st old ward;—here I lay, and thus I bore my poor rogues in buckram let drive at me,—

P. Hen. What, four? thou said'st but two,

Fal. Four, Hal; I told thee four.

Poins. Ay, ay, he said four.

Fal. These four came all a-front, and murthered me. I made no more ado, but took all the points in my target, thus.

P. Hen. Seven? why, there were but four,

Fal. In buckram.

Poins. Ay, four, in buckram suits.

Fal. Seven, by these hilts, or I am a villain.

P. Hen. Prithee, let him alone; we shall anon.

Fal. Dost thou hear me, Hal?

P. Hen. Ay, and mark thee too, Jack.

Fal. Do so, for it is worth the listening: nine in buckram, that I told thee of,—

P. Hen. So, two more already.

Fal. Their points being broken,—

Poins. Down fell their horse.

Fal. Began to give me ground: But I fell close, came in foot and hand; and with a throb of the eleven I paid.

P. Hen. O monstrous! eleven buckram is out of two!

Fal. But, as the devil would have it, the gotten knaves in Kendal green<sup>a</sup> came at my let drive at me;—for it was so dark, Hal, couldst not see thy hand.

P. Hen. These lies are like the father that they; gross as a mountain, open, palpable: clay-brained guts; thou knotty-pated fool; thou son, obscene, greasy tallow-ketch,—<sup>b</sup>

Fal. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? truth the truth?

P. Hen. Why, how couldst thou know the Kendal green, when it was so dark thou couldst thy hand? come, tell us your reason; What is to this?

Poins. Come, your reason, Jack, your reason.

Fal. What, upon compulsion? No; were I strappado, or all the racks in the world, I

I'll be no longer guilty of this sin; this sword, this bed-presser, this horse-back breaker, ill of flesh;—

Well, breathe a while, and then to 't again: thou hast tired thyself in base comparisons, speak but thus.

Mark, Jack.

We two saw you four set on four; you and were masters of their wealth.—Mark plain tale shall put you down.—Then did I on you four: and, with a word, out-faced your prize, and have it; yea, and can show in the house:—and, Falstaff, you carried away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and mercy, and still ran and roared, as ever I calf. What a slave art thou to hack thyself thus done; and then say, it was in fight! what device, what starting-hole, canst thou tell, to hide thee from this open and apparent no more of that, Hal, an thou lovest me.

Enter Hostess.

My lord the prince,—

How now, my lady the hostess? what say'st thou?

My lord, there is a nobleman of the name of Harry, would speak with you: he says he comes to see your father.

Give him as much as will make him a man, and send him back again to my mother.

What manner of man is he?

An old man.

What doth gravitate out of his bed at midnight? Give him his answer?

Prithee, do, Jack.

Do, and I'll send him packing. [Exit.

Now, sirs; by your lady, you fought fair;—

—Peto;—so did you, Bardolph: you are you ran away upon instinct, you will not see the prince; no,—fie!

Altho, I ran when I saw others run.

Tell me now in earnest, how came Falstaff so hacked?

By, he hacked it with his dagger; and said, I wear truth out of England, but he would believe it was done in fight; and persuaded me like.

—and to tickle our noses with spear-grass, and bleed; and then to beslobber our garments with it, and swear it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this seven years before, I blushed to hear his monstrous devices.

P. Hen. O villain, thou stolest a cup of sack eighteen years ago, and wert taken with the manner,* and ever since thou hast blushed extempore: Thou hadst fire and sword on thy side, and yet thou ranst away; What instinct hadst thou for it?

Bard. My lord, do you see these meteors? do you behold these exhalations?

P. Hen. I do.

Bard. What think you they portend?

P. Hen. Hot livers and cold purses.

Bard. Cholera, my lord, if rightly taken.

P. Hen. No, if rightly taken, halter.

Re-enter FALSTAFF.

Here comes lean Jack, here comes bare-bone. How now, my sweet creature of bombast? How long is 't ago, Jack, since thou sawest thine own knee?

Fal. My own knee? when I was about thy years, Hal, I was not an eagle's talon in the waist; I could have crept into any alderman's thumb-ring: A plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder. There 's villainous news abroad: here was sir John Bracy from your father; you must to the court in the morning. That same mad fellow of the North, Percy; and he of Wales, that gave Amaimon the bastinado, and made Lucifer cuckold, and swore the devil his true liegeman upon the cross of a Welsh hook,—What a plague, call you him?—

Poins. O, Glendower.

Fal. Owen, Owen; the same;—and his son-in-law, Mortimer; and old Northumberland; and the sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runs a horseback up a hill perpendicular.

P. Hen. He that rides at high speed, and with his pistol kills a sparrow flying.

Fal. You have hit it.

P. Hen. So did he never the sparrow.

Fal. Well, that rascal hath good mettle in him: he will not run.

P. Hen. Why, what a rascal art thou, then, to praise him so for running!

Fal. A horseback, ye cuckoo! but, afoot, he will not budge a foot.

P. Hen. Yes, Jack, upon instinct.

Fal. I grant ye, upon instinct. Well, he is there too, and one Mordake, and a thousand blue-caps more: Worcester is stolen away by night; thy father's beard is turned white with the news; you may buy land now as cheap as stinking mackerel.

P. Hen. Then 't is like, if there come a hot June, and this civil bufeting hold, we shall buy maiden-heads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundreds.

Fal. By the mass, lad, thou sayest true; it is like we shall have good trading that way.—But, tell me, Hal, art not thou horribly afraid, thou being heir apparent? Could the world pick thee out three such enemies again, as that fiend Douglas, that spirit Percy, and that devil Glendower? Art thou not horribly afraid? doth not thy blood thrill at it?

P. Hen. Not a whit, i' faith; I lack some of thy instinct.

Fal. Well, thou wilt be horribly chid to-morrow, when thou comest to thy father: if thou do love me, practise an answer.

P. Hen. Do thou stand for my father, and examine me upon the particulars of my life.

Fal. Shall I? content:—This chair shall be my state, this dagger my sceptre, and this cushion my crown.

P. Hen. Thy state is taken for a joint-stool, thy golden sceptre for a leaden dagger, and thy precious rich crown for a pitiful bald crown!

Fal. Well, an the fire of grace be not quite out of thee, now shalt thou be moved.—Give me a cup of sack, to make mine eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept; for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in king Cambyses' vein.

P. Hen. Well, here is my leg.

Fal. For God's sake, lords, convey my trustful queen.

Host. This is excellent sport, i' faith.

Fal. Weep not, sweet queen, for trickling tears are vain.

Host. O the father, how he holds his countenance!

Fal. For God's sake, lords, convey my trustful queen, For tears do stop the flood-gates of her eyes.

Host. O rare! he doth it as like one of these harlotry players as ever I see.

Fal. Peace, good pint-pot; peace, good tickle-brain.—Harry, I do not only marvel where thou spendest thy time, but also how thou art accompanied: for though the camomile, the more it is trodden the faster it grows, yet youth, the more it is wasted the sooner it wears. That thou art my son, I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion; but chiefly, a villainous trick of thine eye, and a foolish hanging of thy nether lip, that doth warrant me. If then thou be son to me, here lieth the point:—Why, being son to me, art thou so pointed at? Shall the blessed sun of heaven prove a micher,<sup>a</sup> and eat blackberries? a question not to be asked. Shall the son of England prove a thief, and take purses? a question to be asked. There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and it is known to many in our land by the name of pitch: this pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth defile; so doth the company thou keepest: for, Harry, now I do not speak to thee in drink, but in tears; not in pleasure, but in passion; not in words only, but in woes also:—And yet there is a virtuous man, whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his name.

P. Hen. What manner of man, an it like your majesty?

Fal. A good portly man, i' faith, and a corpulent; of a cheerful look, a pleasing eye, and a most noble carriage; and, as I think, his age some fifty, or, by'r-lady, inclining to threescore; and now I remember me, his name is Falstaff: if that man should be lewdly given, he deceives me; for, Harry, I see virtue in his looks. If then the tree may be known by the fruit, as the fruit by the tree, then, peremptorily I speak it, there is virtue in that Falstaff: him keep with, the rest banish. And tell me now, thou naughty varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month?

P. Hen. Dost thou speak like a king? Do thou stand for me, and I 'll play my father.

Fal. Depose me? if thou dost it half so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, hang me up by the heels for a rabbit-sucker, or a poultier's hare.

P. Hen. Well, here I am set.

Fal. And here I stand;—judge, my masters.

P. Hen. Now, Harry, whence come you?

Fal. My noble lord, from Eastcheap.

P. Hen. The complaints I hear of thee are grievous.

Fal. 'Sblood, my lord, they are false:—nay, I 'll tickle ye for a young prince, i' faith.

P. Hen. Swaarest thou, ungracious boy? henceforth ne'er look on me. Thou art violently carried away from grace: there is a devil haunts thee, in the likeness of a fat old man: a tun of man is thy companion. Why dost thou converse with that trunk of humours, that bolting-hutch of beastliness, that swoln parcel of dropnies, that huge bombard of sack, that stuffed cloak-bag of guts, that roasted Manningtree ox with the pudding in his belly, that reverend vice, that grey iniquity, that father ruffian, that vanity in years? he good, but to taste sack and drink it? well and cleanly, but to carve a capon and eat it cunning,* but in craft? wherein crafty, but in wherein villainous, but in all things? wherein but in nothing?

Fal. I would your grace would take me. Whom means your grace?

P. Hen. That villainous abominable man of youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded Satan.

Fal. My lord, the man I know.

P. Hen. I know thou dost.

Fal. But to say I know more harm in him myself, were to say more than I know. Thou (the more the pity,) his white hairs do witness that he is (saving your reverence) a whorean I utterly deny. If sack and sugar be a fault, help the wicked! If to be old and merry then many an old host that I know is damne'd fat be to be hated, then Pharaoh's lean kinsman loved. No, my good lord; banish Peto, banish Dolph, banish Poins: but for sweet Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and therefore more valiant, being, as he is, Falstaff, banish not him thy Harry's companion, not him thy Harry's company; banish plain and banish all the world.

P. Hen. I do, I will. [A knock]

[Exeunt Hostess, FRANCIS, and BARDOLPH.]

Re-enter BARDOLPH, running.

Bard. O, my lord, my lord; the sheriff, with most monstrous watch, is at the door.

Fal. Out, you rogue! play out the play much to say in the behalf of that Falstaff.

Re-enter Hostess, hastily.

Host. O, my lord, my lord!—

Fal. Heigh, heigh! the devil rides upon a hobby. What's the matter?

Host. The sheriff and all the watch are at the door: they are come to search the house; Shall I let them in?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? never call a true gold a counterfeit; thou art essentially made of seeming so.

P. Hen. And thou a natural coward, without instinct.

Fal. I deny your major: if you will deny so; if not, let him enter: if I become not a coward as another man, a plague on my bringing up, I shall as soon be strangled with a halter as with a horse.

P. Hen. Go, hide thee behind the arras, and walk up above. Now, my masters, for a true good conscience.

Fal. Both which I have had: but their consciences are not so true as mine. And therefore I 'll hide me.

[Exeunt all but the PRINCE and Hostess.]

P. Hen. Call in the sheriff.—

Enter Sheriff and Carrier.

Now, master sheriff; what is your will with me?

Sher. First, pardon me, my lord. A hue and cry follow'd certain men unto this house.

P. Hen. What men?

Sher. One of them is well known, my good lord. A gross fat man.

Car. As fat as butter.

P. Hen. The man, I do assure you, is not here. For I myself at this time have employ'd his services. And, sheriff, I will engage my word to thee, * Cunning—skillful.

<sup>b</sup> Take me with you. A common expression for your meaning.

ill, by to-morrow dinner-time,
 a to answer thee, or any man,
 hing he shall be charg'd withal :
 et me entreat you leave the house.
 I will, my lord : There are two gentlemen this robbery lost three hundred marks.
 n. It may be so : if he have robb'd these men be answerable ; and, so, farewell.
 Good night, my noble lord.
 n. I think it is good morrow ; Is it not ?
 Indeed, my lord, I think it be two o'clock.
 [Exeunt Sheriff and Carrier.]
 a. This oily rascal is known as well as Paul's him forth.
 . Falstaff !—fast asleep behind the arras, and like a horse.
 n. Hark, how hard he fetches breath : Search us. [POINS searches.] What hast thou found ?

Poins. Nothing but papers, my lord.
 P. Hen. Let's see what be they : read them.
 Poins. Item, A capon, 2s. 2d.
 Item, Sauce, 4d.
 Item, Sack, two gallons, 5s. 8d.
 Item, Anchovies and sack after supper, 2s. 6d.
 Item, Bread, a halfpenny.
 P. Hen. O monstrous ! but one halfpennyworth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack !—What there is else, keep close ; we'll read it at more advantage :
 there let him sleep till day. I'll to the court in the morning : we must all to the wars, and thy place shall be honourable. I'll procure this fat rogue a charge of foot ; and, I know, his death will be a march of twelve-score.* The money shall be paid back again with advantage. Be with me betimes in the morning ;
 and so good morrow, Poins.
 Poins. Good morrow, good my lord. [Exeunt.]

ACT III

L.—Bangor. A Room in the Archdeacon's House.

HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, MORTIMER, and GLENDOWER.

These promises are fair, the parties sure, induction full of prosperous hope.
 Lord Mortimer,—and cousin Glendower,— sit down ?—
 He Worcester :—A plague upon it !
 I got the map.
 No, here it is.
 in Percy ; sit, good cousin Hotspur ; hat name as oft as Lancaster
 ak of you,
 k looks pale, and, with a rising sigh,
 eth you in heaven.
 And you in hell, as often as he hears Owen er spoke of.
 I cannot blame him : at my nativity,
 t of heaven was full of fiery shapes,
 ng cressets ; and, at my birth, se and huge foundation of the earth
 like a coward.
 Why, so it would have done at the same season, oother's cat had but kittened, though yourself
 r been born.
 I say, the earth did shake when I was born.
 And I say, the earth was not of my mind,
 suppose as fearing you it shook.
 The heavens were all on fire, the earth did tremble.
 D, then the earth shook to see the heavens on fire,
 in fear of your nativity.
 nature oftentimes breaks forth ge eruptions : oft the teeming earth kind of colic pinch'd and vex'd aprisoning of unruly wind er womb ; which, for enlargement striving, se old beldame earth, and topples down and moss-grown towers. At your birth, adam earth, having this distemperature,
 n shock.
 Cousin, of many men bear these crossings. Give me leave you once again,—that at my birth
 t of heaven was full of fiery shapes ;
 e ran from the mountains, and the herds singly clamorous to the frighted fields.

These signs have mark'd me extraordinary ;
 And all the courses of my life do show
 I am not in the roll of common men.
 Where is the living,—clipp'd in with the sea
 That chides the banks of England, Scotland, Wales,—
 Which calls me pupil, or hath read to me ?
 And bring him out, that is but woman's son,
 Can trace me in the tedious ways of art,
 And hold me pace in deep experiments.
 Hot. I think there's no man speaks better Welsh ;
 I'll to dinner.
 Mort. Peace, cousin Percy : you will make him mad.
 Glend. I can call spirits from the vasty deep.
 Hot. Why, so can I ; or so can any man ;
 But will they come, when you do call for them ?
 Glend. Why, I can teach thee, cousin, to command the devil.
 Hot. And I can teach thee, coz, to shame the devil,
 By telling truth ; Tell truth, and shame the devil.
 If thou have power to raise him, bring him hither,
 And I'll be sworn I have power to shame him hence.
 O, while you live, tell truth, and shame the devil.—
 Mort. Come, come, no more of this unprofitable chat.
 Glend. Three times hath Henry Bolingbroke made head
 Against my power : thrice from the banks of Wye,
 And sandy-bottom'd Severn, have I sent him,
 Bootless home, and weather-beaten back.
 Hot. Home without boots, and in foul weather too ?
 How 'scapes he agues, in the devil's name ?
 Glend. Come, here 's the map ; Shall we divide our right,
 According to our three-fold order ta'en ?
 Mort. The archdeacon hath divided it
 Into three limits, very equally :
 England, from Trent and Severn hitherto,
 By south and east, is to my part assign'd :
 All westward, Wales beyond the Severn shore,
 And all the fertile land within that bound,
 To Owen Glendower :—and, dear coz, to you
 The remnant northward, lying off from Trent.
 And our indentures tripartite are drawn :
 Which being sealed interchangeably,
 (A business that this night may execute,)
 To-morrow, cousin Percy, you, and I,
 And my good lord of Worcester, will set forth,
 To meet your father, and the Scottish power, * Twelve-score. The common phraseology for twelve score vards.

As is appointed us, at Shrewsbury.
My father Glendower is not ready yet,
Nor shall we need his help these fourteen days :—
Within that space [To GLEND.] you may have drawn together

Your tenants, friends, and neighbouring gentlemen.

Glend. A shorter time shall send me to you, lords,
And in my conduct shall your ladies come :
From whom you now must steal, and take no leave ;
For there will be a world of water shed,
Upon the parting of your wives and you.

Hot. Methinks, my moiety,<sup>a</sup> north from Burton here,
In quantity equals not one of yours :
See how this river comes me cranking<sup>b</sup> in,
And cuts me, from the best of all my land,
A huge half-moon, a monstrous cantle<sup>c</sup> out.
I 'll have the current in this place damm'd up ;
And here the smug and silver Trent shall run
In a new channel, fair and evenly :
It shall not wind with such a deep indent,
To rob me of so rich a bottom here.

Glend. Not wind ? it shall, it must ; you see it doth.

Mort. Yea,
But mark how he bears his course, and runs me up
With like advantage on the other side ;
Gelding the opposed continent as much
As on the other side it takes from you.

Wor. Yea, but a little charge will trench him here,
And on this north side win this cape of land ;
And then he runs straight and even.

Hot. I 'll have it so ; a little charge will do it.

Glend. I will not have it alter'd.

Hot. Will not you ?

Glend. No, nor you shall not.

Hot. Who shall say me nay ?

Glend. Why, that will I.

Hot. Let me not understand you then ;
Speak it in Welsh.

Glend. I can speak English, lord, as well as you :
For I was train'd up in the English court :
Where, being but young, I framed to the harp
Many an English ditty, lovely well,
And gave the tongue<sup>d</sup> a helpful ornament ;
A virtue that was never seen in you.

Hot. Marry, and I 'm glad of 't with all my heart :
I had rather be a kitten and cry mew,
Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers ;
I had rather hear a brazen candlestick turn'd,
Or a dry wheel grate on the axle-tree ;
And that would set my teeth nothing on edge,
Nothing so much as mincing poetry ;
'T is like the forc'd gait of a shuffling nag.

Glend. Come, you shall have Trent turn'd.

Hot. I do not care : I 'll give thrice so much land
To any well-deserving friend :

But in the way of bargain, mark ye me,
I 'll cavil on the ninth part of a hair.

Are the indentures drawn ? shall we be gone ?

Glend. The moon shines fair, you may away by night :

I 'll haste the writer, and, withal,

Break with your wives of your departure hence .

I am afraid my daughter will run mad,

So much she doteth on her Mortimer.

[Exit.

Mort. Fie, cousin Percy ! how you cross my father !

Hot. I cannot choose : sometime he angers me,

With telling me of the moldwarp and the ant,
Of the dreamer Merlin, and his prophecies ;
And of a dragon and a finless fish,
A clip-wing'd griffin, and a moulten raven,
A couching lion, and a ramping cat,
And such a deal of skimble-skamble stuff
As puts me from my faith. I tell you what,—
He held me, last night, at least nine hours,
In reckoning up the several devils' names
That were his lackeys : I cried, hum,—and well,—
to,—

But mark'd him not a word. O, he 's as tedious
As is a tired horse, a railing wife,
Worse than a smoky house :—I had rather live
With cheese and garlic in a windmill, far,
Than feed on cates, and have him talk to me,
In any summer-house in Christendom.

Mort. In faith, he is a worthy gentleman ;
Exceedingly well read, and profited

In strange concealments ; valiant as a lion,
And wondrous affable ; and as bountiful
As mines of India. Shall I tell you, cousin ?
He holds your temper in a high respect,
And curbs himself even of his natural scope,
When you do cross his humour ; 'faith, he does :
I warrant you that man is not alive
Might so have tempted him as you have done,
Without the taste of danger and reproof ;
But do not use it oft, let me entreat you.

Wor. In faith, my lord, you are too wilful-blame
And since your coming hither, have done enough
To put him quite beside his patience.

You must needs learn, lord, to amend this fault :
Though sometimes it show greatness, courage, blood,
And that 's the dearest grace it renders you,—
Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh rage,
Defect of manners, want of government,
Pride, haughtiness, opinion, and disdain :
The least of which, haunting a nobleman,
Loseth men's hearts ; and leaves behind a stain
Upon the beauty of all parts besides,
Beguiling them of commendation.

Hot. Well, I am school'd ; good manners be speed !

Here come our wives, and let us take our leave.

Re-enter GLENDOWER, with the Ladies.

Mort. This is the deadly spite that angers me,—
My wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.

Glend. My daughter weeps ; she will not part
you,

She 'll be a soldier too, she 'll to the wars.

Mort. Good father, tell her,—that she, and my Percy,

Shall follow in your conduct speedily.

[GLENDOWER speaks to his daughter in Welsh and she answers him in the same language.]

Glend. She 's desperate here ; a peevish self-will harlotry,

One that no persuasion can do good upon.

[Lady M. speaks to MORTIMER in Welsh.]

Mort. I understand thy looks : that pretty Welsh
Which thou pourest down from these swelling brows
I am too perfect in ; and, but for shame,

In such a parley should I answer thee. [Lady M. speaks.]

I understand thy kisses, and thou mine,

And that 's a feeling disputation :

But I will never be a truant, love,

Till I have learn'd thy language : for thy tongue

Makes Welsh as sweet as ditties highly pens'd.

Sung by a fair queen in a summer's bower,

With ravishing division, to her lute.

Glend. Nay, if thou melt, then will she run mad.

[Lady M. speaks.]

O, I am ignorance itself in this.

She bids you on the wanton rushes lay you down,
your gentle head upon her lap,
will sing the song that pleaseth you,
near eyelids crown the god of sleep,
; your blood with pleasing heaviness;
such difference betwixt wake and sleep,
difference betwixt day and night,
before the heavenly-harness'd team
a golden progress in the east.

With all my heart I'll sit and hear her sing:
time will our book, I think, be drawn.

Do so;

musicians that shall play to you,
the air a thousand leagues from hence;
glad they shall be here: sit, and attend.
Come, Kate, thou art perfect in lying down:
lick, quick; that I may lay my head in thy

P. Go, ye giddy goose.

EVER speaks some Welsh words, and then the Music plays.

How I perceive the devil understands Welsh;
no marvel, he's so humorous.
For, he's a good musician.

P. Then would you be nothing but musical;
we altogether governed by humours. Lie still,
and hear the lady sing in Welsh.

I had rather hear Lady, my brach, howl in

P. Wouldst have thy head broken?
No.

P. Then be still.

Neither; 't is a woman's fault.

P. Now God help thee!

Is the Welsh lady's bed.

P. What's that?

Face! she sings.

A Welsh SONG, sung by Lady M.

Come, Kate, I'll have your song too.

P. Not mine, in good sooth.

Not yours, in good sooth! Heart, you swear self-maker's wife! Not you, in good sooth; true as I live; and, As God shall mend me;
true as clay:

Such sarcenet surety for thy oaths,
never walk'dst further than Finsbury.

Kate, like a lady, as thou art,
truth-filling oath: and leave in sooth, protest of pepper-gingerbread,<sup>a</sup> guards, and Sunday-citizens.

P.

I will not sing.

'T is the next way to turn tailor, or be red-facer. An the indentures be drawn, I'll away in two hours; and so come in when ye will.

[Exit.

Come, come, lord Mortimer; you are as slow,
and Percy is on fire to go.

The lock is drawn; we will but seal,
to horse immediately.

With all my heart. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

HENRY, PRINCE OF WALES, and Lords.

Lords, give us leave; the prince of Wales and I have some private conference: But be near at hand.

For we shall presently have need of you.—[Ex. Lords.

I know not whether God will have it so,
For some displeasing service I have done,
That, in his secret doom, out of my blood
He'll breed revengement and a scourge for me;
But thou dost, in thy passages of life,
Make me believe, that thou art only mark'd
For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven,
To punish my mis-treadings. Tell me else
Could such inordinate and low desires,
Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean attempts,
Such barren pleasures, rude society,
As thou art match'd withal and grafted to,
Accompany the greatness of thy blood,
And hold their level with thy princely heart?

P. Hen. So please your majesty, I would I could

Quit all offences with as clear excuse,

As well as, I am doubtless, I can purge

Myself of many I am charg'd withal:

Yet such extenuation let me beg,

As, in reproof<sup>a</sup> of many tales devis'd,—

Which oft the ear of greatness needs must hear,

By smiling pickthanks and base newsmongers,

I may, for some things true, wherein my youth

Hath faulty wander'd and irregular,

Find pardon on my true submission.

K. Hen. God pardon thee!—yet let me wonder, Harry,

At thy affections, which do hold a wing

Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.

Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost,

Which by thy younger brother is supplied;

And art almost an alien to the hearts

Of all the court and princes of my blood:

The hope and expectation of thy time

Is ruin'd; and the soul of every man

Prophetically does forethink thy fall.

Had I so lavish of my presence been,

So common-hackney'd in the eyes of men,

So stale and cheap to vulgar company,

Opinion, that did help me to the crown,

Had still kept loyal to possession;

And left me in reputeless banishment,

A fellow of no mark, nor likelihood.

By being seldom seen, I could not stir

But, like a comet, I was wonder'd at:

That men would tell their children,—This is he;

Others would say,—Where? which is Bolingbroke

And then I stole all courtesy from heaven,

And dress'd myself in such humility,

That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts,

Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths,

Even in the presence of the crowned king.

Thus I did keep my person fresh, and new;

My presence, like a robe pontifical,

Ne'er seen but wonder'd at: and so my state,

Seldom, but sumptuous, showed like a feast;

And won, by rareness, such solemnity.

The skipping king, he ambled up and down

With shallow jesters and rash bavin<sup>b</sup> wits,

Soon kindled and soon burn'd: carded<sup>c</sup> his state;

Mingled his royalty with carping fools,

Had his great name profaned with their scorns:

And gave his countenance, against his name,

To laugh at gibing boys, and stand the push

Of every beardless vain comparative:

Grew a companion to the common streets,

Enfeoff'd himself to popularity:

That being daily swallow'd by men's eyes,

<sup>c</sup> Carded. It is possible that Henry simply means that "the skipping king" discarded his state; or, that Richard fretted away his state, as the wool-carder makes the lock attenuated by continual tearing.

They suff'ring with honey, and began
To taste the taste of sweetness, whom a little More than a little is by much too much.
So, when he had occasion to be seen,
He was but as the cuckoo in June,
Heard, not regarded; seen, but with such eyes
As, sick and blunted with community,
Afford no extraordinary gaze,
Such as is bent on sun-like majesty
When it shines seldom in admiring eyes:
But rather drows'd, and hung their eyelids down,
Slept in his face, and render'd such aspect
As cloudy men use to their adversaries;
Being with his presence gladd'ed, gurg'd, and fall.
And in that very line, Harry, standest thou:
For thou hast lost thy princely privilege
With vile participation; not an eye
But is a-weary of thy common sight,
Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more;
Which now doth that I would not have it do,
Make blind itself with foolish tenderness.

P. Hen. I shall hereafter, my thrice-gracious lord,
Be more myself.

K. Hen. For all the world,
As thou art to this hour, was Richard then
When I from France set foot at Ravensburg;
And even as I was then is Percy now.
Now by my sceptre, and my soul to boot,
He hath more worthy interest to the state,
Than thou, the shadow of succession:
For, of no right, nor colour like to right,
He doth fill fields with harness in the realm:
Turns head against the lion's armed jaws;
And, being no more in debt to years than thou,
Leads ancient lords and reverend bishops on,
To bloody battles, and to bruising arms.
What never-dying honour hath he got Against renowned Douglas; whose high deeds,
Whose hot incursions, and great name in arms,
Holds from all soldiers chief majority,
And military title capital,
Through all the kingdoms that acknowledge Christ!
Thrice hath this Hotspur, Mars in swathing clothes,
This infant warrior, in his enterprises
Discomfited great Douglas; ta'en him once,
Enlarged him, and made a friend of him,
To fill the mouth of deep defiance up,
And shake the peace and safety of our throne.
And what say you to this? Percy, Northumberland,
The archbishop's grace of York, Douglas, Mortimer, Capitulate* against us, and are up.
But wherefore do I tell these news to thee?
Why, Harry, do I tell thee of my foes,
Which art my near'st and dearest enemy?
Thou that art like enough,—through vassal fear,
Base inclination, and the start of spleen,—
To fight against me, under Percy's pay,
To dog his heels, and court'sy at his frowns,
To show how much thou art degenerate.

P. Hen. Do not think so, you shall not find it so;
And God forgive them that so much have sway'd
Your majesty's good thoughts away from me!
I will redeem all this on Percy's head,
And, in the closing of some glorious day,
Be bold to tell you that I am your son;
When I will wear a garment all of blood,
And stain my favours<sup>b</sup> in a bloody mask,
Which, wash'd away, shall scour my shame with it.
And that shall be the day, when'er it lights,
That this same child of honour and renown,
This gallant Hotspur, this all-praised knight,
And your unthought-of Harry, chance to meet:

Capitulate—to settle the heads of an agreement.
Favours—features.

For every honour sitting on his helm,
Would they were multitudes; and on my head
My shame redoubled! for the time will come,
That I shall make this northern youth exchange
His glorious deeds for my indignities.
Percy is but my factor, good my lord,
To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf;
And I will call him to so strict account,
That he shall render every glory up,
Yea, even the slightest worship of his time,
Or I will tear the reckoning from his heart.
This, in the name of God, I promise here:
The which if He be pleas'd I shall perform,
I do beseech your majesty, may salve
The long-grown wounds of my intemperance:
If not, the end of life cancels all bands;
And I will die a hundred thousand deaths,
Ere break the smallest parcel of this vow.

K. Hen. A hundred thousand rebels die in this:
Thou shalt have charge, and sovereign trust, here

Enter BLUNT.

How now, good Blunt? thy looks are full of speech.
Blunt. So hath the business that I come to speak.
Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word,—
That Douglas, and the English rebels, met,
The eleventh of this month, at Sirewshury:
A mighty and a fearful head they are,
If promises be kept on every hand,
As ever offer'd foul play in a state.

K. Hen. The earl of Westmoreland set forth day;

With him my son, lord John of Lancaster,
For this advertisement is five days old:—
On Wednesday next, Harry, thou shalt set forward.
On Thursday, we ourselves will march:
Our meeting is Bridgnorth: and, Harry, you Shall march through Gloucestershire; by which account
Our business valued, some twelve days hence
Our general forces at Bridgnorth shall meet.
Our hands are full of business: let's away;
Advantage feeds him fat, while men delay. [Exit]

SCENE III.—Eastcheap. A Room in the Bear Head Tavern.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, am I not fallen away vilely this last action? do I not bate? do I not dwindle?
Why, my skin hangs about me like an old lady's gown; I am withered like an old apple-John.
I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in liking;<sup>a</sup> I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I have no strength to repent. An I have not felt what the inside of a church is made of, I am a corn, a brewer's horse: the inside of a church!
A pany, villainous company, hath been the spoil of Bard. Sir John, you are so fretful, you cannot long.

Fal. Why, there is it:—come, sing me a song; make me merry. I was as virtuously given a gentleman need to be; virtuous enough:
little; diced, not above seven times a week; went bawdy-house, not above once in a quarter—of an paid money that I borrowed, three or four times; well, and in good compass: and now I live out of order, out of all compass.

Bard. Why, you are so fat, sir John, that you needs be out of all compass; out of all reasonable pass, sir John.

Fal. Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend life: Thou art our admiral, thou bearest the banner

but 't is in the nose of thee; thou art the burning lamp.

By, sir John, my face does you no harm.

I'll be sworn; I make as good use of it as a man doth of a death's head, or a memento ever see thy face but I think upon hell-fire, that lived in purple; for there he is in his ring, burning. If thou wert any way given would swear by thy face; my oath should fire; but thou art altogether given over; leed, but for the light in thy face, the son of a bitch. When thou ranst up Gadshill in to catch my horse, if I did not think thou art ignis fatuus, or a ball of wildfire, there's in money. O, thou art a perpetual triumph, of bonfire-light! Thou hast saved me a rick in links and torches, walking with thee betwixt tavern and tavern: but the sack that drunk me would have bought me lights up, at the dearest chandler's in Europe. I fined that salamander of yours with fire, any two-and-thirty years; Heaven reward me blood, I would my face were in your belly! a-mercy! so should I be sure to be heart-

Enter Hostess.

Same Partlet the hen? have you inquired of my pocket?

Y, sir John! what do you think, sir John? & I keep thieves in my house? I have have inquired, so has my husband, man by boy, servant by servant: the tithe of a hair in my house before.

He, hostess; Bardolph was shaved, and hair: and I'll be sworn my pocket was to you, you are a woman, go.

Y, I? I defy thee: I was never called so house before.

Y, I know you well enough.

Y, sir John; you do not know me, sir John:

Y, sir John: you owe me money, sir John, I pick a quarrel to beguile me of it: I a dozen of shirts to your back.

Y, filthy dowlas: I have given them away y'es, and they have made bolters of them.

Y, as I am a true woman, holland of eight ell. You owe money here besides, sir or diet, and by-drinkings, and money lent l-twenty pound.

And his part of it; let him pay.

Y, alas, he is poor; he hath nothing.

Y, poor? look upon his face; What call of them coin his nose, let them coin his not pay a denier. What, will you make me? shall I not take mine ease in mine shall have my pocket picked? I have lost of my grandfa'her's, worth forty mark.

Y, have heard the prince tell him, I know not that ring was copper.

Y, of the prince is a Jack, a sneak-cup; and, Y, I would cudgel him like a dog, if he

THE KING HENRY and POINS, marching. FALSTAFF and the PRINCE, playing on his truncheon, Y, now, lad? is the wind in that door, I've all march?

Y, a, two and two, Newgate-fashion.

Y, lead, I pray you, hear me.

Y, What sayest thou, mistress Quickly? How and? I love him well, he is an honest man.

Host. Good my lord, hear me.

Fal. Prithes, let her alone, and list to me.

P. Hen. What sayest thou, Jack?

Fal. The other night I fell asleep here behind the arras, and had my pocket picked: this house is turned bawdy-house, they pick pockets.

P. Hen. What didst thou lose, Jack?

Fal. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? three or four bonds of forty pound a-piece, and a seal-ring of my grandfa'her's.

P. Hen. A trifle, some eight-penny matter.

Host. So I told him, my lord; and I said I heard your grace say so: And, my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is; and said he would cudgel you.

P. Hen. What! he did not?

Host. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else.

Fal. There's no more faith in thee than in a stewed prune; nor no more truth in thee than in a drawn fox; and for womanhood, maid Marian may be the deputy's wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go.

Host. Say, what thing? what thing?

Fal. What thing? why, a thing to thank Heaven on.

Host. I am no thing to thank Heaven on, I would thou shouldst know it; I am an honest man's wife: and, setting thy knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so.

Fal. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knave thou?

Fal. What beast? why, an otter.

P. Hen. An otter, sir John! why an otter?

Fal. Why? she's neither fish nor flesh; a man knows not where to have her.

Host. Thou art an unjust man in saying so; thou or any man knows where to have me, thou knave thou!

P. Hen. Thou sayest true, hostess; and he slanders thee most grossly.

Host. So he doth you, my lord; and said this other day, you ought him a thousand pound.

P. Hen. Sirrah, do I owe you a thousand pound?

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal? a million: thy love is worth a million; thou owest me thy love.

Host. Nay, my lord, he called you Jack, and said he would cudgel you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bard. Indeed, sir John, you said so.

Fal. Yea; if he said my ring was copper.

P. Hen. I say, 't is copper: Darest thou be as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why, Hal, thou knowest as thou art but a man, I dare: but as thou art a prince, I fear thee, as I fear the roaring of the lion's whelp.

P. Hen. And why not as the lion?

Fal. The king himself is to be feared as the lion: Dost thou think I'll fear thee as I fear thy father? nay, an I do, let my girdle break!

P. Hen. O, if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees! But, sirrah, there's no room for faith, truth, nor honesty, in this bosom of thine; it is all filled up with guts and midriff. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket! Why, thou whoreson, impudent, embossed* rascal, if there were anything in thy pocket but tavern reckonings, memorandums of bawdy-houses, and one poor pennyworth of sugar-candy, to make thee long-winded; if thy pocket were enriched with any other injuries but these, I am a villain. And yet you will stand to it, you will not pocket up wrong: Art thou not ashamed?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? thou knowest, in the state of innocency, Adam fell; and what should poor * Embossed—swollen, puffed up.

Jack Falstaff do, in the days of villainy? Thou seest I have more flesh than another man, and therefore more faultily. You confess, then, you pick'd my pocket?

P. Hen. It appears so by the story.

Fal. Hostess, I forgive thee: Go, make ready breakfast; love thy husband, look to thy servants, cherish thy guests: thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reason: thou seest I am pacified.—Still?—Nay, prithee, be gone. [Exit Hostess.] Now, Hal, to the news at court: For the robbery, lad,—How is that answered?

P. Hen. O, my sweet beef, I must still be good angel to thee:—The money is paid back again.

Fal. O, I do not like that paying back, 't is a double labour.

P. Hen. I am good friends with my father, and may do anything.

Fal. Rob me the exchequer the first thing thou doest, and do it with unwashed hands too.

Bard. Do, my lord.

P. Hen. I have procured thee, Jack, a charge of foot.

Fal. I would it had been of horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well? O, for a fine thief, of the age of two-and-twenty, or thereabout! I am awfully unprovided. Well, God be thanked for rebels, they offend none but the virtuous; I had I praise them.

P. Hen. Bardolph,—

Bard. My lord?

P. Hen. Go bear this letter to lord John of

caster,
To my brother John; this to my lord of Westland.—

Go, Poins, to horse, to horse; for thou and I

Have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner-time.

Jack, meet me to-morrow in the Temple-hall,

At two o'clock in the afternoon:

There shalt thou know thy charge; and there see

Money, and order for their furniture.

The land is burning; Percy stands on high;

And either they, or we, must lower lie.

[Exit PRINCE, POINS, and BARDOLPH.]

Fal. Rare words! brave world! Hostess, my fast; come:—

O, I could wish this tavern were my drum.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTSPIUR, WORCESTER, and DOUGLAS.

Hot. Well said, my noble Scot: If speaking truth, in this fine age, were not thought flattery, Such attribution should the Douglas have, As not a soldier of this season's stamp Should go so general current through the world. By heaven, I cannot flatter; I defy The tongues of soothers; but a braver place In my heart's love hath no man than yourself: Nay, task me to my word; approve me, lord.

Doug. Thou art the king of honour:
No man so potent breathes upon the ground,
But I will beard him.

Hot. Do so, and 't is well:—

Enter a Messenger, with letters.

What letters hast thou there?—I can but thank you.

Mess. These letters come from your father,—

Hot. Letters from him! why comes he not himself?

Mess. He cannot come, my lord; he's grievous sick.

Hot. 'Zounds! how has he the leisure to be sick In such a justling time? Who leads his power? Under whose government come they along?

Mess. His letters bear his mind, not I his mind.

Wor. I prithee tell me, doth he keep his bed?

Mess. He did, my lord, four days ere I set forth; And at the time of my departure thence, He was much fear'd by his physicians.

Wor. I would the state of time had first been whole, Ere he by sickness had been visited:
His health was never better worth than now.

Hot. Sick now! droop now! this sickness doth infect

The very life-blood of our enterprise:

'T is catching hither, even to our camp.

He writes me here,—that inward sickness—

And that his friends by deputation could not

So soon be drawn; nor did he think it meet

To lay so dangerous and dear a trust

On one remov'd, but on his own.

Give us bold advertisement,—

Our small conjunction we should on,

fortune is dispos'd to us:

For, as he writes, there is no quailing now;
Because the king is certainly possess'd
Of all our purposes. What say you to it?

Wor. Your father's sickness is a main to us.

Hot. A perilous gash, a very limb lopp'd off—

And yet, in faith, it is not; his present want

Seems more than we shall find it:—Were it good

To set the exact wealth of all our states

All at one cast? to set so rich a main

On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour?

It were not good: for therein should we read<sup>a</sup>

The very bottom and the soul of hope;

The very list, the very utmost bound

Of all our fortunes.

Doug. Faith, and so we should;

Where now remains a sweet reversion:

We may boldly spend upon the hope of what

Is to come in:

A comfort of retirement lives in this.—

Hot. A rendezvous, a home to fly unto,

If that the devil and mischance look big

Upon the maidenhead of our affairs.

Wor. But yet I would your father had been

The quality and air<sup>b</sup> of our attempt

Brooks no division: It will be thought

By some, that know not why he is away,

That wisdom, loyalty, and mere dislike

Of our proceedings, kept the earl from hence;

And think, how such an apprehension

May turn the tide of fearful faction,

And breed a kind of question in our cause:

For, well you know, we of the offering side<sup>c</sup>

Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement;

And stop all sight-holes, every loop, from whence

The eye of reason may pry in upon us:

This absence of your father draws a curtain,

That shows the ignorant a kind of fear

Before not dreamt of.

Hot. You strain too far.

I, rather, of his absence make this use:—

a lustre, and more great opinion,
 share to your great enterprise,
 the earl were here: for men must think,
 about his help, can make a head against the kingdom, with his help, to return it topsy-turvy down.
 As heart can think: there is not such a word in Scotland as this term of fear.

Enter SIR RICHARD VERNON.

My cousin Vernon! welcome, by my soul.
 Pray God, my news be worth a welcome, al.

of Westmoreland, seven thousand strong,
 ing hitherwards; with him, prince John.
 Is harm: What more?

And further, I have learn'd, himself in person hath set forth,
 wards intended speedily,
 ag and mighty preparation.
 Is shall be welcome too. Where is his son, le-footed madcap prince of Wales,
 amrades, that daff'd the world aside,
 Is pass?

All furnish'd, all in arms:
 d, like estridges that with the wind fe eagles having lately bath'd;<sup>a</sup> in golden coats, like images;<sup>b</sup> spirit as the mouth of May,
 was as the sun at midsummer;
 s youthful goats, wild as young bulls.
 ag Harry, with his beaver on,<sup>c</sup> ven his thighs, gallantly arm'd,
 the ground like feather'd Mercury,
 ed with such ease into his seat gel dropp'd down from the clouds,
 d wind a fiery Pegasus,
 the world with noble horsemanship.
 s more, no more; worse than the sun in larch,

death nourish agues. Let them come;
 like sacrifices in their trim,
 fire-ey'd maid of smoky war,
 I bleeding, will we offer them:
 Mars shall on his altar sit,
 ars in blood. I am on fire, s rich reprisal is so high,
 s aura—Come, let me take my horse,
 ear me, like a thunderbolt,
 heason of the prince of Wales:
 arry, shall not horse to horse e'er part, till one drop down a corse?
 adower were come!

There is more news:
 Worcester, as I rode along,
 draw his power these fourteen days
 hat's the worst tidings that I hear of yet.
 e, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound.
 hat may the king's whole battle reach nto?
 thirty thousand.

Forty let it be;
 and Glendower being both away,
 of us may serve so great a day.

ing appears to us to be this—the prince and his furnished, all in arms, are plumed like estridges (estribes) that with the wind bated—(to bate is to the quarry, a term of falconry)—like eagles having <sup>a</sup> The rich vestments of "the holy saints" in show, noticed by Spenser, are here alluded to.

<sup>b</sup> This, which is a part of the helmet, is often used helmet generally.

Come, let us take<sup>a</sup> a muster speedily:

Doomsday is near; die all, die merrily.

Doug. Talk not of dying; I am out of fear
 Of death, or death's hand, for this one half-year.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—A public Road near Coventry.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry; fill me a bottle of sack; our soldiers shall march through:
 we'll to Sutton-Cop-hill to-night.

Bard. Will you give me money, captain?

Fal. Lay out, lay out.

Bard. This bottle makes an angel.

Fal. An if it do take it for thy labour; and if it make twenty take them all, I'll answer the coinage.
 Bid my lieutenant Peto meet me at the town's end.

Bard. I will, captain: farewell. [Exit.]

Fal. If I be not ashamed of my soldiers I am a soused gurnet. I have misused the king's press damnably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers, three hundred and odd pounds. I press me none but good householders, yeomen's sons: inquire me out contracted bachelors, such as had been asked twice on the bans; such a commodity of warm slaves as had as lief hear the devil as a drum; such as fear the report of a caliver worse than a struck fowl, or a hurt wild-duck.
 I pressed me none but such toasts and butter, with hearts in their bellies no bigger than pins' heads, and they have bought out their services; and now my whole charge consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies, slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth, where the glutton's dogs licked his sores: and such as, indeed, were never soldiers; but discarded unjust serving-men, younger sons to younger brothers, revolted tapsters, and ostlers trade-fallen; the cankers of a calm world and a long peace; ten times more dis-honourable ragged than an old-faced ancient:<sup>b</sup> and such have I, to fill up the rooms of them that have bought out their services, that you would think that I had a hundred and fifty tattered prodigals, lately come from swine-keeping, from eating draff and husks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me I had unloaded all the gibbets, and pressed the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such scarecrows. I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat;—Nay, and the villains march wide betwixt the legs, as if they had gyves on;
 for, indeed, I had the most of them out of prison.
 There's but a shirt and a half in all my company;
 and the half-shirt is two napkins tacked together, and thrown over the shoulders like a herald's coat without sleeves; and the shirt, to say the truth, stolen from my host of Saint Alban's, or the red-nose innkeeper of Daventry: But that's all one; they'll find linen enough on every hedge.

Enter PRINCE HENRY and WESTMORELAND.

P. Hen. How now, blown Jack? how now, quilt?

Fal. What, Hal? How now, mad wag? what a devil dost thou in Warwickshire?—My good lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy; I thought your honour had already been at Shrewsbury.

West. Faith, sir John, 't is more than time that I were there, and you too; but my powers are there already: The king, I can tell you, looks for us all; we must away all to-night.

Fal. Tut, never fear me; I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream.

<sup>a</sup> Take. All the old copies read "take a muster;"—modern editions "make a muster." Hotspur would not wish to make a muster—to assemble his troops—to collect them together—for they were all with him; but he desires to know the exact number of "the powers of us" which are to oppose the king's "thirty thousand."

P. Hen. I think to steal cream indeed; for thy theft hath already made thee butter. But tell me, Jack; whose fellows are these that come after?

Fal. Mine, Hal, mine.

P. Hen. I did never see such pitiful rascals.

Fal. Tut, tut; good enough to toss:<sup>a</sup> food for powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit as well as better: tush, man, mortal men, mortal men.

West. Ay, but, sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare; too beggarly.

Fal. Faith, for their poverty, I know not where they had that: and for their bareness, I am sure they never learned that of me.

P. Hen. No, I'll be sworn; unless you call three fingers on the ribs, bare. But, sirrah, make haste: Percy is already in the field.

Fal. What, is the king encamped?

West. He is, sir John; I fear we shall stay too long.

Fal. Well,

To the latter end of a fray, and the beginning of a feast,
Fits a dull fighter, and a keen guest. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, DOUGLAS, and VERNON.

Hot. We'll fight with him to-night.

Wor. It may not be.

Doug. You give him then advantage.

Ver. Not a whit.

Hot. Why say you so? looks he not for supply?

Ver. So do we.

Hot. His is certain, ours is doubtful.

Wor. Good cousin, be advis'd; stir not to-night.

Ver. Do not, my lord.

Doug. You do not counsel well; You speak it out of fear and cold heart.

Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas: by my life,
(And I dare well maintain it with my life,)

If well-respected honour bid me on,
I hold as little counsel with weak fear
As you, my lord, or any Scot that this day lives:—
Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle
Which of us fears.

Doug. Yea, or to-night.

Ver. Content.

Hot. To-night, say I.

Ver. Come, come, it may not be.

I wonder much, being men of such great leading as you are,

That you foresee not what impediments
Drag back our expedition: Certain horse
Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up;
Your uncle Worcester's horse came but to-day;
And now their pride and mettle is asleep,
Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,
That not a horse is half the half of himself.

Hot. So are the horses of the enemy
In general, journey-bated, and brought low;
The better part of ours are full of rest.

Wor. The number of the king exceedeth ours:
For God's sake, cousin, stay till all come in.

[The trumpet sounds a parley.]

Enter SIR WALTER BLUNT.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the king,
If you vouchsafe me hearing and respect.

Hot. Welcome, sir Walter Blunt; And 'would to God

You were of our determination!
Some of us love you well: and even those some
Have your great deservings and good name,

<sup>a</sup> Toss—toss upon a pike.

Because you are not of our quality,<sup>a</sup>
But stand against us like an enemy.

Blunt. And Heaven defend but still I should so,

So long as, out of limit and true rule,
You stand against anointed majesty!
But to my charge.—The king hath sent to know
The nature of your griefs;<sup>b</sup> and whereupon
You conjure from the breast of civil peace
Such bold hostility, teaching his duteous land
Audacious cruelty: If that the king
Have any way your good deserts forgot,
Which he confesseth to be manifold,
He bids you name your griefs; and, with all speed
You shall have your desires, with interest;
And pardon absolute for yourself, and these,
Herein misled by your suggestion.

Hot. The king is kind; and, well we know, the Knows at what time to promise, when to pay.

My father, my uncle, and myself,
Did give him that same royalty he wears:
And,—when he was not six-and-twenty strong,
Sick in the world's regard, wretched and low,
A poor unminded outlaw sneaking home,—
My father gave him welcome to the shore:
And,—when he heard him swear and vow to God,
He came but to be duke of Lancaster,
To sue his livery, and beg his peace;
With tears of innocency, and terms of zeal,—
My father, in kind heart and pity mov'd,
Swore him assistance, and perform'd it too.
Now, when the lords and barons of the realm
Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him,
The more and less came in with cap and knee:
Met him in boroughs, cities, villages;
Attended him on bridges, stood in lanes,
Laid gifts before him, proffer'd him their oaths,
Gave him their heirs; as pages follow'd him,
Even at the heels, in golden multitudes.
He presently,—as greatness knows itself,—
Steps me a little higher than his vow
Made to my father, while his blood was poor,
Upon the naked shore at Ravenspur;
And now, forsooth, takes on him to reform
Some certain edicts, and some strait decrees,
That lay too heavy on the commonwealth:
Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep
Over his country's wrongs; and, by this face,
This seeming brow of justice, did he win
The hearts of all that he did angle for Proceeded further; cut me off the heads
Of all the favourites, that the absent king
In deputation left behind him here,
When he was personal in the Irish war.

Blunt. Tut, I came not to hear this.

Hot. Then, to the
In short time after, he depos'd the king;
Soon after that, depriv'd him of his life;
And, in the neck of that, task'd<sup>c</sup> the whole state:
To make that worse, suffer'd his kinsman March
(Who is, if every owner were well plac'd, Indeed his king) to be engag'd<sup>d</sup> in Wales,
There without ransom to lie forfeit:
Disgrac'd me in my happy victories;
Sought to entrap me by intelligence;
Rated my uncle from the council board;
In rage dismiss'd my father from the court;
Broke oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong;
And, in conclusion, drove us to seek out

<sup>d</sup> Engag'd. To be engag'd is to be a captive or a hostage.

safety; and, withal, to pry
the which we find for long continuance.
Will I return this answer to the king?
No, sir Walter; we'll withdraw awhile;
I go; and let there be impawn'd for a safe return again,
Morrow early shall my uncle or purposes: and so farewell.
Would you would accept of grace and I may be, so we shall.

Pray heaven you do!
[Exeunt.]

—York. A Room in the Archbishop's House.

Archbishop of York, and a Gentleman.
Good sir Michael; bear this sealed brief,
Haste, to the lord marshal;
Masin Scroop; and all the rest are directed: if you knew they do import, you would make haste.
Good lord, error.

Like enough you do.
Good sir Michael, is a day of fortune of ten thousand men at touch: For, sir, at Shrewsbury, I've given to understand,
his mighty and quick-raised power,

Meets with lord Harry: and I fear, sir Michael,—
What with the sickness of Northumberland, (Whose power was in the first proportion,)
And what with Owen Glendower's absence thence,
(Who with them was a rated sinew too,
And comes not in, over-rul'd by prophecies)—
I fear the power of Percy is too weak
To wage an instant trial with the king.

Gent. Why, my good lord, you need not fear; there's Douglas,

And lord Mortimer.

Arch. No, Mortimer is not there.

Gent. But there is Mordake, Vernon, lord Harry Percy,

And there's my lord of Worcester; and a head
Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen.

Arch. And so there is: but yet the king hath drawn
The special head of all the land together;—

The prince of Wales, lord John of Lancaster,
The noble Westmoreland, and warlike Blunt;
And many more corivals, and dear men

Of estimation and command in arms.

Gent. Doubt not, my lord, he shall be well oppos'd.

Arch. I hope no less, yet needful 't is to fear;

And, to prevent the worst, sir Michael, speed:

For, if lord Percy thrive not, ere the king

Dismiss his power, he means to visit us,

For he hath heard of our confederacy,

And 't is but wisdom to make strong against him;

Therefore make haste: I must go write again

To other friends; and so farewell, sir Michael.

[Exeunt severally]

ACT V.

—The King's Camp near Shrewsbury.

HENRY, PRINCE HENRY, PRINCE JOHN OF GLOUCESTER, SIR WALTER BLUNT, and SIR JOHN COLEPEPER.

How bloodily the sun begins to peer O'er the east hill! the day looks pale
And cold in the creature.

The southern wind
Blows trumpet to his purposes;
The hollow whistling in the leaves,
The aspect and a blustering day,
The hiss with the losers let it sympathize;
The air seems foul to those that win.

Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

My lord of Worcester? 't is not well,
I should meet upon such terms
As meet: You have deceiv'd our trust;
I doff our easy robes of peace,
I'll hold limbs in ungentle steel:
Alas, my lord, this is not well.
Is it to it? will you again unknit
The knot of all-abhorred war?
That obedient orb again,
And give a fair and natural light;
We are an exhal'd meteor,
Fear, and a portentous
Mischief to the unborn times?
For me, my liege:
In part, I could be well content
To be the lag-end of my life

<sup>b</sup> Busky—looky—wooly.

With quiet hours; for, I do protest,
I have not sought the day of this dislike.

K. Hen. You have not sought it! how comes it then?

Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.

P. Hen. Peace, chowet,<sup>a</sup> peace.

Wor. It pleas'd your majesty to turn your looks

Of favour from myself, and all our house;

And yet I must remember you, my lord,

We were the first and dearest of your friends.

For you, my staff of office did I break

In Richard's time; and posted day and night

To meet you on the way, and kiss your hand,

When yet you were in place and in account

Nothing so strong and fortunate as I.

It was myself, my brother, and his son,

That brought you home, and boldly did outdare

The danger of the time: You swore to us,—

And you did swear that oath at Doncaster,—

That you did nothing purpose 'gainst the state;

Nor claim no further than your new-fall'n right,

The seat of Gaunt, dukedom of Lancaster:

To this we swear our aid. But, in short space,

It rain'd down fortune showering on your head;

And such a flood of greatness fall on you,—

What with our help; what with the absent king;

What with the injuries of a wanton time;

The seeming sufferances that you had borne;

And the contrarious winds, that held the king

So long in his unlucky Irish wars,

That all in England did repute him dead,—

And, from this swarm of fair advantages,

You took occasion to be quickly woo'd

To gripe the general sway into your hand

<sup>a</sup> Chowet—perhaps the name of a chattering bird—certainly the name of a dish, or pie, or minced meat.

Forgot your oath to us at Doncaster ;
 And, being fed by us, you used us so
 As that ungentle gull<sup>a</sup> the cuckoo's bird
 Useth the sparrow : did oppress our nest ;
 Grew by our feeling to so great a bulk,
 That even our love durst not come near your sight,
 For fear of swallowing ; but with nimble wing
 We were enforc'd, for safety sake, to fly
 Out of your sight, and raise this present head :
 Whereby we stand opposed by such means
 As you yourself have forg'd against yourself ;
 By unkind usage, dangerous countenance,
 And violation of all faith and troth
 Sworn to us in your younger enterprise.

K. Hen. These things, indeed, you have articulated,<sup>b</sup> Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches,
 To face the garment of rebellion
 With some fine colour, that may please the eye
 Of fickle changelings and poor discontents,
 Which gape, and rub the elbow, at the news
 Of hurlyburly innovation :
 And never yet did insurrection want
 Such water-colours to impaint his cause ;
 Nor moody beggars, starving for a time
 Of pellmell havoc and confusion.

P. Hen. In both our armies there is many a soul Shall pay full dearly for this encounter,
 If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew,
 The prince of Wales doth join with all the world
 In praise of Henry Percy : By my hopes,—
 This present enterprise set off his head,—
 I do not think a braver gentleman,
 More active-valiant, or more valiant-young,
 More daring, or more bold, is now alive,
 To grace this latter age with noble deeds.
 For my part, I may speak it to my shame,
 I have a truant been to chivalry ;
 And so, I hear, he doth account me too :
 Yet this before my father's majesty,—
 I am content that he shall take the odds
 Of his great name and estimation ;
 And will, to save the blood on either side,
 Try fortune with him in a single fight.

K. Hen. And, prince of Wales, so dare we venture thee, Albeit, considerations infinite
 Do make against it :—No, good Worcester, no,
 We love our people well ; even those we love
 That are misled upon your cousin's part :
 And, will they take the offer of our grace,
 Both he, and they, and you, yea, every man,
 Shall be my friend again, and I 'll be his :
 So tell your cousin, and bring me word
 What he will do :—But if he will not yield,
 Rebuke and dread correction wait on us,
 And they shall do their office. So, be gone ;
 We will not now be troubled with reply :
 We offer fair, take it advisedly.

[Exeunt WORCESTER and VERNON.]

P. Hen. It will not be accepted, on my life :
 The Douglas and the Hotspur both together
 Are confident against the world in arms.

K. Hen. Hence, therefore, every leader to his charge ;
 For on their answer will we set on them :
 And God befriend us, as our cause is just !

[Exeunt KING, BLUNT, and PRINCE JOHN.]

Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle, and bestride me, so ; 't is a point of friendship.

P. Hen. Nothing but a colossus can do thee that friendship. Say thy prayers, and farewell.

<sup>a</sup> Gull. Ordinarily this word means the person gulled, be-gulled. In this case it must either mean the guller, or the word may have a special meaning referring to the voracity of the "cuckoo's bird."

Fal. I would it were bed-time, Hal, and all well.

P. Hen. Why, thou owest Heaven a death.

Fal. 'T is not due yet ; I would be loth to part before his day. What need I be so forward with that calls not on me ? Well, 't is no matter ; Hal pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour prick me when I come on ? how then ? Can honour set on a No. Or an arm ? No. Or take away the grief wound ? No. Honour hath no skill in surgery. No. What is honour ? A word. What is that word honour ? Air. A trim reckoning !—Who hath it that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it ? No. Doth he hear it ? No. Is it insensible then ? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living ? No. Why ? Honour will not suffer it :—therefore, I 'll none of it. Honour is a mere scutcheon, and so ends my chism.

SCENE II.—The Rebel Camp.

Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

Wor. O, no, my nephew must not know, sir Richard the liberal kind offer of the king.

Ver. 'T were best he did.

Wor. Then are we all undone. It is not possible, it cannot be, The king would keep his word in loving us : He will suspect us still, and find a time To punish this offence in other faults : Suspicion, all our lives, shall be stuck full of eyes. For treason is but trusted like the fox ; Who, ne'er so tame, so cherish'd, and lock'd up, Will have a wild trick of his ancestors. Look how we can, or sad, or merrily, Interpretation will misquote our looks ; And we shall feed like oxen at a stall, The better cherish'd still the nearer death. My nephew's trespass may be well forgot. It hath the excuse of youth, and heat of blood ; And an adopted name of privilege,— A hare-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen : All his offences live upon my head, And on his father's ;—we did train him on ; And, his corruption being ta'en from us, We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all. Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know, In any case, the offer of the king.

Ver. Deliver what you will, I 'll say 't is on. Here comes your cousin.

Enter HOTSPUR and DOUGLAS ; and Officers Soldiers, behind.

Hot. My uncle is return'd :—Deliver up My lord of Westmoreland.—Uncle, what news ?

Wor. The king will bid you battle presently.

Doug. Defy him by the lord of Westmoreland.

Hot. Lord Douglas, go you and tell him so.

Doug. Marry, and shall, and very willingly.

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the king.

Hot. Did you beg any ? God forbid !

Wor. I told him gently of our grievances, Of his oath-breaking ; which he mended thus,— By now forswearing that he is forsworn : He calls us rebels, traitors ; and will scourge With haughty arms this hateful name in us.

Re-enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Arm, gentlemen ; to arms ! for I have A brave defiance in king Henry's teeth.

And Westmoreland, that was engag'd, did bear A Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on.

Wor. The prince of Wales stepp'd forth before the king,

And, nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

add the quarrel lay upon our heads;
 an might draw short breath to-day,
 cry Mouth! Tell me, tell me, a tasking? seem'd it in contempt?
 my soul; I never in my life
 blenge urg'd more modestly, or should a brother dare
 use and proof of arms.
 All the duties of a man;
 our praises with a princely tongue;
 writings like a chronicle;
 ever better than his praise,
 using praise, valued with you:
 came him like a prince indeed,
 wishing cital of himself;
 want youth with such a grace
 'd there a double spirit, ad of learning, instantly.
 ause. But let me tell the world,—
 e envy of this day,
 ever owe so sweet a hope,
 nstrued in his wantonness.
 , I think, thou art enamour'd
 ; never did I hear
 so wild at liberty: *
 e will, yet once ere night
 him with a soldier's arm, drink under my courtesy.
 speed: And, fellows, soldiers, friends,
 what you have to do, ve not well the gift of tongue,
 hood up with persuasion.

Enter a Messenger.

rd, here are letters for you at read them now.—
 be time of life is short;
 shortness basely were too long,
 upon a dial's point,
 the arrival of an hour.
 re live to tread on kings;
 ath, when princes die with us!
 sciences,—the arms are fair,
 t for bearing them is just.

Enter another Messenger.

rd, prepare; the king comes on apace.
 him, that he cuts me from my tale, t talking; only this,— to his best: and here I draw a sword, enger I intend to stain hood that I can meet withal
 e of this perilous day.
 cè!—Percy!—and set on.—
 sly instruments of war,
 asic let us all embrace:
 earth, some of us never shall do such a courtesy.
 ets sound. They embrace, and exeunt.

Parties fighting. Alarum to the battle. of DOUGLAS and BLUNT, meeting.

t is thy name, that in battle thus thou at me?
 at thou seek upon my head?
 , then, my name is Douglas;
 these in the battle thus,
 All me that thou art a king.
 tell thee true.
 and of Stafford dear to-day hath bought elopour means to say that he never knew of of his own unrestrained will

Thy likeness; for, instead of thee, king Harry,
 This sword hath ended him: so shall it thee,
 Unless thou yield thee as a prisoner.

Blunt. I was not born to yield, thou haughty Scot,
 And thou shalt find a king that will revenge
 Lord Stafford's death. [They fight, and BLUNT is slain.]

Enter HOTSUR.

Hot. O Douglas, hadst thou fought at Holmedon thus,
 I never had triumph'd over a Scot.

Doug. All's done, all's won; here breathless lies the king.

Hot. Where?

Doug. Here.

Hot. This, Douglas? no, I know this face full well;
 A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt;
 Semblably furnish'd like the king himself.

Doug. A fool go with thy soul, whither it goes!
 A borrow'd title hast thou bought too dear.

Why didst thou tell me that thou wert a king?

Hot. The king hath many marching in his coats.

Doug. Now, by my sword, I will kill all his coats;
 I'll murder all his wardrobe, piece by piece,
 Until I meet the king.

Hot. Up and away;

Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day. [Reeunt.]

Other Alarums. Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Though I could 'scape shot-free at London, I fear the shot here: here's no scoring, but upon the pate.— Soft! who are you? Sir Walter Blunt;—there's honour for you: Here's no vanity! I am as hot as molten lead, and as heavy too: Heaven keep lead out of me! I need no more weight than mine own bowels.—I have led my ragamuffins where they are pepper'd: there's not three of my hundred and fifty left alive; and they are for the town's end, to beg during life. But who comes here?

Enter PRINCE HENRY.

P. Hen. What, stand'st thou idle here? lend me thy sword:

Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff
 Under the hoofs of vaunting enemies, Whose deaths are unreveng'd: Prithee, lend me thy sword.

Fal. O Hal, I prithee, give me leave to breathe awhile.—Turk Gregory* never did such deeds in arms as I have done this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him sure.

P. Hen. He is, indeed: and living to kill thee. I prithee, lend me thy sword.

Fal. Nay, Hal, if Percy be alive thou gett'st not my sword; but take my pistol, if thou wilt.

P. Hen. Give it me: What, is it in the case?

Fal. Ay, Hal; 't is hot, 't is hot; there's that will sack a city. [The PRINCE draws out a bottle of sack.]

P. Hen. What, is it a time to jest and dally now?

[Throws it at him, and exit.]
Fal. If Percy be alive I'll pierce him, if he do come in my way, so: if he do not, if I come in his willingly let him make a carbonado<sup>b</sup> of me. I like not such grinning honour as sir Walter hath: Give me life, which if I can save, so; if not, honour comes unlooked for, and there's an end. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Another part of the Field.

Alarums, Excursions. Enter the KING, PRINCE HENRY, PRINCE JOHN, and WESTMORELAND.

K. Hen. I prithee,
 Harry, withdraw thyself; thou bleed'st too much;—
 Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him.

P. John. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too.
P. Hen. I beseech your majesty, make up,
 Lest your retirement do amaze your friends.
K. Hen. I will do so:—
 My lord of Westmoreland, lead him to his tent.
West. Come, my lord, I'll lead you to your tent.
P. Hen. Lead me, my lord? I do not need your help:

And Heaven forbid a shallow scratch should drive
 The prince of Wales from such a field as this;
 Where stain'd nobility lies trodden on,
 And rebels' arms triumph in massacres!
P. John. We breathe too long:—Come, cousin Westmoreland,
 Our duty this way lies; for God's sake, come.

[Exeunt PRINCE JOHN and WESTMORELAND.]

P. Hen. By heaven, thou hast deceiv'd me, Lancaster,
 I did not think thee lord of such a spirit:
 Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John;
 But now, I do respect thee as my soul.
K. Hen. I saw him hold lord Percy at the point,
 With lustier maintenance than I did look for
 Of such an ungrown warrior.

P. Hen. O, this boy lends mettle to us all. [Exit.]

Alarums. Enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Another king! they grow like Hydras' heads:
 I am the Douglas, fatal to all those
 That wear those colours on them.—What art thou
 That counterfeit'st the person of a king?

K. Hen. The king himself; who, Douglas, grieves at heart,

So many of his shadows thou hast met,
 And not the very king. I have two boys
 Seek Percy, and thyself, about the field:
 But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,
 I will assay thee; so defend thyself.

Doug. I fear thou art another counterfeit;
 And yet, in faith, thou bear'st thee like a king:
 But mine I am sure thou art, who'er thou be,
 And thus I win thee.

[They fight; the KING being in danger, enter PRINCE HENRY.]

P. Hen. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like
 Never to hold it up again! the spirits
 Of valiant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my arms:
 It is the prince of Wales that threatens thee;
 Who never promiseth but he means to pay.

[They fight; DOUGLAS flies.]

Cheerly, my lord; How fares your grace?—
 Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent,
 And so hath Clifton; I'll to Clifton straight.

K. Hen. Stay, and breathe awhile:
 Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion;<sup>a</sup>
 And show'd thou mak'st some tender of my life,
 In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me.

P. Hen. O heaven! they did me too much injury
 That ever said I hearken'd for your death.
 If it were so, I might have let alone
 The insulting hand of Douglas over you;
 Which would have been as speedy in your end,
 As all the poisonous potions in the world,
 And sav'd the treacherous labour of your son.

K. Hen. Make up to Clifton, I'll to sir Nicholas Gawsey. [Exit KING HENRY.]

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

P. Hen. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name.
Hot. My name is Harry Percy.

P. Hen. Why, then I see

A very valiant rebel of that name.
 I am the prince of Wales; and think not, Percy,
 To share with me in glory any more:
 Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere;
 Nor can one England brook a double reign,
 Of Harry Percy and the Prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it, Harry, for the hour is come
 To end the one of us; And would to Heaven,
 Thy name in arms were now as great as mine!

P. Hen. I'll make it greater ere I part from thee,
 And all the budding honours on thy crest
 I'll crop, to make a garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brook thy vanities. [They fight.]

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Well said, Hal! to it, Hal!—Nay, you do find no boy's play here, I can tell you.

Enter DOUGLAS; he fights with FALSTAFF, who falls down as if he were dead, and exit DOUGLAS. His spur is wounded, and falls.

Hot. O, Harry, thou hast robb'd me of my youth!
 I better brook the loss of brittle life
 Than those proud titles thou hast won of me;
 They wound my thoughts worse than thy sword my flesh:—

But thought's the slave of life, and life time's fool;
 And time, that takes survey of all the world,
 Must have a stop. O, I could prophesy,
 But that the earthy and cold hand of death
 Lies on my tongue:—No, Percy, thou art dust,
 And food for—

P. Hen. For worms, brave Percy: Fare thee well great heart!

Ill-weav'd ambition, how much art thou shrunk!
 When that this body did contain a spirit,
 A kingdom for it was too small a bound;
 But now, two paces of the vilest earth
 Is room enough:—This earth, that bears thee dead,
 Bears not alive so stout a gentleman.
 If thou wert sensible of courtesy,
 I should not make so great a show of zeal:—
 But let my favours hide thy mangled face;
 And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself
 For doing these fair rites of tenderness.
 Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven!
 Thy ignomy sleep with thee in the grave,
 But not remember'd in thy epitaph!—

[He sees FALSTAFF on the ground.]
 What! old acquaintance! could not all this flesh
 Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, farewell!

I could have better spar'd a better man.
 O, I should have a heavy miss of thee,
 If I were much in love with vanity.
 Death hath not struck so fat to-day,
 Though many dearer, in this bloody fray:—
 Embowell'd will I see thee by and by:
 Till then, in blood by noble Percy lie. [Exit.]

Fal. [Rising slowly.] Embowell'd! if thou embowel me to-day, I'll give you leave to powder me and me to-morrow. 'Sblood, 't was time to counterfeit that hot termagant Scot had paid me scot and let the Counterfeit? I lie, I am no counterfeit: To die is to be a counterfeit; for he is but the counterfeit of a man who hath not the life of a man: but to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life indeed. The better part of valour is discretion; in the which better part I have saved my life. 'Zounds, I am afraid this gunpowder Percy, though he be dead: How, if I should counterfeit too, and rise? I am afraid he will prove the better counterfeit. Therefore I'll make use

And I'll swear I killed him. Why may as well as I? Nothing confutes me but thy body sees me. Therefore, sirrah, [stabbing] new wound in your thigh, come you along [Takes Hotspur on his back.]

PRINCE HENRY and PRINCE JOHN.
Come, brother John, full bravely hast thou slain
the sword.

But, soft! who have we here?
Tell me this fat man was dead?
Did; I saw him dead,
And bleeding on the ground.

Easy that plays upon our eyesight?
Nay; we will not trust our eyes
With ears:
What thou seem'st.

That's certain; I am not a double man:
That Jack Falstaff then am I a Jack. There [raising the body down] if your father will honour, so; if not, let him kill the next time. I look to be either earl or duke, I can say, Percy I kill'd myself, and saw thee do.

What thou?—Lord, Lord, how the world is changed!—I grant you I was down, and out of the world so was he: but we rose both at an instant, at the long hour by Shrewsbury clock. If I were dead, so; if not, let them that should have borne the sin upon their own heads. I'll swear my death, I gave him this wound in the back when the man were alive, and would deny it, I will not eat a piece of my sword.

This is the strangest tale that e'er I heard.
This fellow, brother John,
is your luggage nobly on your back:
if a lie may do thee grace,
I wish the happiest terms I have.

[A retreat is sounded.]
Sound retreat, the day is ours.
Let's to the highest of the field,
Where our friends are living, who are dead.

PRINCE HENRY and PRINCE JOHN.
Follow, as they say, for reward. He that heaven reward him! If I do grow great, as; for I'll purge, and leave sack, and as a nobleman should do.

[Exit, bearing off the body.]

SCENE V.—Another part of the Field.

The trumpets sound. Enter KING HENRY, PRINCE HENRY, PRINCE JOHN, WESTMORELAND, and others, with WORCESTER and VERNON, prisoners.

K. Hen. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke.
Ill-spirited Worcester! did we not send grace,
Pardon, and terms of love to all of you?
And wouldst thou turn our offers contrary?
Misuse the tenor of thy kinsman's trust?
Three knights upon our party slain to-day,
A noble earl, and many a creature else,
Had been alive this hour,
If, like a christian, thou hadst truly borne
Betwixt our armies true intelligence.

Wor. What I have done my safety urg'd me to;
And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Since not to be avoided it falls on me.

K. Hen. Bear Worcester to the death, and Vernon too:

Other offenders we will pause upon.—

[Exit WORCESTER and VERNON, guarded.]

How goes the field?

P. Hen. The noble Scot, lord Douglas, when he saw
The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,
The noble Percy slain, and all his men
Upon the foot of fear, fled with the rest;
And, falling from a hill, he was so bruised
That the pursuers took him. At my tent
The Douglas is; and I beseech your grace
I may dispose of him.

K. Hen. With all my heart.

P. Hen. Then, brother John of Lancaster, to you
This honourable bounty shall belong:
Go to the Douglas, and deliver him
Up to his pleasure, ransomless, and free:
His valour, shown upon our crests to-day,
Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds,
Even in the bosom of our adversaries.

K. Hen. Then this remains,—that we divide our power.

You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland,
Towards York shall bend you, with your dearest speed,
To meet Northumberland and the prelate Scroop,
Who, as we hear, are busily in arms:
Myself, and you, son Harry, will towards Wales,
To fight with Glendower and the earl of March.
Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway,
Meeting the check of such another day:
And since this business so fair is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be won. [Exit]

SCENE,—ENGLAND.

INDUCTION.

eth. Before Northumberland's Castle.

r Rumour, painted full of tongues.

Open your ears: For which of you will stop hearing when loud Rumour speaks?
 Orient to the drooping west,
 Wind my post-horse, still unfold announced on this ball of earth:
 tongues continual slanders ride;
 In every language I pronounce,
 Ears of men with false reports
 Peace, while covert enmity,
 Mile of safety, wounds the world:
 At Rumour, who but only I,
 I musters, and prepar'd defence,
 Big year, enroll with some other griefs,
 With child by the stern tyrant war,
 Is matter? Rumour is a pipe
 Of whimsies, jealousies, conjectures;
 Say and so plain a stop
 And monster with uncounted heads,
 Constant wavering multitude,

Can play upon it. But what need I thus
 My well-known body to anatomize
 Among my household? Why is Rumour here?
 I run before king Harry's victory;
 Who, in a bloody field by Shrewsbury,
 Hath beaten down young Hotspur, and his troops,
 Quenching the flame of bold rebellion
 Even with the rebels' blood. But what mean I
 To speak so true at first? my office is
 To noise abroad,—that Harry Monmouth fell
 Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword;
 And that the king before the Douglas' rage
 Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death.
 This have I rumour'd through the peasant towns
 Between the royal field of Shrewsbury
 And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone,
 Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland, Lies crafty-sick: the posts come tiring on,
 And not a man of them brings other news
 Than they have learn'd of me: From Rumour's tongue
 They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wrongs. [Exit.]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—The same.

The Porter before the Gate; Enter LORD BARDOLPH.

L. Bard. Who keeps the gate here, ho?—Where is the earl?

Port. What shall I say you are?

L. Bard. Tell thou the earl, That the lord Bardolph doth attend him here.

Port. His lordship is walk'd forth into the orchard. Please it your honour, knock but at the gate, And he himself will answer.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

North. What news, lord Bardolph? every minute now

Should be the father of some stratagem:<sup>a</sup> The times are wild; contention, like a horse Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose, And bears down all before him.

L. Bard. Noble earl, I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury.

North. Good, an heaven will!

L. Bard. As good as heart can wish: The king is almost wounded to the death; And, in the fortune of my lord your son, Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Blunts Kill'd by the hand of Douglas: young prince John, And Westmoreland, and Stafford, fled the field; And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk sir John, Is prisoner to your son: O, such a day, So fought, so follow'd, and so fairly won, Came not, till now, to dignify the times, Since Cæsar's fortunes!

North. How is this deriv'd? Saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury?

L. Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence;

A gentleman well bred, and of good name, That freely render'd me these news for true.

North. Here comes my servant, Travers, whom I sent

On Tuesday last to listen after news.

L. Bard. My lord, I over-rode him on the way; And he is furnish'd with no certainties, More than he haply may retail from me.

Enter TRAVERS.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings come with you?

Trav. My lord, sir John Umfrevile turn'd me back With joyful tidings; and, being better hors'd, Out-rode me. After him came, spurring hard, A gentleman almost spent<sup>b</sup> with speed, That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied horse: He ask'd the way to Chester; and of him I did demand what news from Shrewsbury. He told me, that rebellion had ill luck, And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold: With that, he gave his able horse the head, And, bending forward, struck his armed heels Against the panting sides of his poor jade Up to the rowel-head; and starting so, He seem'd in running to devour the way, Staying no longer question.

<sup>a</sup> Stratagem—some military movement, according to the Greek derivation of the word;—some enterprise;—some decisive act on one part or the other, resulting from the wild times of contention.

<sup>b</sup> Spent. For, as a prefix to a verb, is used to give it transitivity.

North. Ha!—Again.

Said he, young Harry Percy's spur was cold? Of Hotspur, coldspur? that rebellion Had met ill luck?

L. Bard. My lord, I'll tell you what: If my young lord your son have not the day, Upon mine honour, for a silken point I'll give my barony: never talk of it.

North. Why should the gentleman that met Travers

Give then such instances of loss?

L. Bard. Who, he?

He was some hilding<sup>a</sup> fellow, that had stolen The horse he rode on; and, upon my life, Spake at adventure. Look, here comes more news.

Enter MORTON.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf Foretells the nature of a tragic volume: So looks the strand, whereon the imperious flood Hath left a witness'd usurpation.

Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord: Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask, To fright our party.

North. How doth my son, and brother Thou tremblest; and the whiteness in thy cheek Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand.

Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless, So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone, Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night, And would have told him, half his Troy was burnt: But Priam found the fire, ere he his tongue, And I my Percy's death, ere thou report'st it. This thou wouldst say,—Your son did thus, and thy Your brother thus: so fought the noble Douglas: Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds: But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed, Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise, Ending with—brother, son, and all are dead.

Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet: But, for my lord your son,—

North. Why, he is dead. See what a ready tongue suspicion hath!

He that but fears the thing he would not know, Hath, by instinct, knowledge from others' eyes. That what he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak, Morton: Tell thou thy earl his divination lies; And I will take it as a sweet disgrace, And make thee rich for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great to be by me gainssaid: Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain.

North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's death I see a strange confession in thine eye: Thou shak'st thy head; and hold'st it fear,<sup>c</sup> or sin: To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so: The tongue offends not that reports his death: And he doth sin that doth belie the dead; Not he, which says the dead is not alive. Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news Hath but a losing office; and his tongue Sounds ever after as a sullen bell, Remember'd knolling a departing friend.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>d</sup> Departing friend. Malone thought that departing was used for departed. But the ancient custom was for the ring for the departing soul—not for the soul that had Hence it was called the passing belt.

I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead.
 (sorrow I should force you to believe would to heaven I had not seen :
 se eyes saw him in bloody state,
 at quittance, wearied and out-breath'd, smouth ; whose swift wrath beat down
 anted Percy to the earth, with life he never more sprung up.
 ath (whose spirit lent a fire allest peasant in his camp)
 once, took fire and heat away
 -temper'd courage in his troops :
 metal was his party steel'd ;
 a him abated, all the rest
 mselves, like dull and heavy lead.
 ing that 's heavy in itself,
 went, flies with greatest speed ;
 n, heavy in Hotspur's loss,
 eight such lightness with their fear, ed not swifter toward their aim,
 soldiers, aiming at their safety,
 eld : Then was that noble Worcester

This word, which here means to lead, is used presently in the present day, when applied to "weaken'd joints, like strengthless hinges,"
 &c.

This line the first "grief" is put for bodily pain ;
 mental sorrow.

That in the dole of blows your son might drop :
 You knew he walk'd o'er perils, on an edge,
 More likely to fall in than to get o'er :
 You were advis'd his flesh was capable
 Of wounds, and scars ; and that his forward spirit
 Would lift him where most trade of danger rang'd :
 Yet did you say,—Go forth ; and none of this,
 Though strongly apprehended, could restrain
 The stiff-borne action : What hath then befallen,
 Or what hath this bold enterprise brought forth,
 More than that being which was like to be ?

L. Bard. We all, that are engaged to this loss,
 Knew that we ventur'd on such dangerous seas,
 That if we wrought out life 't was ten to one :
 And yet we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd
 Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd ;
 And, since we are o'erset, venture again.
 Come, we will all put forth ; body, and goods.

Mor. 'T is more than time : And, my most noble
 lord,

I hear for certain, and do speak the truth,—
 The gentle archbishop of York is up,
 With well-appointed powers ; he is a man,
 Who with a double surety binds his followers.
 My lord your son had only but the corps,
 But shadows and the shows of men, to fight ;
 For that same word, rebellion, did divide
 The action of their bodies from their souls ;
 And they did fight with queasiness, constrain'd,
 As men drink potions ; that their weapons only
 Seem'd on our side, but, for their spirits and souls,
 This word, rebellion, it had froze them up,
 As fish are in a pond : But now the bishop
 Turns insurrection to religion :
 Suppos'd sincere and holy in his thoughts,
 He 's follow'd both with body and with mind ;
 And doth enlarge his rising with the blood
 Of fair king Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret stones ;
 Derives from heaven his quarrel, and his cause ;
 Tells them, he doth bestride a bleeding land,
 Gasping for life under great Bolingbroke ;
 And more and less<sup>a</sup> do flock to follow him.

North. I knew of this before ; but, to speak truth,
 This present grief had wip'd it from my mind.
 Go in with me ; and counsel every man
 The aptest way for safety and revenge :
 Get posts and letters, and make friends with speed ;
 Never so few, nor never yet more need. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—London. A Street.

Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, with his Page bearing his sword and buckler.

Fal. Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my water ?

Page. He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water : but, for the party that owed it, he might have more diseases than he knew for.

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird<sup>b</sup> at me.
 The brain of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to invent anything that tends to laughter, more than I invent, or is invented on me : I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men.
 I do here walk before thee, like a sow that hath o'erwhelmed all her litter but one. If the prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then I have no judgment. Thou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap, than to wait at my heels. I was never manned with an agate till now ; but I will set you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your jeer, to scold at.

master, for a jewel; the juvenal, the prince, your master, whose chin is not yet fledged. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand, than he shall get one on his cheek; yet he will not stick to say, his face is a face-royal: Heaven may finish it when he will, it is not a hair amiss yet: he may keep it still as a face-royal, for a barber shall never earn sixpence out of it; and yet he will be crowing, as if he had writ man ever since his father was a bachelor. He may keep his own grace, but he is almost out of mine, I can assure him. What said master Dumbledon about the satin for my short cloak and slops?

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph: he would not take his bond and yours; he liked not the security.

Fal. Let him be damned like the glutton! may his tongue be hotter!—A whoreson Achitophel! a rascally yea-forsooth knave! to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security! The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is through with them in honest taking up,<sup>a</sup> then they must stand upon security. I had as lief they would put ratsbane in my mouth, as offer to stop it with security. I looked he should have sent me two-and-twenty yards of satin, as I am true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security; for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it: and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lantern to light him. Where's Bardolph?

Page. He's gone into Smithfield, to buy your worship a horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield: if I could get me a wife in the stews, I were manned, horsed, and wived.

Enter the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE and an Attendant.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Fal. Wait close, I will not see him.

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there?

Atten. Falstaff, an't please your lordship.

Ch. Just. He that was in question for the robbery?

Atten. He, my lord: but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury; and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the lord John of Lancaster.

Ch. Just. What, to York? Call him back again.

Atten. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Page. You must speak louder, my master is deaf.

Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of anything good. Go, pluck him by the elbow; I must speak with him.

Atten. Sir John,—

Fal. What! a young knave, and beg! Is there not wars? is there not employment? Doth not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels want soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Atten. You mistake me, sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldiery aside, I had lied in my throat if I had said so.

Atten. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiery aside; and give me leave to tell you, you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou get'st any leave of me, hang me; if thou takest leave, thou wert hanged: You hunt counter;<sup>a</sup> hence! away!

Atten. Sir, my lord would speak with you.

Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good lord!—Give your lordship grace of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad: say your lordship was sick: I hope your lordship abroad by advice. Your lordship, though a past your youth, hath yet some smack of age, some relish of the saltness of time; and I most beseech your lordship to have a reverend care of health.

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your condition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. If it please your lordship, I hear his majesty returned with some discomfort from Wales.

Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty:—You were come when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy.

Ch. Just. Well, heaven mend him! I pray you speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of thargy; a sleeping of the blood, a whoreson tickling of the brain, as I take it, a kind of thargy.

Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? be it as you say.

Fal. It hath its original from much grief, study, and perturbation of the brain; I have cause of his effects in Galen; it is a kind of dizziness.

Ch. Just. I think you are fallen into the disease you hear not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well, my lord, very well: rather please you, it is the disease of not listening, the disease of not marking, that I am troubled withal.

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels would be the attention of your ears; and I care not if you were a physician.

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord, but content: your lordship may minister the punishment to me, in respect of poverty; but how can you be your patient to follow your prescriptions, when they may make some dram of a scruple, or, indeed, a dram of hell itself.

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there was a warrant against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, Sir John, you were great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles him in my belt can tell me that.

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise; I would my means were greater and my waist slenderer.

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful prince.

Fal. The young prince hath misled me: I am a fellow with the great belly, and he my dog.

Ch. Just. Well, I am loth to gill a man for his wound; your day's service at Shrewsbury hath gilded over your night's exploit on Gadshill: thank the unquiet time for your quiet operation.

Fal. My lord?

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so: I will not have a sleeping wolf.

Fal. To wake a wolf is as bad as to smell.

Ch. Just. What! you are as a candle, the more you burn, the more you are burnt out.

Fal. A wassel candle, my lord; all tallow say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

<sup>a</sup> Hunt counter. Falstaff either tells the attendant "counter"—you hunt the wrong way; or calls his counter,—which also might imply that the attendant is a fool.

There is not a white hair on your face but his effect of gravity.

effect of gravity, gravity, gravity.

You follow the young prince up and down, angel.

Yes, my lord; your ill angel is light; but, that looks upon me will take me without need yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot tell: Virtue is of so little regard in these times, that true valour is turned bear-ance is made a tapster, and hath his quick a giving reckonings: all the other gifts appear, as the malice of this age shapes them, as a gooseberry. You, that are old, consider cities of us that are young: you measure or live with the bitterness of your galls: are in the vaward of our youth, I must rage too.

Do you set down your name in the scroll that are written down old with all the change? Have you not a moist eye? a dry low cheek? a white beard? a decreasing easing belly? Is not your voice broken? Is not your chin double? your wit single? Is it about you blasted with antiquity? and call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, sir John! I was born [about three of the clock on.] with a white head, and something a

For my voice, I have lost it with holing of anthems. To approve my youth I set: the truth is, I am only old in judgment; and he that will caper with sound marks, let him lend me the money, him. For the box of the ear that the prince gave it like a rude prince, and you took the lord. I have checked him for it; and he repents: marry, not in ashes and sack-new silk and old sack.

Well, heaven send the prince a better man send the companion a better prince! I give you hands of him.

Well, the king hath severed you and I: I hear you are going with lord John of saint the archbishop and the earl of North-

I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But, all you that kiss my lady peace at home, do join not in a hot day! for, if I take but with me, and I mean not to sweat extra-ly it be a hot day, if I brandish anything, I would I might never spit white again. A dangerous action can peep out his head, set upon it: Well, I cannot last ever: always yet the trick of our English nation, a good thing to make it too common. If he say I am an old man, you should give could to God my name were not so terrible as it is. I were better to be eaten to death than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well: Commend me to my cousin Westmoreland.

Well, be honest, be honest; And Heaven petition!

[Exit CHIEF JUSTICE and Attendants.]

Fal. If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle. A man can no more separate age and covetousness, than he can part young limbs and lechery: but the gout galls the one, and the pox pinches the other; and so both the degrees prevent my curses.—Boy!

Page. Sir?

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Page. Seven groats and two-pence.

Fal. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse: borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Go bear this letter to my lord of Lancaster; this to the prince; this to the earl of Westmoreland; and this to old mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceived the first white hair on my chin: About it; you know where to find me. [Exit Page.] A pox of this gout! or, a gout of this pox! for the one, or the other, plays the rogue with my great toe. It is no matter, if I do halt; I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable: A good wit will make use of anything; I will turn diseases to commodity.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—York. A Room in the Archbishop's Palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP of YORK, the LORD HASTINGS, MOWBRAY, and LORD BARDOLPH.

Arch. Thus have you heard our cause, and know our means;

And, my most noble friends, I pray you all,

Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes:

And first, lord marshal, what say you to it?

Mowb. I well allow the occasion of our arms;

But gladly would be better satisfied

How, in our means, we should advance ourselves

To look with forehead bold and big enough

Upon the power and puissance of the king.

Hast. Our present musters grow upon the file

To five-and-twenty thousand men of choice;

And our supplies live largely in the hope

Of great Northumberland, whose bosom burns

With an incensed fire of injuries.

L. Bard. The question then, Lord Hastings, standeth thus;

Whether our present five-and-twenty thousand

May hold up head without Northumberland.

Hast. With him, we may.

L. Bard. Ay, marry, there 's the point;

But if without him we be thought too feeble,

My judgment is, we should not step too far

Till we had his assistance by the hand:

For, in a theme so bloody-fac'd as this,

Conjecture, expectation, and surmise

Of aids uncertain, should not be admitted.

Arch. 'T is very true, lord Bardolph; for, indeed,

It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury.

L. Bard. It was, my lord; who lin'd himself with hope,

Eating the air on promise of supply,

Flattering himself with project of a power

Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts:

And so, with great imagination,

Proper to madmen, led his powers to death,

And, winking, leap'd into destruction.

Hast. But, by your leave, it never yet did hurt,

To lay down likelihoods, and forms of hope.

L. Bard. Yes;—if this present quality of war

(Indeed the instant action, a cause on foot)

Lives so in hope, as in an early spring

We see the appearing buds; which, to prove fruit,

Hope gives not so much warrant, as despair

That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build,
We first survey the plot, then draw the model;
And when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the erection:
Which if we find outweighs ability,
What do we then, but draw anew the model
In fewer offices; or, at least, desist
To build at all? Much more in this great work, (Which is, almost, to pluck a kingdom down,
And set another up) should we survey
The plot of situation, and the model;
Consent upon a sure foundation;
Question surveyors; know our own estate,
How able such a work to undergo,
To weigh against his opposite; or else,
We fortify in paper, and in figures,
Using the names of men instead of men:
Like one that draws the model of a house
Beyond his power to build it; who, half through,
Gives o'er, and leaves his part-created cost
A naked subject to the weeping clouds,
And waste for churlish winter's tyranny.

Hast. Grant, that our hopes (yet likely of fair birth)
Should be still-born, and that we now possess'd
The utmost man of expectation;
I think we are a body strong enough,
Even as we are, to equal with the king.

L. Bard. What! is the king but five-and-twenty thousand?

Hast. To us no more; nay, not so much, lord Bardolph.
For his divisions, as the times do brawl,
Are in three heads; one power against the French,
And one against Glendower; perforce, a third
Must take up us: So is the unfirm king
In three divided; and his coffers sound
With hollow poverty and emptiness.

Arch. That he should draw his several strengths together,

And come against us in full puissance,
Need not be dreaded.

Hast. If he should do so,
He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and Baying him at the heels: never fear that.

L. Bard. Who, is it like, should lead hither?

Hast. The duke of Lancaster, and Westm
Against the Welsh, himself and Harry Mon
But who is substituted 'gainst the French,
I have no certain notice.

Arch. Let us on;
And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own choice
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited:
An habitation giddy and unsure
Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart.

O thou fond many! with what loud applause
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingb
Before he was what thou wouldst have him be
And being now trimm'd in thine own desires,
Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him,
That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up.

So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge
Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard;
And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit up
And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these
They that when Richard liv'd would have him
Are now become enamour'd on his grave:

Thou, that threw'st dust upon his goodly head
When through proud London he came sighing
After the admired heels of Bolingbroke,
Cries now, "O earth, yield us that king again
And take thou this!" O thoughts of men so Past, and to come, seem best; things present

Mouv. Shall we go draw our numbers, and Hast. We are time's subjects, and time bit

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Enter Hostess; FANG, and his Boy, with her; and SNARE following.

Host. Master Fang, have you entered the action?
Fang. It is entered.

Host. Where's your yeoman? Is't a lusty yeoman? will he stand to't?

Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare?

Host. Ay, ay; good! Master Snare!

Snare. Here, here.

Fang. Snare, we must arrest sir John Falstaff.

Host. Ay, good master Snare; I have entered him and all.

Snare. It may chance cost some of us our lives; he will stab.

Host. Alas the day! take heed of him; he stabbed me in mine own house, and that most beastly: in good faith, he cares not what mischief he doth, if his weapon be out: he will foin like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child.

Fang. If I can close with him I care not for his thrust.

Host. No, nor I neither: I'll be at your elbow.

Fang. If I but fist him once; if he come but within my vice;—

Host. I am undone with his going; I warrant he is an infinitive thing upon my score:—Good master Fang, hold him sure;—good master Snare, let him not 'scape.

man. The bailiff's follower was called a sergeant's bear every knave's wrong.

Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, Page, and Ba
Yonder he comes; and that artant malmsey dolph with him. Do your offices, do ye master Fang, and master Snare; do me, do your offices.

Fal. How now? whose mare's dead?
matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit Quickly.

Fal. Away, varlets!—Draw, Bardolph;

there. Wilt thou? wilt thou? thou bastardly

God's officers, and the king's? O thou honey-thief! thou art a honey-seed; a man queller, and a queller.

Keep them off, Bardolph.

A rescue! a rescue!

Good people, bring a rescue. Thou wilt not?
 Not? do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed!
 Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you rascal! I'll tickle your catastrophe.

Enter the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE, attended.

Justice. What's the matter? keep the peace here, ho!
 Good my lord, be good to me! I beseech you,
 be!

Justice. How now, sir John? what, are you brawling
 here?

Justice. Remove your place, your time, and business?
 I have been well on your way to York.—
 I'll kiss him, fellow. Wherefore hang'st upon him?
 He is my most worshipful lord, an't please your grace, a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrayed in suit.

Justice. For what sum?
 Justice. Is more than for some, my lord; it is for all,
 he hath eaten me out of house and home;
 I'll sell my substance into that fat belly of his:— I'll have some of it out again, or I'll ride thee like the mare.

Justice. Think I am as like to ride the mare, if I have no ground to get up.

Justice. How comes this, sir John? Fie! what a temper would endure this tempest of exception!

Justice. Are you not ashamed to enforce a poor wench a course to come by her own?
 Justice. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Justice. Thirty, if thou wert an honest man, thyself and too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-of silk, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the table, by a sea-coal fire, on Wednesday in Whitson, when the prince broke thy head for liking his singing-man of Windsor; thou didst swear to me I was washing thy wound, to marry me, or my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it?

Justice. How? my wife? Canst thou deny it?
 Justice. My wife Keech, the butcher's wife, come in all me gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow vinegar; telling us she had a good dish of venison; where thou didst desire to eat some; whereby they were ill for a green wound? And didst then she was gone down stairs, desire me to be so familiarly with such poor people; saying long they should call me madam? And bid me kiss me, and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings. I put thee now to thy book-oath; deny it, if thou canst.

Justice. My lord, this is a poor mad soul: and she hath done down the town, that her eldest son is like to be hanged; and she hath been in good case, and, the truth is, she is distracted. But for these foolish words, I may have redress against them.

Justice. Sir John, sir John, I am well acquainted with the manner of wrenching the true cause the false cause; but a confident brow, nor the throng of people with such more than impudent sauciness, can thrust me from a level consideration.

Justice. I have practised upon the easy yielding spirit of many, in truth, my lord.

Justice. Prithce, peace:—Pay her the debt you owe; and unpay the villainy you have done her;
 and may do with sterling money, and the other with your repentance.

Justice. My lord, I will not undergo this sneap without satisfaction;—partially gild, or what is now technically called reply. You call honourable boldness, impudent sauciness; if a man will court'sy and say nothing, he is virtuous: No, my lord, my humble duty remembered, I will not be your suitor. I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs.

Justice. You speak as having power to do wrong, but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Fal. Come hither, hostess. [Taking her aside Enter GOWER.

Justice. Now, master Gower: What news?

Gower. The king, my lord, and Henry prince of Wales are near at hand: the rest the paper tells.

Fal. As I am a gentleman;—

Host. Nay, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a gentleman;—Come, no more words of it.

Host. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate and the tapestry of my dining-chambers.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking; and for thy walls,—a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the prodigal, or the German hunting in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangings, and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound if thou canst. Come, if it were not for thy humours, there is not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw thy action: Come, thou must not be in this humour with me. Come, I know thou wast set on to this.

Host. Prithce, sir John, let it be but twenty nobles. I loath to pawn my plate, in good earnest, la.

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift: you'll be a fool still.

Host. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope you'll come to supper: You'll pay me all together?

Fal. Will I live?—Go, with her, with her; [to BARDOLPH] hook on, hook on.

Host. Will you have Doll Tear-sheet meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words, let's have her.

[Exit Hostess, BARD., Officers, and Page.

Justice. I have heard better news.

Fal. What's the news, my good lord?

Justice. Where lay the king last night?

Gower. At Basingstoke, my lord.

Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well: What is the news, my lord?

Justice. Come all his forces back?

Gower. No; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse, are march'd up to my lord of Lancaster, against Northumberland and the archbishop.

Fal. Comes the king back from Wales, my noble lord?

Justice. You shall have letters of me presently: Come, go along with me, good master Gower.

Fal. My lord!

Justice. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?

Gower. I must wait upon my good lord here; I thank you, good sir John.

Justice. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go.

Fal. Will you sup with me, master Gower?

Justice. What foolish master taught you these manners, sir John?

Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me.—This is the right fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, and so part fair.

Justice. Now the Lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool. [Exit

SCENE II.—Th' aune. Another Street.Enter PRINCE HENRY and POINS.P. Hen. Trust me, I am exceeding weary.Poins. Is it come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood.P. Hen. Faith, it doth me; though it discolours the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer?Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied as to remember so weak a composition.P. Hen. Belike then my appetite was not princely got; for, in troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me to remember thy name? or to know thy face to-morrow? or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast; viz. these, and those that were thy peach-coloured ones? or to bear the inventory of thy shirts; as, one for superfluity, and one other for use?—but that the tennis-court keeper knows better than I; for it is a low ebb of linen with thee, when thou keep'st not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low-countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland.Poins. How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers lying so sick as yours is?P. Hen. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?Poins. Yes; and let it be an excellent good thing.P. Hen. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.Poins. Go to; I stand the puz of your one thing that you'll tell.P. Hen. Why, I tell thee,—it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick: albeit I could tell to thee, (as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend,) I could be sad, and sad indeed too.Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject.P. Hen. By this hand, thou think'st me as far in the devil's book, as thou and Falstaff, for obduracy and persistency: Let the end try the man. But I tell thee, my heart bleeds inwardly that my father is so sick: and keeping such vile company as thou art hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow.Poins. The reason?P. Hen. What wouldst thou think of me if I should weep?Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite.P. Hen. It would be every man's thought: and thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks; never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than thine: every man would think me an hypocrite indeed. And what accites your most worshipful thought to think so?Poins. Why, because you have been so lewd, and so much engrafted to Falstaff.P. Hen. And to thee.Poins. Nay, I am well spoken of; I can hear it with my own ears: the worst that they can say of me is, that I am a second brother, and that I am a proper fellow of my hands; and those two things, I confess, I cannot help. Look, look, here comes Bardolph.P. Hen. And the boy that I gave Falstaff: he had nim from me christian; and see, if the fat villain have not transformed him ape.Enter BARDOLPH and Page.Bard. Save your grace!P. Hen. And yours, most noble Bardolph!Bard. Come, you pernicious ass, [to the Page] you bashful fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man at arms are you become! Is it such a matter to get a maidenhead?

Page. He called me even now, my lord, red lattice, and I could discern no part from the window: at last, I spied his eyes thought, he had made two holes in the ale petticoat, and peeped through.P. Hen. Hath not the boy profited?Bard. Away, you whoreson, upright rabb!Page. Away, you rascally Althea's dream!P. Hen. Instruct us, boy: What dream,Page. Marry, my lord, Althea dreamed I livered of a firebrand; and therefore I call dream.P. Hen. A crown's worth of good interest There it is, boy. [Gives]Poins. O, that this good blossom could be cankers!—Well, there is sixpence to preserve Bard. If you do not make him be ban you, the gallows shall be wronged.P. Hen. And how doth thy master, Bard?Bard. Well, my good lord. He heard of coming to town; there's a letter for you.Poins. Delivered with good respect. An the martlemas,<sup>a</sup> your master?Bard. In bodily health, sir?Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a but that moves not him: though that be sick*P. Hen.* I do allow this wen to be as fat me as my dog: and he holds his place; for how he writes.Poins. [Reads.] John Falstaff, knight, man must know that, as oft as he has occas himself. Even like those that are kin to th they never prick their finger, but they say some of the king's blood spilt: "How co says he, that takes upon him not to concei swer is as ready as a borrower's cap; "I am poor cousin, sir."P. Hen. Nay, they will be kin to us, I fetch it from Japhet. But to the letter:—Poins. "Sir John Falstaff, knight, to th king, nearest his father, Harry prince of W ing."—Why, this is a certificate.P. Hen. Peace!Poins. "I will imitate the honourable brevity:"—sure he means brevity in be winded.—"I commend me to thee, I cu and I leave thee. II.—Warkworth. Before the Castle.

UMBERLAND, LADY NORTHUMBERLAND, and LADY PERCY.

ithee, loving wife, and gentle daughter,
 r unto my rough affairs :
 a the visage of the times,
 hem, to Percy troublesome.
 have given over, I will speak no more :
 fill ; your wisdom be your guide.
 s, sweet wife, my honour is at pawn ;
 going, nothing can redeem it.
 yet, for Heaven's sake, go not to these father, that you broke your word, e more endear'd to it than now ;

 n Percy, when my heart's dear Harry, northward look, to see his father owers ; but he did long in vain.
 aded you to stay at home ?
 honours lost ; yours, and your son's.
 heavenly glory brighten it !
 k upon him, as the sun
 ult of heaven : and, by his light, ivalry of England move
 ts ; he was, indeed, the glass ble youth did dress themselves.
 s that practis'd not his gait :
 thick, which Nature made his blemish, cents of the valiant ;
 could speak low, and tardily,
 eir own perfection to abuse,
 im : So that, in speech, in gait,
 ctions of delight,
 les, humours of blood,
 rnk and glass, copy and book, others. And him,—O wondrous him !
 en !—him did you leave,
 e, unseconded by you,
 be hideous god of war
 re ; to abide a field,
 ; but the sound of Hotspur's name

Did seem defensible :—so you left him :
 Never, O never, do his ghost the wrong,
 To hold your honour more precise and nice
 With others, than with him ; let them alone ;
 The marshal and the archbishop are strong :
 Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers,
 To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck,
 Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.

North. Beshrew your heart,
 Fair daughter ! you do draw my spirits from me,
 With new lamenting ancient oversights.
 But I must go, and meet with danger there ;
 Or it will seek me in another place,
 And find me worse provided.

Lady N. O, fly to Scotland,
 Till that the nobles, and the armed commons,
 Have of their puissance made a little taste.

Lady P. If they get ground and vantage of the king,

Then join you with them, like a rib of steel,
 To make strength stronger ; but, for all our loves,
 First let them try themselves : So did your son ;
 He was so suffer'd : so came I a widow ;
 And never shall have length of life enough,
 To rain upon remembrance with mine eyes,
 That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven,
 For recordation to my noble husband.

North. Come, come, go in with me : 't is with my mind,

As with the tide swell'd up unto his height,
 That makes a still-stand, running neither way.
 Fain would I go to meet the archbishop,
 But many thousand reasons hold me back :
 I will resolve for Scotland ; there am I,
 Till time and vantage crave my company. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Boar's Head Tavern, in Eastcheap.

Enter two Drawers.

1 Draw. What hast thou brought there ? apple-Johns ? thou know'st sir John cannot endure an apple-John.

2 Draw. Thou sayest true : The prince once set a dish of apple-Johns before him, and told him there were five more sir Johns : and, putting off his hat, said, " I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old, withered knights." It angered him to the heart : but he hath forgot that.

1 Draw. Why, then, cover, and set them down : And see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise ;<sup>a</sup> mistress Tear-sheet would fain have some music. [Despatch :—The room where they supped is too hot ; they 'll come in straight.]

2 Draw. Sirrah, here will be the prince and master Poins anon : and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons ; and sir John must not know of it : Bar-dolph hath brought word.

1 Draw. By the mass, here will be old utis ;<sup>b</sup> It will be an excellent stratagem.

2 Draw. I 'll see if I can find out Sneak. [Exit.]

Enter Hostess and DOLL TEAR-SHEET.

Host. I' faith, sweetheart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperality : your pulsidge beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire ; and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose : But you have drunk too much canaries ; and that 's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere we can say,— What 's this ? How do you now ?

<sup>b</sup> Old utis. Utis is the octave of a festival ; and so the word passed into the meaning of merriment generally. Old does not here mean ancient, but extreme, very good.

Doll. Better than I was. Hem.

Host. Why, that was well said; a good heart's worth gold. Look, here comes sir John.

Enter FALSTAFF, singing.

Fal.

When Arthur first in court—

Empty the jordan.—

And was a worthy king:

[Exit Drawer.] How now, mistress Doll?

Host. Sick of a calm;<sup>a</sup> yea, good sooth.

Fal. So is all her sect; if they be once in a calm, they are sick.

Doll. You muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me?

Fal. You make fat rascals, mistress Doll.

Doll. I make them! gluttony and diseases make them; I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll: we catch of you, Doll, we catch of you; grant that, my poor virtue, grant that.

Doll. Ay, marry; our chains and our jewels.

Fal.

Your brooches, pearls, and owches:

—for to serve bravely is to come halting off, you know: To come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely; to venture upon the charged chambers bravely:—

[Doll. Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself!]

Host. By my troth, this is the old fashion; you two never meet, but you fall to some discord: you are both, in good troth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts; you cannot one bear with another's confirmities. What the good-year! one must bear, and that must be you: [to DOLL.] you are the weaker vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel.

Doll. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hogshead? there's a whole merchant's venture of Bordeaux stuff in him; you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold.—Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack—thou art going to the wars: and whether I shall ever see thee again, or no, there is nobody cares.

Re-enter Drawer.

Draw. Sir, ancient <sup>b</sup> Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Doll. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul-mouth'dst rogue in England.

Host. If he swagger, let him not come here: no, by my faith; I must live amongst my neighbours; I'll no swaggerers: I am in good name and fame with the very best.—Shut the door;—there comes no swaggerers here; I have not lived all this while, to have swaggering now:—shut the door, I pray you.

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess?

Host. Pray you, pacify yourself, sir John; here comes no swaggerers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient.

Host. Tilly-fally,<sup>c</sup> sir John, never tell me; your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before master Tisick, the deputy, the other day; and, as he aid to me,—it was no longer ago than Wednesday last,—“Neighbour Quickly,” says he;—master Dumb, our minister, was by then;—“Neighbour Quickly,” says he, “receive those that are civil; for,” saith he, “you are in an ill name;”—now he said so, I can tell whereupon; “for,” says he, “you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests receive: Receive,” says he, “no swaggering company.—There comes none here;—you would bless me to hear what he said:—no, I'll no swaggerers.

<sup>b</sup> Ancient. The ancient is the standard, the ensign; and so the bearer of the ensign is also the ancient.

Fal. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame one he; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy-hound: he will not swagger with a Barbary he; his feathers turn back in any show of resistance against him up, drawer.

Host. Cheater, call you him? I will bar you out of my house, nor no cheater: But I do not allow you to swagger; by my troth, I am the worse when a man swaggers: feel, masters, how I shake; look you at me, rant you.

Doll. So you do, hostess.

Host. Do I? yea, in very truth, do I, an aspen-leaf: I cannot abide swaggerers.

Enter PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Pist. Save you, sir John!

Fal. Welcome, ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, you with a cup of sack: do you discharge us, hostess.

Pist. I will discharge upon her, sir John, bullets.

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hurt her.

Host. Come, I'll drink no proofs, nor will I'll drink no more than will do me good, for pleasure, I.

Pist. Then to you, mistress Dorothy; I will drink to you.

Doll. Charge me? I scorn you, scurvy crew! What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, villainous mate! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am your master.

Pist. I know you, mistress Dorothy.

Doll. Away, you cutpurse rascal! you fill me away! by this wine, I'll thrust my knife into the backs of any of your mouldy chaps, if you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal! you basket-juggler, you!—Since when, I pray you, sir, have you been with two points on your shoulder? much!

Pist. I will murder your ruff for this.

[Fal. No more, Pistol; I would not have you hurt here: discharge yourself of our company.

Host. No, good captain Pistol: not by your sword, captain.

Doll. Captain! thou abominable damnable fellow, are thou not ashamed to be called captain? captains were of my mind, they would trounce thee for taking their names upon you before you had earned them. You a captain, you slave! for what? for taking a poor whore's ruff in a bawdyhouse?—No, tain! Hang him, rogue! He lives upon stewed prunes and dried cakes. A captain's name will make the word as odious as an occupier; which was an excellent good word when it was ill sorted: therefore captains had need be careful.

Bard. Pray thee, go down, good ancient.

Fal. Hark thee hither, mistress Doll.

Pist. Not I: tell thee what, corporal Bardolph, I will tear her:—I'll be revenged on her.

Pist. I'll see her damned first;—to Pluto's lake, to the infernal deep, with Erebus and his dogs, also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down! down, fairs! Have we not Hiren here?

<sup>a</sup> Chester. The officers that manage the eschets were escheters; and from the oppression and extortion they too commonly exercised in the discharge of their office, came the word to cheat.

Doll. Do, if thou darest for thy heart: if thou dost,
I 'll canvas thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Music.

Page. The music is come, sir.

Fal. Let them play;—Play, sirs.—Sit on my knee, Doll. A rascal bragging slave! the rogue fled from me like quicksilver.

Doll. And thou followedst him like a church. Thou whoreson little tidy Bartholomew boar-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o' days, and foining o' nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven?

Enter behind, PRINCE HENRY and POINS, disguised like Drawers.

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's head: do not bid me remember mine end.

Doll. Sirrah, what humour is the prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow: he would have made a good pantler, he would have chipped bread well.

Doll. They say Poins hath a good wit.

Fal. He a good wit? hang him, baboon! his wit is as thick as Tewksbury mustard; there is no more conceit in him than is in a mallet.<sup>a</sup>

Doll. Why doth the prince love him so then?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness: and he plays at quoits well; and eats conger and fennel; and drinks off candles' ends for flap-dragons; and rides the wild mare<sup>b</sup> with the boys; and jumps upon joint-stools; and swears with a good grace; and wears his boot very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg; and breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories; and such other gambol faculties he hath, that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the prince admits him: for the prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoirdupois.

P. Hen. Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins. Let us beat him before his whore.

P. Hen. Look, if the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot.

Poins. Is it not strange that desire should so many years outlive performance?

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

P. Hen. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction;
what says the almanac to that?

Poins. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lipping to his master's old tables; his note-book,
his counsel-keeper.

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering busses.

Doll. Nay, truly; I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Doll. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all.

Fal. What stuff wilt thou have a kirtle of? I shall receive money on Thursday; thou shalt have a cap tomorrow. A merry song, come: it grows late, we will to bed. Thou wilt forget me, when I am gone.

Doll. By my troth thou 'lt set me a weeping, if thou sayest so: prove that I ever dress myself handsome till thy return. Well, hearken the end.

Fal. Some sack, Francis.

P. Hen., Poins. Anon, anon, sir. [Advancing.

Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the king's?—And art not thou Poins his brother?

P. Hen. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead?

Fal. A better than thou; I am a gentleman, thou art a drawer.

P. Hen. Very true, sir : and I come to draw you out by the ears.

Host. O, the Lord preserve thy good grace ! by my troth, welcome to London.—Now Heaven bless that sweet face of thine ! What, are you come from Wales ?

Fal. Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty,—by this light flesh and corrupt blood, thou art welcome.

[Leaning his hand upon DOLL.]

Doll. How ! you fat fool, I scorn you.

Poins. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge, and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

P. Hen. You whoreson candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now, before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman !

Host. Blessing on your good heart ! and so she is, by my troth.

Fal. Didst thou hear me ?

P. Hen. Yes ; and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gadshill : you knew I was at your back ; and spoke it on purpose, to try my patience.

Fal. No, no, no, not so ; I did not think thou wast within hearing.

P. Hen. I shall drive you then to confess the wilful abuse ; and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuse, Hal, on mine honour ; no abuse.

P. Hen. Not to dispraise me ; and call me pantler, and bread-chipper, and I know not what ?

Fal. No abuse, Hal.

Poins. No abuse !

Fal. No abuse, Ned, in the world ; honest Ned, none. I dispraised him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him :—in which doing, I have done the part of a careful friend and a true subject, and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal ;—none, Ned, none ;—no, boys, none.

P. Hen. See now, whether pure fear, and entire cowardice, doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us ? Is she of the wicked ? Is thine hostess here of the wicked ? or is the boy of the wicked ? Or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked ?

Poins. Answer, thou dead elm, answer.

Fal. The fiend hath pricked down Bardolph, irrecoverable ; and his face is Lucifer's privy-kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast malt-worms. For the boy,—there is a good angel about him ; but the devil outbids him too.

P. Hen. For the women,—

Fal. For one of them,—she is in hell already, and burns, poor soul ! For the other,—I owe her money ; and whether she be damned for that, I know not.

Host. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No, I think thou art not ; I think thou art quit for that : Marry, there is another indictment upon thee for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law ; for the which, I think, thou wilt bow.

Host. All victuallers do so : what is a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent ?

P. Hen. You, gentlewoman,—

Doll. What says your grace ?

Fal. His grace says that which his flesh says against.

Host. Who knocks so loud at door ? look to the door there, Francis.

Enter Peto.

P. Hen. Peto, how now ? what news ?

Peto. The king your father is at Westminster ; and there are twenty weak and wearied posts Come from the north : and, as I came along, I met, and overtook, a dozen captains, Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns, And asking every one for sir John Falstaff.

P. Hen. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame,

So idly to profane the precious time ;
When tempest of commotion, like the south,
Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt,
And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.

Give me my sword and cloak :—Falstaff, good night !

[Exeunt PRINCE HENRY, POINS, Peto,

BARDOLPH.

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of flesh and we must hence, and leave it unpicked. [Exit heard.] More knocking at the door !

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

How now ? what 's the matter ?

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently ; A dozen captains stay at door for you.

Fal. Pay the musicians, sirrah [to the Page].—well, hostess ;—farewell, Doll.—You see, my wenches, how men of merit are sought after ; the deserver may sleep, when the man of action is on. Farewell, good wenches : If I be not sent post I will see you again ere I go.

Doll. I cannot speak ;—If my heart be not my burst :—well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself.

Fal. Farewell, farewell. [Exeunt FAL. and BARDOLPH.]

Host. Well, fare thee well : I have known thee twenty-nine years, come peascod time ; but an honest and truer-hearted man,—Well, fare thee well.

Bard. [Within.] Mistress Tear-sheet.

Host. What 's the matter ?

Bard. [Within.] Bid mistress Tear-sheet come master.

Host. O run, Doll, run ; run, good Doll. [Exit

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Palace

Enter KING HENRY, with a Page.

K. Hen. Go, call the earls of Surrey and of Warwick ; But, ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters, And well consider of them : Make good speed.

[Exit Page.]

How many thousand of my poorest subjects
Are at this hour asleep ! O sleep, O gentle sleep,
Nature's soft nurse, how have I frightened thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down,
And steep my senses in forgetfulness ?
Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee,
And bush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber.

Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great,
Under the canopies of costly state,
And lull'd with sounds of sweetest melody ?
O thou dull god, why liest thou with the vile,
In loathsome beds ; and leav'st the kingly couch,
A watch-case, or a common 'larum-bell ?
Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast
Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains
In cradle of the rude imperious surge,
And in the visitation of the winds,
Who take the ruffian billows by the top,
Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them
With deaf'ning clamours in the slippery clouds,
That, with the hurly,* death itself awakes ?

* Hurly—loud noise.

partial sleep! give thy repose
 Boy in an hour so rude;
 Dimest and most stillest night,
 Slumbers and means to boot,
 Sing! Then, happy low-lie-down!<sup>a</sup>
 The head that wears a crown.

Enter WARWICK and SURREY.

My good-morrrows to your majesty!
 It good morrow, lords?
 One o'clock, and past.
 Why, then, good morrow to you all, my lords?
 I o'er the letters that I sent you?
 Have, my liege.
 When you perceive, the body of our kingdom
 ; what rank diseases grow,
 In danger, near the heart of it.
 But as a body yet distemper'd,<sup>b</sup>
 Former strength may be restor'd,
 Rice and little medicine:
 Northumberland will soon be cool'd.
 Heaven! that one might read the book
 Of the Revolution of the times
 In level, and the continent
 (And firmness) melt itself
 And, other times, to see
 The rille of the ocean
 Neptune's hips; how chances mock,
 Fill the cup of alteration
 Quors! [O, if this were seen,
 South, viewing his progress through,
 East, what crosses to ensue,
 He book, and sit him down and die.]
 Years gone
 And Northumberland, great friends,
 Diar, and, in two years after,
 Wars: It is but eight years since
 As the man nearest my soul;
 Other toil'd in my affairs,
 Ove and life under my foot;
 Like, even to the eyes of Richard,
 Since. But which of you was by,
 Nevil, as I may remember, [To WAR-
 WICK,—with his eye brimfull of tears,
 And rated by Northumberland,—
 These words, now prov'd a prophecy?
 Land, thou ladder, by the which Lingbroke ascends my throne;—
 Heaven knows, I had no such intent,
 Sity so bow'd the state,
 Outness were compell'd to kiss:—
 All come," thus did he follow it,
 Ill come, that foul sin, gathering head,
 To corruption:—so went on,
 A same time's condition,
 Out of our amity.
 As is a history in all men's lives,
 Nature of the times deceas'd:
 Werr'd, a man may prophesy,
 Him, of the main chance of things
 Me to life; which in their seeds,
 Timings, lie intreasur'd.
 Become the hatch and brood of time;
 Necessary form of this,
 Might create a perfect guess,
 Northumberland, then false to him,
 It seed, grow to a greater falseness;
 As eye: "Happy low-lie-down" is either a proverb, or the burthen of some old song, and means,
 A man who lays himself down on his straw bed or on the ground or floor!<sup>c</sup>
 It is used as indicating a state of ill-health, sometimes the rank diseases of which the king speaks.

Which should not find a ground to root upon,
 Unless on you.

K. Hen. Are these things then necessities
 Then let us meet them like necessities:
 And that same word even now cries out on us;
 They say, the bishop and Northumberland
 Are fifty thousand strong.

War. It cannot be, my lord;
 Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo,
 The numbers of the feared; Please it your grace
 To go to bed; upon my life, my lord,
 The powers that you already have sent forth
 Shall bring this prize in very easily.
 To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
 A certain instance that Glendower is dead.
 Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill;
 And these unseason'd hours, perforce, must add
 Unto your sickness.

K. Hen. I will take your counsel:
 And, were these inward wars once out of hand,
 We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Court before Justice Shallow's House in Gloucestershire.

Enter SHALLOW and SILENCE, meeting; MOULDY, SHADOW, WART, FEEBLE, BULL-CALF, and SERVANTS behind.

Shal. Come on, come on, come on; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir: an early stirrer, by the rood. And how doth my good cousin Silence?

Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow;
 and your fairest daughter, and mine, my god-daughter Ellen?

Sil. Alas! a black ouzel, cousin Shallow.

Shal. By yea and nay, sir, I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar: He is at Oxford, still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, sir; to my cost.

Shal. He must then to the inns of court shortly: I was once of Clement's-inn; where, I think, they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were called lusty Shallow, then, cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was called anything; and I would have done anything, indeed, and roundly too.
 There was I, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Bare, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squele a Cotswold man,—you had not four such swingebucklers in all the inns of court again: and, I may say to you, we knew where the bona-robas were; and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Falstaff, now sir John, a boy; and page to Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shal. The same sir John, the very same. I saw him break Skogan's head at the court gate, when he was a crack, not thus high: and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's-inn. O, the mad days that I have spent! and to see how many of mine old acquaintance are dead!

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, 't is certain; very sure, very sure:
 death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Sil. Truly, cousin, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain.—Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir.

Shal. Dead!—See, see!—he drew a good bow: And dead!—he shot a fine shoot:—John of Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead!—he would have clapped i' the clout at twelve score;* and carried you a fore-hand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see.—How a score of ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead?

Enter BARDOLPH, and one with him.

Sil. Here come two of sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Bard. Good morrow, honest gentlemen: I beseech you, which is justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace: What is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you: my captain, sir John Falstaff: a tall gentleman, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, sir. I knew him a good backword man: How doth the good knight? may I ask how my lady his wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife.

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated!—it is good; yea, indeed is it: good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated!—it comes of accommodo: very good; a good phrase.

Bard. Pardon, sir: I have heard the word. Phrase, call you it? By this day, I know not the phrase: but I will maintain the word, with my sword, to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command. Accommodated; That is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated: or, when a man is,—being,—whereby,—he may be thought to be accommodated; which is an excellent thing.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Shal. It is very just:—Look, here comes good sir John.—Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand: Trust me, you look well, and bear your years very well: welcome, good sir John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good master Robert Shallow:—Master Sure-card, as I think.

Shal. No, sir John; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Fie! this is hot weather.—Gentlemen, have you provided me here half a dozen of sufficient men?

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where 's the roll? where 's the roll? where 's the roll?—Let me see, let me see, let me see. So, so, so, so: Yea, marry, sir:—Ralph Mouldy:—let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so.—Let me see; Where is Mouldy?

Moul. Here, if it please you.

Shal. What think you, sir John? a good-limbed fellow: young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy?

Moul. Yea, if it please you.

Fal. 'T is the more time thou wert used.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, i' faith! things that are mouldy lack use: Very singular good!—Well said, sir John; very well said.

Fal. Prick him.

[To SHALLOW.]

Moul. I was pricked well enough before, if you could have let me alone: my old dame will be undone now, for one to do her husbandry and her drudgery: you need not to have pricked me; there are other to go out than I.

* Twelve score. Yards is here understood, and subsequently a fourteen means a fourteen score yards.

Fal. Go to; peace, Mouldy, you shall go it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent!

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace; stand aside; where you are?—For the other, sir John:—Simon Shadow!

Fal. Ay, marry, let me have him to sit up like to be a cold soldier.

Shal. Where 's Shadow?

Shad. Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou?

Shad. My mother's son, sir.

Fal. Thy mother's son! like enough; and shadow: so the son of the female is the male: It is often so, indeed; but not of the stance.

Shal. Do you like him, sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer,—pr for we have a number of shadows to fill up book.

Shal. Thomas Wart!

Fal. Where 's he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.

Shal. Shall I prick him down, sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous; for his appa upon his back, and the whole frame stands prick him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha!—you can do it, sir; it: I commend you well.—Francis Feeble!

Fee. Here, sir.

Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble?

Fee. A woman's tailor, sir.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir?

Fal. You may: but if he had been a he would have pricked you.—Wilt thou make holes in an enemy's battle, as thou hast done man's petticoat?

Fee. I will do my good will, sir; you more.

Fal. Well said, good woman's tailor! we rageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant as a ful dove, or most magnanimous mouse: woman's tailor well, master Shallow; and Shallow.

Fee. I would Wart might have gone, sir.

Fal. I would thou wert a man's tailor mightst mend him, and make him fit to go put him to a private soldier, that is the many thousands: Let that suffice, most fit

Fee. It shall suffice, sir.

Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble the next?

Shal. Peter Bull-calf of the green!

Fal. Yea, marry, let us see Bull-calf.

Bull. Here, sir.

Fal. Trust me, a likely fellow!—Come Bull-calf till he roar again.

Bull. O, good my lord captain,—

Fal. What, dost thou roar before thou art

Bull. O, sir! I am a diseased man.

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whoreson cold, sir; a cough, caught with ringing in the king's affairs, upon nation day, sir.

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars, we will have away thy cold; and I will order, that thy friends shall ring for thee all!

Shal. There is two more called than you but four here, sir;—and so, I pray you to dinner.

I will go drink with you, but I cannot
I am glad to see you, in good troth, sw.

sir John, do you remember since we lay all windmill in St. George's field?
sore of that, good master Shallow, no more it was a merry night. And is Jane Night-ives, master Shallow.

never could away with me.

er, never: she would always say she could ster Shallow.

the mass, I could anger her to the heart.
a bona-rob. Doth she hold her own well?
old, master Shallow.

y, she must be old; she cannot choose but sin, she's old; and had Robin Nightwork work, before I came to Clement's-inn.

re I for the limb, the thewes, the stature, y resemblance of a man! Give me the spirit, master Shallow.—Here's Wart;—you see what a ragged appearance it is: he shall charge you, and discharge you, with the motion of a pewterer's hammer; come off, and on, swifter than he that gibbets-on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-faced fellow, Shadow,—give me this man; he presents no mark to the enemy, the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife: And, for a retreat,—how swiftly will this Feeble, the woman's tailor, run off! O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a caliver<sup>a</sup> into Wart's hand, Bardolph.

Bard. Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus.
Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So:—very well:—go to:—very good:—exceeding good.—O, give me always a little, lean, old, chapped, bald shot.—Well said, Wart; thou'rt a good scab: hold, there's a tester for thee.

Shal. He is not his craft's-master, he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end green, (when I lay at Clement's-inn.)—I was then sir Dagonet in Arthur's show, there was a little quiver<sup>b</sup> fellow, and he would manage you his piece thus: and he would about, and about, and come you in, and come you in: "rah, tab, tab," would he say; "bounce," would he say; and away again would he go, and again would he come:—I shall never see such a fellow.

Fal. These fellows will do well, master Shallow.— Farewell, master Silence; I will not use many words with you:—Fare you well, gentlemen both: I thank you: I must a dozen mile to-night.—Bardolph, give the soldiers coats.

Shal. Sir John, Heaven bless you, and prosper your affairs, and send us peace! As you return, visit my house; let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure,
I will with you to the court.

Fal. I would you would, master Shallow.
Shal. Go to; I have spoke at a word. Fare you well.

[Exeunt SHALLOW and SILENCE.
Fal. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen. On, Bar-dolph; lead the men away. [Exeunt BARDOLPH, REcruits, &c.] As I return, I will fetch off these justices:

I do see the bottom of justice Shallow. How subject we old men are to this vice of lying! This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth, and the feats he hath done about Turnbull-street; and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's-inn, like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring: when he was naked, he was, for all the world, like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife: he was so forlorn, that his dimensions to any thick sight were invincible:<sup>c</sup> he was the very genius of famine; he came ever in the rear-ward of the fashion; and sung those tunes to the over-scutched huswives that he heard the carmen whistle, and sware they were his fancies, or his good-nights.—And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire; and talks as familiarly of John of Gaunt as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn he never saw him but once in the Tilt-yard; and then he burst his head, for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it; and told John of Gaunt he beat his own name; for you might have truss'd him, and all his apparel, into an eel-skin;
the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court: and now bath he land and beeves. Well; I will be acquainted with him, if I return; and it shall go hard, but I will make him a philosopher's two stones to me: if the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason, in the law of nature, but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end. [Exit.

<sup>a</sup> Caliver. The caliver was smaller than the musket, and was fired without a rest.

<sup>b</sup> Quiver, nimble.
<sup>c</sup> Invincible. The meaning is—his dimensions were such that a thick sight could not master them.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Forest in Yorkshire.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, MOWBRAY, HASTINGS, and others.

Arch. What is this forest call'd?

Hast. 'T is Gualtree forest, an' t shall please your grace.

Arch. Here stand, my lords; and send discoverers forth,

To know the numbers of our enemies.

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. 'T is well done.

My friends, and brethren in these great affairs,
I must acquaint you that I have receiv'd
New-dated letters from Northumberland;
Their cold intent, tenor, and substance, thus:—
Here doth he wish his person, with such powers
As might hold sortance with his quality;
The which he could not levy: whereupon
He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes,
To Scotland: and concludes in hearty prayers,
That your attempts may overlive the hazard
And fearful meeting of their opposite.

Mowb. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch ground,
And dash themselves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hast. Now, what news?

Mess. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile,
In goodly form comes on the enemy:
And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number
Upon, or near, the rate of thirty thousand.

Mowb. The just proportion that we gave them out.
Let us sway on, and face them in the field.

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Arch. What well-appointed leader fronts us here?

Mowb. I think it is my lord of Westmoreland.

West. Health and fair greeting from our general,
The prince, lord John and duke of Lancaster.

Arch. Say on, my lord of Westmoreland, in peace;
What doth concern your coming?

West. Then, my lord,
Unto your grace do I in chief address
The substance of my speech. If that rebellion
Came like itself, in base and abject routs,
Led on by bloody youth, guarded<sup>a</sup> with rage,
And countenanc'd by boys and beggary;
I say, if damn'd commotion so appear'd,
In his true, native, and most proper shape,
You, reverend father, and these noble lords,
Had not been here, to dress the ugly form
Of base and bloody insurrection
With your fair honours. You, lord archbishop,— Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd;
Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd;
Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor'd;
Whose white investments figure innocence,
The dove and very blessed spirit of peace,—
Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself,
O it of the speech of peace, that bears such grace,
Into the harsh and boisterous tongue of war?
Turning your books to graves, your ink to blood,
Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine
To a loud trumpet, and a point of war?

Arch. Wherefore do I this?—so the question stands.
Briefly to this end:—We are all diseas'd;

<sup>a</sup> Guarded—faced—bordered.

And, with our surfeiting, and wanton hours,
Have brought ourselves into a burning fever,
And we must bleed for it: of which disease
Our late king, Richard, being infected, died.
But, my most noble lord of Westmoreland,
I take not on me here as a physician;
Nor do I, as an enemy to peace,
Troop in the throngs of military men:
But, rather, show a while like fearful war,
To diet rank minds, sick of happiness;
And purge the obstructions, which begin to stop
Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly.
I have in equal balance justly weigh'd
What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we
And find our griefs<sup>a</sup> heavier than our offences.
We see which way the stream of time doth run,
And are enforc'd from our most quiet sphere
By the rough torrent of occasion:
And have the summary of all our griefs,
When time shall serve, to show in articles;
Which, long ere this, we offer'd to the king,
And might by no suit gain our audience:
When we are wrong'd, and would unfold our
We are denied access unto his person
Even by those men that most have done us wrong
The dangers of the days but newly gone,
(Whose memory is written on the earth
With yet-appearing blood,) and the examples
Of every minute's instance, (present now,)
Have put us in these ill-beseeming arms:
Not to break peace, or any branch of it;
But to establish here a peace indeed,
Concurring both in name and quality.

West. When ever yet was your appeal denied Wherein have you been galled by the king?
What peer hath been suborn'd to grate on you?
That you should seal this lawless bloody book
Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine,
[And consecrate commotion's bitter edge?]

Arch. My brother, general! the commonweal
[To brother born an household cruelty,]
I make my quarrel in particular.

West. There is no need of any such redress
Or, if there were, it not belongs to you.

Mowb. Why not to him, in part; and to us
That feel the bruises of the days before;
And suffer the condition of these times
To lay a heavy and unequal hand
Upon our honours?

West. O my good lord Mowbray,
Construe the times to their necessities,
And you shall say indeed,—it is the time,
And not the king, that doth you injuries.
Yet, for your part, it not appears to me,
Either from the king, or in the present time,
That you should have an inch of any ground
To build a grief on: Were you not restor'd
To all the duke of Norfolk's seigniories,
Your noble and right-well-remember'd father's

Mowb. What thing, in honour, had my father
That need to be reviv'd, and breath'd in me?
The king, that lov'd him, as the state stood then
Was, force perforce, compell'd to banish him:
And then, that Henry Bolingbroke, and he,
Being mounted, and both roused in their seats,
Their neighing couriers daring of the spur,
Their armed staves in charge, their beavers down
Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of

<sup>a</sup> Griefs—grievances.

trumpet blowing them together ;
 when there was nothing could have stay'd on the breast of Bolingbroke, King did throw his warder down, hang upon the staff he threw :
 he down himself ; and all their lives,
 cement, and by dint of sword,
 miscarried under Bolingbroke.
 I speak, lord Mowbray, now you know not
 it :

Hereford was reputed then the most valiant gentleman ;
 in whom fortune would then have smil'd ?
 father had been victor there,
 borne it out of Coventry :
 country, in a general voice,
 son him ; and all their prayers, and love, Hereford, whom they doted on,
 and grac'd indeed, more than the king.
 ere digression from my purpose.—
 from our princely general,
 r griefs ; to tell you from his grace, give you audience : and wherein r that your demands are just,
 oy them ; everything set off,
 s much as think you enemies.
 t he hath forc'd us to compel this offer ;
 ds from policy, not love.
 Mowbray, you overween, to take it so ;
 see from mercy, not from fear :
 in a ken, our army lies :
 honour, all too confident stance to a thought of fear.
 more full of names than yours,
 e perfect in the use of arms,
 all as strong, our cause the best ;
 kills our hearts should be as good :—
 then, our offer is compell'd.

All, by my will, we shall admit no parley.
 t argues but the shame of your offence :
 abides no handling.
 n the prince John a full commission,
 e virtue of his father, absolutely to determine itions we shall stand upon ?
 t is intended in the general's name :
 make so slight a question.
 s take, my lord of Westmoreland, this shile ;
 ins our general grievances :
 article herein redress'd ;
 of our cause, both here and hence,
 sew'd to this action,
 a true substantial form ;
 xecution of our wills
 our purposes, consign'd :
 ain our awful banks again,
 powers to the arm of peace.
 will I show the general. Please you, lords,
 th our battles we may meet :
 if in peace, which Heaven so frame.
 e of difference call the swords decide it.

My lord, we will do so. [Exit WEST.
 re is a thing within my bosom tells me,
 tions of our peace can stand.
 you not that : if we can make our peace ge terms, and so absolute,
 oms shall consist upon,
 ll stand as firm as rocky mountains.

The word sew'd is here used in the sense of redress'd, who are in arms against the king, having redress'd, will come again within their bounds size.

Mowb. Ay, but our valuation shall be such,
 That every slight and false-derived cause,
 Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason,
 Shall, to the king, taste of this action :
 That were our royal faiths martyrs in love,
 We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind,
 That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff,
 And good from bad find no partition.

Arch. No, no, my lord ; Note this,—the king is weary
 Of dainty and such picking grievances :
 For he hath found, to end one doubt by death,
 Revives two greater in the heirs of life.
 And therefore will he wipe his tables clean ;
 And keep no tell-tale to his memory,
 That may repeat and history his loss
 To new remembrance : For full well he knows,
 He cannot so precisely weed this land
 As his misdoubts present occasion :
 His foes are so enrooted with his friends,
 That, plucking to unfix an enemy,
 He doth unfasten so and shake a friend.
 So that this land, like an offensive wife,
 That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes,
 As he is striking, holds his infant up,
 And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm
 That was uprear'd to execution.

Hast. Besides the king hath wasted all his rods
 On late offenders, that he now doth lack
 The very instruments of chastisement :
 So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
 May offer, but not hold.

Arch. 'Tis very true :—
 And therefore be assur'd, my good lord marshal,
 If we do now make our atonement well,
 Our peace will, like a broken limb united,
 Grow stronger for the breaking.

Mowb. Be it so.
 Here is return'd my lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

West. The prince is here at hand : Pleaseth your lordship

To meet his grace just distance 'tween our armies ?

Mowb. Your grace of York, in Heaven's name then forward.

Arch. Before, and greet his grace :—my lord, we come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Forest.

*Enter, from one side, MOWBRAY, the ARCHBISHOP,
 HASTINGS, and others : from the other side, PRINCE JOHN of Lancaster, WESTMORELAND, Officers, and Attendants.*

P. John. You are well encounter'd here, my cousin
 Mowbray :

Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop :
 And so to you, lord Hastings,—and to all.
 My lord of York, it better show'd with you,
 When that your flock, assembled by the bell,
 Encircled you, to hear with reverence
 Your exposition on the holy text,
 Than now to see you here an iron man,
 Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
 Turning the word to sword, and life to death.
 That man, that sits within a monarch's heart,
 And ripens in the sunshine of his favour,
 Would he abuse the countenance of the king,
 Alack, what mischiefs might he set abroad,
 In shadow of such greatness ! With you, lord bishop,
 It is even so :—Who hath not heard it spoken,
 How deep you were within the books of Heaven ?
 To us, the speaker in his parliament ;
 To us the imagin'd voice of Heaven itself :

The very opener and intelligencer,
Between the grace, the sanctities of Heaven,
And our dull workings: O, who shall believe,
But you misuse the reverence of your place;
Employ the countenance and grace of Heaven
As a false favourite doth his prince's name,
In deeds dishonourable? You have taken up,
Under the counterfeited zeal of Heaven,
The subjects of Heaven's substitute, my father;
And, both against the peace of Heaven and him,
Have here up-swarmed them.

Arch. Good my lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your father's peace:
But, as I told my lord of Westmoreland,
The time misorder'd doth, in common sense,
Crowd us, and crush us, to this monstrous form,
To hold our safety up. I sent your grace
The parcels and particulars of our grief,
(The which hath been with scorn shov'd from the court,)
Whereon this Hydra son of war is born:
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep.
With grant of our most just and right desires;
And true obedience of this madness cur'd,
Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowb. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes
To the last man.

Hast. And though we here fall down,
We have supplies to second our attempt;
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them:
And so, success<sup>a</sup> of mischief shall be born;
And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up,
Whiles England shall have generation.

P. John. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow,

To sound the bottom of the after-times.

West. Pleaseth your grace to answer them directly,
How far-forth you do like their articles?

P. John. I like them all, and do allow them well:
And swear here by the honour of my blood,
My father's purposes have been mistook;
And some about him have too lavishly
Wrested his meaning and authority.

My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress'd;
Upon my life, they shall. If this may please you,
Discharge your powers unto their several counties,
As we will ours: and here, between the armies,
Let's drink together friendly, and embrace;
That all their eyes may bear those tokens home,
Of our restored love and amity.

Arch. I take your princely word for these redresses.

P. John. I give it you, and will maintain my word:
And thereupon I drink unto your grace.

Hast. Go, captain [to an Officer], and deliver to the army

This news of peace; let them have pay, and part:
I know it will well please them; Hie thee, captain.

[Exit Officer.]
Arch. To you, my noble lord of Westmoreland.

West. I pledge your grace: And, if you knew what pains

I have bestow'd, to breed this present peace,
You would drink freely: but my love to ye Shall show itself more openly hereafter.

Arch. I do not doubt you.

West. I am glad of it:—
Health to my lord, and gentle cousin Mowbray.

Mowb. You wish me health in very happy season:
For I am, on the sudden, something ill.

Arch. Against ill chances, men are ever merry;
But heaviness foreruns the good event.

West. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow
Serves to say thus,—Some good thing comes to-morrow.

Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.

<sup>a</sup> Success—succession.

Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest
For then both parties nobly are subdued,
And neither party loser.

P. John. Go, my lord,
And let our army be discharged too.— [Exit]
And, good my lord, so please you, let our March by us, that we may peruse the men
We should have cop'd withal.

Arch. Go, good lord
And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march

P. John. I trust, lords, we shall lie to-night

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still

West. The leaders, having charge from you
Will not go off until they hear you speak.

P. John. They know their duties.

Re-enter HASTINGS.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispers'd all Like youthful steers unyok'd, they took their East, west, north, south; or, like a school of boys,
Each hurries towards his home and sporting.

West. Good tidings, my lord Hastings; for
I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason:
And you, lord archbishop,—and you, lord
Of capital treason I attach you both.

Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable?
West. Is your assembly so?

Arch. Will you thus break your faith?
P. John. I pawn'd

I promis'd you redress of these same grievances
Whereof you did complain; which, by mine
I will perform with a most Christian care.

But for you, rebels, look to taste the due
Meet for rebellion, and such acts as yours.
Most shallowly did you these arms commencing
Fondly brought here, and foolishly sent hence.
Strike up our drums, pursue the scatter'd
Heaven, and not we, hath safely fought to-day
Some guard these traitors to the block of death,
Treason's true bed, and yielder up of breath

SCENE III.—Another part of the Alarums: Excursions. Enter FALSTAFF

VILE, meeting.

Fal. What's your name, sir? of what you, and of what place, I pray?

Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name of the dale.

Fal. Well, then, Coleville is your name;
your degree; and your place, the dale: O still be your name; a traitor your degree dungeon your place,—a place deep enough you be still Coleville of the dale.

Cole. Are not you sir John Falstaff?

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, who'er ye yield, sir? or shall I sweat for you? If they are the drops of thy lovers, and they death; therefore rouse up fear and trembling observance to my mercy.

Cole. I think you are sir John Falstaff; thought, yield me

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues of mine; and not a tongue of them all speak word but my name. An I had but a belly differency, I were simply the most active

My womb, my womb, my womb undoes me.—
I am your general.

Enter JOHN of Lancaster, WESTMORELAND,
and others.

John. The heat is past, follow no farther now;—
I am your powers, good cousin Westmoreland.—

[Exit WEST.]
John. Where have you been all this while?

West. Nothing is ended then you come:
I have done your tricks of yours will, on my life,
or other break some gallows' back.

John. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be ever knew yet but rebuke and check was the valour. Do you think me a swallow, an bullet? have I, in my poor and old motion, been of thought? I have speeded hither with the utmost inch of possibility; I have foundered and odd posts: and here, travel-tainted as I in my pure and immaculate valour, taken sir vile of the dale, a most furious knight, and a semy: But what of that? he saw me, and that I may justly say with the hook-nosed fellow, I came, saw, and overcame.

John. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving.

West. I know not; here he is, and here I yield him:
I will sell your grace, let it be booked with the rest of his deeds; or, I swear, I will have it in a parlour else, with mine own picture on the top of my kissing my foot: To the which course if I go, if you do not all show like gilt twopences to me, I, in the clear sky of fame, o'ershine you as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, and like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of me: Therefore let me have right, and let desert be served.

John. Thine 's too heavy to mount.
West. Let it shine then.

John. Thine 's too thick to shine.
West. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

John. Is thy name Coleville?
West. It is, my lord.

John. A famous rebel art thou, Coleville.
West. I had a famous true subject took him.

John. I am, my lord, but as my betters are,
I have hither: had they been rul'd by me,
I should have won them dearer than you have.

West. I know not how they sold themselves: but thou, my fellow, gavest thyself away; and I thank God for it.

John. Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

West. Have you left pursuit?
John. Retreat is made, and execution stay'd.

West. Send Coleville, with his confederates, to present execution:—
I will bring him hence; and see you guard him sure.

[Exit some with COLVILLE.]
West. Despatch we toward the court, my lords;
my king my father is sore sick;

John. I shall go before us to his majesty,—
I beseech you, you shall bear,—to comfort him;
I will follow you with the sober speed will follow you.

West. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go to Glostershire: and, when you come to court, good lord, pray, in your good report.

John. Fare you well, Falstaff: I, in my condition,
I will speak of you than you deserve. [Exit.]

West. My good lord, "Be my good lord" was the old court by a person who asked a favour of a man of high

Fal. I would you had but the wit: 't were better than your dukedom.—Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh;—but that 's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There 's never any of these demure boys come to any proof; for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenches; they are generally fools and cowards;
—which some of us should be too, but for inflammation.

A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it. It ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish, and dull, and crudy vapours which environ it: makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive,* full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes; which delivered o'er to the voice,
(the tongue,) which is the birth, becomes excellent wit.

The second property of your excellent sherris is,—the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice: but the sherris warms it and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extreme.

It illuminateth the face; which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm: and then the vital commoners, and inland petty spirits, muster me all to their captain, the heart; who, great, and puffed up with his retinue, doth any deed of courage; and this valour comes of sherris: So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack; for that sets it a-work: and learning a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil; till sack commences it, and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it, that prince Harry is valiant: for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterile, and bare land, manured, husbanded, and tilled, with excellent endeavour of drinking good and good store of fertile sherris; that he is become very hot and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first principle I would teach them should be,—to for-swear thin potations, and to addict themselves to sack.

Enter BARDOLPH.

How now, Bardolph?

Bard. The army is discharged all, and gone.

Fal. Let them go. I 'll through Glostershire; and there will I visit master Robert Shallow, esquire; I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Westminster. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, CLARENCE, PRINCE HUMPHREY,
WARWICK, and others.

K. Hen. Now, lords, if Heaven doth give successful end

To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our youth lead on to higher fields,
And draw no swords but what are sanctified.
Our navy is address'd,<sup>b</sup> our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence well invested,
And everything lies level to our wish:
Only, we want a little personal strength;
And pause us, till these rebels, now afoot,
Come underneath the yoke of government.

War. Both which we doubt not but your majesty shall soon enjoy.

K. Hen. Humphrey, my son of Gloster, where is the prince your brother?

P. Humph. I think he 's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

K. Hen. And how accompanied?

P. Humph. I do not know, my lord.

K. Hen. Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarence, with
him?

* Forgetive—inventive.      <sup>b</sup> Address'd—prepared.

P. Humph. No, my good lord; he is in presence here.

Cla. What would my lord and father?

K. Hen. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.

How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother?

He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas;

Thou hast a better place in his affection

Than all thy brothers: cherish it, my boy;

And noble offices thou mayst effect

Of mediation, after I am dead,

Between his greatness and thy other brethren:

Therefore, omit him not; blunt not his love;

Nor lose the good advantage of his grace,

By seeming cold, or careless of his will.

For he is gracious, if he be observ'd;

He hath a tear for pity, and a hand

Open as day for melting charity:

Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's flint;

As humorous<sup>a</sup> as winter, and as sudden

As flaws<sup>b</sup> congealed in the spring of day.

His temper, therefore, must be well observ'd:

Chide him for faults, and do it reverently,

When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth:

But, being moody, give him line and scope;

Till that his passions, like a whale on ground,

Confound themselves with working. Learn this, Thomas,

And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends;

A hoop of gold, to bind thy brothers in;

That the united vessel of their blood,

Mingled with venom of suggestion,

(As, force perforce, the age will pour it in,)

Shall never leak, though it do work as strong

As aconitum, or rash gunpowder.

Cla. I shall observe him with all care and love.

K. Hen. Why art thou not at Windsor with him,

Thomas?

Cla. He is not there to-day; he dines in London.

K. Hen. And how accompanied? canst thou tell that?

Cla. With Poins, and other his continual followers.

K. Hen. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds;

And he, the noble image of my youth,

Is overspread with them: Therefore my grief

Stretches itself beyond the hour of death;

The blood weeps from my heart, when I do shape

In forms imaginary, the unguided days,

And rotten times, that you shall look upon

When I am sleeping with my ancestors.

For when his headstrong riot hath no curb,

When rage and hot blood are his counsellors,

When means and lavish manners meet together,

O, with what wings shall his affections fly

Towards fronting peril and oppos'd decay!

War. My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite:

The prince but studies his companions,

Like a strange tongue: wherein, to gain the language,

'T is needful that the most immodest word

Be look'd upon and learn'd: which once attain'd,

Your highness knows comes to no further use,

But to be known and hated. So, like gross terms,

The prince will, in the perfectness of time,

Cast off his followers: and their memory

Shall as a pattern or a measure live,

By which his grace must mete the lives of others;

Turning past evils to advantages.

K. Hen. 'T is seldom when the bee doth leave her comb

In the dead carrion.—Who's here? Westmoreland?

has the sense of full of humours, alluding to the supposed fluids

How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!
The king?

Pa. Exceeding ill.

Heard he the good news yet?

Pa. He alter'd much upon the hearing it.
If he be sick with joy, he will recover without so much noise, my lords;—sweet prince, Speak low;

our father is dispos'd to sleep.

Let us withdraw into the other room.

Will 't please your grace to go along with us?

No; I will sit and watch here by the king.

[Exeunt all but P. HENRY.]

The crown lie there upon his pillow,

Unobscure a bedfellow?

Unperturbation! golden care!

At the ports of slumber open wide

Sound, and half so deeply sweet,

The watch of night. O majesty!

Dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit in armour worn in heat of day,

And with safety. By his gates of breath

Re-enter WARWICK, and the rest.

Doth the king call?

What would your majesty? How fares your

Why did you leave me here alone, my lords?

! I left the prince my brother here, my liege,

Re-enter WARWICK.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long

Till his friend sickness hath determin'd<sup>a</sup> me?

War. My lord, I found the prince in the next room,

! Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks;

! With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow,

! That tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood,

! Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife

! With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.

K. Hen. But wherefore did he take away the crown!

Re-enter PRINCE HENRY.

Lo, where he comes;—Come hither to me, Harry:—

! Depart the chamber, leave us here alone.

[Exeunt CLARENCE, PRINCE HUMPHREY, LORDS, &c.]

P. Hen. I never thought to hear you speak again.

K. Hen. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought:

! I stay too long by thee, I weary thee.

Dost thou so hunger for my empty chair,

! That thou wilt needs invest thee with mine honours

! Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth!

! Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee.

! Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity

! Is held from falling with so weak a wind,

! That it will quickly drop: my day is dim.

! Thou hast stol'n that, which, after some few hours,

! Were thine without offence; and, at my death,

! Thou hast seal'd up my expectation:

! Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not,

! And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it.

! Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy thoughts;

! Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart,

! To stab at half an hour of my life.

! What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour?

! Then get thee gone; and dig my grave thyself;

! And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear

! That thou art crowned, not that I am dead.

! Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse

! Be drops of balm, to sanctify thy head:

! Only compound me with forgotten dust;

! Give that, which gave thee life, unto the worms.

! Pluck down my officers, break my decrees;

! For now a time is come to mock at form.

! Harry the fifth is crown'd:—Up, vanity!

! Down, royal state! all you sage counsellors, hence!

! And to the English court assemble now,

! From every region, apes of idleness!

! Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your scum:

! Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance,

! Revel the night; rob, murder, and commit

! The oldest sins the newest kind of ways?

! Be happy, he will trouble you no more:

! England shall double gild his treble guilt:

! England shall give him office, honour, might:

! For the fifth Harry from curb'd licence plucks

! The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog

! Shall flesh his tooth in every innocent.

! O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows!

<sup>a</sup> Determin'd, ended.

When that my care could not withhold thy riots,
 What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?
 O, thou wilt be a wilderness again,
 Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants!

P. Hen. O, pardon me, my liege! but for my tears, [Kneeling.

The moist impediments unto my speech,
 I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke,
 Ere you with grief had spoke, and I had heard
 The course of it so far. There is your crown:
 And He that wears the crown immortally,
 Long guard it yours! If I affect it more,
 Than as your honour, and as your renown,
 Let me no more from this obedience rise,—
 (Which my most true and inward duteous spirit Teacheth,)—this prostrate and exterior bending!
 Heaven witness with me, when I here came in
 And found no course of breath within your majesty,
 How cold it struck my heart! If I do feign,
 O, let me in my present wildness die;
 And never live to show th' incredulous world
 The noble change that I have purposed!
 Coming to look on you, thinking you dead,
 (And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,)
 I spake unto the crown as having sense,
 And thus upbraided it:—"The care on thee depending Hath fed upon the body of my father;
 Therefore, thou, best of gold, art worst of gold.
 Other, less fine in carat, is more precious,
 Preserving life in medicine potable;
 But thou, most fine, most honour'd, most renown'd,
 Hast eat thy bearer up."—Thus, my most royal liege,
 Accusing it, I put it on my head,
 To try with it,—as with an enemy,
 That had before my face murder'd my father,—
 The quarrel of a true inheritor.
 But if it did infect my blood with joy,
 Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
 If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
 Did, with the least affection of a welcome,
 Give entertainment to the might of it,
 Let Heaven for ever keep it from my head,
 And make me as the poorest vassal is,
 That doth with awe and terror kneel to it.

K. Hen. O my son!
 Heaven put it in thy mind to take it hence,
 That thou mightst win the more thy father's love,
 Pleading so wisely in excuse of it.
 Come hither, Harry, sit thou by my bed;
 And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
 That ever I shall breathe. Heaven knows, my son,
 By what by-paths, and indirect crook'd ways,
 I met this crown; and I myself know well
 How troublesome it sat upon my head:
 To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
 Better opinion, better confirmation;
 For all the soil of the achievement goes
 With me into the earth. It seem'd in me

But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous hand
 And I had many living, to upbraid
 My gain of it by their assistances;
 Which daily grew to quarrel, and to bloodshed
 Wounding supposed peace: all these bold facts
 Thou seest, with peril I have answered:
 For all my reign hath been but as a scene
 Acting that argument; and now my death
 Changes the mood: for what in me was purposed
 Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort;
 So thou the garland wear'st successively.
 Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I do
 Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are great
 And all thy friends, which thou must make to live
 Have but their stings and teeth newly taken
 By whose fell working I was first advanc'd,
 And by whose power I well might lodge a feather
 To be again displac'd: which to avoid,
 I cut them off; and had a purpose now
 To lead out many to the Holy Land;
 Lest rest, and lying still, might make them Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry
 Be it thy course, to busy giddy minds
 With foreign quarrels; that action, hence begun,
 May waste the memory of the former days.
 More would I, but my lungs are wasted so,
 That strength of speech is utterly denied me.
 How I came by the crown, O Heaven forgive!
 And grant it may with thee in true peace live!

P. Hen. My gracious liege,
 You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me;
 Then plain and right must my possession be
 Which I, with more than with a common peace
 'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

*Enter PRINCE JOHN of Lancaster, WARWICK,
 and others.*

K. Hen. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster.

P. John. Health, peace, and happiness, to my father!

K. Hen. Thou bring'st me happiness and John;

But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown
 From this bare, wither'd trunk: upon thy side
 My worldly business makes a period.
 Where is my lord of Warwick?

P. Hen. My lord of

K. Hen. Doth any name particular belong Unto the lodging where I first did swoon?

War. 'T is call'd Jerusalem, my noble liege.

K. Hen. Laud be to Heaven!—even that must end.

It hath been prophesied to me many years,
 I should not die but in Jerusalem;
 Which vainly I supposed the Holy Land:
 But, bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie
 In that Jerusalem shall Harry die.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Glostershire. A Hall in Shallow's House.

Enter SHALLOW, FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Shal. By cock and pye, sir, you shall not away to-night. What, Davy, I say!

Fal. You must excuse me, master Robert Shallow.

Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused.—Why, Davy!

Enter DAVY.

Davy. Here, sir.

—Westminster. A Room in the Palace.

WARWICK and the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE.

now, my lord chief justice? whither
y?

Ch. Just. How doth the king?

War. Exceeding well; his cares are now all ended.

Ch. Just. I hope, not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of nature;
And, to our purposes, he lives no more.

Ch. Just. I would his majesty had call'd me with
him:

The service that I truly did his life

Hath left me open to all injuries.

War. Indeed, I think the young king loves you not.

Ch. Just. I know he doth not; and do arm myself,

To welcome the condition of the time;

Which cannot look more hideously upon me

Than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

Enter PRINCE JOHN, PRINCE HUMPHREY, CLARENCE, WESTMORELAND, and others.

War. Here come the heavy issue of dead Harry:

O, that the living Harry had the temper

Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen!

How many nobles then should hold their places,

That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort!

Ch. Just. Alas! I fear all will be overturn'd.

P. John. Good morrow, cousin Warwick, good morrow.

P. Humph., Cla. Good morrow, cousin.

P. John. We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

War. We do remember; but our argument

Is all too heavy to admit much talk.

P. John. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier!

P. Humph. O, good my lord, you have lost a friend indeed:

And I dare swear you borrow not that face

Of seeming sorrow; it is, sure, your own.

P. John. Though no man be assur'd what grace to find,

You stand in coldest expectation:

I am the sorer; 'would 't were otherwise.

Cla. Well, you must now speak sir John Falstaff fair,
Which swims against your stream of quality.

Ch. Just. Sweet princes, what I did I did in honour,

Led by th' impartial conduct of my soul;

And never shall you see that I will beg

A ragged and forestall'd remission.*

If truth and upright innocency fail me,

I'll to the king my master that is dead,

And tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the prince.

Enter KING HENRY V.

Ch. Just. Good morrow; and Heaven save your majesty!

King. This new and gorgeous garment, majesty, Sits not so easy on me as you think.

Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear;

This is the English, not the Turkish court;

Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds,

But Harry Harry: Yet be sad, good brothers,

For, to speak truth, it very well becomes you;

Sorrow so royally in you appears,

That I will deeply put the fashion on,

And wear it in my heart. Why, then, be sad;

But entertain no more of it, good brothers,

Than a joint burthen laid upon us all.

For me, by Heaven, I bid you be assur'd,

I'll be your father and your brother too;

Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares.

Yet weep, that Harry's dead; and so will I;

But Harry lives, that shall convert those tears,

By number, into hours of happiness.

P. John, &c. We hope no other from your majesty.

* Forestall'd remission—a pardon supplicated, not offered freely.

Fal. It shows my earnestness in affection.
Shal. It doth so.
Fal. My devotion.
Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth.
Fal. As it were, to ride day and night; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me.
Shal. It is most certain.
Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him: thinking of nothing else; putting all affairs else in oblivion; as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.
Pist. 'T is semper idem, for absque hoc nihil est: 'T is all in every part.
Shal. 'T is so, indeed.
Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver, And make thee rage.
 Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts, Is in base durance, and contagious prison; Haul'd thither
 By most mechanical and dirty hand:—
 Rouse up revenge from ebon den with fell Alecto's snake, For Doll is in; Pistol speaks nought but truth.
Fal. I will deliver her.
 [Shouts within, and the trumpets sound.
Pist. There roar'd the sea, and trumpet-clangor sounds.
 Enter the KING and his Train, the CHIEF JUSTICE among them.
Fal. Save thy grace, king Hal! my royal Hal!
Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fame!
Fal. Save thee, my sweet boy!
King. My lord chief justice, speak to that vain man.
Ch. Just. Have you your wits; know you what 't is you speak?
Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak to thee, my heart!
King. I know thee not, old man: Fall to thy prayers; How ill white hairs become a fool and jester!
 I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,
 So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so profane;
 But, being awake, I do despise my dream.
 Make less thy body, hence, and more thy grace;
 Leave gormandizing; know, the grave doth gape
 For thee thrice wider than for other men:
 Reply not to me with a fool-born jest;
 Presume not that I am the thing I was:
 For Heaven doth know, so shall the world perceive,
 That I have turn'd away my former self;
 So will I those that kept me company.
 When thou dost hear I am as I have been,
 Approach me; and thou shalt be as thou wast,

The tutor and the feeder of my riots:
 Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death,—
 As I have done the rest of my misleaders,—
 Not to come near our person by ten mile.
 For competence of life I will allow you,
 That lack of means enforce you not to evil:
 And, as we hear you do reform yourselves,
 We will, according to your strength and quality
 Give you advancement.—Be it your charge, my
 To see perform'd the tenor of our word.
 Set on. [Exeunt KING and his
Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand.
Shal. Ay, marry, sir John; which I beseech let me have home with me.
Fal. That can hardly be, master Shallow. I you grieve at this; I shall be sent for in private look you, he must seem thus to the world. For your advancement; I will be the man yet that make you great.
Shal. I cannot well perceive how; unless should give me your doublet, and stuff me on straw. I beseech you, good sir John, let me have hundred of my thousand.
Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word: the you heard was but a colour.
Shal. A colour, I fear, that you will die in, sir.
Fal. Fear no colours; go with me to dinner.
 lieutenant Pistol;—come, Bardolph;—I shall be for soon at night.

Re-enter PRINCE JOHN, the CHIEF JUSTICE,
 Officers, &c.
Ch. Just. Go, carry sir John Falstaff to the Fleet
 Take all his company along with him.
Fal. My lord, my lord,—
Ch. Just. I cannot now speak: I will hear you Take them away.
Pist. "Si fortuna me tormenta, spero me contenta." [Exeunt FAL., SHAL., PIST., BARD., PAGE, and others.
P. John. I like this fair proceeding of the king.
 He hath intent, his wonted followers
 Shall all be very well provided for;
 But all are banish'd, till their conversations Appear more wise and modest to the world.
Ch. Just. And so they are.
P. John. The king hath call'd his parliament
 lord.
Ch. Just. He hath.
P. John. I will lay odds,—that, ere this year
 We bear our civil swords, and native fire,
 As far as France: I heard a bird so sing,
 Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the king.
 Come, will you hence?

EPILOGUE.

[Spoken by a Daner.]

First, my fear; then, my court'sy; last, my speech.
 My fear is, your displeasure; my court'sy, my duty; and my speech, to beg your pardons. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me: for what I have to say is of mine own making; and what, indeed, I should say, will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture.—Be it known to you, (as it is very well,) I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it, and to promise you a better. I did mean, indeed, to pay you with this; which if, like an ill venture, it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose.
 Here, I promised you, I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies: bate me some, and I will pay you some, and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely.

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet the but light payment,—to dance out of your debt.

 good conscience will make any possible satisfaction and so will I. All the gentlewomen here have me; if the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never before in such an assembly.

One word more, I beseech you. If you be much cloyed with fat meat, our humble anthems continue the story, with sir John in it, and make merry with fair Katharine of France: where, for thing I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless he be killed with your hard opinions; for he died a martyr, and this is not the man. My legs weary; when my legs are too, I will bid you night: and so kneel down before you;—but, first, pray for the queen.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

'HENRY V.' was first printed in 1600. This copy differs most materially from the text of the folio. The play runs only to 1800 lines; whilst the lines in the folio edition amount to 3500. Not only is the copy thus augmented by the additions of the choruses and new scenes, but there is scarcely a speech, from the first scene to the last, which is not elaborated. In this elaboration the old materials are very carefully used up; but they are so thoroughly refitted and dovetailed with what is new, that the operation can only be compared to the work of a skilful architect, who, having an ancient mansion to enlarge and beautify, with a strict regard to its original character, preserves every feature of the structure, under other combinations, with such marvellous skill, that no unity of principle is violated, and the whole has the effect of a restoration in which the new and the old are undistinguishable.

"Shakspeare," says Frederick Schlegel, "regarded the drama as entirely a thing for the people; and, at first, treated it throughout as such. He took the popular comedy as he found it, and whatever enlargements and improvements he introduced into the stage were all calculated and conceived according to the peculiar spirit of his predecessors, and of the audience in London."* This is especially true with regard to Shakspeare's Histories. In the case of the 'Henry V.' it appears to us that our great dramatic poet would never have touched the subject, had not the stage previously possessed it in the old play of 'The Famous Victories.' 'Henry IV.' would have been perfect as a dramatic whole, without the addition of 'Henry V.' The somewhat doubtful mode in which he speaks of continuing the story appears to us a pretty certain indication that he rather shrunk from a subject which appeared to him essentially undramatic. It is, however, highly probable that, having brought the history of Henry of Monmouth up to the period of his father's death, the demands of an audience who had been accustomed to hail "the madcap Prince of Wales" as the conqueror of Agincourt compelled him to "continue the story." Having hastily met the demands of his audience by the first sketch of 'Henry V.,' as it appears in the quarto editions, he subsequently saw the capacity which the subject presented for being treated in a grand lyrical spirit. Instead of interpolating an under-plot of petty passions and intrigues,—such, for the most part, as we find in the dramatic treatment of an heroic subject by the French poets,—he preserved the great object of his drama entire by the intervention of the chorus. Skilfully as he has managed this, and magnificent as the whole drama is as a great national song of triumph, there can be no doubt that Shakspeare felt that in this play he was dealing with a theme too narrow for his peculiar powers. The subject is altogether one of lyric grandeur; but it is not one, we think, which Shakspeare would have chosen for a drama.

And yet how exquisitely has Shakspeare thrown his dramatic power into this undramatic subject! The character of the King is altogether one of the most finished portraits that has proceeded from hand. It could, perhaps, only have been conceived by the poet who had delineated the Boar's Head, and of the Field of Shrew surpassing union, in this character, of spirit, of dignity and playfulness, of energy, and an almost melancholy abstention from the conventional authority of the king, and the sympathy, with the meanest about him, of the result of the most philosophical and the most generous appreciation by the poet of the moral and political progress of his own Prince of Wales. As we may be said that the picture which he has painted of his favourite hero is an exaggerated and false representation. The extraordinary merits of Henry V. are those of the individual; his demerits were those of the age. It was not for the poet to regard the king of the feudal age with the cold and severe eye of the philosophical historian. It was for him to embody in the person of Henry V. the principle of heroism; it was for him to call forth "the patriotic reminiscence." Frederick Schlegel has said that the feeling by which Shakspeare seems to have been connected with ordinary men is that of sympathy. But how different is his nationality from that of ordinary men! It is reflective, tolerant, generous, not in an atmosphere of falsehood and pretence; but it does not regard war and conquest as fitting objects for the theatre; but it does not regard war and conquest as fitting objects for the theatre to dedicate itself to, except under the pressure of an urgent necessity. Neither does it attempt to evade the fearful responsibilities of those who carry the burden of nationality to the last arbitrement of a peace, in the enormous amount of evil which always attends the cultivation of that peace, in the cultivation of which the ability is best displayed.

In the inferior persons of the play—the characters—the poet has displayed that power above all men, possesses, of combining the most ideal conceptions with the most truthful details of real life. In the amusing pedantry of the vapourings of Pistol, there is nothing in degree incongruous with the main action. The homely bluntness of the common soldier's army brings us still closer to a knowledge of the mass of which a camp is composed. But the most delicate but yet most appreciable evidence of Shakspeare's nationality, in all its power, is the mode in which he has exhibited the character of these common soldiers. They are rough, quarrelsome, brave as lions, but without a particle of anything low or grovelling in their nature. They are fit representatives of the "goodly fellows whose limbs were made in England." On the other hand, the discriminating truth of the poet is shown in exhibiting to us three arrant cowards—Nym, and Bardolph. His impartiality to paint the bullies and blackguards that constitute the nationality must be content to reckon as common to every army.

SCENE,—IN ENGLAND AND IN FRANCE.

ACT I.

CHORUS.

O, that we could see
 the flames of heaven's invention!
 For a stage, princes to act,
 and to behold the swelling scene!
 O, that we could see
 the warlike Harry, like himself, part of Mars; and, at his heels,
 like hounds, should famine, sword, and fire,

Crouch for employment. But, pardon, gentles all,
 The flat unraised spirit, that hath dared
 On this unworthy scaffold to bring forth
 So great an object: Can this cockpit hold
 The vasty fields of France? or may we cram
 Within this wooden O the very casques
 That did affright the air at Agincourt?
 O, pardon! since a crooked figure may Attest, in little place, a million;

And let us, ciphers to this great account,
On your imaginary forces work :
Suppose, within the girdle of these walls
Are now confin'd two mighty monarchies,
Whose high upreared and abutting fronts
The perilous, narrow ocean parts asunder.
Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts ;
Into a thousand parts divide one man,
And make imaginary puissance :

Think, when we talk of horses, that you see them
Printing their proud hoofs i' the receiving earth :
For 't is your thoughts that now must deck our kings
Carry them here and there ; jumping o'er times ;
Turning the accomplishment of many years
Into an hour-glass ; For the which supply,
Admit me chorus to this history ;
Who, prologue-like, your humble patience pray,
Gently to hear, kindly to judge, our play.

SCENE I.—London. An Ante-chamber in the King's Palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY and BISHOP OF ELY.

Cant. My lord, I'll tell you,—that self bill is urg'd,
Which, in the eleventh year of the last king's reign,
Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd,
But that the scrambling<sup>a</sup> and unquiet time
Did push it out of further question.

Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it now ?
Cant. It must be thought on. If it pass against us,
We lose the better half of our possession :
For all the temporal lands, which men devout
By testament have given to the church,
Would they strip from us ; being valued thus,—
As much as would maintain, to the king's honour,
Full fifteen earls, and fifteen hundred knights ;
Six thousand and two hundred good esquires ;
And, to relief of lazars, and weak age,
Of indigent faint souls, past corporal toil,
A hundred almshouses, right well supplied ;
And to the coffers of the king beside
A thousand pounds by the year : Thus runs the bill.

Ely. This would drink deep.
Cant. 'T would drink the cup and all.

Ely. But what prevention ?
Cant. The king is full of grace and fair regard.
Ely. And a true lover of the holy church.

Cant. The courses of his youth promis'd it not.
The breath no sooner left his father's body,
But that his wildness, mortified in him,
Seem'd to die too : yea, at that very moment,
Consideration like an angel came,
And whipp'd the offending Adam out of him ;
Leaving his body as a paradise,
To envelop and contain celestial spirits.
Never was such a sudden scholar made :
Never came reformation in a flood,
With such a heady currance,<sup>b</sup> scouring faults ;
Nor never Hydra-headed wilfulness
So soon did lose his seat, and all at once,
As in this king.

Ely. We are blessed in the change.
Cant. Hear him but reason in divinity,
And, all-admiring, with an inward wish
You would desire the king were made a prelate :
Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs,
You would say,—it hath been all-in-all his study :
List his discourse of war, and you shall hear
A fearful battle render'd you in music :
Turn him to any cause of policy,
The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,
Familiar as his garter ; that, when he speaks,
The air, a charter'd libertine, is still,
And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears,
To steal his sweet and honey'd sentences ;

<sup>a</sup> King time is the disorderly time in which authority is is the French courtoise, from which we have complicity and occurrence.

So that the art and practic part of life
Must be the mistress to this theoretic ;
Which is a wonder, how his grace should glean it,
Since his addiction was to courses vain :
His companies<sup>a</sup> unletter'd, rude, and shallow ;
His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets, sports,
And never noted in him any study,
Any retirement, any sequestration
From open haunts and popularity.

Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the nettle,
And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality :
And so the prince obscur'd his contemplation
Under the veil of wildness ; which, no doubt,
Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,
Unseen, yet crevice in his faculty.

Cant. It must be so ; for miracles are ceas'd ;
And therefore we must needs admit the means
How things are perfected.

Ely. But, my good lord,
How now for mitigation of this bill
Urg'd by the commons ? Doth his majesty
Incline to it, or no ?

Cant. He seems indifferent :
Or, rather, swaying more upon our part,
Than cherishing the exhibitors against us :
For I have made an offer to his majesty,—
Upon our spiritual convocation ;
And in regard of causes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his grace at large,
As touching France,—to give a greater sum
Than ever at one time the clergy yet
Did to his predecessors part withal.

Ely. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my lord ?
Cant. With good acceptance of his majesty ;
Save, that there was not time enough to hear
(As I perceiv'd his grace would fain have done)
The severals,<sup>b</sup> and unhidden passages,
Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms ;
And, generally, to the crown and seat of France,
Deriv'd from Edward, his great-grandfather.

Ely. What was the impediment that broke this Cant. The French ambassador, upon that instant
Crav'd audience : and the hour, I think, is come
To give him hearing : Is it four o'clock ?

Ely. It is.
Cant. Then go we in, to know his embassy ;
Which I could, with a ready guess, declare
Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.

Ely. I'll wait upon you ; and I long to hear

A pawn and a gage are the same. To "impawn" is equivalent, therefore, to engage our person. He who is to gage, to gloss (whence glossary), is the Anglo-Saxon gleann, to explain.

So the duo and quarto. Capell has introduced sest into his text, because that word occurs in the act of Holmshed, 1377. In the edition of 1594 the set is dishest. Shakspeare used the language et.

Four hundred twenty-six; and Charles the great Subdued the Saxons, and did seat the French
Beyond the river Sala, in the year
Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers say, King Pepin, which deposed Childerick,
Did, as heir general, being descended
Of Blithild, which was daughter to king Clothair,
Make claim and title to the crown of France.
Hugh Capet also,—who usurp'd the crown
Of Charles the duke of Loraine, sole heir male
Of the true line and stock of Charles the great,—
To find<sup>a</sup> his title, with some shows of truth, (Though, in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught,) Convey'd himself as th' heir to th' lady Lingare,
Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son
To Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son
Of Charles the great: Also king Lewis the tenth,<sup>b</sup>
Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet,
Could not keep quiet in his conscience,
Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied
That fair queen Isabel, his grandmother,
Was lineal of the lady Ermengare,
Daughter to Charles the foresaid duke of Loraine:
By the which marriage, the line of Charles the great
Was re-united to the crown of France.
So that, as clear as is the summer's sun,
King Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's claim,
King Lewis his satisfaction, all appear
To hold in right and title of the female;
So do the kings of France unto this day:
Howbeit they would hold up this Salique law,
To bar your highness claiming from the female;
And rather choose to hide them in a net,
Than amply to imbar<sup>c</sup> their crooked titles
Usurp'd from you and your progenitors.

K. Hen. May I, with right and conscience, make this claim?

Cant. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign!
For in the book of Numbers is it writ,—
When the man dies, let the inheritance
Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord,
Stand for your own; unwind your bloody flag;
Look back into your mighty ancestors:
Go, my dread lord, to your great-grandfire's tomb,
From whom you claim; invoke his warlike spirit,
And your great-uncle's, Edward the black prince;
Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,
Making defeat on the full power of France;
Whiles his most mighty father on a hill
Stood smiling, to behold his lion's whelp
Forage in blood of French nobility.
O noble English, that could entertain
With half their forces the full pride of France;
And let another half stand laughing by,
All out of work, and cold for action!<sup>d</sup>

Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant dead,
And with your puissant arm renew their feats:
You are their heir, you sit upon their throne;
The blood and courage, that renowned them,
Runs in your veins; and my thrice-puissant liege
Is in the very May-morn of his youth,
Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises.

Eze. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth
Do all expect that you should rouse yourself,
As did the former lions of your blood.

West. They know your grace hath cause, and means,
and might:

So bath your highness; never king of England

<sup>c</sup> Imbar. To bar is to obstruct; to imbar is to bar in, to secure.

Had nobles richer, and more loyal subjects;
Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England,
And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.

Cant. O, let their bodies follow, my dear liege,
With blood, and sword, and fire, to win your right:
In aid whereof, we of the spirituality
Will raise your highness such a mighty sum,
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors.

K. Hen. We must not only arm to invade the French,
But lay down our proportions to defend Against the Scot, who will make road upon us
With all advantages.

Cant. They of those marches,<sup>a</sup> gracious sovereign, Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the pilfering borderers.

K. Hen. We do not mean the couraging snatchers only,
But fear the main intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us;
For you shall read, that my great-grandfather
Never went with his forces into France,
But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom
Came pouring, like the tide into a breach,
With ample and brim fulness of his force;
Galling the gleaned land with hot essays;
Girding with grievous siege castles and towns:
That England, being empty of defence,
Hath shook and trembled at th' ill neighbourhood.

Cant. She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd,
my liege:

For hear her but exempl'd by herself,—
When all her chivalry hath been in France,
And she a mourning widow of her nobles,
She hath herself not only well defended,
But taken, and impounded as a stray,
The king of Scots; whom she did send to France,
To fill king Edward's fame with prisoner kings;
And make your chronicles as rich with praise
As is the ooze and bottom of the sea
With sunken wrack and sunless treasures.

West. But there 's a saying, very old and true,—

<sup>a</sup> If that you will France win, Then with Scotland first begin;*

For once the eagle England being in prey,
To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot
Comes sneaking, and so sucks her princely eggs;
Playing the mouse, in absence of the cat,
To faint and havoc more than she can eat.

Exe. It follows, then, the cat must stay at home:
Yet that is but a crush'd necessity;
Since we have locks to safeguard necessities,
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the armed band doth fight abroad,
The advised head defends itself at home:
For government, through high, and low, and lower,
Put into parts, doth keep in one consent;
Congreeing in a full and natural close,
Like music.

Cant. Therefore doth Heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continual motion;
To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,
Obedience: for so work the honey-bees;
Creatures, that, by a rule in nature, teach
The act of order to a peopled kingdom.
They have a king, and officers of sorts:
Where some, like magistrates, correct at home;
Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad;
Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings,
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds;
Which pillage they with merry march bring home
The tent-royal of their emperor:

<sup>a</sup> Marches—the boundaries of England and Scotland—the

Who, boxed in his majesties, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold;
The civil citizens kneading up the honey;
The poor mechanic porters crowding in
Their heavy burthens at his narrow gate;
The sad-eyed justice, with his surly hum,
Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone. I this infer,—
That many things, having full reference
To one consent, may work contrariously;
As many arrows, loosed several ways,
Come to one mark; as many ways meet in one
As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea;
As many lines close in the dial's centre;
So may a thousand actions, once afoot,
End in one purpose, and be all well borne Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege, Divide your happy England into four;
Whereof take you one quarter into France,
And you withal shall make all Gallia shake.
If we, with thrice such powers left at home,
Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
Let us be worried; and our nation lose
The name of hardiness, and policy.

K. Hen. Call in the messengers sent from the Now are we well resolv'd; and, by God's help,

And yours, the noble sinews of our power,
France being ours, we 'll bend it to our awe,
Or break it all to pieces: Or there we 'll sit,
Ruling, in large and ample empery,
O'er France and all her almost kingly dukedoms
Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn,
Tombless, with no remembrance over them:
Either our history shall with full mouth
Speak freely of our acts; or else our grave,
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless mate
Not worshipp'd with a waxen epitaph.<sup>a</sup>

Enter Ambassadors of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our fair cousin dauphin; for, we hear,
Your greeting is from him, not from the king.

Amb. May 't please your majesty to give us
Freely to render what we have in charge;
Or shall we sparingly show you far off
The dauphin's meaning, and our embassy?

K. Hen. We are no tyrant, but a Christian king;
Unto whose grace our passion is as subject,
As are our wretches fetter'd in our prisons:
Therefore, with frank and with uncurbed plainness
Tell us the dauphin's mind.

Amb. Thus, then, in few
Your highness, lately sending into France,
Did claim some certain dukedoms, in the right
Of your great predecessor, king Edward the third;
In answer of which claim, the prince our master
Says, that you savour too much of your youth;
And bids you be advis'd, there 's naught in France
That can be with a nimble galliard<sup>b</sup> won:
You cannot revel into dukedoms there.
He therefore sends you, meeter for your spirit,
This tun of treasure; and, in lieu of this,
Desires you, let the dukedoms that you claim
Hear no more of you. This the dauphin speaks.

K. Hen. What treasure, uncle?
Exe. Tennis-balls, my liege.
K. Hen. We are glad the dauphin is so pleasur'd us;

<sup>a</sup> Waxen epitaph—a perishable epitaph of wax—shipp'd over with a waxen epitaph. The opposition of wax to marble was a familiar image in the old poets.

<sup>b</sup> Galliard—an ancient dance;—“a swift and warlike dance,” as Sir John Davis has it.

ot, and your pains, we thank you for:
 have match'd our rackets to these balls, n France, by God's grace, play a set to his father's crown into the hazard:
 he hath made a match with such a wrangler,
 he courts of France will be disturb'd
 ces. And we understand him well, omes o'er us with our wilder days,
 uring what use we made of them.
 valued this poor seat of England;
 fore, living hence, did give ourself ous licence; as 't is ever common,
 are merriest when they are from home.
 se dauphin,—I will keep my state;
 king, and show my sail of greatness,
 o rouse me in my throne of France:
 have laid by my majesty,
 ded like a man for working-days;
 I rise there with so full a glory,
 ll dazzle all the eyes of France,
 e the dauphin blind to look on us.
 he pleasant prince, this mock of his
 'd his balls to gun-stones; and his soul
 d sore charged for the wasteful vengeance fly with them: for many a thousand widows his mock mock out of their dear husbands;
 hers from their sons, mock castles down:

And some are yet ungotten and unborn,
 That shall have cause to curse the dauphin's scorn
 But this lies all within the will of God,
 To whom I do appeal; and in whose name,
 Tell you the dauphin, I am coming on
 To venge me as I may, and to put forth
 My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause.
 So, get you hence in peace; and tell the dauphin,
 His jest will savour but of shallow wit,
 When thousands weep, more than did laugh at it.
 Convey them with safe conduct.—Fare you well.

[Exeunt Ambassadors]

Exe. This was a merry message.

K. Hen. We hope to make the sender blush at it.

[Descends from his throne]

Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour,
 That may give furtherance to our expedition:
 For we have now no thought in us but France;
 Save those to God, that run before our business.
 Therefore, let our proportions for these wars
 Be soon collected; and all things thought upon,
 That may, with reasonable swiftness, add
 More feathers to our wings; for, God before,
 We'll chide this dauphin at his father's door.
 Therefore, let every man now task his thought,
 That this fair action may on foot be brought.

[Exeunt]

ACT II.

CHORUS.

e youth of England are on fire,
 dalliance in the wardrobe lies;
 the armourers, and honour's thought ly in the breast of every man:
 he pasture now, to buy the horse;
 the mirror of all Christian kings,
 ed heels, as English Mercuries.
 s Expectation in the air;
 a sword, from hilts unto the point,
 us imperial, crowns and coronets,
 s Harry and his followers.
 s, advis'd by good intelligence
 it dreadful preparation, eir fear; and with pale policy
 ert the English purposes.
 ! model to thy inward greatness,
 body with a mighty heart,
 ist thou do, that honour would thee do,
 y children kind and natural!
 / fault! France hath in thee found out

A nest of hollow bosoms, which he fills
 With treacherous crowns; and three corrupted men,—
 One, Richard earl of Cambridge; and the second,
 Henry Lord Scroop of Masham; and the third,
 Sir Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland,—
 Have, for the gilt of France, (O guilt, indeed!)
 Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France;
 And by their hands this grace of kings must die,
 (If hell and treason hold their promises.)
 Ere he take ship for France, and in Southampton.
 Linger your patience on, and we'll digest
 The abuse of distance; force a play.
 The sum is paid; the traitors are agreed;
 The king is set from London; and the scene
 Is now transported, gentles, to Southampton:
 There is the playhouse now, there must you sit
 And thence to France shall we convey you safe
 And bring you back, charming the narrow seas
 To give you gentle pass; for, if we may,
 We'll not offend one stomach with our play.
 But, till the king come forth, and not till then,
 Unto Southampton do we shift our scene.

SCENE I.—Eastcheap.

Enter Nym and BARDOLPH.

Well met, corporal Nym.
 Good morrow, lieutenant Bardolph.
 What, are ancient Pistol and you friends yet?
 For my part, I care not: I say little; but shall serve, there shall be smiles; but that it may. I dare not fight; but I will wink, out mine iron: It is a simple one; but what
 It will toast cheese; and it will endure cold man's sword will; and there's an end, will bestow a breakfast to make you friends;
 he all three sworn brothers to France; let good corporal Nym.
 Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may: that is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it

Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly: and, certainly, she did you wrong; for you were truth-plight to her.

Nym. I cannot tell; things must be as they may:
 men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time; and, some say, knives have edges.
 It must be as it may: though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well,
 I cannot tell.

Enter PISTOL and MRS. QUICKLY.

Bard. Here comes ancient Pistol, and his wife:—
 good corporal, be patient here.—How now, mine host Pistol?

Pist. Base tike,<sup>a</sup> call'st thou me host?
Now, by this hand I swear, I scorn the term;
Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers.

Quick. No, by my troth, not long: for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlewomen, that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy-house straight. [Nym draws his sword.] O well-a-day, Lady, if he be not here. Now we shall see wilful adultery and murder committed. Good lieutenant Bardolph—

Bard. Good corporal, offer nothing here.

Nym. Pish!

Pist. Pish for thee, Iceland dog! thou prick-eared cur of Iceland.

Quick. Good corporal Nym, show thy valour, and put up thy sword.

Nym. Will you shog off? I would have you solus.

[Sheathing his sword.]

Pist. Solus, egregious dog? O viper vile!
The solus in thy most marvellous face;
The solus in thy teeth, and in thy throat,
And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy maw, perdy;
And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth!
I do retort the solus in thy bowels;
For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up,
And flashing fire will follow.

Nym. I am not Barbason, you cannot conjure me. I have an humour to knock you indifferently well: If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may say, in fair terms: if you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may say; and that's the humour of it.

Pist. O braggard vile, and damned furious wight!
The grave doth gape, and doting death is near;
Therefore exhale. [Pistol and Nym draw.]

Bard. Hear me, hear me what I say:—he that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hilts, as I am a soldier. [Draws.]

Pist. An oath of mickle might; and fury shall abate.

Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give;
Thy spirits are most tall.

Nym. I will cut thy throat, one time or other, in fair terms; that is the humour of it.

Pist. Coupe la gorge, that's the word?—I defy thee again.

O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get?
No; to the spital go,
And from the powdering tub of infamy
Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's kind,
Doll Tear-sheet she by name, and her espouse:
I have, and I will hold the quondam Quickly
For the only she: and—Pauca, there's enough. Go to.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master,—and you, hostess;—he is very sick, and would to bed.—Good Bardolph, put thy face between his sheets, and do the office of a warming-pan; 'faith, he's very ill.

Bard. Away, you rogue.

Quick. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days; the king has killed his heart.—Good husband, come home presently.

[Exeunt Mrs. Quick and Boy.]

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends? We must to France together. Why the devil should we keep knives to cut one another's throats?

Pist. Let floods o'erswell, and fiends for food howl on!
Nym. You'll pay me t'ue eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. Base is the slave that pays.

<sup>a</sup> The. We have still the word, which signifies a common dog—a mongrel.

Nym. That now I will have; that's t'ue of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound: push
Bard. By this sword, he that makes the I'll kill him; by this sword, I will.

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must course.

Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends: an thou wilt not, why, then be en me too. Prithee, put up.

Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present
And liquor likewise will I give to thee,
And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood
I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me.
Is not this just?—for I shall sutler be Unto the camp, and profits will accrue.
Give me thy hand.

Nym. I shall have my noble?

Pist. In cash most justly paid.

Nym. Well, then, that's the humour of it.

Re-enter Mrs. Quickly.

Quick. As ever you come of women, come to sir John: Ah, poor heart! he is so shaken with quodidian tertian, that it is most lamentable hold. Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The king hath run bad humours on him that's the even of it.

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right;
His heart is fracted, and corroborate.

Nym. The king is a good king: but it may be; he passes some humours, and careers.

Pist. Let us condole the knight; for, laudably, he will live.

SCENE II.—Southampton. A Council Chamber.

Enter EXETER, BEDFORD, and WESTMORELAND.

Bed. 'Fore God, his grace is bold, to call us traitors.

Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.

West. How smooth and even they do bear it, as if allegiance in their bosoms sat,
Crowned with faith and constant loyalty.

Bed. The king hath note of all that they do by interception which they dream not of.

Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow, whom he hath dull'd and cloy'd with gifts and favours,—

That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell
His sovereign's life to death and treachery!

Trumpet sounds. Enter KING HENRY FIFTH, CAMBRIDGE, GREY, Lords, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we will sail.
My lord of Cambridge, and my kind lord of Exeter,
And you, my gentle knight, give me your thoughts.
Think you not, that the powers we bear with us
Will cut their passage through the force of France,
Doing the execution, and the act,
For which we have in head assembled them?

Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man do his duty.

K. Hen. I doubt not that: since we are all persuaded,

We carry not a heart with us from hence
That grows not in a fair concert with ours;
Nor leave not one behind, that doth not wish
Success and conquest to attend on us.

Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd and loved
Than is your majesty; there's not, I think, a man
That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness
Under the sweet shade of your government.

Grey. True: those that were your father's friends
Are still your friends.

'd their galls in honey; and do serve you to create of duty and of zeal.
 We therefore have great cause of thankfulness;
 forget the office of our hand
 in quittance of desert and merit, to the weight and worthiness.
 So service shall with steeld sinews toil,
 or shall refresh itself with hope,
 or grace incessant services.
 We judge no less.—Uncle of Exeter,
 the man committed yesterday,
 I against our person: we consider mass of wine that set him on;
 his more advice, we pardon him.
 That's mercy, but too much security:
 we punish'd, sovereign; lest example his sufferance, more of such a kind.
 O, let us yet be merciful.
 to may your highness, and yet punish too.
 for, you show great mercy if you give him life,
 taste of much correction.
 Alas, your too much love and care of me reasons 'gainst this poor wretch.
 Alas, proceeding on distemper,
 we wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye fatal crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and digested, here us?—We'll yet enlarge that man,
 Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, in their dear preservation of our person, we him punish'd. And now to our French ones;
 the late commissioners?
 mine, my lord;
 mess had me ask for it to-day.
 So did you me, my liege.
 and I, my royal sovereign.
 Then, Richard, earl of Cambridge, there is ours;
 the lord Scroop of Masham; and, sir knight, Northumberland, this same is yours:
 and know, I know your worthiness.
 Westmoreland, and uncle Exeter,
 ward to-night.—Why, how now, gentlemen?
 you in those papers, that you lose complexion?—look ye, how they change!
 they are paper.—Why, what read you there, so cowardly and chas'd your blood assurance?
 I do confess my fault;
 submit me to your highness' mercy.
 Scroop. To which we all appeal.
 The mercy, that was quick in us but late,
 in counsel is suppress'd and kill'd:
 we dare, for shame, to talk of mercy;
 when reasons turn into your bosoms,
 on their masters, worrying you.
 O princes, and my noble peers,
 O! how monstrous! My lord of Cambridge here,— how apt our love was, to accord him with all appertinents to his honour; and this man a few light crowns, lightly conspir'd, to unto the practices of France,
 here in Hampton: to the which,
 it, no less for bounty bound to us
 Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn. But O!
 I say to thee, lord Scroop; thou cruel, savage, and inhuman creature!
 How didst bear the key of all my counsels, set the very bottom of my soul,
 yet mightst have coin'd me into gold,
 how have practis'd on me for thy use;

May it be possible, that foreign hire
 Could out of thee extract one spark of evil,
 That might annoy my finger? 't is so strange,
 That, though the truth of it stands off as gross
 As black from white, my eye will scarcely see it.
 Treason, and murder, ever kept together,
 As two yoke-devils sworn to either's purpose,
 Working so grossly in a natural cause,
 That admiration did not whoop at them:
 But thou, 'gainst all proportion, didst bring in Wonder, to wait on treason, and on murder:
 And whatsoever cunning fiend it was
 That wrought upon thee so preposterously,
 Hath got the voice in hell for excellence:
 And other devils, that suggest by treasons,
 Do botch and bungle up damnation
 With patches, colours, and with forms being fetch'd
 From glistening semblances of piety;
 But he that temper'd thee bade thee stand up,
 Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason,
 Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor.
 If that same demon, that hath gull'd thee thus,
 Should with his lion gait walk the whole world,
 He might return to vasty Tartar back,
 And tell the legions, I can never win
 A soul so easy as that Englishman's.
 O, how hast thou with jealousy infected
 The sweetness of affiance! Show men dutiful?
 Why, so didst thou: Seem they grave and learned?
 Why, so didst thou: Come they of noble family?
 Why, so didst thou: Seem they religious?
 Why, so didst thou: Or are they spare in diet;
 Free from gross passion, or of mirth or anger;
 Constant in spirit, not swerving with the blood;
 Garnish'd and deck'd in modest complement;
 Not working with the eye, without the ear,
 And, but in purged judgment, trusting neither—
 Such, and so finely bolted, didst thou seem:
 And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot,
 To mark the full-fraught man and best indued,
 With some suspicion. I will weep for thee;
 For this revolt of thine, methinks, is like
 Another fall of man.—Their faults are open.
 Arrest them to the answer of the law;
 And God acquit them of their practices!
Eze. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard earl of Cambridge.
I. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry lord Scroop of Masham.
I. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight of Northumberland.
Scroop. Our purposes God justly hath discover'd;
 And I repent my fault more than my death;
 Which I beseech your highness to forgive,
 Although my body pay the price of it.
Cam. For me,—the gold of France did not seduce;
 Although I did admit it as a motive,
 The sooner to effect what I intended:
 But God be thanked for prevention;
 Which I in sufferance heartily will rejoice,
 Beseeching God, and you, to pardon me.
Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice
 At the discovery of most dangerous treason,
 Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself,
 Prevented from a damned enterprise:
 My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign.
K. Hen. God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentence.
 You have conspir'd against our royal person,
 Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers
 Receiv'd the golden earnest of our death;
 Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter,
 His princes and his peers to servitude,
 His subjects to oppression and contempt,

And his whole kingdom into desolation.
Touching our person, seek we no revenge;
But we our kingdom's safety must so tender,
Whose ruin you have sought, that to her laws
We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence,
Poor miserable wretches, to your death:
The taste whereof, God, of his mercy, give you
Patience to endure, and true repentance
Of all your dear offences!—Bear them hence.

[Exeunt Conspirators, guarded.]

Now, lords, for France; the enterprise whereof Shall be to you, as us, like glorious.
We doubt not of a fair and lucky war;
Since God so graciously hath brought to light
This dangerous treason, lurking in our way,
To hinder our beginnings;—we doubt not now,
But every rub is smoothed on our way.
Then, forth, dear countrymen; let us deliver
Our puissance into the hand of God,
Putting it straight in expedition.
Cheerly to sea; the signs of war advance:
No king of England, if not king of France. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—London. Mrs. Quickly's House in Eastcheap.

Enter PISTOL, MRS. QUICKLY, NYM, BARDOLPH, and Boy.

Quick. Prithes, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pist. No; for my manly heart doth yearn.
Bardolph, be blithe;—Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins;
Boy, bristle thy courage up; for Falstaff he is dead,
And we must yearn therefore.

Bard. Would I were with him, wheresome'er he is, either in heaven, or in hell!

Quick. Nay, sure, he's not in hell; he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom. 'A made a finer end, and went away, an it had been any christom child; 'a parted even just between twelve and one, e'en at the turning o' the tide: for after I saw him fumble with the sheets, and play with flowers, and smile upon his fingers' ends, I knew there was but one way; for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and 'a babbled of green fields. How now, sir John? quoth I: what, man! be of good cheer. So 'a cried out—God, God, God! three or four times; now I, to comfort him, bid him 'a should not think of God; I hoped there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet: So, 'a bade me lay more clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the bed, and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone; then I felt to his knees, and so upward, and upward, and all was as cold as any stone.

Nym. They say, he cried out of sack.

Quick. Ay, that 'a did.

Bard. And of women.

Quick. Nay, that 'a did not.

Boy. Yes, that 'a did; and said they were devils incarnate.

Quick. 'A could never abide carnation: 't was a colour he never liked.

Boy. 'A said once the devil would have him about women.

Quick. 'A did in some sort, indeed, handle women: but then he was rheumatic; and talked of the whore of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember, 'a saw a flea stick upon Bardolph's nose; and 'a said it was a black soul burning in hell?

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone that maintained that fire: that 's all the riches I got in his service.

<sup>a</sup> Christom child. Children dying under the age of a month were called christoms in the old bills of mortality. Mrs. Quickly's "christom" is one of her emendations of English.

Nym. Shall we shog? the king will be gone to Southampton.

Pist. Come, let's away.—My love, give me thy Look to my chattels, and my moveables:
Let senses rule; the weed is, "Pitch and pay;"
Trust none:

For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes,
And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck;
Therefore, caveto be thy counsellor.
Go, clear thy crystals.<sup>a</sup>—Yoke-fellows in arms,
Let us to France! like horse-leeches, my boys;
To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck!

Boy. And that is but unwholesome food, they say.

Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farewell, hostess. [Kissing]

Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it; adieu.

Pist. Let housewifery appear; keep close, I thee command.

Quick. Farewell; adieu. [Exit]

SCENE IV.—France. A Room in the French King's Palace.

Enter the French KING attended; the DAUPHIN, DUKE OF BURGUNDY, the CONSTABLE, and others.

Fr. King. Thus come the English with fell power upon us;

And more than carefully it us concerns,
To answer royally in our defences.

Therefore the dukes of Berry, and of Bretagne,
Of Brabant, and of Orleans, shall make forth,
And you, prince dauphin,—with all swift despatch,
To line and new repair our towns of war,
With men of courage, and with means defendant;
For England his approaches makes as fierce
As waters to the sucking of a gulf.

It fits us then to be as provident
As fear may teach us, out of late examples
Left by the fatal and neglected English
Upon our fields.

Dau. My most redoubted father,
It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe:
For peace itself should not so dull a kingdom,
(Though war nor no known quarrel were in question,
But that defences, musters, preparations,
Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected,
As were a war in expectation.

Therefore, I say, 't is meet we all go forth,
To view the sick and feeble parts of France;
And let us do it with no show of fear;
No, with no more, than if we heard that England
Were busied with a Whitsun morris-dance:
For, my good liege, she is so idly king'd,
Her sceptre so fantastically borne
By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth,
That fear attends her not.

Con. O peace, prince dauphin!
You are too much mistaken in this king:
Question, your grace, the late ambassadors,—
With what great state he heard their embassy,
How well supplied with noble counsellors,
How modest in exception, and withal
How terrible in constant resolution,—
And you shall find, his vanities fore-spent
Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus,
Covering discretion with a coat of folly;
As gardeners do with ordure hide those roots
That shall first spring and be most delicate.

Dau. Well, 't is not so, my lord high constable:
But though we think it so, it is no matter:
In cases of defence, 't is best to weigh
The enemy more mighty than he seems:

<sup>a</sup> Clear thy crystals—dry thine eyes.

portions of defence are fill'd ;
 (a weak and niggardly projection,<sup>a</sup> a miser spoil his coat with a scanting both.
 g. Think we king Harry strong ;
 ces, look you strongly arm to meet him.
 sed of him hath been flesh'd upon us ;
 bred out of that bloody strain, sted us in our familiar paths :
 or too much memorable shame,
 sly battle fatally was struck,
 or princes captiv'd, by the hand
 ack name, Edward black prince of Wales ;
 at his mountain sire,—on mountain standing,
 air, crown'd with the golden sun,— roical seed, and smil'd to see him
 e work of nature, and deface ns that by God and by French fathers y years been made. This is a stem ficious stock ; and let us fear
 : mightiness and fate of him.

Enter a Messenger.

ambassadors from Harry King of England admittance to your majesty.
 r. We'll give them present audience. Go, and bring them.

[Exeunt Mess. and certain Lords.
 is chase is hotly follow'd, friends.
 ern head, and stop pursuit : for coward dogs d their mouths, when what they seem to reaten fore them. Good my sovereign, e English short ; and let them know monarchy you are the head :
 y liege, is not so vile a sin
 lecting.

Enter Lords, with EXETER and Train.

From our brother of England ?
 no him ; and thus he greets your majesty.
 ex, in the name of God Almighty, vest yourself and lay apart
 id glories, that, by gift of Heaven, nature, and of nations, long
 d to his heirs ; namely, the crown, le-stretched honours that pertain,
 and the ordinance of times, own of France. That you may know

 e dust of old oblivion rak'd, as this most memorable line,<sup>b</sup> [Gives a paper.
 arch truly demonstrative ;
 a, overlook this pedigree :
 you find him evenly deriv'd out fam'd of famous ancestors,

Edward the third, he bids you then resign
 Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held
 From him the native and true challenger.

Fr. King. Or else what follows ?

Exc. Bloody constraint ; for if you hide the crown
 Even in your hearts, there will he rake for it :
 Therefore in fierce tempest is he coming,
 In thunder, and in earthquake, like a Jove,
 That, if requiring fail, he will compel ;
 And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
 Deliver up the crown ; and to take mercy
 On the poor souls for whom this hungry war
 Opens his vasty jaws : and on your head
 Turning the widows' tears, the orphans' cries,
 The dead men's blood, the pining maidens' groans,
 For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lovers,
 That shall be swallow'd in this controversy.
 This is his claim, his threat'ning, and my message :
 Unless the dauphin be in presence here,
 To whom expressly I bring greeting too.

Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this further :
 To-morrow shall you bear our full intent
 Back to our brother of England.

Dau. For the dauphin,
 I stand here for him : What to him from England ?

Exc. Scorn and defiance ; slight regard, contempt,
 And anything that may not misbecome
 The mighty sender, doth he prize you at.
 Thus says my king : and, if your father's highness
 Do not, in grant of all demands at large,
 Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his majesty,
 He'll call you to so hot an answer of it,
 That caves and wombly vaultages of France
 Shall chide<sup>a</sup> your trespass, and return your mock
 In second accent of his ordinance.

Dau. Say, if my father render fair return,
 It is against my will : for I desire
 Nothing but odds with England ; to that end,
 As matching to his youth and vanity,
 I did present him with the Paris balls.

Exc. He'll make your Paris Louvre shake for it,
 Were it the mistress court of mighty Europe :
 And, be assur'd, you'll find a difference
 (As we, his subjects, have in wonder found)
 Between the promise of his greener days,
 And these be masters now ; now he weighs time,
 Even to the utmost grain ; that you shall read
 In your own losses, if he stay in France.

Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind at full.

Exc. Despatch us with all speed, lest that our king
 Come here himself to question our delay ;
 For he is footed in this land already.

Fr. King. You shall be soon despatch'd, with fair conditions :

A night is but small breath, and little pause,
 To answer matters of this consequence. [Exeunt.

CHORUS.

imagin'd wing our swift scene flies, of thought. Suppose that you have seen appointed king at Hampton pier unopen tackle ship-boys climbing :

as appears here to be used for forecast, preparation.
 * Line—genealogy.

Hear the shrill whistle which doth order give
 To sounds confus'd : behold the threaden sails,
 Borne with the invisible and creeping wind,
 Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea,
 Breasting the lofty surge : O, do but think
 You stand upon the rivage,<sup>b</sup> and behold
 A city on the inconstant billows dancing ;
 For so appears this fleet majestical,
 Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow, follow !
 Grapple your minds to sternage<sup>c</sup> of this navy ;

<sup>b</sup> Rivage—the shore. <sup>c</sup> Sternage. The same as steerage.

And leave your England, as dead midnight still,
Guarded with grandsires, babies, and old women,
Either past, or not arriv'd to, pith and puissance:
For who is he, whose chin is but enrich'd
With one appearing hair, that will not follow
These cull'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to France?
Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege:
Behold the ordnance on their carriages,
With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harfleur.

Suppose, the ambassador from the French
Tells Harry, that the king doth offer him
Katharine his daughter; and with her, to d
Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms.
The offer likes not: and the nimble gunner

SCENE I.—The same. Before Harfleur.

Alarums. Enter KING HENRY, EXETER, BEDFORD, GLOSTER, and Soldiers, with scaling ladders.

K. Hen. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more;
Or close the wall up with our English dead!
In peace, there 's nothing so becomes a man
As modest stillness and humility:
But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
Then imitate the action of the tiger;
Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood,
Disguise fair nature with hard-favour'd rage:
Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;
Let it pry through the portage<sup>a</sup> of the head,
Like the brass cannon; let the brow o'erwhelm it,
As fearfully as doth a galled rock
O'erhang and jutty<sup>b</sup> his confounded<sup>c</sup> base, Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean.
Now set the teeth, and stretch the nostril wide;
Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit
To his full height!—On, on, you nobless English,<sup>d</sup>
Whose blood is fet<sup>e</sup> from fathers of war-proof!
Fathers that, like so many Alexanders,
Have in these parts from morn till even fought,
And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument.
Dishonour not your mothers; now attest
That those whom you call'd fathers did beget you!
Be copy now to men of grosser blood,
And teach them how to war!—And you, good yeomen,
Whose limbs were made in England, show us here
The mettle of your pasture; let us swear
That you are worth your breeding: which I doubt not;

For there is none of you so mean and base
That hath not noble lustre in your eyes.
I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
Straining upon the start. The game 's afoot;
Follow your spirit: and, upon this charge,
Cry—God for Harry! England! and Saint George!
[Exeunt. Alarum, and chambers go off.

SCENE II.—The same.

Forces pass over; then enter NYM, BARDOLPH, PISTOL, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on, on! to the breach, to the breach!
Nym. Pray thee, corporal, stay; the knocks are too not; and, for mine own part, I have not a case of lives:<sup>f</sup> the humour of it is too hot, that is the very plain-song
of it.

<sup>a</sup> Portage. The eyes are compared to cannon prying through port-holes.

<sup>b</sup> Jutty. The jutting land is a common epithet.

<sup>c</sup> Confounded. To destroy was one of the senses in which to confound was formerly used.

<sup>d</sup> Nobless English.—The English nobility. Henry first addresses the nobles—then the yeomen.

<sup>e</sup> Fet—fetch'd. Fettle is the participle of the Anglo-Saxon verb fet-tan, to fetch.

<sup>f</sup> A case of lives.—several lives.

Pist. The plain-song is most just; for abound; Knocks go and come; God's vassals die;

And sword and shield,
In bloody field,
Doth win immortal fame.

Boy. Would I were in an alehouse in would give all my fame for a pot of ale and Pist. And I:

If wishes would prevail with me,
My purpose should not fail with
But thither would I hie.

Boy. As duly, but not as truly,
As bird doth sing on bough.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. Up to the preach, you dogs! aram lions. [Driving the

Pist. Be merciful, great duke, to men of Abate thy rage, abate thy manly rage!
Abate thy rage, great duke!

Good hawcock, bate thy rage! use lenity,
Nym. These be good humours!—your bad humours.

[Exeunt NYM, PIST., and BARD., follow
Boy. As young as I am, I have observed swishers. I am boy to them all three: I three, though they would serve me, could not me; for, indeed, three such antics do not a man. For Bardolph,—he is white-liver'd faced; by the means whereof 'a faces it out not. For Pistol,—he hath a killing tongue sword; by the means whereof 'a breaks wood whole weapons. For Nym,—he hath heard few words are the best men; and therefore say his prayers, lest 'a should be thought a his few bad words are match'd with as few for 'a never broke any man's head but his was against a post, when he was drunk.
steal anything, and call it—purchase. Bar a lute-case; bore it twelve leagues, and sold halfpence. Nym and Bardolph are sworn filching; and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel by that piece of service, the men would They would have me as familiar with men's their gloves or their handkerchers: which is against my manhood, if I should take fire pocket, to put into mine; for it is plain of wrongs. I must leave them, and seek service: their villainy goes against my and therefore I must cast it up.

Re-enter FLUELLEN, GOWER follow

Gow. Captain Fluellen, you must turn to the mines; the duke of Gloster would
you.

Flu. To the mines! tell you the duke good to come to the mines: For, look you, not according to the disciplines of the war;

Gov. The town sounds a parley.

opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold

SCENE III.—The same. Before the gates of Harfleur.

The Governor and some Citizens on the walls; the English Forces below. Enter KING HENRY and his Train.

K. Hen. How yet resolves the governor of the town?
This is the latest parle we will admit:

Therefore, to our best mercy give yourselves;

Or, like to men proud of destruction,

Defy us to our worst: for, as I am a soldier,

(A name that, in my thoughts, becomes me best,)

If I begin the battery once again,

I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur

Till in her ashes she lie buried.

The gates of mercy shall be all shut up;

And the flesh'd soldier, rough and hard of heart,

In liberty of bloody hand shall range

With conscience wide as hell; mowing like grass

Your fresh-fair virgins and your flowering infants.

What is it then to me, if impious war,

Array'd in flames, like to the prince of fiends,

Do, with his smirch'd complexion, all fell feats

Enlink'd to waste and desolation?

What is 't to me, when you yourselves are cause,

If your pure maidens fall into the hand

Of hot and forcing violation?

What rein can hold licentious wickedness

When down the hill he holds his fierce career?

We may as bootless spend our vain command

Upon the enraged soldiers in their spoil,

As send precepts to the Leviathan

To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harfleur,

Take pity of your town, and of your people,

Whiles yet my soldiers are in my command;

Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of grace

O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds

Of headly<sup>a</sup> murder, spoil, and villainy.

If not, why, in a moment, look to see

The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand

Defile the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters;

Your fathers taken by the silver beards,

And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls;

Your naked infants spitted upon pikes;

Whiles the mad mothers with their howls confus'd

Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry

At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen.

What say you? will you yield, and this avoid?

Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd?

Gov. Our expectation hath this day an end:

The dauphin, whom of succours we entreated,

Returns us—that his powers are yet not ready

To raise so great a siege. Therefore, great king,

We yield our town and lives to thy soft mercy:

Enter our gates; dispose of us and ours;

For we no longer are defensible.

K. Hen. Open your gates.—Come, uncle Exeter,

Go you and enter Harfleur; there remain,

And fortify it strongly 'gainst the French:

Use mercy to them all. For us, dear uncle,—

The winter coming on, and sickness growing

Upon our soldiers,—we will retire to Calais.

To-night in Harfleur will we be your guest;

To-morrow for the march are we address'd.

[Flourish. The KING, &c., enter the town.

SCENE IV.—Rouen. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KATHARINE and ALICE.

Kath. Alice, tu as esté en Angleterre, et tu parles bien le langage.

Alice. Un peu, madame.

Kath. Je te prie, m'enseignez; il faut que j'apprenne à parler. Comment appelez vous la main, en Anglois?

Alice. La main? elle est appellée, de hand.

Kath. De hand. Et les doigts?

Alice. Les doigts? ma foy, je oublie les doigts; mais je me souviendray. Les doigts? je pense qu'ils sont appellez de fingres; ouy, de fingres.

Kath. La main, de hand; les doigts, de fingres. Je pense que je suis le bon escolier. J'ay gagné deux mots d'Anglois vistement. Comment appelez vous les ongles?

Alice. Les ongles? les appellons, de nails.

Kath. De nails. Escoutez; dites moy si je parle bien: de hand, de fingres, de nails.

Alice. C'est bien dit, madame; il est fort bon Anglois.

Kath. Dites moy l'Anglois pour le bras.

Alice. De arm, madame.

Kath. Et le coude?

Alice. De elbow.

Kath. De elbow. Je m'en faitz la répétition de tous les mots que vous m'avez appris dès à present.

Alice. Il est trop difficile, madame, comme je pense.

Kath. Excusez moy, Alice; escoutez: De hand, de fingre, de nails, de arm, de bilbow.

Alice. De elbow, madame.

Kath. O Seigneur Dieu! je m'en oublie; De elbow. Comment appelez vous le col?

Alice. De nick, madame.

Kath. De nick: Et le menton?

Alice. De chin.

Kath. De sin. Le col, de nick: le menton, de sin.

Alice. Ouy. Sauf vostre honneur; en vérité, vous prononcez les mots aussi droict que les natifs d'Angleterre.

Kath. Je ne doute point d'apprendre par la grâce de Dieu; et en peu de temps.

Alice. N'avez vous pas déjà oublié ce que je vous ay enseignée?

Kath. Non, je reciteray à vous promptement. De hand, de fingre, de nails,— Alice. De nails, madame.

Kath. De nails, de arme, de ilbow.

Alice. Sauf vostre honneur, de elbow.

Kath. Ainsi dis je; de elbow, de nick, et de sin: Comment appelez vous le pied et la robe?

Alice. De foot, madame; et de coun.

Kath. De foot, et de coun? O Seigneur Dieu! ces sont mots de son mauvais, corruptible, grosse, et impudique, et non pour les dames d'honneur d'user: Je ne voudrois prononcer ces mots devant les seigneurs de France, pour tout le monde. Il faut de foot et de coun neantmoins. Je reciterai une autre fois ma leçon ensemble: De hand, de fingre, de nails, de arm, de elbow, de nick, de sin, de foot, de coun.

Alice. Excellent, madame!

Kath. C'est assez pour une fois; allons nous à dîner. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The same. Another Room in the same.

Enter the French KING, the DAUPHIN, DUKE OF BOURBON, the CONSTABLE of France, and others.

Fr. King. 'T is certain he hath pass'd the river Somme.

Con. And if he be not fought withal, my lord,

Let us not live in France; let us quit all, And give our vineyards to a barbarous people.

Dau. O Dieu vivant! shall a few sprays of us, The emptying of our father's luxury, Our scious, put in wild and savage stock, Spurt up so suddenly into the clouds, And overlook their grafters?

Bour. Normans, but bastard Normans, Normans bastards!

Mort de ma vie! if they march along Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom, To buy a slobbery and a dirty farm In that nook-shotten* isle of Albion.

Con. Dieu de batailles! where have they this matter? Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull?

On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale, Killing their fruit with frowns? Can sodden water A drench for sur-rein'd<sup>b</sup> jades, their barley broth, Decoct their cold blood to such valiant heat?

And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine, Seem frosty? O, for honour of our land, Let us not hang like roping icicles

Upon our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty people Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields; Poor, we may call them in their native lords.

Dau. By faith and honour, Our madams mock at us; and plainly say Our mettle is bred out; and they will give Their bodies to the lust of English youth, To new-store France with bastard warriors.

Bour. They bid us—to the English dancing school And teach lavoltas high, and swift corantoes; Saying, our grace is only in our heels, And that we are most lofty runaways.

Fr. King. Where is Montjoy, the herald? Bring him hence;

Let him greet England with our sharp defiance, Up, princes; and, with spirit of honour edg'd, More sharper than your swords, hie to the field:

Charles De-la-bret, high constable of France; You dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berry, Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy;

Jaques Chatillion, Rambures, Vaudemont, Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussi, and Fauconberg, Foix, Lestrade, Bouciqualt, and Charolois;

High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights For your great seats, now quit you of great shame: Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our land

With pennons painted in the blood of Harfleur: Rush on his host, as doth the melted snow Upon the valleys; whose low vassal seat

The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon: Go down upon him,—you have power enough,— And in a captive chariot into Rouen Bring him our prisoner. Con. This becomes the great.

Sorry am I his numbers are so few, His soldiers sick and famish'd in their march:

For, I am sure, when he shall see our army, He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear, And, for achievement,<sup>c</sup> offer us his ransom.

Fr. King. Therefore, lord constable, haste at Montjoy;

And let him say to England, that we send To know what willing ransom he will give. Prince dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen.

Dau. Not so, I do beseech your majesty.

Fr. King. Be patient, for you shall remain

* Nook-shotten. The * nook-shotten isle of Albion is thrust into a corner apart from the rest of the world.

and constable, and princes all;
bringing us word of England's fall. [Exeunt.]

VI.—The English Camp in Picardy.

Enter GOWER and FLUELLEN.

Now, captain Fluellen? come you from sure you, there is very excellent services at the bridge.

Is the duke of Exeter safe?

The duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Aga-d a man that I love and honour with my y heart, and my duty, and my life, and ed my uttermost power: he is not (God be blessed!) any hurt in the 'orld; but keeps ost valiantly, with excellent disciplines.
ancient there at the bridge,—I think, in cience, he is as valiant a man as Mark l he is a man of no estimation in the did see him do as gallant service.

What do you call him?

He called ancient Pistol.

How do you know him not?

Enter PISTOL.

Who is the man?

Alas, I thee beseech to do me favours:
Exeter doth love thee well.

Praise God; and I have merited some love

Alas, a soldier firm and sound of heart,
a valour, hath,—by cruel fate, fortune's furious fickle wheel,

is blind,
upon the rolling restless stone,— our patience, ancient Pistol. Fortune is with a muffer before her eyes, to signify fortune is blind: And she is painted also to signify to you, which is the moral of turning, and inconstant, and mutability, and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls:—In the poet makes a most excellent description is an excellent moral.

She is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him;
and 'tis a pux, and hanged must 'a be.

With!

Take the dog, let man go free,

wrap his windpipe suffocate:

With given the doom of death,

the price.

Speak, the duke will hear thy voice;

Bardolph's vital thread be cut penney cord, and vile reproach:

So, for his life, and I will thee requite.

And Pistol, I do partly understand your

With!

Then rejoice therefore.

Truly, ancient, it is not a thing to rejoice in you, he were my brother, I would desire to see his good pleasure, and put him to execudisciplines ought to be used,

and be damned; and figo for thy friendship.

Well.

Fig of Spain!

[Exit PISTOL.]

Good.

Now, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal; I am now; a bawd; a cutpurse.

Now you, 'a uttered as grave 'ords at the we shall see in a summer's day: But it is that he has spoke to me, that is well, I when time is serve.

* Buzzum—obedient, disciplined.

Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a roogue; that now and then goes to the wars, to grace himself, at his return into London, under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names:
and they will learn you by rote where services were done;—at such and such a sconce,* at such a breach,
at such a convoy; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood on; and this they can perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-tuned oaths: And what a beard of the general's cut, and a horrid suit of the camp, will do among foaming bottles and ale-washed wits, is wonderful to be thought on! But you must learn to know such scoundrels of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook.

Flu. I tell you what, captain Gower,—I do perceive he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the 'orld he is; if I find a hole in his coat, I will tell him my mind. [Drum heard.] Hark you, the king is coming; and I must speak with him from the bridge.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOSTER, and Soldiers.

Flu. Got pless your majesty!

K. Hen. How now, Fluellen? camest thou from the bridge?

Flu. Ay, so please your majesty. The duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintained the bridge: the French is gone off, look you; and there is gallant and most brave passages: Marry, th' adversary was have possession of the bridge; but he is enforced to retire, and the duke of Exeter is master of the bridge: I can tell your majesty, the duke is a brave man.

K. Hen. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th' adversary hath been very great, reasonable great: marry, for my part, I think the duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church, one Bardolph, if your majesty know the man: his face is all bubukles, and wheelks, and knobs, and flames of fire; and his lips plows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes blue, and sometimes red; but his nose is executed, and his fire 's out.

K. Hen. We would have all such offenders so cut off:—and we give express charge, that, in our marches through the country, there be nothing compelled from the villages, nothing taken but paid for, none of the French upbraided or abused in disdainful language;
For when lenity and cruelty play for a kingdom, the gentler gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket sounds. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. You know me by my habit.

K. Hen. Well, then, I know thee; What shall I know of thee?

Mont. My master's mind.

K. Hen. Unfold it.

Mont. Thus says my king:—Say thou to Harry of England, Though we seemed dead, we did but sleep:
Advantage is a better soldier than rashness. Tell him, we could have rebuked him at Harfleur: but that we thought not good to bruise an injury till it were full ripe:—now we speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperial: England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him, therefore, consider of his ransom: which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which, in weight to re-answer, his pettiness would bow under. For our losses, his exchequer is too poor; for the effusion of our blood, the muster of his kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person, kneeling at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this add—defiance: and tell him, for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounced. So far my king and master, so much my office.

K. Hen. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

Mont. Montjoy.

K. Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn thee back, And tell thy king,—I do not seek him now; But could be willing to march on to Calais Without impeachment: for, to say the sooth, (Though 't is no wisdom to confess so much Unto an enemy of craft and vantage,) My people are with sickness much enfeebled; My numbers lessen'd; and those few I have Almost no better than so many French, Who when they were in health, I tell thee, herald, I thought upon one pair of English legs Did march three Frenchmen.—Yet, forgive me, God, That I do brag thus!—this your air of France Hath blown that vice in me; I must repent. Go, therefore, tell thy master here I am; My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk; My army but a weak and sickly guard; Yet, God before,* tell him we will come on, Though France himself, and such another neighbour, Stand in our way. There 's for thy labour, Montjoy. Go bid thy master well advise himself: If we may pass, we will; if we be hinder'd, We shall your tawny ground with your red blood Discolour: and so, Montjoy, fare you well. The sum of all our answer is but this: We would not seek a battle as we are: Nor as we are, we say we will not shun it; So tell your master.

Mont. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your highness.

[Exit MONTJOY.]

Glo. I hope they will not come upon us now.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs.

March to the bridge; it now draws toward night,— Beyond the river we 'll encamp ourselves; And on to-morrow bid them march away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—The French Camp, near Agincourt.

Enter the CONSTABLE OF FRANCE, the LORD RAMBURES, the DUKE OF ORLEANS, DAUPHIN, and others.

Con. Tut! I have the best armour of the world.— 'Would it were day!

Orl. You have an excellent armour; but let my horse have his due.

Con. It is the best horse of Europe.

Orl. Will it never be morning?

Dau. My lord of Orleans, and my lord high constable, you talk of horse and armour.

Orl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world.

Dau. What a long night is this!—I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Ca, ha! He bounds from the earth as if his entrails were hairs; le cheval volant, the Pegasus, qui a les narines de feu! When I bestride him I soar, I am a hawk: he trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He 's of the colour of the nutmeg.

Dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Perseus: he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him, but only in patient stillness, while his rider mounts him: he is, indeed, a horse; and all other jades you may call beasts.

* God before—God being my guide. The same expression, when used to a parting friend, implied, God be thy guide. The "prevent us, O Lord" of the Liturgy is go before us.

Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most excellent horse.

Dau. It is the prince of palfreys; his not the bidding of a monarch, and his countenance homage.

Orl. No more, cousin.

Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit that can the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lark deserved praise on my palfrey: it is a theme as the sea; turn the sands into eloquent tongue, my horse is argument for them all: 't is a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign to ride on: and for the world (familiar to us known) to lay apart their particular functions, and wonder at him. I once writ a sonnet in his name, began thus:—"Wonder of nature,"—

Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to tress.

Dau. Then did they imitate that which I did to my courser; for my horse is my mistress.

Orl. Your mistress bears well.

Dau. Me well; which is the prescript perfection of a good and particular mistress.

Con. Nay, for methought, yesterday, you shrewdly shook your back.

Dau. So, perhaps, did yours.

Con. Mine was not bridled.

Dau. O! then, belike, she was old and grey; you rode, like a kerne of Ireland, your French and in your straight trossers.

Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship.

Dau. Be warned by me, then: they that ride and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs; I will have my horse to my mistress.

Con. I had as lief have my mistress a jade.

Dau. I tell thee, constable, my mistress has her own hair.

Con. I could make as true a boast as that that I sow to my mistress.

Dau. Le chien est retourné à son propre vomissement, et la truie lavée au bourbier: thou art not so true of anything.

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress; any such proverb, so little kin to the purpose.

Ram. My lord constable, the armour that is about your tent to-night, are those stars, or suns, or moons?

Con. Stars, my lord.

Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I warrant you.

Con. And yet my sky shall not want.

Dau. That may be, for you bear a man's burden; and 't were more honour some were a horse.

Con. E'en as your horse bears your burden, so would trot as well were some of your brags and boasts.

Dau. 'Would I were able to load him with my burden! Will it never be day? I will trot a mile, and my way shall be paved with my own faces.

Con. I will not say so, for fear I should be weary of my way: But I would it were morning, I might see the faces of the English.

Ram. Who will go to hazard with me to see the English prisoners?

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard, and have them.

Dau. 'T is midnight, I 'll go arm myself.

Orl. The dauphin longs for morning.

Ram. He longs to eat the English.

Con. I think he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he will eat the English prince.

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread on his neck.

Orl. He is, simply, the most active prince in France.

Con. Doing is activity; and he will still

Mess. The lord Grandpré.

Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman.—Would it were day!—Alas, poor Harry of England! he longs not for the dawning, as we do.

Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this king of England, to mope with his fat-brained followers so far out of his knowledge!

Con. If the English had any apprehension they would run away.

Orl. That they lack; for if their heads had any intellectual armour they could never wear such heavy head-pieces.

Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures; their mastiffs are of unmatched courage.

Orl. Foolish curs! that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear, and have their heads crushed like rotten apples: You may as well say,—that 's a valiant flea, that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

Con. Just, just; and the men do sympathize with the mastiffs, in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives: and then give them great meals of beef, and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves, and fight like devils.

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out of beef.

Con. Then shall we find to-morrow, they have only stomachs to eat and none to fight. Now is it time to arm: Come, shall we about it?

Orl. It is now two o'clock; but, let me see,—by ten,
We shall have each a hundred Englishmen. [Exeunt.

Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
And make a moral of the devil himself.

Enter ERPINGHAM.

Good morrow, old Sir Thomas Erpingham:
A good soft pillow for that good white head
Were better than a churlish turf of France.

Erp. Not so, my liege; this lodging likes me better,
Since I may say, now lie I like a king.

K. Hen. 'T is good for men to love their present
pains,

Upon example; so the spirit is eas'd:
And, when the mind is quicken'd, out of doubt,
The organs, though defunct and dead before,
Break up their drowsy grave, and newly move
With casted slough and fresh legerity.

Lend me thy cloak, Sir Thomas.—Brothers both,
Commend me to the princes in our camp;
Do my good-morrow to them; and, anon,
Desire them all to my pavilion.

Glo. We shall, my liege. [Exit GLO. and BED.]

Erp. Shall I attend your grace?

K. Hen. No, my good knight;
Go with my brothers to my lords of England:
I and my bosom must debate awhile,
And then I would no other company.

Erp. The Lord in Heaven bless thee, noble Harry!

[Exit ERPINGHAM.]

K. Hen. God-a-mercy, old heart! thou speak'st cheerfully.

Enter PISTOL.

Pist. Qui va la?

K. Hen. A friend.

Pist. Discuss unto me; Art thou officer?
Or art thou base, common, and popular?

K. Hen. I am a gentleman of a company.

Pist. Trail'st thou the puissant pike?

K. Hen. Even so: What are you?

Pist. As good a gentleman as the emperor.

K. Hen. Then you are a better than the king.

Pist. The king's a bawcock, and a heart of gold,
A lad of life, an imp of fame;
Of parents good, of list most valiant:
I kiss his dirty shoe, and from my heart strings
I love the lovely bully. What's thy name?

K. Hen. Harry le Roy.

Pist. Le Roy! a Cornish name; art thou of Cornish crew?

K. Hen. No, I am a Welshman.

Pist. Knowest thou Fluellen?

K. Hen. Yes.

Pist. Tell him, I'll knock his leek about his pate, upon Saint Davy's day.

K. Hen. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day, lest he knock that about yours.

Pist. Art thou his friend?

K. Hen. And his kinsman too.

Pist. The figo for thee, then!

K. Hen. I thank you: God be with you!

Pist. My name is Pistol called.

[Exit.]

K. Hen. It sorts well with your fierceness.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER, severally.

Gow. Captain Fluellen!

Flu. So! in the name of Cheshu Christ, speak fewer.<sup>a</sup>
It is the greatest admiration in the universal world, when you, that there is no tiddle taddle, nor pibble pabble, battle; for how can they charitably dispose their blood is their argument? Now, if not die well, it will be a black matter for them to be led them to it; whom to disobey were a portion of subjection.

If a son, that is by his father sent about do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the his wickedness, by your rule, should be his father that sent him: or if a servant, master's command, transporting a sum of silks by robbers, and die in many irreligions, you may call the business of the author of the servant's damnation:—But the king is not bound to answer the prayers of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor his servant; for they purpose not their own purpose their services. Besides, there is his cause never so spotless, if it come to the point of swords, can try it out with all unscathed. Some, peradventure, have on them the editated and contrived murder; some, of sins with the broken seals of perjury; some, are their bulwark, that have before gored some of peace with pillage and robbery. Some men have defeated the law, and outrun men, though they can outstrip men they to fly from God: war is his beadle, war is his executioner; so that here men are punished, for of the king's laws, in now the king's quarrel they feared the death they have borne life where they would be safe they perish: lie unprovided, no more is the king guilty of their sin, than he was before guilty of those the which they are now visited. Every man is the king's; but every subject's soul is therefore should every soldier in the wars do man in his bed, wash every mote out of his eye; and dying so, death is to him advancing, the time was blessedly lost, wherein man was gained: and in him that escapes to think that making God so free an enemy outlive that day to see his greatness, others how they should prepare.

Certain, every man that dies ill the ill is his head, the king is not to answer it. I do not desire he should answer for me; and he to fight lustily for him.

He said so, to make us fight cheerfully: throats are cut, he may be ransomed, and I live.

I live to see it, I will never trust his word to pay him then! That's a perilous shot for a poor and a private to do against a monarch! you may as well run the sun to ice, with fanning in his face the king's feather. You'll never trust his word that is a foolish saying.

Your reproof is something too round; I am sorry with you, if the time were conveit be a quarrel between us, if you live, embrace it.

Shall I know thee again?

Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it: then, if ever thou darest acknowledge me it my quarrel.

Give me my glove; give me another of thine.

Here.

Will I also wear in my cap; if ever thou wilt and say, after to-morrow, "This is my hand, I will take thee a box in the ear."

K. Hen. If ever I live to see it I will challenge it, Will. Thou darest as well be hanged.

K. Hen. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the king's company.

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends; we have French quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon.

K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one they will beat us; for they bear them on their shoulders: But it is no English treason to cut French crowns; and, to-morrow, the king himself will be a clipper.

[Exeunt Soldiers.
Upon the king! let us our lives, our souls,
Our debts, our careful wives,
Our children, and our sins, lay on the king:
We must bear all.

O hard condition! twin-born with greatness,
Subject to the breadth of every fool, whose sense
No more can feel but his own wringing!

What infinite heart's ease must kings neglect,
That private men enjoy?

And what have kings that privates have not too,
Save ceremony, save general ceremony?

And what art thou, thou idle ceremony?
What kind of god art thou that suffer'st more
Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers?

What are thy rents? what are thy comings in?
O ceremony, show me but thy worth!

What is thy soul of adoration?
Art thou aught else but place, degree, and form,
Creating awe and fear in other men?
Wherein thou art less happy being fear'd
Than they in fearing.

What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage sweet,
But poison'd flattery? O, be sick, great greatness,
And bid thy ceremony give thee cure!

Think'st thou, the fiery fever will go out
With titles blown from adulation?
Will it give place to flexure and low bending?
Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's knee,
Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream,
That play'st so subtly with a king's repose;
I am a king that find thee; and I know,
'Tis not the balm, the sceptre, and the ball,
The sword, the mace, the crown imperial,

Enter ERPINGHAM.

Erp. My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence,
Seek through your camp to find you.

K. Hen.

Good old knight,
2 E 2

Collect them all together at my tent :
I'll be before thee.

Erp. I shall do 't, my lord. [Exit.]
K. Hen. O God of battles! steel my soldiers' hearts!
Possess them not with fear! Take from them now
The sense of reckoning of the opposed numbers!
Pluck their hearts from them not to-day, O Lord,
O not to-day! Think not upon the fault
My father made in compassing the crown!
I Richard's body have interred new;
And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears
Than from it issued forced drops of blood.
Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay,
Who twice a day their wither'd hands bold up Toward heaven, to pardon blood; and I have built
Two chantries, where the sad and solemn priests
Sing still for Richard's soul. More will I do;
Though all that I can do is nothing worth;
Since that my penitence comes after all,
Imploring pardon.

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. My liege!
K. Hen. My brother Gloster's voice?—Ay;
I know thy errand, I will go with thee:—
The day, my friends, and all things stay for me. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The French Camp.

Enter DAUPHIN, ORLEANS, RAMBURES, and others.

Orl. The sun doth gild our armour; up, my lords.
Dau. Montez à cheval:—My horse! valet! laquay!
ha!
Orl. O brave spirit!
Dau. Via!—les canx et la terre—
Orl. Rien puis? l'air et le feu—
Dau. Ciel! cousin Orleans.—

Enter CONSTABLE.

Now, my lord constable!
Con. Hark, how our steeds for present service neigh.
Dau. Mount them, and make incision in their hides;
That their hot blood may spin in English eyes,
And doubt<sup>a</sup> them with superfluous courage: Ha!
Ram. What, will you have them weep our horses'
blood?
How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The English are embattled, you French peers.
Con. To horse, you gallant princes! straight to horse!
Do but behold yon poor and starved band,
And your fair show shall suck away their souls,
Leaving them but the shales and husks of men.
There is not work enough for all our hands;
Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins,
To give each naked curtle-ax a stain,
That our French gallants shall to-day draw out,
And sheathe for lack of sport: let us but blow on them,
The vapour of our valour will o'erturn them.
'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords,
That our superfluous lackeys, and our peasants,—
Who, in unnecessary action, swarm
About our squares of battle,—were enow
To purge this field of such a hilding foe:
Though we upon this mountain's basis by
Took stand for idle speculation:
But that our honours must not. What 's to say?
A very little little let us do,
And all is done. Then let the trumpets sound
The tucket-sonance and the note to mount:
For our approach shall so much dare the field,
That England shall couch down in fear, and yield.

<sup>a</sup> The active verb to doubt is constantly used by the old writers as an equivalent for to awe.

Enter GRANDPRÉ.

Grand. Why do you stay so long, my lords?
Yon island carrions, desperate of their bones,
Ill-favour'dly become the morning field:
Their ragged curtains poorly are let loose,
And our air shakes them passing scornfully.
Big Mars seems bankrot in their beggar'd la,
And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps.
The horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks,
With torch-staves in their hand; and their p
Lob down their heads, dropping the hides and
The gum down-roping from their pale-dead
And in their pale dull mouths the gimball b
Lies foul with chaw'd grass, still and motion
And their executors, the knavish crows,
Fly o'er them all, impatient for their hour.
Description cannot suit itself in words,
To demonstrate the life of such a battle
In life so lifeless as it shows itself.

Con. They have said their prayers, and th death.

Dau. Shall we go send them dinners, and
And give their fasting horses provender,
And after fight with them?

Con. I stay but for my guidon.<sup>b</sup> To the
I will the banner from a trumpet take,
And use it for my haste. Come, come away
The sun is high, and we outwear the day.

SCENE III.—The English Camp

Enter the English Host; GLOSTER, BEDFORD, ETER, SALISBURY, and WESTMORELAND.

Glo. Where is the king?
Bed. The king himself is rode to view the

My dear lord Gloster, and my good lord Ex

Bed. Farewell, good Salisbury; and go with thee!

Eze. Farewell, kind lord, fight valiantly!
And yet I do thee wrong to mind thee of it,
For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valour

[Exit S]
Bed. He is as full of valour as of kindness Princely in both.

West. O that we now had here

 le desires thee—thou wilt mind s of repentance ; that their souls a peaceful and a sweet retire e fields, where (wretches) their poor bodies
 d foster.

Who hath sent thee now ?
 e constable of France.
 I pray thee, bear my former answer back ;
 believe me, and then sell my bones.
 why should they mock poor fellows thus ?

The man that once did sell the lion's skin
 While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting him.
 A many of our bodies shall, no doubt,
 Find native graves ; upon the which, I trust,
 Shall witness live in brass of this day's work :
 And those that leave their valiant bones in France,
 Dying like men, though buried in your dunghills,
 They shall be fam'd ; for there the sun shall greet them,
 And draw their honours reeking up to heaven ;
 Leaving their earthly parts to choke your clime,
 The smell whereof shall breed a plague in France.
 Mark then abounding valour in our English ;
 That, being dead, like to the bullet's grazing,
 Break out into a second course of mischief,
 Killing in relapse of mortality.
 Let me speak proudly :—Tell the constable,
 We are but warriors for the working-day :
 Our gayness, and our gilt, are all besmirch'd
 With rainy marching in the painful field ;
 There 's not a piece of feather in our host,
 (Good argument, I hope, we will not fly,)
 And time hath worn us into slovenry :
 But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim :
 And my poor soldiers tell me, yet ere night
 They 'll be in fresher robes ; or they will pluck
 The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers' heads,
 And turn them out of service. If they do this,
 (As, if God please, they shall,) my ransom then Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labour ;
 Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald ;
 They shall have none, I swear, but these my joints :
 Which if they have as I will leave 'em them,
 Shall yield them little, tell the constable.

Mont. I shall, king Harry. And so fare thee well :
 Thou never shalt hear herald any more. [Exit.]

K. Hen. I fear, thou wilt once more come again for a ransom.

Enter the DUKE OF YORK.

York. My lord, most humbly on my knee I beg
 The leading of the vaward.

K. Hen. Take it, brave York.—Now, soldiers, march away :—
 And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day ! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Field of Battle.

Alarums ; Excursions. Enter French Soldier, PISTOL, and Boy.

Pist. Yield, cur.

Fr. Sol. Je pense que vous estes le gentilhomme de bonne qualité.

Pist. Quality ! Calen o Custure me. Art thou a gentleman ? What is thy name ? discuss.

Fr. Sol. O Seigneur Dieu !

Pist. O, signieur Dew should be a gentleman :—
 Perpend my words, O signieur Dew, and mark ;—
 O signieur Dew, thou diest on point of fox,<sup>a</sup>
 Except, O signieur, thou do give to me
 Egregious ransom.

Fr. Sol. O, prenez misericorde ! ayez pitié de moy !

Pist. Moy shall not serve, I will have forty moys ;
 For I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat,
 In drops of crimson blood.

Fr. Sol. Est il impossible d'eschapper la force de ton bras ?

Pist. Brass, cur !
 Thou damned and luxurious mountain goat,
 Offer'st me brass ?

Fr. Sol. O pardonnez moy.

Pist. Say'st thou me so ? is that a ton of moys ?
 Come hither, boy : Ask me this slave in French,
 What is his name.

<sup>a</sup> Fox—a cant word for a sword.

Boy. Escoutez ; Comment estes vous appellé ?

Fr. Sol. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He says his name is master Fer.

Pist. Master Fer ! I 'll fer him, and firke him, and ferret him ;— discuss the same in French unto him.

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firke.

Pist. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.

Fr. Sol. Que dit-il, monsieur ?

Boy. Il me commande de vous dire que vous faites vous prest ; car ce soldat icy est disposé tout à cette heure de couper vostre gorge.

Pist. Ouy, couper gorge, par ma foy, pesant. Unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns ; Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword.

Fr. Sol. O, je vous supplie, pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonner ! Je suis gentilhomme de bonne maison ; gardez ma vie, et je vous donneray deux cent escus.

Pist. What are his words ?

Boy. He prays you to save his life : he is a gentleman of a good house ; and for his ransom he will give you two hundred crowns.

Pist. Tell him,—my fury shall abate, and I The crowns will take.

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que dit-il ?

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son jurement de pardonner aucun prisonnier ; neantmoins, pour les escus que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner la liberté, le franchisement.

Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux je vous donne mille remerciemens : et je m'estime heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, et très distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me, boy.

Boy. He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks : and he esteems himself happy that he hath fallen into the hands of one (as he thinks) the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy signieur of England.

Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy show.— Follow me. [Exit Pistol.]

Boy. Suivez vous le grand capitaine. [Exit French Soldier.] I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart : but the saying is true,—the empty vessel makes the greatest sound. Bardolph and Nym had ten times more valour than this roaring devil in the old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger ; and they are both hanged ; and so would this be, if he durst steal anything adventurously. I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp : the French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it ; for there is none to guard it but boys. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field of Battle.

Alarums. Enter DAUPHIN, ORLEANS, BOURBON, CONSTABLE, RAMBURES, and others.

Con. O diable !

Orl. O seigneur !—le jour est perdu, tout est perdu !

Dau. Mort de ma vie ! all is confounded, all !

Reproach and everlasting shame

Sits mocking in our plumes.—O meschante fortune !— Do not run away. [A short alarum.]

Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.

Dau. O perdurable shame !—let 's stab ourselves.

Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice for ?

Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransom ?

Bour. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame !

Let 's die in honour : Once more back again ;

And he that will not follow Bourbon now,

Let him go hence, and, with his cap in hand,

Like a base pander, hold the chamber-door,

Whilst by a slave, no gentler than my dog,

His fairest daughter is contaminated.

Con. Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend ! Let us, on 'heaps, go offer up our lives.

Orl. We are enow, yet living in the field, To smother up the English in our throats, If any order might be thought upon.

Bour. The devil take order now ! I 'll throng ;

Let life be short ; else shame will be too long.

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Field of Battle.

Alarums. Enter KING HENRY and Forces ; and others, with prisoners.

K. Hen. Well have we done, thrice valiant men :

But all 's not done, yet keep the French the field. Eze. The duke of York commends him to your majesty.

K. Hen. Lives he, good uncle ? thrice welcome !

I saw him down ; thrice up again, and fightin' From helmet to the spur, all blood he was.

Eze. In which array (brave soldier ! ) doth Larding the plain : and by his bloody side (Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds) The noble earl of Suffolk also lies.

Suffolk first died : and York, all haggled over Comes to him, where in gore he lay insteep'd, And takes him by the beard ; kisses the gashes That bloodily did yawn upon his face ;

And cries aloud,—“ Tarry, my cousin Suffolk My soul shall thine keep company to heaven : Tarry, sweet soul, for mine, then fly a-breast ; As, in this glorious and well-foughten field, We kept together in our chivalry ! ”

Upon these words I came, and cheer'd him up. He smil'd me in the face, rought me his hand And with a feeble gripe, says,—“ Dear my lord Commend my service to my sovereign.”

So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck He threw his wounded arm, and kiss'd his lip And so, espous'd to death, with blood he seal'd A testament of noble-ending love.

The pretty and sweet manner of it forc'd Those waters from me, which I would have shed But I had not so much of man in me, And all my mother came into mine eyes, And gave me up to tears.

K. Hen. I blame you not ;

For, hearing this, I must perforce compound With mistful eyes, or they will issue too.—

But, hark ! what new alarum is this same ?— The French have reinforc'd their scatter'd men. Then every soldier kill his prisoners ; Give the word through.

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the Field of Battle.

Alarums. Enter FLUELLEN and GOWENKAMP.

Flu. Kill the poys and the luggage ! 't is against the law of arms : 't is as arrant a knavery, mark you now, as can be offered. Conscience now, is it not ?

Gow. 'T is certain there 's not a boy left of the cowardly rascals that ran from the battle at this slaughter : besides, they have burn'd away all that was in the king's tent ; where the king, most worthily, hath caused every soldier his prisoner's throat. O, 't is a gallant king !

Flu. Ay, he was born at Monmouth, captain. What call you the town's name where Alexander the Great was born ?

Gow. Alexander the great.

Flu. Why, I pray you, is not pig, great ?

I was not angry since I came to France

Enter MONTJOY.

ere comes the herald of the French, my eyes are humbler than they us'd to be.

How now ! what means this, herald ? know'st you not a again for ransom ?

No, great king,
see for charitable licence,
ay wander o'er this bloody field,
tr dead, and then to bury them ;
nobles from our common men ;
of our princes (woe the while !)
d and sank'd in mercenary blood ;
vulgar trench their peasant limbs (princes) and their wounded steeds deep in gore, and, with wild rage, their armed heels at their dead masters,
me twice. O, give us leave, great king,

To view the field in safety, and dispose
Of their dead bodies.

K. Hen. I tell thee truly, herald,
I know not if the day be ours, or no ;
For yet a many of your horsemen peer,
And gallop o'er the field.

Mont. The day is yours.

K. Hen. Praised be God, and not our strength, for it !
What is this castle call'd that stands hard by ?

Mont. They call it Agincourt.

K. Hen. Then call we this the field of Agincourt, Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, an 't please your majesty, and your great-uncle Edward the plack prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most prave pattle here in France.

K. Hen. They did, Fluellen.

Flu. Your majesty says very true : if your majesties is remembered of it, the Welshmen did goot service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps ; which, your majesty knows, to this hour is an honourable pudge of the service ; and, I do believe, your majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon Saint Tavy's day.

K. Hen. I wear it for a memorable honour :

For I am Welsh, you know, good cuntryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your majesty's Welsh blood out of your pody, I can tell you that : Got pless it and preserve it, as long as it pleases his grace, and his majesty too !

K. Hen. Thanks, good my cuntryman.

Flu. By Cheshu, I am your majesty's cuntryman,
I care not who know it ; I will confess it to all the 'orld :
I need not to be ashamed of your majesty, praised be God, so long as your majesty is an honest man.

K. Hen. God keep me so !—Our heralds go with him ;
Bring me just notice of the numbers dead
On both our parts.—Call yonder fellow hither.

[Points to WILLIAMS. Exeunt MONTJOY and others.]

Eze. Soldier, you must come to the king.

K. Hen. Soldier, why wearest thou that glove in thy cap ?

Will. An 't please your majesty, 't is the gage of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.

K. Hen. An Englishman ?

Will. An 't please your majesty, a rascal that swaggered with me last night : who, if a live and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' the ear : or, if I can see my glove in his cap, (which he swore, as he was a soldier, he would wear if alive,)
I will strike it out soundly.

K. Hen. What think you, captain Fluellen ? is it fit this soldier keep his oath ?

Flu. He is a craven and a villain else, an 't please your majesty, in my conscience.

K. Hen. It may be his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as goot a gentleman as the tevil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary, look your grace, that he keep his vow and his oath : if he be perjured, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain, and a Jack sauce, as ever his plack shoe trod upon Got's ground and his earth, in my conscience, la.

K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meet'st the fellow.

Will. So I will, my liege, as I live.

K. Hen. Who servest thou under ?

Will. Under captain Gower, my liege.

Flu. Gower is a goot captain ; and is goot knowledge and literature in the wars.

K. Hen. Call him hither to me, soldier

Will. I will, my liege.

[Exit.]

K. Hen. Here, Fluellen ; wear thou this favour for me, and stick it in thy cap: When Alençon and myself were down together, I plucked this glove from his helm; if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alençon and an enemy to our person; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost me love.

Flu. Your grace does me as great honours as can be desired in the hearts of his subjects: I would fain see the man, that has but two legs, that shall find himself aggrieved at this glove, that is all; but I would fain see it once: an please Got of his grace that I might see it.

K. Hen. Knowest thou Gower?

Flu. He is my dear friend, an please you.

K. Hen. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent.

Flu. I will fetch him.

[Exit.

K. Hen. My lord of Warwick, and my brother Gloster,

Follow Fluellen closely at the heels:

The glove which I have given him for a favour

May, haply, purchase him a box o' the ear;

It is the soldier's; I, by bargain, should Wear it myself. Follow, good cousin Warwick:

If that the soldier strike him, (as, I judge

By his blunt bearing he will keep his word,)

Some sudden mischief may arise of it;

For I do know Fluellen valiant,

And, touch'd with cholera, hot as gunpowder,

And quickly will return an injury:

Follow, and see there be no harm between them.—

Go you with me, uncle of Exeter. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Before King Henry's Pavilion.

Enter GOWER and WILLIAMS.

Will. I warrant it is to knight you, captain.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. Got's will and his pleasure, captain, I peseech you now, come apace to the king: there is more goot toward you, peradventure, than is in your knowledge to dream of.

Will. Sir, know you this glove?

Flu. Know the glove? I know, the glove is a glove.

Will. I know this; and thus I challenge it.

[Strikes him.

Flu. 'Shlud, an arrant traitor as any 's in the universal 'orld, or in France, or in England.

Gow. How now, sir? you villain!

Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn?

Flu. Stand away, captain Gower; I will give treason his payment into plows, I warrant you.

Will. I am no traitor.

Flu. That's a lie in thy throat.—I charge you in his majesty's name, apprehend him; he's a friend of the duke Alençon's.

Enter WARWICK and GLOSTER.

War. How now, how now! what's the matter?

Flu. My lord of Warwick, here is (praised be Got for it!) a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day. Here is his majesty.

Enter KING HENRY and EXETER.

K. Hen. How now! what's the matter?

Flu. My liege, here is a villain, and a traitor, that, look your grace, has struck the glove which your majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon.

Will. My liege, this was my glove; here is the fellow of it: and he that I gave it to in change promised to wear it in his cap; I promised to strike him, if he did: I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word.

Flu. Your majesty hear now, (saving your majesty's manhood,) what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is: I hope your majesty is peare me and witness, and will avouchment, that glove of Alençon, that your majesty is your conscience now.

K. Hen. Give me thy glove, soldier! I the fellow of it.

'T was I, indeed, thou promised'st to strike And thou hast given me most bitter terms.

ACT V.

CHORUS.

to those that have not read the story, prompt them : and of such as have,
say them to admit the excuse numbers, and due course of things, not in their huge and proper life sented. Now we bear the king dains : grant him there ; there seen, away upon your winged thoughts,
e sea : Behold, the English beach
e flood with men, with wives, and boys, ests and claps out-voice the deep-mouth'd na,
e a mighty whistler 'fore the king,
prepare his way : so let him land ;
only, see him set on to London.
pace hath thought, that even now imagine him upon Blackheath :
t his lowls desire him to have borne
t helmet, and his bended sword,
, through the city : he forbids it,
from vainness and self-glorious pride ;
t trophy, signal, and ostent,

Quite from himself, to God. But now behold,
In the quick forge and working-house of thought,
How London doth pour out her citizens !
The mayor, and all his brethren, in best sort,—
Like to the senators of the antique Rome,
With the plebeians swarming at their heels,—
Go forth, and fetch their conquering Cæsar in :
As, by a lower but by loving likelihood,
Were now the general of our gracious empress
(As, in good time, he may) from Ireland coming,
Bringing rebellion broached on his sword,
How many would the peaceful city quit
To welcome him ! much more (and much more cause)
Did they this Harry. Now in London place him ;
(As yet the lamentation of the French
Invites the king of England's stay at home :
The emperor's coming in behalf of France,
To order peace between them ;) and omit
All the occurrences, whatever chanc'd,
Till Harry's back-return again to France :
There must we bring him ; and myself have play'd
The interim, by remembering you 't is past.
Then brook abridgment ; and your eyes advance
After your thoughts, straight back again to France.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

ay, that's right ; but why wear you your

Trojan,

am qualmish at the smell of leek.

essoch you heartily, scurvy, lousy knave, at and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, this leek ; because, look you, you do not love it, nor your affections, and your appetites, and your digestions, does not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwallader and all his goats.

Flu. There is one goat for you. [Strikes him.]
Will you be so goot, scald knave, as eat it ?

Pist. Base Trojan, thou shalt die.

Flu. You say very true, scald knave, when Got's will is : I will desire you to live in the mean time, and eat your victuals ; come, there is sauce for it. [Striking him again.] You called me yesterday, mountain-squire, but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you, fall to ; if you can mock a leek, you can eat a leek.

Gow. Enough, captain ; you have astonished him.*

Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will peat his pate four days :—Bite, I pray you ; it is goot for your green wound, and your ploody coxcomb.

Pist. Must I bite ?

Flu. Yes, certainly ; and out of doubt, and out of questions too, and ambiguities.

Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge ; I eat—and eat—I swear.

Flu. Eat, I pray you : Will you have some more sauce to your leek ? there is not enough leek to swear by.

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel ; thou dost see, I eat.

Flu. Much goot do you, scald knave, heartily. Nay,

* Astonished him—stunned him with the blow : astonished is still a pugilistic term, in the precise sense in which Gower uses it.

pray you, throw none away; the skin is goot for your proken coxcomb. When you take occasions too see leeks hereafter, I pray you, mock at 'em; that is all.

Pist. Good.

Flu. Ay, leeks is goot:—Hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a groat!

Flu. Yes, verily, and in truth, you shall take it; or I have another leek in my pocket, which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy groat, in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you anything, I will pay you in cudgels; you shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God be wi' you, and keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.]

Pist. All hell shall stir for this.

Gow. Go, go; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition,—begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valour, and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words? I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel: you find it otherwise; and henceforth, let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. Fare ye well. [Exit.]

Pist. Doth Fortune play the huswife with me now? News have I that my Nell is dead i' the spital Of malady of France; And there my rendezvous is quite cut off. Old I do wax; and from my weary limbs Honour is cudgell'd. Well, hawd I'll turn, And something lean to cutpurse of quick hand. To England will I steal, and there I'll steal: And patches will I get unto these cudgell'd scars, And swear I got them in the Gallia wars. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Troyes, in Champagne. An Apartment in the French King's Palace.

Enter at one door, KING HENRY, BEDFORD, GLOSTER, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and other Lords; at another, the French KING, QUEEN ISABEL, the PRINCESS KATHARINE, Lords, Ladies, &c., the DUKE OF BURGUNDY, and his Train.

K. Hen. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met! Unto our brother France, and to our sister, Health and fair time of day;—joy and good wishes To our most fair and princely cousin Katharine; And (as a branch and member of this royalty, By whom this great assembly is contriv'd) We do salute you, duke of Burgundy;— And, princes French, and peers, health to you all!

Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold your face, Most worthy brother England; fairly met:— So are you, princes English, every one.

Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England, Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting, As we are now glad to behold your eyes; Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them Against the French, that met them in their bent, The fatal balls of murdering basilisks: The venom of such looks, we fairly hope, Have lost their quality; and that this day Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love.

K. Hen. To cry amen to that, thus we appear.

Q. Isa. You English princes all, I do salute you.

Bur. My duty to you both, on equal love, Great kings of France and England! That I have labour'd

With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeavours, To bring your most imperial majesties Unto this bar and royal interview, Your mightiness on both parts best can witness. Since then my office hath so far prevail'd

That face to face, and royal eye to eye, You have congregated; let it not disgrace me. If I demand, before this royal view, What rub, or what impediment, there is, Why that the naked, poor, and mangled peasant, Dear nurse of arts, plenty, and joyful births, Should not, in this best garden of the world, Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage? Alas! she hath from France too long been chace, And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps, Corrupting in its own fertility.

Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart, Unpruned dies: her hedges even-pleach'd, Like prisoners wildly overgrown with hair Put forth disorder'd twigs; her fallow leas The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory, Doth root upon; while that the coulter rusts, That should deracinate such savagery: The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth The freckled cowslip, burnet, and green clover, Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank, Conceives by idleness; and nothing teems But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies, but Losing both beauty and utility:

And as our vineyards, fallows, meads, and best Defective in their natures, grow to wildness; Even so our houses, and ourselves, and children Have lost, or do not learn, for want of time, The sciences that should become our country; But grow, like savages,—as soldiers will, That nothing do but meditate on blood,— To swearing, and stern looks, diffus'd attire, And everything that seems unnatural.

Which to reduce into our former favour* You are assembled; and my speech entreats That I may know the let, why gentle peace Should not expel these inconveniences, And bless us with her former qualities.

K. Hen. If, duke of Burgundy, you would that Whose want gives growth to the imperfections Which you have cited, you must buy that peace With full accord to all our just demands; Whose tenors and particular effects You have, enschedul'd briefly, in your hands.

Bur. The king hath heard them; to the which There is no answer made.

K. Hen. Well, then, the peace Which you before so urg'd, lies in his answer.

Fr. King. I have but with a cursory eye O'er-glanc'd the articles: pleaseth your grace To appoint some of your council presently To sit with us once more, with better heed To re-survey them, we will, suddenly, Pass our accept and peremptory answer.

K. Hen. Brother, we shall.—Go, uncle Earl, And brother Clarence,—and you, brother Gloucester, Warwick,—and Huntington,—go with the king, And take with you free power to ratify, Augment or alter, as your wisdoms best Shall see advantageable for our dignity, Anything in, or out of, our demands; And we'll consign thereto.—Will you, fair sister, Go with the princes, or stay here with us?

Q. Isa. Our gracious brother, I will go soon. Haply a woman's voice may do some good, When articles too nicely urg'd be stood on.

K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine here. She is our capital demand, compris'd Within the fore rank of our articles.

Q. Isa. She hath good leave.

[Exeunt all but HENRY, and her Grace.]

K. Hen. Fair Katharine, and so vnuchsafe to teach a soldier terms, ill enter at a lady's ear,

his love-suit to her gentle heart?
four majesty shall mock at me; I cannot England.

O fair Katharine, if you will love me with your French heart, I will be glad to hear it brokenly with your English tongue. Do e, Kate?

ardonnez moy, I cannot tell vat is—like me.
An angel is like you, Kate; and you are rel.

me dit-il? que je suis semblable à les anges?
ay, crayment, (sauf vostre grace,) ainsi dit-il.

I said so, dear Katharine; and I must not firm it.

bon Dieu! les langues des hommes sont tromperies.

What says she, fair one? that the tongues full of deceits?

bay; dat de tongues of de mans is be full of a is de princess.

The princess is the better Englishwoman.
ste, my wooing is fit for thy understanding:
thou canst speak no better English; for, if st, thou wouldst find me such a plain king, wouldst think I had sold my farm to buy my know no ways to mince it in love, but say—I love you: then, if you urge me fur-say—Do you in faith? I wear out my me your answer: i' faith, do; and so clap a bargain: How say you, lady?

auf vostre honneur, me understand well.

Marry, if you would put me to verses, or to our sake, Kate, why you undid me: for the e neither words nor measure; and for the e no strength in measure, yet a reasonable strength. If I could win a lady at leap-vaulting into my saddle with my armour on under the correction of bragging be it spoken, quickly leap into a wife. Or, if I might my love, or bound my horse for her favours, on like a butcher, and sit like a jack-an-off: but, before God, Kate, I cannot look e gasp out my eloquence, nor I have no custation; only downright oaths, which I ill surged, nor never break for urging. If love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose worth sun-burning, that never looks in his re of anything he sees there, let thine eye be I speak to thee plain soldier: If thou canst this, take me: if not, to say to thee—that I e true: but—for thy love, by the Lord, no;

see too. And while thou livest, dear Kate, e of plain and uncoined constancy; for he st do thee right, because he hath not the in other places: for these fellows of infinite can rhyme themselves into ladies' favours, says reason themselves out again. What!

but a prater; a rhyme is but a ballad. A ll fall; a straight back will stoop; a black turn white; a curled pate will grow bald;
will wither; a full eye will wax hollow;
heart, Kate, is the sun and the moon; or,
en, and not the moon; for it shines bright, hangs, but keeps his course truly. If thou ashest a one, take me: And take me, take a e a soldier, take a king: And what sayest e my love? speak, my fair, and fairly, I it possible dat I sould love de enemy of

No; it is not possible you should love the ance, Kate: but, in loving me, you should nd of France; for I love France so well that I will not part with a village of it; I will have it all mine; and, Kate, when France is mine, and I am yours, then yours is France, and you are mine.

Kath. I cannot tell vat is dat.

K. Hen. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French; which, I am sure, will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck hardly to be shook off. Quand j'ay la possession de France et quand vous avez la possession de moy, (let me see, what then? Saint Dennis be my speed!) donc covre est France, et vous estes mienne. It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom as to speak so much more French: I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Sauf vostre honneur, le François que vous parlez est meilleur que l'Anglois lequel je parle.

K. Hen. No, 'faith, is 't not Kate: but thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one. But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English? Canst thou love me?

Kath. I cannot tell.

K. Hen. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate?
I'll ask them. Come, I know thou lovest me: and at night when you come into your closet, you'll question this gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will, to her, dispraise those parts in me that you love with your heart: but, good Kate, mock me mercifully;
the rather, gentle princess, because I love thee cruelly.
If ever thou be'st mine, Kate, (as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt,) I get thee with scambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-breeder: Shall not thou and I, between Saint Dennis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard? shall we not? what sayest thou, my fair flower-de-luce?

Kath. I do not know dat.

K. Hen. No; 't is hereafter to know, but now to promise: do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy; and, for my English moiety, take the word of a king and a bachelor.
How answer you, la plus belle Katharine du monde, mon tres chere et divine déesse?

Kath. Your majesté 'ave fausse French enough to deceive de most sage damoiselle dat is en France.

K. Hen. Now, fie upon my false French! By mine honour, in true English, I love thee, Kate; by which honour I dare not swear thou lovest me; yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my visage. Now besrew my father's ambition! he was thinking of civil wars when he got me; therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that when I come to woo ladies I fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax the better I shall appear: my comfort is, that old age, that ill layer-up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face: thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better; And therefore tell me, most fair Katharine, will you have me? Put off your maiden blushes; avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress; take me by the hand, and say—Harry of England, I am thine: which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal but I will tell thee aloud—England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine; who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows.
Come, your answer in broken music; for thy voice is music, and thy English broken: therefore, queen of all, Katharine, break thy mind to me in broken English,
Wilt thou have me?

Kath. Dat is as it shall please de roy mon pere.

K. Hen. Nay, it will please him well, Kate; it shall please him, Kate.

Kath. Den it sall also content me.

K. Hen. Upon that I kiss your hand, and I call you my queen.

Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez; ma foy, je ne veux point que vous abaissez vostre grandeur, en baisant la main d'une vostre indigne serviteure; excusez moy, je vous supplie, mon tres puissant seigneur.

K. Hen. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.

Kath. Les dames, et damoiselles, pour estre baissés devant leur nopces, il n'est pas le coûtume de France.

K. Hen. Madam my interpreter, what says she?

Alice. Dat it is not be de fashion pour les ladies of France,—I cannot tell what is baiser, en English.

K. Hen. To kiss.

Alice. Your majesty entendre better que moy.

K. Hen. It is not a fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say?

Alice. Ouy, vrayment.

K. Hen. O Kate, nice customs curt'sy to great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined within the weak list of a country's fashion; we are the makers of manners, Kate; and the liberty that follows our places stops the mouths of all find-faults; as I will do yours, for upholding the nice fashion of your country in denying me a kiss: therefore, patiently, and yielding. [Kissing her.] You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate; there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them, than in the tongues of the French council: and they should sooner persuade Harry of England than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father.

Enter the French King and Queen, Burgundy, Bedford, Gloster, Exeter, Westmoreland, and other French and English Lords.

Bur. God save your majesty! my royal cousin, teach you our princess English?

K. Hen. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her; and that is good English.

Bur. Is she not apt?

K. Hen. Our tongue is rough, coz; and my condition is not smooth: so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her, that he will appear in his true likeness.

Bur. Pardon the frankness of my mirth, if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her, you must make a circle: if conjure up love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked and blind: Can you blame her, then, being a maid yet rosed over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign to.

K. Hen. Yet they do wink, and yield; as love is blind, and enforces.

Bur. They are then excused, my lord, when they see not what they do.

K. Hen. Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent winking.

Bur. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for maids, well summered and warm kept, are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though they have their eyes; and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

K. Hen. This moral ties me over to the summer; and so I shall catch the fly, yet the latter end, and she must be blind too.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS

THE First Part of Henry VI. was originally printed, under that title, in the folio collection of 1623. Upon the authority, then, of the editors of that edition of "Mr. William Shakespeare's Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies, published according to the true original Copies," this drama properly finds a place in every modern edition of our poet's works. But since the time of Malone the English critics have agreed that this play is spurious; and Drake, without hesitation, refers to what Shakspeare's friends and editors denominated the Second and Third Parts of 'Henry VI.' as the First and Second Parts; and recommends all future editors, if they print this first play at all, to give it only in an Appendix. If we were in the habit, then, of taking upon trust what the previous editors of Shakspeare have authoritatively held, we should either reject this play altogether, or, if we printed it, we should inform our readers that "the hand of Shakspeare is nowhere visible throughout." We cannot consent to follow either of these courses. We print the play, and we do not tell the reader that Shakspeare never touched it. The question of the authenticity of the three parts of 'Henry VI.' is a very large one, embracing many details. In this edition we are compelled to refer the reader to our Essay on the subject, which accompanies these plays in our 'Pictorial' and 'Library' editions.

In the humble house of Shakspeare's boyhood there was, in all probability, to be found a thick squat folio volume, then some thirty years printed, in which might be read, "what misery, what murder, and what execrable plagues this famous region hath suffered by the division and dissention of the renowned houses of Lancaster and York." This book was 'Hall's Chronicle.' With the local and family associations that must have belonged to his early years, the subject of the four dramas that relate to the dissention of the houses of Lancaster and York, or rather the subject of this one great drama in four parts, must have irresistibly presented itself to the mind of Shakspeare, as one which he was especially qualified to throw into the form of a chronicle history. It was a task peculiarly fitted for the young poet during the first five years of his connexion with the theatre. Historical dramas, in the rudest form, presented unequalled attractions to the audiences who flocked to the rising stage. He had not here to invent a plot; or to aim at the unity of action, of time, and of place, which the more refined critics of his day held to be essential to tragedy. The form of a chronicle history might appear to require little beyond a poetical exposition of the most attractive facts of the real Chronicles. It is in this spirit, we think, that Shakspeare approached the execution of the First Part of 'Henry VI.' It appears to us, also, that in that very early performance he in some degree held his genius in subordination to the necessity of executing his task, rather with reference to the character of his audience and the general nature of his subject than for the fulfilment of his own aspirations as a poet. There was before him one of two courses. He might have chosen, as the greater number of his contemporaries chose, to consider the dominions of poetry and of common sense to be far sundered; and, unconscious or doubtful of the force of simplicity, he might have resolved, with them, to substitute what would more unquestionably gratify a rude popular taste,—the force of extravagance. On the other hand, it was open to him to transfer to the dramatic shape the spirit-stirring recitals of the old chronicle writers; in whose narratives, and especially in that portion of them in which they make their characters speak, there is a manly and straightforward earnestness which in itself not seldom becomes poetical. Shakspeare chose this latter course. When we begin to study the 'Henry VI.,' we find in the First Part that the action does not appear to progress to a catastrophe; that the author lingers about the details, as one who was called upon to exhibit an entire series of events rather than the most dramatic portions of them;—they are the alternations of success and loss, and loss and success, till we somewhat doubt to which side to assign the victory. The characters are firmly drawn, but without any very subtle distinctions,—and their sentiments and actions appear occasionally inconsistent, or at any rate not guided by a determined purpose in the writer. But although the effect may be, to a certain extent, undramatic, there is impressed upon the whole performance a wonderful air of truth. Much of this must have resulted from the extraordinary quality of the poet's mind, which could tear off all the flimsy conventional disguises of individual character, and penetrate the real moving principle of events with a rare acuteness, and a rarer impartiality. In our view, that whole portion of the First Part of 'Henry VI.' which deals with the character and actions of Joan of Arc is a remarkable example of this power in Shakspeare. He knew that, with all the influence of her supernatural pretension, this extraordinary woman could not have swayed the destinies of kingdoms, and moulded princes and warriors to her will, unless she had been a person of very rare natural endowments. She was represented by the Chroniclers as a mere virago, a bold and shameless trull, a monster, a witch;—because they adopted the vulgar view of her character,—the view, in truth, of those to whom she was opposed. They were rough soldiers, with all the virtues and all the vices of their age; the creatures of brute force; the champions, indeed, of chivalry, but with the brand upon them of all the selfish passions with which the highest deeds of chivalry were too invariably associated. The English Chroniclers, in all that regards the delineation of characters and manners, give us abundant materials upon which we may form an estimate of actions, and motives, and instruments; but they do not show us the instruments moving in their own forms of vitality; they do not lay bare their motives; and hence we have no real key to their actions. Froissart is, perhaps, the only contemporary writer who gives us real portraits of the men of mail. But Shakspeare marshalled them upon his stage, in all their rude might, their coarse ambition, their low jealousies, their factious hatreds,—mixed up with their thirst for glory, their indomitable courage, their warm friendships, their tender natural affections, their love of country. This is the truth which Shakspeare substituted for the vague delineations of the old stage.

SCENE,—PARTLY IN ENGLAND, AND PARTLY IN FRANCE.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Westminster Abbey.

Corpses of KING HENRY V. discovered, late; attended on by the DUKES OF BEDFORD, and EXETER; the EARL OF WARWICK, BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, Heralds, &c.
O, be the heavens with black, yield day to night!
Waiting change of times and states,
Or crystal tresses in the sky;
Or scourge the bad revolving stars,

That have consented<sup>a</sup> unto Henry's death!
King Henry the fifth, too famous to live long!
England ne'er lost a king of so much worth.
Glo. England ne'er had a king until his time.
Virtue he had, deserving to command:
His brandish'd sword did blind men with his beams;
His arms spread wider than a dragon's wings:
His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful fire,
More dazzled and drove back his enemies,

<sup>a</sup> Consented. Probably the word should be spelt concented. To concent is to be in harmony—to act together.

Than mid-day sun, fierce bent against their faces.
What should I say? his deeds exceed all speech:
He ne'er lift up his hand but conquered.

Exe. We mourn in black: Why mourn we not in blood?

Henry is dead, and never shall revive:
Upon a wooden coffin we attend;
And death's dishonourable victory
We with our stately presence glorify,
Like captives bound to a triumphant car.
What! shall we curse the planets of mishap,
That plotted thus our glory's overthrow?
Or shall we think the subtle-witted French
Conjurers and sorcerers, that, afraid of him,
By magic verses have contriv'd his end?

Win. He was a king bless'd of the King of kings.
So dreadful will not be, as was his sight.
The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought:
The church's prayers made him so prosperous.

Glo. The church! where is it? Had not churchmen pray'd,

His thread of life had not so soon decay'd;
None do you like but an effeminate prince,
Whom, like a schoolboy, you may over-awe.

Win. Gloster, what'er we like, thou art protector;
And lookest to command the prince and realm.
Thy wife is proud; she holdeth thee in awe,
More than God or religious churchmen may.

Glo. Name not religion, for thou lov'st the flesh;
And ne'er throughout the year to church thou go'st,
Except it be to pray against thy foes.

Bed. Cease, cease these jars, and rest your minds in peace!

Let's to the altar:—Heralds, wait on us:—
Instead of gold, we'll offer up our arms;
Since arms avail not, now that Henry's dead.
Posterity, await for wretched years,
When at their mothers' moisten'd eyes babes shall suck;
Our isle be made a nourish* of salt tears,
And none but women left to wail the dead.
Henry the fifth! thy ghost I invoke;
Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils!
Combat with adverse planets in the heavens!
A far more glorious star thy soul will make,
Than Julius Cæsar, or bright—

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My honourable lords, health to you all!
Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfiture:
Guienne, Champagne, Rheims, Orleans,
Paris, Guysors, Poitiers, are all quite lost.

Bed. What say'st thou, man, before dead Henry's corse?
Speak softly; or the loss of those great towns
Will make him burst his lead, and rise from death.

Glo. Is Paris lost? is Rouen yielded up?
If Henry were recall'd to life again,
These news would cause him once more yield the ghost.

Exe. How were they lost? what treachery was us'd?

Mess. No treachery; but want of men and money.
Amongst the soldiers this is muttered,—
That here you maintain several factions;
And, whilst a field should be despatch'd and fought,
You are disputing of your generals.
One would have ling'ring wars, with little cost;
Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings;
A third man thinks, without expense at all,
By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd.
Awake, awake, English nobility!
Let not sloth dim your honours, new-begot:
Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms;
Of England's coat one half is cut away.

Nourish. Nourlee, nourish, nursh, are the same words

Exe. Were our tears wanting to this funeral,
These tidings would call forth her flowing tides.

Bed. Me they concern; regent I am of France.
Give me my steeld coat, I'll fight for France.
Away with these disgraceful wailing robes!
Wounds will I lend the French, instead of eyes,
To weep their intermissive miseries.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. Lords, view these letters, full of last chance:

France is revolted from the English quite;
Except some petty towns of no import:
The dauphin Charles is crowned king in Rheims,
The bastard of Orleans with him is join'd;
Reignier, duke of Anjou, doth take his part;
The duke of Alençon fieth to his side.

Exe. The dauphin crowned king! all fly to his O, whither shall we fly from this reproach?

Glo. We will not fly, but to our enemies' throats
Bedford, if thou be slack, I'll fight it out.

Bed. Gloster, why doubt'st thou of my forward
An army have I muster'd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is overrun.

Enter a third Messenger.

3 Mess. My gracious lords,—to add to your last Wherewith you now bedew king Henry's beard,
I must inform you of a dismal fight
Betwixt the stout lord Talbot and the French.

Win. What! wherein Talbot overcame? is 't
3 Mess. O, no; wherein lord Talbot was o'ercome

The circumstance I'll tell you more at large.
The tenth of August last, this dreadful lord,
Retiring from the siege of Orleans,
Having full scarce six thousand in his troop,
By three-and-twenty thousand of the French
Was round encompassed and set upon:

No leisure had he to enrank his men;
He wanted pikes to set before his archers;
Instead whereof, sharp stakes, pluck'd out of land,
They pitched in the ground confusedly,
To keep the horsemen off from breaking in.
More than three hours the fight continued;
Where valiant Talbot, above human thought,
Enacted wonders with his sword and lance.
Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durst stand

Here, there, and everywhere, enrag'd he slew:
The French exclaim'd, The devil was in arms;
All the whole army stood amaz'd on him:
His soldiers, spying his undaunted spirit,
A Talbot! a Talbot! cried out amain,
And rush'd into the bowels of the battle.

Here had the conquest fully been seal'd up,
If sir John Fastolf had not play'd the coward;
He, being in the vaward,* (plac'd behind,
With purpose to relieve and follow them,)
Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke.

Hence grew the general wrack and massacre;
Enclosed were they with their enemies:
A base Walloon, to win the dauphin's grace,
Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back;
Whom all France, with their chief assembled state,
Durst not presume to look once in the face.

Bed. Is Talbot slain? then I will slay myself
For living idly here, in pomp and ease,
Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid,
Unto his dastard foemen is betray'd.

3 Mess. O no, he lives; but is took prisoner,
And lord Scales with him, and lord Hungerford.
Most of the rest slaughter'd, or took, likewise.

* Vaward—the van. The explanation of the name such as it is, we give: "When an army is attacked in the rear becomes the rear in its turn, and of course the ransom there is none but I shall pay :

 dauphin headlong from his throne,— shall be the ransom of my friend ;
 r lords I 'll change for one of ours.
 y masters ; to my task will I ;
 France forthwith I am to make,
 great Saint George's feast withal :
 d soldiers with me I will take,
 y deeds shall make all Europe quake.
 o you had need ; for Orleans is besieg'd ;
 army is grown weak and faint :
 Salisbury craveth supply,
 keeps his men from mutiny,
 o few, watch such a multitude.
 ember, lords, your oaths to Henry sworn,
 ill the dauphin utterly,
 in obedience to your yoke.
 remember it ; and here take my leave,
 my preparation. [Exit.]
 o the Tower, with all the haste I can,
 artillery and munition ;
 ill proclaim young Henry king. [Exit.]
 atham will I, where the young king is,
 d his special governor ;
 afety there I 'll best devise. [Exit.]
 hath his place and function to attend :
 ; for me nothing remains.
 ill not be Jack-out-of-office ;
 a Eltham I intend to send,
 defeat stern of public weal.
 [Exit. Scene closes.]

ACT II.—France. Before Orleans.

They are beaten back by the English, with Re-enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, REIGNIER,
 and others.

 ve may this be verified ;
 Samsons, and Goliasses,

It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten !
 Lean raw-bon'd rascals ! who would e'er suppose
 They had such courage and audacity ?
 Char. Let 's leave this town ; for they are hair-brain'd slaves,
 And hunger will enforce them to be more eager :
 Of old I know them ; rather with their teeth
 The walls they 'll tear down than forsake the siege.
 Reig. I think, by some odd gimmicks or device,
 Their arms are set like clocks, still to strike on ;
 Else ne'er could they hold out so as they do.
 By my consent, we 'll even let them alone.
 Alen. Be it so.

Enter the BASTARD of ORLEANS.

Bast. Where 's the prince dauphin ? I have news
 for him.
 Char. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to us.
 Bast. Methinks your looks are sad, your cheer<sup>a</sup> appall'd ;
 Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence ?
 Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand :
 A holy maid hither with me I bring,
 Which, by a vision sent to her from heaven,
 Ordained is to raise this tedious siege,
 And drive the English forth the bounds of France.
 The spirit of deep prophecy she hath,
 Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome ;
 What 's past, and what 's to come, she can descry.
 Speak, shall I call her in ? Believe my words,
 For they are certain and unfaillible.
 Char. Go, call her in : [Exit Bastard] But, first,
 to try her skill,

Reignier, stand thou as dauphin in my place :
 Question her proudly, let thy looks be stern :—
 By this means shall we sound what skill she hath.
 [Retires.]

Enter LA PUCELLE, BASTARD of ORLEANS, and others.

Reig. Fair maid, is 't thou wilt do these wondrous feats ?
 Puc. Reignier, is 't thou that thinkest to beguile me ?
 Where is the dauphin ?—come, come from behind ;
 I know thee well, though never seen before.
 Be not amaz'd, there 's nothing hid from me :
 In private will I talk with thee apart ;—
 Stand back, you lords, and give us leave awhile.
 Reig. She takes upon her bravely at first dash.
 Puc. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's daughter,
 My wit untrain'd in any kind of art.
 Heaven, and our Lady gracious, hath it pleas'd
 To shine on my contemptible estate :
 Lo, whilst I waited on my tender lambs,
 And to sun's parching heat display'd my cheeks,
 God's mother deign'd to appear to me ;
 And, in a vision full of majesty,
 Will'd me to leave my base vocation,
 And free my country from calamity :
 Her id she promis'd and assur'd success :
 In complete glory she reveal'd herself ;
 And, whereas I was black and swart before,
 With those clear rays which she infus'd on me,
 That beauty am I bless'd with which you may see
 Ask me what question thou canst possible,
 And I will answer unpremeditated :
 My courage try by combat, if thou dar'st,
 And thou shalt find that I exceed my sex.
 Resolve<sup>b</sup> on this : Thou shalt be fortunate
 If thou receive me for thy warlike mate.

Char. Thou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms
 Only this proof I 'll of thy valour make,—
 In single combat thou shalt buckle with me :

<sup>a</sup> Cheer—countenance.    <sup>b</sup> Resolve—be firmly persuaded.

And if thou vanquishest thy words are true;
Otherwise I renounce all confidence.

Puc. I am prepar'd: here is my keen-edg'd sword,
Deck'd with fine flower-de-luces on each side;
The which, at Touraine, in Saint Katharine's churchyard,

Out of a great deal of old iron I chose forth.

Char. Then come, o' God's name, I fear no woman.

Puc. And, while I live, I'll ne'er fly from a man.

[They fight, and LA PUCELLE overcomes.]

Char. Stay, stay thy hands; thou art an Amazon,
And fightest with the sword of Deborah.

Puc. Christ's mother helps me, else I were too weak.

Char. Whoe'er helps thee, 't is thou that must help
me:

Impatiently I burn with thy desire:
My heart and hands thou hast at once subdued.

Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so,

Let me thy servant, and not sovereign, be;

'T is the French dauphin sueth to thee thus.

Puc. I must not yield to any rites of love,

For my profession's sacred from above:

When I have chased all thy foes from hence,

Then will I think upon a recompense.

Char. Meantime, look gracious on thy prostrate thrall.

Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk.

Alen. Doubtless, he shrives this woman to her smock;
Else ne'er could he so long protract his speech.

Reig. Shall we disturb him, since he keeps no mean?

Alen. He may mean more than we poor men do know:

These women are shrewd tempters with their tongues.

Reig. My lord, where are you? what devise you on?
Shall we give over Orleans, or no?

Puc. Why, no, I say, distrustful recreants!

Fight till the last gasp; I will be your guard.

Char. What she says I'll confirm; we'll fight it out.

Puc. Assign'd am I to be the English scourge.

This night the siege assuredly I'll raise:

Expect Saint Martin's summer,<sup>a</sup> halcyon days,

Since I have entered into these wars.

Glory is like a circle in the water,

Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself,

Till, by broad spreading, it disperse to nought.

With Henry's death the English circle ends;

Dispersed are the glories it included.

Now am I like that proud insulting ship

Which Cæsar and his fortune bare at once.

Char. Was Mahomet inspired with a dove?

Thou with an eagle art inspired then.

Helen, the mother of great Constantine,

Nor yet Saint Philip's daughters, were like thee.

Bright star of Venus, fall'n down on the earth,

How may I reverently worship thee enough?

Alen. Leave off delays, and let us raise the siege.

Reig. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honours;

Drive them from Orleans, and be immortaliz'd.

Char. Presently we'll try:—Come, let's away about it:

No prophet will I trust, if she prove false. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—London. Hill before the Tower.

Enter, at the gates, the DUKE OF GLOSTER, with his Serving-men in blue coats.

Glo. I am come to survey the Tower this day:
Since Henry's death, I fear there is conveyance.<sup>b</sup>
Where be these warders, that they wait not here?
Open the gates; 't is Gloster that calls. [Servants knock.]

1 Ward. [Within.] Who 's there that periously?

1 Serv. It is the noble duke of Gloster.

2 Ward. [Within.] Whoe'er he be, you let in.

1 Serv. Villains, answer you so the lord!

1 Ward. [Within.] The Lord protect answer him:

We do no otherwise than we are will'd.

Glo. Who willed you? or whose will stand?

There's none protector of the realm but I.

Break up the gates, I'll be your warrant!

Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill groom?

Servants rush at the Tower gates. Enter

WOODVILLE, the Lieutenant.

Wood. [Within.] What noise is this? have we here?

Glo. Lieutenant, is it you whose voice I Open the gates; here's Gloster that would!

Wood. [Within.] Have patience, ne
may not open;

The cardinal of Winchester forbids:
From him I have express commandment,

That thou, nor none of thine, shall be let in.

Glo. Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest he Arrogant Winchester? that haughty prelat!

Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne'er con-sider'd?

Thou art no friend to God, or to the king:

Open the gates, or I'll shut thee out short!

1 Serv. Open the gates unto the lord pro-
Or we'll burst them open, if that you come!

Enter WINCHESTER, attended by a train in tawny coats.

Win. How now, ambitious Humphrey? this?

Glo. Peel'd<sup>a</sup> priest, dost thou comma-shut out?

Win. I do, thou most usurping proditor
And not protector of the king or realm.

Glo. Stand back, thou manifest conspirer!
Thou that contriv'dst to murder our dead
king!

Thou that giv'st whores indulgences to sin,
I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's robes!

If thou proceed in this thy insolence,
I'll have thee hang'd!

Win. Nay, stand thou back, I will not
This be Damascus, be thou curs'd Cain,
To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt!

Glo. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive
Thy scarlet robes, as a child's bearing cloth,
I'll use, to carry thee out of this place.

Win. Do what thou dar'st; I heard the king's voice!

Glo. What! am I dar'd, and bearded?
Draw, men, for all this privileged place;

Blue-coats to tawny-coats. Priest, beware
[GLOSTER and his men attack]

I mean to tug it, and to cuff you soundly
Under my feet I stamp thy cardinal's hat!

In spite of pope, or dignities of church, Here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and down!

Win. Gloster, thou 'lt answer this before the law!

Glo. Winchester goose! I cry—a rope about thy neck!

Now beat them hence: Why do you let Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's clothing!

Out, tawny-coats!—out, scarlet hypocrites!
[Exit Gloster.]

Here a great tumult. In the midst of Mayor of London, and Officers.

May. Fie, lords! that you, being superiors,
Thus contumeliously should break the peace!

the first murder.

Peace, mayor; thou know'st little of my wrongs.
 Jealous, that regards nor God nor king,
 dost restrain'd the Tower to his use.
 Here 's Gloster, too, a foe to citizens;
 still motions war, and never peace,
 ring your free purses with large fines;
 as to overthrow religion,
 as is protector of the realm;
 had have armour here out of the Tower, himself king, and suppress the prince.
 will not answer thee with words, but blows.

[Here they skirmish again.]

Nought rests for me, in this tumultuous strife, like open proclamation:—
 never as loud as e'er thou canst cry.
 All manner of men, assembled here in arms against God's peace and the king's, we charge command you, in his highness' name, to repair to rural dwelling-places; and not to wear, handle, any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward,
 on pain of death.
 Cardinal, I 'll be no breaker of the law:
 shall meet, and break our minds at large.
 Gloster, we 'll meet; to thy dear cost, be sure:
 my blood I will have for this day's work.
 I 'll call for clubs, if you will not away:—
 mine is more haughty than the devil.
 Mayor, farewell: thou dost but what thou mayst.
 Abominable Gloster! guard thy head;
 and to have it, ere long. [Exeunt.]
 See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart.—
 O! that nobles should such stomachs bear!
 fight not once in forty year. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—France. Before Orleans.

On the walls, the Master-Gunner and his Son.
 Ma. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieg'd,
 the English have the suburbs won.
 Father, I know; and oft have shot at them, unfortunate, I miss'd my aim.
 Ma. But now thou shalt not. Be thou rul'd by
 me:
 Master-gunner am I of this town;
 and I must do to procure me grace.
 My espials* have inform'd me,
 English, in the suburbs close trench'd, digt a secret grate of iron bars to the tower, to overpeer the city;
 we discover how, with most advantage,
 we may see us, with shot, or with assault.
 I see this inconvenience, and ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd;
 yet even these three days have I watch'd and see them. Now, boy, do thou watch, and stay no longer.
 If 'st any, run and bring me word;
 I shall find me at the governor's. [Exit.]
 Father, I warrant you; take you no care;
 I will trouble you if I may spy them.

Enter an upper chamber of a tower, the LORDS
 GUY AND TALBOT, SIR WILLIAM GLANS-
 DALE, SIR THOMAS GARGRAVE, and others.

Glansdale, my life, my joy, again return'd!
 how thus handled, being prisoner?
 What means gott'st thou to be releas'd?
 I prithee, on this turret's top.

* Espials—spies.

Tal. The duke of Bedford had a prisoner,
 Called the brave lord Ponton de Santrailles;
 For him was I exchange'd and ransomed.
 But with a baser man of arms by far,
 Once, in contempt, they would have harter'd me;
 Which I, disdainingly, scorn'd; and craved death,
 Rather than I would be so pil'd-esteem'd.*
 In fine, redeem'd I was as I desir'd.
 But, O! the treacherous Fastolfe wounds my heart!
 Whom with my bare fists I would execute,
 If I now had him brought into my power.

Sal. Yet tell'st thou not how thou wert entertain'd

Tal. With scoffs, and scorns, and contumelious taunts.

In open market-place produc'd they me,
 To be a public spectacle to all:
 Here, said they, is the terror of the French,
 The scarecrow that affrights our children so
 Then broke I from the officers that led me;
 And with my nails digg'd stones out of the ground,
 To hurl at the beholders of my shame.
 My grisly countenance made others fly;
 None durst come near, for fear of sudden death.
 In iron walls they deem'd me not secure;
 So great fear of my name 'mongst them was spread,
 That they suppos'd I could rend bars of steel,
 And spurn in pieces posts of adamant:
 Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had,
 That walk'd about me every minute-while;
 And if I did but stir out of my bed,
 Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you endur'd,
 But we will be reveng'd sufficiently.

Now it is supper-time in Orleans:
 Here, through this grate, I count each one,
 And view the Frenchmen how they fortify;
 Let us look in, the sight will much delight thee.
 Sir Thomas Gargrave, and sir William Glansdale.
 Let me have your express opinions,
 Where is best place to make our battery next.

Gar. I think, at the north gate; for there stand lord's.

Glansdale. And I, here, at the bulwark of the bridge.

Tal. For aught I see, this city must be famish'd
 Or with light skirmishes enfeebled.

[Shot from the town. SAL. and GAR. fall.]

Sal. O Lord, have mercy on us, wretched sinners!

Gar. O Lord, have mercy on me, woeful man!

Tal. What chance is this that suddenly hath cross'd us?—

Speak, Salisbury; at least, if thou canst speak;
 How far'st thou, mirror of all martial men?
 One of thy eyes, and thy cheek's side, struck off!—
 Accurs'd tower! accurs'd fatal hand,
 That hath contriv'd this woeful tragedy!
 In thirteen battles Salisbury o'ercame;
 Henry the fifth he first train'd to the wars;
 Whilst any trumpet did sound, or drum struck up,
 His sword did ne'er leave striking in the field.
 Yet liv'st thou, Salisbury? though thy speech doth fail,
 One eye thou hast, to look to heaven for grace:
 The sun with one eye vieweth all the world.
 Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive,
 If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hand!
 Bear hence his body, I will help to bury it.
 Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life?
 Speak unto Talbot; nay, look up to him.
 Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort;
 Thou shalt not die, whilst—
 He beckons with his hand, and smiles on me;
 As who should say, "When I am dead and gone,
 Remember to avenge me on the French."—
 Plantagenet, I will; and like thee, Nero, * Pil'd-esteem'd. It has been suggested to us that pil'd is from pili—"Flocci, nauci, nihili, pili."

Play on the late, beholding the towns burn.
Wretched shall France be only in my name.
[Thunder heard; afterwards an alarum.
What stir is this? What tumult 's in the heavens?
Whence cometh this alarum, and the noise?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord, the French have gather'd
head:
The dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd,—
A holy prophetess, new risen up,—
Is come with a great power to raise the siege.

[SAL. groans.
Tal. Hear, hear, how dying Salisbury doth groan!
It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd.—
Frenchmen, I 'll be a Salisbury to you :—
Pucelle or puzzel,<sup>a</sup> dolphin or dogfish,
Your hearts I 'll stamp out with my horse's heels,
And make a quagmire of your mingled brains.
Convey me Salisbury into his tent,
And then we 'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare. [Ezeunt, bearing out the bodies.

SCENE V.—The same. Before one of the Gates.

Alarum. Skirmishings. TALBOT pursueth the Dauphin, and driveth him in; then enter JOAN LA PUCELLE, driving Englishmen before her. Then enter TALBOT.

Tal. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?
Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them;
A woman, clad in armour, chaseth them.

Enter LA PUCELLE.

Here, here she comes :—I 'll have a bout with thee;
Devil, or devil's dam, I 'll conjure thee:
Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a witch,<sup>b</sup>
And straightway give thy soul to him thou serv'st.

Puc. Come, come, 't is only I that must disgrace thee. [They fight.

Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail?
My breast I 'll burst with straining of my courage,
And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,
But I will chastise this high-minded strumpet.

Puc. Talbot, farewell; thy hour is not yet come:
I must go victual Orleans forthwith.
O'ertake me, if thou canst; I scorn thy strength.
Go, go, cheer up thy hunger-starved men;
Help Salisbury to make his testament:
This day is ours, as many more shall be.

[PUCELLE enters the Town, with Soldiers.

Tal. My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel;
I know not where I am, nor what I do:
A witch, by fear, not force, like Hannibal,<sup>c</sup>
Drives back our troops, and conquers as she lists:
So bees with smoke, and doves with noisome stench.

Are from their hives and houses driven away.
They call'd us, for our fierceness, English dogs;
Now, like to whelps, we crying run away.

[A short alarum.
Hark, countrymen! either renew the fight,
Or tear the lions out of England's coat;
Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead:
Sheep run not half so timorous from the wolf,
Or horse, or oxen, from the leopard,
As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves.

[Alarum. Another alarum.
It will not be :—Retire into your trenches:
You all consented unto Salisbury's death,
For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.—
Pucelle is enter'd into Orleans,
In spite of us, or aught that we could do.
O, would I were to die with Salisbury!
The shame hereof will make me hide my head!

[Alarum. Retreat. Ezeunt TAL. and his Followers.

SCENE VI.—The same.

Enter, on the walls, PUCELLE, CHARLES, REYNOLDS, ALENÇON, and Soldiers.

Puc. Advance our waving colours on the walls Rescued is Orleans from the English wolves :—
Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word.

Char. Divinest creature, bright Astræa's daughter,
How shall I honour thee for this success?
Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloom'd, and fruitful were the next.
France, triumph in thy glorious prophetess!—
Recover'd is the town of Orleans:
More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state.

Reig. Why ring not out the bells aloud through the town?

Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires,
And feast and banquet in the open streets,
To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.

Alen. All France will be replete with mirth
When they shall hear how we have play'd the man.

Char. 'T is Joan, not we, by whom the day is won
For which, I will divide my crown with her:
And all the priests and friars in my realm
Shall, in procession, sing her endless praise.
A staterier pyramid to her I 'll rear,
Than Rhodope's, or Memphis',<sup>d</sup> ever was:
In memory of her, when she is dead,
Her ashes, in an urn more precious
Than the rich jewell'd coffer of Darius,
Transported shall be at high festivals
Before the kings and queens of France.
No longer on Saint Dennis will we cry,
But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.
Come in: and let us banquet royally,
After this golden day of victory. [Flourish.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Orleans.

Enter to the gates, a French Sergeant, and Two Sentinels.

Serg. Sirs, take your places, and be vigilant:
If any noise, or soldier, you perceive
Near to the walls, by some apparent sign
Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.

<sup>c</sup> An allusion to Hannibal's stratagem, recorded in Livy, of fixing lighted twigs on the horns of oxen.

1 Sent. Sergeant, you shall. [Exit Sergeant and Sentinels.] are poor servitors

(When others sleep upon their quiet beds)
Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, and Soldiers, with scaling ladders; their drums beating march.

Tal. Lord regent, and redoubted Burgundy,
By whose approach, the regions of Artois,

<sup>d</sup> We should probably read,

"Than Rhodope's, of Memphis."

Norman, and Picardy, are friends to us,—
 On this happy night the Frenchmen are secure,
 Singing all day carous'd and banqueted;
 Hence we then this opportunity;
 Lying best to quittance their deceit,
 Triv'd by art and baleful sorcery.
 Al. Coward of France!—how much he wrongs his fame,
 In raising of his own arm's fortitude,
 To join with witches, and the help of hell!
 Ber. Traitors have never other company.
 What's that Pucelle, whom they term so pure?
 Al. A maid, they say.

Al. A maid! and be so martial!
 Ber. Pray God she prove not masculine ere long;
 Underneath the standard of the French,
 Carry armour, as she hath begun.
 Al. Well, let them practise and converse with spirits:

In our fortress; in whose conquering name
 They resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.
 Al. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow thee.
 Al. Not all together: better far, I guess,
 If we do make our entrance several ways;
 If it chauce the one of us do fail,
 Another yet may rise against their force.
 Al. Agreed; I'll to you corner.

Ber. And I to this.
 Al. And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave.

Salisbury! for thee, and for the right
 English Henry, shall this night appear
 As much in duty I am bound to both.
 [The English scale the walls, crying St. George!
 A Talbot! and all enter by the Town.

Al. [Within.] Arm, arm! the enemy doth make assault!

French leap over the walls in their shirts. Enter, several ways, BASTARD, ALENÇON, REIGNIER, half undy, and half unready.

Ber. How now, my lords? what, all unready* so?
 Al. Unready? ay, and glad we 'scap'd so well.
 Ber. 'T was time, I trow, to wake and leave our beds,
 Hearing alarms at our chamber doors.

Al. Of all exploits, since first I follow'd arms,
 I never heard I of a warlike enterprise
 So venturesome or desperate than this.
 Al. I think this Talbot be a fiend of hell.
 Ber. If not of hell, the heavens sure favour him.
 Al. Here cometh Charles; I marvel how he sped.

Enter CHARLES and LA PUCELLE.

Al. Tut! holy Joan was his defensive guard.
 Ber. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame?
 (thou at first, to flatter us withal,
 Thou art partakers of a little gain,
 Now our loss might be ten times so much?)
 Al. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?
 I times will you have my power alike?
 Ber. Sleeping, or waking, must I still prevail,
 All you blame and lay the fault on me?
 Al. Wisest soldiers! had your watch been good,
 This sudden mischief never could have fall'n.
 Ber. Duke of Alençon, this was your default;
 Being captain of the watch to-night,
 Seek no better to that weighty charge.
 Al. Had all your quarters been as safely kept
 As whereof I had the government,
 Had not been thus shamefully surpris'd.
 Al. Mine was secure.

* Cerely—undressed.

Reig. And so was mine, my lord.
 Char. And, for myself, most part of all this night,
 Within her quarter, and mine own precinct,
 I was employ'd in passing to and fro,
 About relieving of the sentinels:
 Then how, or which way, should they first break in?

Puc. Question, my lords, no further of the case,
 How, or which way; 't is sure, they found some place
 But weakly guarded, where the breach was made.
 And now there rests no other shift but this,—
 To gather our soldiers, scatter'd and dispers'd,
 And lay new platforms* to endamage them.

Alarum. Enter an English Soldier, crying A Talbot
 A Talbot! They fly, leaving their clothes behind.

Sold. I'll be so bold to take what they have left.
 The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword;
 For I have loaden me with many spoils,
 Using no other weapon but his name. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Orleans. Within the Town.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, a Captain,
 and others.

Bed. The day begins to break, and night is fled,
 Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth.
 Here sound retreat, and cease our hot pursuit.

[Retreat sounded]

Tal. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury;
 And here advance it in the market-place,
 The middle centre of this cursed town.
 Now have I paid my vow unto his soul;
 For every drop of blood was drawn from him,
 There hath at least five Frenchmen died to-night.

And, that hereafter ages may behold
 What ruin happen'd in revenge of him,
 Within their chiefest temple I'll erect
 A tomb, wherein his corpse shall be interr'd:
 Upon the which, that every one may read,
 Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleans;
 The treacherous manner of his mournful death,
 And what a terror he had been to France.
 But, lords, in all our bloody massacre,
 I muse we met not with the dauphin's grace,
 His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc,
 Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'T is thought, lord Talbot, when the fight began,
 Rous'd on the sudden from their drowsy beds,
 They did, amongst the troops of armed men,
 Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field.

Bur. Myself (as far as I could well discern,
 For smoke, and dusky vapours of the night)
 Am sure I scar'd the dauphin, and his trull;
 When arm in arm they both came swiftly running,
 Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves,
 That could not live asunder day or night.
 After that things are set in order here,
 We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hail, my lords! which of this princely train
 Call ye the warlike Talbot, for his acts
 So much applauded through the realm of France?

Tal. Here is the Talbot; who would speak with him?

Mess. The virtuous lady, countess of Auvergne,
 With modesty admiring thy renown,
 By me entreats, great lord, thou wouldst vouchsafe
 To visit her poor castle where she lies;
 That she may boast she hath beheld the man Whose glory fills the world with loud report.

Bur. Is it even so? Nay, then, I see our wars
 Will turn unto a peaceful game sport,
 When ladies crave to be encounter'd with.
 You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit.

* Platforms—plans.

Lies—dwells.

Tal. Ne'er trust me then; for, when a world of men
Could not prevail with all their oratory,
Yet hath a woman's kindness over-ru'd:
And therefore tell her, I return great thanks;
And in submission will attend on her.
Will not your honours bear me company?

Bed. No, truly; it is more than manners will:
And I have heard 't said,—Unbidden guests
Are often welcomest when they are gone.

Tal. Well, then, alone (since there's no remedy)
I mean to prove this lady's courtesy.
Come hither, captain. [Whispers.]—You perceive a y
mind.

Capt. I do, my lord; and mean accordingly. [Ex.]

SCENE III.—Auvergne. Court of the Castle.

Enter the COUNTESS and her Porter.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge;
And when you have done so, bring the keys to me.

Port. Madam, I will. [Exit.]
Count. The plot is laid: if all things fall out right,
I shall as famous be by this exploit

As Scythian Thomyris by Cyrus' death.
Great is the rumour of this dreadful knight,
And his achievements of no less account:
Fain would mine eyes be witness with mine ears,
To give their censure<sup>a</sup> of these rare reports.

Enter Messenger and TALBOT.

Mess. Madam,
According as your ladyship desir'd,
By message crav'd, so is lord Talbot come.

Count. And he is welcome. What! is this the man?
Mess. Madam, it is.

Count. Is this the scourge of France?
Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad,
That with his name the mothers still their babes?
I see report is fabulous and false:
I thought I should have seen some Hercules,
A second Hector, for his grim aspect,
And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs.
Alas! this is a child, a silly dwarf:
It cannot be this weak and writhled<sup>b</sup> shrimp
Should strike such terror to his enemies.

Tal. Madam, I have been bold to trouble you:
But since your ladyship is not at leisure,
I'll sort some other time to visit you.

Count. What means he now?—Go ask him whether he goes.

Mess. Stay, my lord Talbot; for my lady craves
To know the cause of your abrupt departure.

Tal. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,
I go to certify her Talbot's here.

Re-enter Porter, with keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.

Tal. Prisoner! to whom?

Count. To me, bloodthirsty lord;
And for that cause I train'd thee to my house.
Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me,
For in my gallery thy picture hangs:
But now thy substance shall endure the like;
And I will chain these legs and arms of thine,
That hast by tyranny, these many years,
Wasted our country, slain our citizens,
And sent our sons and husbands captivate.

Tal. Ha, ha, ha!

Count. Laughest thou, wretch? thy mirth shall turn to moan.

Tal. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond,
To think that you have aught but Talbot's shadow,
Whereon to practise your severity.

Count. Why, art not thou the man?

Tal. I am, indeed.

Count. Then have I substance too.

Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself:

You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here;

For what you see is but the smallest part

And least proportion of humanity:

I tell you, madam, were the whole frame here,

It is of such a spacious lofty pitch,

Your roof were not sufficient to contain it.

Count. This is a riddling merchant for the man

He will be here, and yet he is not here:

How can these contrarieties agree?

Tal. That will I show you presently.

*He winds a horn. Drums heard; then a Peal
Of Ordnance. The Gates being forced, enter Soldiers.*

How say you, madam? are you now persuaded

That Talbot is but shadow of himself?

These are his substance, sinews, arms, and strength

With which he yoketh your rebellious necks;

Razeth your cities, and subverts your towns,

And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot! pardon my abuse:

I find thou art no less than fame hath bruit'd,

And more than may be gather'd by thy shape.

Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath;

For I am sorry, that with reverence

I did not entertain thee as thou art.

Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady; nor misjudge

The mind of Talbot, as you did mistake

The outward composition of his body.

What you have done hath not offended me:

Nor other satisfaction do I crave,

But only (with your patience) that we may

Taste of your wine, and see what cates you have;

For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well.

Count. With all my heart; and think me happy

To feast so great a warrior in my house. [Ex.]

SCENE IV.—London. The Temple Garden

Enter the Earls of SOMERSET, SUFFOLK, and WARWICK; RICHARD PLANTAGENET, VERNON, and other Lawyers.

Plan. Great lords, and gentlemen, what mean silence?

Dare no man answer in a case of truth?

Suf. Within the Temple hall we were too busy
The garden here is more convenient.

Plan. Then say at once, if I maintain the truth
Or, else, was wrangling Somerset in the error?

Suf. Faith, I have been a truant in the law;
And never yet could frame my will to it;

And, therefore, frame the law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my lord of Warwick, the between us.

War. Between two hawks, which flies the higher

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth

Between two blades, which bears the better temper

Between two horses, which doth bear him best,

Between two girls, which hath the merriest eyes.

I have, perhaps, some shallow spirit of judgment

But in these nice sharp quillets of the law,

Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

Plan. Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance

The truth appears so naked on my side,

That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well apparell'd

So clear, so shining, and so evident,

That it will glimmer through a blind man's eyes.

Plan. Since you are tongue-tied, and so cannot speak,

In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts:

is a true-born gentleman,
upon the honour of his birth,
that I have pleaded truth,
brier pluck a white rose with me.
him that is no coward, nor no flatterer,

endict on the white rose side.
k not your finger as you pluck it off;
g, you do paint the white rose red,
my side so against your will.
my lord, for my opinion bleed,
I be surgeon to my hurt,
on the side where still I am.
I well, come on; Who else?
ess my study and my books be false,
it you held was wrong in you; [To Som.
enf, I pluck a white rose too.
w, Somerset, where is your argument?
e, in my scabbard; meditating that r white rose in a bloody reel.
ntime, your cheeks do counterfeit our roses;
e look with fear, as witnessaig
our side.

No, Plantagenet,
fear, but anger,—that thy cheeks
re shame, to counterfeit our roses;
tongue will not confess thy error,
th not thy rose a canker, Somerset?
h not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet?
sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth;
consuming canker eats his falsehood.
I, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding
me,
maintain what I have said is true,
Plantagenet dare not be seen.
w, by this maiden blossom in my hand,
and thy fashion, peevish boy.
e not thy scorn this way, Plantagenet.
and Poole, I will; and scorn both him and
e.

the third Edward king of England;
ess yeomen from so deep a root?
bears him on the place's privilege,
for his craven heart, say thus.
Him that made me, I'll maintain my words of ground in Christendom:
father, Richard, earl of Cambridge, accused in our late king's days?
treason, stand'st not thou attainted,

ere used ambiguously for doctets.
The word is not here used in the ordinary sense in its less common meaning of proposed—sup-

Corrupted, and exempt † from ancient gentry ‡
His trespass yet lives guilty in thy blood;
And, till thou be restor'd, thou art a yeoman.

Plan. My father was attached, not attainted.
Condemn'd to die for treason, but no traitor;
And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset,
Were growing time once ripen'd to my will.
For your partaker † Poole, and you yourself,
I'll note you in my book of memory,
To scourge you for this apprehension : †
Look to it well; and say you are well warn'd.

Som. Ay, thou shalt find us ready for thee still;
And know us, by these colours, for thy foes;
For these my friends, in spite of thee, shall wear.

Plan. And, by my soul, this pale and angry rose.
As cognizance † of my blood-drinking hate,
Will I for ever, and my faction, wear;
Until it wither with me to my grave,
Or flourish to the height of my degree.

Suf. Go forward, and be chok'd with thy ambition
And so farewell, until I meet thee next. [Exit.

Som. Have with thee, Poole.—Farewell, ambitious Richard. [Exit.

Plan. How I am brav'd, and must perforce endure it!

War. This blot, that they object against your house
Shall be wip'd out in the next parliament,
Call'd for the truce of Winchester and Gloster:
And, if thou be not then created York,
I will not live to be accounted Warwick.
Meantime, in signal of my love to thee,
Against proud Somerset and William Poole,
Will I upon thy party wear this rose:
And here I prophesy,—This brawl to-day,
Grown to this faction, in the Temple garden,
Shall send, between the red rose and the white,
A thousand souls to death and deadly night.

Plan. Good master Vernon, I am bound to you,
That you on my behalf would pluck a flower.

Ver. In your behalf still will I wear the same.

Law. And so will I.

Plan. Thanks, gentle sir.

Come, let us four to dinner: I dare say
This quarrel will drink blood another day. [Exeunt

SCENE V.—The same. A Room in the Tower.

Enter MORTIMER, brought in a chair by Two Keepers.

Mor. Kind keepers of my weak decaying age,
Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.
Even like a man new haled from the rack,
So fare my limbs with long imprisonment:
And these grey locks, the pursuivants of death,
Nestor-like aged, in an age of care,
Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.
These eyes, like lamps whose wasting oil is spent,
Wax dim, as drawing to their exigent : †
Weak shoulders, overborne with burth'ning grief;
And pithless arms, like to a wither'd vine
That droops his sapless branches to the ground:
Yet are these feet, whose strengthless stay is numb,
Unable to support this lump of clay,
Swift-winged with desire to get a grave,
As witting I no other comfort have.
But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come?

I Keep. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come;
We sent unto the Temple, to his chamber;
And answer was return'd, that he will come.

Mor. Enough; my soul shall then be satisfied.
Poor gentleman! his wrong doth equal mine.
Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign,

† Exempt—excluded.

‡ Apprehension—opinion.

† Partaker—confederate.

† Cognizance—badge.

† Exigent—old.

(Before whose glory I was great in arms.)
This loathsome sequestration have I had ;
And even since then hath Richard been obscur'd,
Depriv'd of honour and inheritance :
But now, the arbitrator of despairs,
Just death, kind umpire of men's miseries,
With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me hence ;
I would his troubles likewise were expir'd,
That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter RICHARD PLANTAGENET.

1 Keep. My lord, your loving nephew now is come.
Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend ? Is he come ?
Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly us'd,
Your nephew, late-despised Richard, comes.

Mor. Direct mine arms, I may embrace his neck,
And in his bosom spend my latter gasp :
O, tell me, when my lips do touch his cheeks,
That I may kindly give one fainting kiss.
And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock,
Why didst thou say—of late thou wert despis'd ?

Plan. First, lean thine aged back against mine arm ;
And, in that ease, I'll tell thee my disease.<sup>a</sup>
This day, in argument upon a case,
Some words there grow 'twixt Somerset and me :
Among which terms, he us'd his lavish tongue,
And did upbraid me with my father's death :
Which obloquy set bars before my tongue,
Else with the like I had requited him :
Therefore, good uncle,—for my father's sake,
In honour of a true Plantagenet,
And for alliance' sake,—declare the cause
My father, earl of Cambridge, lost his head.

Mor. That cause, fair nephew,<sup>b</sup> that imprison'd me,
And hath detain'd me, all my flow'ring youth,
Within a loathsome dungeon, there to pine,
Was curs'd instrument of his decease.

Plan. Discover more at large what cause that was ;
For I am ignorant, and cannot guess.

Mor. I will ; if that my fading breath permit,
And death approach not ere my tale be done.
Henry the fourth, grandfather to this king,
Depos'd his nephew Richard,—Edward's son,
The first-begotten, and the lawful heir
Of Edward king, the third of that descent :
During whose reign, the Percies of the north,
Finding his usurpation most unjust,
Endeavour'd my advancement to the throne :
The reason mov'd these warlike lords to this,
Was—for that (young king Richard thus remov'd, Leaving no heir begotten of his body)
I was the next by birth and parentage ;
For by my mother I derived am
From Lionel duke of Clarence, the third son
To king Edward the third, whereas he

From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,
Being but fourth of that heroic line.
But mark ; as, in this haughty great attempt,
They laboured to plant the rightful heir,
I lost my liberty, and they their lives.
Long after this, when Henry the fifth,
Succeeding his father Bolingbroke, did reign,
Thy father, earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd
From famous Edmund Langley, duke of York, Marrying my sister, that thy mother was,
Again, in pity of my hard distress,
Levied an army ; weening to redeem,
And have install'd me in the diadem :
But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl,
And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,
In whom the title rested, were suppress'd.

Plan. Of which, my lord, your honour is the Mor. True ; and thou seest that I no issue have,
And that my fainting words do warrant death :
Thou art my heir ; the rest, I wish thee gather ;
And yet be wary in thy studious care.

Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with me,
But yet, methinks, my father's execution
Was nothing less than bloody tyranny.

Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic ;
Strong-fixed is the house of Lancaster,
And, like a mountain, not to be remov'd.
But now thy uncle is removing hence ;
As princes do their courts, when they are cloy'd
With long continuance in a settled place.

Plan. O, uncle, would some part of my young Might but redeem the passage of your age !

Mor. Thou dost then wrong me ; as the slaughter doth,

Which giveth many wounds when one will kill.
Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good ;
Only, give order for my funeral ;
And so farewell ; and fair be all thy hopes !
And prosperous be thy life, in peace, and war !

Plan. And peace, no war, befall thy parting
In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage,
And like a hermit overpass'd thy days.
Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast
And what I do imagine, let that rest.
Keepers, convey him hence : and I myself
Will see his burial better than his life.

[Exeunt Keepers, bearing out Mortimer.
Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer,
Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort :
And, for those wrongs, those bitter injuries,
Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house,
I doubt not but with honour to redress :
And therefore haste I to the parliament ;
Either to be restored to my blood,
Or make my ill<sup>a</sup> the advantage of my good.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—London. The Parliament-House.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, EXETER, GLOSTER, WARWICK, SOMERSET, and SUFFOLK ; the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, and others. GLOSTER offers to put up a bill ; WINCHESTER snatches it, and tears it.

Win. Com'st thou with deep premeditated lines,
With written pamphlets studiously devis'd,
Humphrey of Gloster ? if thou canst accuse,
Or aught intend'st to lay unto my charge,

<sup>a</sup> Dissonant—uneasiness—unease.

<sup>b</sup> Nephew—put generally for a relative—the Latin nepos.

Do it without invention suddenly ;
As I with sudden and extemporal speech
Purpose to answer what thou canst object.

Glo. Presumptuous priest ! this place commands patience,
Or thou shouldst find thou hast dishonour'd me.
Think not, although in writing I prefer'd
The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes,
That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen :
No, prelate ; such is thy audacious wickedness,
Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissentious practices

fants prattle of thy pride.
 most pernicious usurer;
 nature, enemy to peace;
 wanton, more than well be seems
 by profession and degree;
 treachery, what's more manifest?
 a laid'st a trap to take my life,
 London bridge, as at the Tower?
 say me, if thy thoughts were sifted,
 by sovereign, is not quite exempt from malice of thy swelling heart.
 Gloster, I do defy thee. Lords, vouchsafe bearing what I shall reply.
 covetous, ambitious, or perverse, have me, how am I so poor?
 as if I seek not to advance myself, but keep my wonted calling?
 attention, who preferreth peace
 I do,—except I be provok'd?
 good lords, it is not that offends;
 at that hath incens'd the duke.
 use no one should sway but he;
 he should be about the king;
 engenders thunder in his breast,
 him roar these accusations forth.
 I know, I am as good—
 As good?
 rd of my grandfather!—
 y, lordly sir: For what are you, I pray, imperious in another's throne?
 a I not protector, saucy priest?
 and am I not a prelate of the church?
 s, as an outlaw in a castle keeps,
 it to patronage his theft.
 irreverent Gloster!
 Thou art reverent,
 thy spiritual function, not thy life.
 some shall remedy this.
 Roam thither then.
 y lord, it were your duty to forbear.
 y, see the bishop be not overborne.
 methinks, my lord should be religious,
 the office that belongs to such.
 methinks his lordship should be humbler;
 at a prelate so to plead.
 es, when his holy state is touch'd so near,
 taste holy, or unhallow'd, what of that?
 grace protector to the king?
 vantagemet, I see, must hold his tongue;
 said, "Speak, sirrah, when you should;
 bold verdict enter talk with lords?"
 I have a fling at Winchester. [Aside.
 Uncles of Gloster, and of Winchester,
 I watchmen of our English weal, prevail, if prayers might prevail,
 our hearts in love and amity.
 scandal is it to our crown,
 such noble peers as ye should jar!
 lords, my tender years can tell,
 nation is a viperous worm
 the bowels of the commonwealth.—
 see within! "Down with the tawny-coats!"
 what's this?
 An uproar, I dare warrant,
 from malice of the bishop's men.
 [A noise again; "Stones! Stones!"
 for the Mayor of London, attended.
 my good lords,—and virtuous Henry,— ty of London, pity us!
 and the duke of Gloster's men,
 late to carry any weapon,
 their pockets full of pebble-stones;
 sing themselves in contrary parts,

Do pelt so fast at one another's pate,
 That many have their giddy brains knock'd out:
 Our windows are broke down in every street,
 And we, for fear, compell'd to shut our shops.

Enter, skirmishing, the Retainers of GLOSTER and WINCHESTER, with bloody pates.

K. Hen. We charge you, on allegiance to ourself,
 To hold your slaught'ring hands, and keep the peace.
 Pray, uncle Gloster, mitigate this strife.

1 Serv. Nay, if we be forbidden stones, we'll fall to it with our teeth.

2 Serv. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.

Glo. You of my household, leave this peevish broil,
 And set this unaccustom'd fight aside.

3 Serv. My lord, we know your grace to be a man
 Just and upright; and, for your royal birth,
 Inferior to none but to his majesty:
 And ere that we will suffer such a prince,
 So kind a father of the commonweal,
 To be disgraced by an inkhorn mate,
 We, and our wives, and children, all will fight,
 And have our bodies slaughter'd by thy foes.

1 Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our nails Shall pitch a field, when we are dead. [Skirmish again.
Glo. Stay, stay, I say!

And, if you love me, as you say you do,
 Let me persuade you to forbear a while.

K. Hen. O, how this discord doth afflict my soul!
 Can you, my lord of Winchester, behold
 My sighs and tears, and will not once relent?
 Who should be pitiful, if you be not?
 Or who should study to prefer a peace,
 If holy churchmen take delight in broils?

War. Yield, my lord protector;—yield, Winchester;—
 Except you mean, with obstinate repulse,
 To slay your sovereign, and destroy the realm.
 You see what mischief, and what murder too,
 Hath been enacted through your enmity;
 Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.

Win. He shall submit, or I will never yield.

Glo. Compassion on the king commands me stoop;
 Or I would see his heart out ere the priest
 Should ever get that privilege of me.

War. Behold, my lord of Winchester, the duke
 Hath banish'd moody discontented fury,
 As by his smoothed brows it doth appear:
 Why look you still so stern and tragical?

Glo. Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand.

K. Hen. Fie, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach
 That malice was a great and grievous sin:
 And will not you maintain the thing you teach,
 But prove a chief offender in the same?

War. Sweet king!—the bishop hath a kindly gird.—
 For shame, my lord of Winchester! relent;
 What, shall a child instruct you what to do?

Win. Well, duke of Gloster, I will yield to thee;
 Love for thy love, and hand for hand I give.

Glo. Ay; but, I fear me, with a hollow heart.
 See here, my friends, and loving countrymen;
 This token serveth for a flag of truce
 Betwixt ourselves and all our followers:
 So help me God, as I dissemble not!

Win. So help me God, as I intend it not! [Aside

K. Hen. O loving uncle, kind duke of Gloster, How joyful am I made by this contract!
 Away, my masters! trouble us no more;
 But join in friendship, as your lords have done.

1 Serv. Content; I'll to the surgeon's.

2 Serv. And so will I

3 Serv. And I will see what physic the tavern affords

[Exeunt Servants, Mayor, &c

<sup>2</sup> A kindly gird—a reproof meant in kindness.

War. Accept this scroll, most gracious sovereign ;
Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet
We do exhibit to your majesty.

Glo. Well urg'd, my lord of Warwick ;—for, sweet prince,

An if your grace mark every circumstance,
You have great reason to do Richard right ;
Especially, for those occasions
At Eltham-place I told your majesty.

K. Hen. And those occasions, uncle, were of force :
Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is
That Richard be restored to his blood.

War. Let Richard be restored to his blood ;
So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd.

Win. As will the rest, so willett Winchester.

K. Hen. If Richard will be true, not that alone,
But all the whole inheritance I give
That doth belong unto the house of York,
From whence you spring by lineal descent.

Plan. Thy humble servant vows obedience,
And humble service, till the point of death.

K. Hen. Stoop then, and set your knee against my foot :

And, in requerdon* of that duty done,
I girt thee with the valiant sword of York .
Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet ;
And rise created princely duke of York.

Plan. And so thrive Richard, as thy foes may fall !
And as my duty springs, so perish they
That grudge one thought against your majesty !

All. Welcome, high prince, the mighty duke of York !

Som. Perish, base prince, ignoble duke of York !

[Aside.

Gio. Now will it best avail your majesty,
To cross the seas, and to be crown'd in France :
The presence of a king engenders love
Amongst his subjects, and his loyal friends ;
As it disanimates his enemies.

K. Hen. When Gloster says the word, king Henry goes ;
For friendly counsel cuts off many foes.

Glo. Your ships already are in readiness.

[Sennet. Flourish. Exeunt all but EXETER.

Ecc. Ay, we may march in England, or in France,
Not seeing what is likely to ensue :

This late dissention, grown betwixt the peers,
Burns under feigned ashes of forg'd love,
And will at last break out into a flame :

As fester'd members rot but by degree,
Till bones, and flesh, and sinews, fall away,
So will this base and envious discord breed.

And now I fear that fatal prophecy,
Which, in the time of Henry nam'd the fifth,
Was in the mouth of every sucking babe,—

That Henry, born at Monmouth, should win all ;
And Henry, born at Windsor, should lose all ;
Which is so plain, that Exeter doth wish

His days may finish ere that hapless time. [Exit.

SCENE II.—France. Before Rouen.

Enter LA PUCELLE disguised, and Soldiers dressed like Countrymen, with sacks upon their backs.

Puc. These are the city gates, the gates of Rouen,
Through which our policy must make a breach :
Take heed, be wary how you place your words ;
Talk like the vulgar sort of market-men
That come to gather money for their corn.
If we have entrance (as I hope we shall),
And that we find the slothful watch but weak,
I'll by a sign give notice to our friends,
That Charles the dauphin may encounter them.

I Sold. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the city, * Requerdon—recompence.

And we be lords and rulers over Rouen ;
Therefore we'll knock.

Guard. [Within.] Qui est là ?

Puc. Paisans, pauvres gens de France :
Poor market-folks, that come to sell their corn
Guard. Enter, go in ; the market-bell is rung.

[Open
Puc. Now, Rouen, I'll shake thy bulwarks ground. [Puc., &c., exit

Enter CHARLES, BASTARD OF ORLEANS, AND FORCES.

Char. Saint Dennis bless this happy stratagem
And once again we'll sleep secure in Rouen.

Bast. Here enter'd Pucelle, and her practice
Now she is there, how will she specify
Where is the best and safest passage in ?

Alen. By thrusting out a torch from yonder
Which, once discern'd, shows that her mean
No way to that, for weakness, which she entreats.

Enter LA PUCELLE on a battlement, holding torch burning.

Puc. Behold, this is the happy wedding torch
That joineth Rouen unto her countrymen ;
But burning fatal to the Talbotites.

Bast. See, noble Charles ! the beacon of our
The burning torch, in yonder turret stands.

Char. Now shine it like a comet of revenge,
A prophet to the fall of all our foes !

Alen. Defer no time : Delays have danger
Enter, and cry—"The dauphin !"—presently
And then do execution on the watch. [Exit.

Alarums. Enter TALBOT and certain

Tal. France, thou shalt rue this treason
tears,

If Talbot but survive thy treachery.
Pucelle, that witch, that damned sorceress,
Hath wrought this hellish mischief unaware
That hardly we escap'd the pride of France.

[Exeunt

Alarum : Excursions. Enter, from the FORD, brought in sick, in a chair, with BURGUNDY, and the English Forces.
on the walls, LA PUCELLE, CHARLES,
ALENÇON, and others.

Puc. Good morrow, gallants ! want you bread ?

I think the duke of Burgundy will fast,
Before he'll buy again at such a rate :
'T was full of darnel : Do you like the taste ?

Bur. Scoff on, vile wench, and shameless !
I trust, ere long, to choke thee with thine own
And make thee curse the harvest of that corn.

Char. Your grace may starve, perhaps,
time.

Bed. O, let no words, but deeds, revenge !

Puc. What will you do, good grey-beard lance,

And run a tilt at death within a chair ?
Tal. Foul fiend of France, and hag of all Encompass'd with thy lustful paramours,
Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant age,

And twit with cowardice a man half dead ?
Damsel, I'll have a bout with you again,
Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.

Puc. Are you so hot, sir ? Yet, Pucelle
peace ;

If Talbot do but thunder, rain will follow.

[TALBOT, and the rest, re-enter
God speed the parliament ! who shall be the Tal. Dare ye come forth, and meet us in alike, your lordship takes us then for fools, hat our own be ours, or no.

 peak not to that railing Hecaté,
 see, Alençon, and the rest;
 ke soldiers, come and fight it out?
 ignior, no.
 gnior, hang!—base muleteers of France!
 at footboys do they keep the walls,
 not take up arms like gentlemen.
 way, captains: let's get us from the walls;
 means no goodness by his looks.
 you, my lord! we came but to tell you e here.

[Exeunt LA PUCELLE, &c., from the walls.
 d there will we be too, ere it be long,
 reach be Talbot's greatest fame!
 andy, by honour of thy house,
 by public wrongs sustain'd in France,)
 t the town again, or die:
 ure as English Henry lives,
 father here was conqueror;
 n this late-betrayed town
 e-de-lion's heart was buried;
 rear to get the town or die.
 y vows are equal partners with thy vows.
 ere we go, regard this dying prince,
 duke of Bedford:—Come, my lord, stow you in some better place,
 ckness and for crazy age.
 d Talbot, do not so dishonour me:
 sit before the walls of Rouen, partner of your weal or woe.
 rageous Bedford, let us now persuade you
 t to be gone from hence; for once I read, Pendragon, in his litter, sick,
 e field, and vanquished his foes:
 should revive the soldiers' hearts,
 ver found them as myself.
 aunted spirit in a dying breast!—
 o:—Heavens keep old Bedford safe!—
 e more ado, brave Burgundy, e our forces out of hand,
 n our boasting enemy.

[Exeunt BURGUNDY, TALBOT, and Forces, leaving BEDFORD and others.

Excursions. Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE and a Captain.

ither away, sir John Fastolfe, in such haste?
 ither away? to save myself by flight.
 to have the overthrow again.
 at! will you fly, and leave lord Talbot?
 e. All the Talbots in the world, to save my
 e. [Exit.
 rasily knight! ill fortune follow thee! [Ex.

Excursions. Enter, from the town, LA PUCELLE, ALENÇON, CHARLES, &c., and exeunt

e, quiet soul, depart when Heaven please;
 een our enemies' overthrow.
 rust or strength of foolish man?
 f late were daring with their scoffs,
 d fain by flight to save themselves.

[Dies, and is carried off in his chair.

Enter TALBOT, BURGUNDY, and others.
 e, and recover'd in a day again!
 side honour, Burgundy:
 e have glory for this victory!
 like and martial Talbot, Burgundy ee in his heart; and there erects eeds, as valour's monuments.
 ks, gentle duke. But where is Pucelle
 e?

I think her old familiar is asleep:
 Now where 's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his gleeks?

What, all a-mort? * Rouen hangs her head for grief
 That such a valiant company are fled.
 Now will we take some order in the town,
 Placing therein some expert officers;
 And then depart to Paris, to the king;
 For there young Henry, with his nobles, lies.

Bur. What wills lord Talbot pleaseth Burgundy.

Tal. But yet, before we go, let's not forget
 The noble duke of Bedford, late deceas'd,
 But see his exequies fulfill'd in Rouen;
 A braver soldier never couched lance,
 A gentler heart did never sway in court:
 But kings, and mightiest potentates, must die;
 For that 's the end of human misery. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same. The Plains near the City.

Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD, ALENÇON, LA PUCELLE, and Forces.

Puc. Dismay not, princes, at this accident,
 Nor grieve that Rouen is so recovered:
 Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,
 For things that are not to be remedied.
 Let frantic Talbot triumph for a while,
 And like a peacock sweep along his tail
 We'll pull his plumes, and take away his train,
 If dauphin and the rest will be but rul'd.

Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto,
 And of thy cunning had no diffidence;
 One sudden foil shall never breed distrust.

Bast. Search out thy wit for secret policies,
 And we will make thee famous through the world.

Alen. We'll set thy statue in some holy place,
 And have thee reverenc'd like a blessed saint;
 Employ thee then, sweet virgin, for our good.

Puc. Then thus it must be; this doth Joan devise.
 By fair persuasions, mix'd with sugar'd words,
 We will entice the duke of Burgundy
 To leave the Talbot, and to follow us.

Char. Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do that,
 France were no place for Henry's warriors;
 Nor should that nation boast it so with us,
 But be extirped from our provinces.

Alen. For ever should they be expuls'd from France,
 And not have title of an earldom here.

Puc. Your honours shall perceive how I will work,
 To bring this matter to the wished end. [Drums heard
 Hark! by the sound of drum you may perceive
 Their powers are marching unto Paris-ward.

An English march. Enter, and pass over at a distance, TALBOT and his Forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread;
 And all the troops of English after him.

A French March. Enter the DUKE OF BURGUNDY
 and Forces.

Now, in the rearward, comes the duke, and his;
 Fortune, in favour, makes him lag behind.
 Summon a parley, we will talk with him.

[A parley sounded.

Char. A parley with the duke of Burgundy.

Bur. Who craves a parley with the Burgundy?

Puc. The princely Charles of France, thy country-
 man.

Bur. What say'st thou, Charles? for I am marching
 hence.

Char. Speak, Pucelle; and enchant him with thy words.

Puc. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of France!
 Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.

* All a-mort—inspired.

Bur. Speak on; but be not over-tedious.

Puc. Look on thy country, look on fertile France,
And see the cities and the towns defac'd
By wasting ruin of the cruel foe!
As looks the mother on her lowly babe,
When death doth close his tender dying eyes,
See, see, the pining malady of France;
Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds,
Which thou thyself hast given her woeful breast!
O, turn thy edged sword another way;
Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help!
One drop of blood, drawn from thy country's bosom,
Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore,
Return thee, therefore, with a flood of tears,
And wash away thy country's stained spots!

Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd me with her words,
Or nature makes me suddenly relent.

Puc. Besides, all French and France exclaims on thee,

Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny.
Who join'st thou with, but with a lordly nation,
That will not trust thee but for profit's sake?
When Talbot hath set footing once in France,
And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill,
Who then, but English Henry, will be lord,
And thou be thrust out like a fugitive?
Call we to mind,—and mark but this, for proof:—
Was not the duke of Orleans thy foe?
And was he not in England prisoner?
But, when they heard he was thine enemy,
They set him free, without his ransom paid,
In spite of Burgundy and all his friends.
See, then! thou fight'st against thy countrymen,
And join'st with them will be thy slaughtermen.
Come, come, return; return, thou wandering lord;
Charles and the rest will take thee in their arms.

Bur. I am vanquished; these haughty<sup>a</sup> words of hers

Have batter'd me like roaring cannon-shot,
And made me almost yield upon my knees.
Forgive me, country, and sweet countrymen!
And, lords, accept this hearty kind embrace:
My forces and my power of men are yours;
So, farewell, Talbot; I'll no longer trust thee.

Puc. Done like a Frenchman; turn, and turn again!

Char. Welcome, brave duke! thy friendship makes us fresh.

Bast. And doth beget new courage in our breasts.

Alen. Pucelle hath bravely play'd her part in this,
And doth deserve a coronet of gold.

Char. Now let us on, my lords, and join our powers;
And seek how we may prejudice the foe. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Paris. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOSTER, and other VERNON, BASSET, &c. To them TALBOT, and of his Officers.

Tal. My gracious prince, and honourable Hearing of your arrival in this realm,
I have awhile given truce unto my wars,
To do my duty to my sovereign:
In sign whereof, this arm,—that hath reclaim'd
To your obedience fifty fortresses,
Twelve cities, and seven walled towns of strength,
Besides five hundred prisoners of esteem,—
Lest fall his sword before your highness' feet;
And, with submissive loyalty of heart,
Ascribes the glory of his conquest got,
First to my God, and next unto your grace.

K. Hen. Is this the lord Talbot, uncle Gloucester,
That hath so long been resident in France?

Glo. Yes, if it please your majesty, my liege.

K. Hen. Welcome, brave captain, and victorious
When I was young, (as yet I am not old,)

I do remember how my father said
A stouter champion never handled sword.
Long since we were resolved of your truth,
Your faithful service, and your toil in war;
Yet never have you tasted our reward,
Or been reguerdon'd with so much as thanks,
Because till now we never saw your face:
Therefore, stand up; and, for these good deserts,
We here create you earl of Shrewsbury;
And in our coronation take your place.

[Exeunt KING HENRY, GLO., TAL., and

Ver. Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at sea, Disgracing of these colours that I wear
In honour of my noble lord of York,—

Dar'st thou maintain the former words thou speak'st?

Bas. Yes, sir; as well as you dare patronage
The envious barking of your saucy tongue
Against my lord, the duke of Somerset.

Ver. Sirrah, thy lord I honour as he is.

Bas. Why, what is he? as good a man as I.

Ver. Hark ye; not so: in witness take ye this.

Bas. Villain, thou know'st the law of arms;
That whoso draws a sword 't is present death,
Or else this blow should broach thy dearest blood;
But I'll unto his majesty, and crave
I may have liberty to vengeance wrong;
When thou shalt see I'll meet thee to thy cost.

Ver. Well, miscreant, I'll be there as soon as
And, after, meet you sooner than you would. [

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Paris. A Room of State.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOSTER, EXETER, YORK,
SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WINCHESTER, WARWICK,
TALBOT, the Governor of Paris, and others.

Glo. Lord bishop, set the crown upon his head.

Win. God save king Henry, of that name the sixth!

Glo. Now, governor of Paris, take your oath,— [Governor kneels.]

That you elect no other king but him:
Esteem none friends but such as are his friends;
And none your foes but such as shall pretend<sup>b</sup>
Malicious practices against his state:
This shall ye do, so help you righteous God!

[Exeunt Governor and his Train.]

<sup>b</sup> Pretend—intend.

Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE.

Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from
To haste unto your coronation,
A letter was deliver'd to my hands,
Writ to your grace from the duke of Burgundy.

Tal. Shame to the duke of Burgundy, and to
I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee next
To tear the garter from thy craven's leg.

[Phoebus
(Which I have done,) because unworthily
Thou wast installed in that high degree.
Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest:
This dastard, at the battle of Patay,
When but in all I was six thousand strong,
And that the French were almost ten to one.
Before we met, or that a stroke was given,

rusty squire, did run away;
 assault we lost twelve hundred men;
 and divers gentlemen beside,
 surpris'd and taken prisoners.
 O, great lords, if I have done amiss;
 that such cowards ought to wear
 the sign of knighthood, yea or no.
 I say the truth, this fact was infamous,
 seeming any common man;
 I was a knight, a captain, and a leader.
 When first this order was ordain'd, my lords,
 the garter were of noble birth;
 and virtuous, full of haughty courage,
 were grown to credit by the wars;
 for death, nor shrinking for distress,
 were resolute in most extremes.
 But it is not furnish'd in this sort to usurp the sacred name of knight, this most honourable order;
 I (if I were worthy to be judge) degraded, like a hedge-born swain presume to boast of gentle blood.
 Stain to thy countrymen! thou hear'st thy doom!
 Therefore, thou that wast a knight;
 we banish thee, on pain of death.—

[Exit FAST.]

lord protector, view the letter from my uncle duke of Burgundy.
 That means his grace, that he hath chang'd his style?
 [Viewing the superscription.]
 Out, plain and bluntly,—“To the king?”
 How got he his sovereign?
 Is a churlish superscription an alteration in good will?
 Where?—“I have, upon especial cause,—

[Reads.]

the compassion of my country's wrack, with the pitiful complaints of your oppression feeds upon,— our pernicious faction, with Charles, the rightful king of France.”
 As treachery! Can this be so;
 Alliance, amity, and oaths,
 could be found such false dissembling guile?
 What! doth my uncle Burgundy revolt?
 O, doth, my lord; and is become your foe.
 Is that the worst this letter doth contain?
 No, my lord, and all, my lord, he writes.

Why, then, lord Talbot there shall talk with
 him,
 and his chastisement for this abuse:—
 How, my lord? are you not content?
 Content, my liege? Yes; but that I am prevented.

Have I not begg'd I might have been employ'd.
 Then gather strength, and march unto him
 in straight;
 receive how ill we brook his treason;
 offence it is to flout his friends.
 O, my lord; in heart desiring still behold confusion of your foes.

[Exit.]

Enter VERNON and BASSET.

Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign!
 Grant me, my lord, grant me the combat too!
 This is my servant: Hear him, noble prince!
 And this is mine: Sweet Henry, favour him!
 Be patient, lords, and give them leave to speak.—
 Men, what makes you thus exclaim?
 For what crave you combat? or with whom?

[Pursued—gone before—anticipat'd.]

Ver. With him, my lord; for he hath done me wrong.

Bas. And I with him; for he hath done me wrong.

K. Hen. What is that wrong whereof you both complain?

First let me know, and then I'll answer you.

Bas. Crossing the sea from England into France,
 This fellow here, with envious carping tongue,
 Upbraided me about the rose I wear;
 Saying—the sanguine colour of the leaves
 Did represent my master's blushing cheeks,
 When stubbornly he did repugn<sup>a</sup> the truth,
 About a certain question in the law,
 Argued betwixt the duke of York and him;
 With other vile and ignominious terms:
 In confutation of which rude reproach,
 And in defence of my lord's worthiness,
 I crave the benefit of law of arms.

Ver. And that is my petition, noble lord:

For though he seem, with forged quaint conceit,
 To set a gloss upon his bold intent,
 Yet know, my lord, I was provok'd by him;
 And he first took exceptions at this badge,
 Pronouncing—that the paleness of this flower
 Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart.

York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left?

Som. Your private grudge, my lord of York, will out,
 Though ne'er so cunningly you smother it.

K. Hen. Good Lord! what madness rules in brain-sick men;

When, for so slight and frivolous a cause,
 Such factious emulations shall arise:
 Good cousins both, of York and Somerset,
 Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace.

York. Let this dissention first be tried by fight,
 And then your highness shall command a peace.

Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us alone;
 Betwixt ourselves let us decide it then.

York. There is my pledge; accept it, Somerset.

Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.

Bas. Confirm it so, mine honourable lord.

Glo. Confirm it so? Confounded be your strife!

And perish ye, with your audacious prate!
 Presumptuous vassals! are you not ashamed,
 With this immodest clamorous outrage
 To trouble and disturb the king and us?
 And you, my lords,—methinks you do not well,
 To bear with their perverse objections;
 Much less to take occasion from their mouths
 To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves;
 Let me persuade you, take a better course.

Eze. It grieves his highness:—Good my lords, be friends.

K. Hen. Come hither, you that would be combatants:

Henceforth, I charge you, as you love our favour,
 Quite to forget this quarrel, and the cause.
 And you, my lords, remember where we are;
 In France, amongst a fickle wavering nation:
 If they perceive dissention in our looks,
 And that within ourselves we disagree,
 How will their grudging stomachs be provok'd
 To wilful disobedience, and rebel!

Beside, what infamy will there arise,
 When foreign princes shall be certified
 That, for a toy, a thing of no regard,
 King Henry's peers and chief nobility
 Destroy'd themselves, and lost the realm of France!
 O, think upon the conquest of my father,
 My tender years; and let us not forego
 That for a trifle that was bought with blood!
 Let me be umpire in this doubtful strife.
 I see no reason, if I wear this rose,

[Putting on a red rose

<sup>a</sup> Repugn—resist.

That any one should therefore be suspicious
I more incline to Somerset than York :
Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both :
As well they may upbraid me with my crown,
Because, forsooth, the king of Scots is crown'd.
But your discretions better can persuade
Than I am able to instruct or teach :
And therefore, as we hither came in peace,
So let us still continue peace and love.
Cousin of York, we institute your grace
To be our regent in these parts of France :
And, good my lord of Somerset, unite
Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot ;
And, like true subjects, sons of your progenitors,
Go cheerfully together, and digest
Your angry cholour on your enemies.
Ourselves, my lord protector, and the rest,
After some respite, will return to Calais ;
From thence to England, where I hope ere long
To be presented, by your victories,
With Charles, Alençon, and that traitorous rout.

[Flourish. Exeunt K. HEN., GLO., SOM., WIN., SUP., and BASSET.

War. My lord of York, I promise you, the king
Prettily, methought, did play the orator.

York. And so he did ; but yet I like it not,
In that he wears the badge of Somerset.

War. Tush ! that was but his fancy, blame him not ;
I dare presume, sweet prince, he thought no harm.

York. And, if I wist he did,—But let it rest ;
Other affairs must now be managed.

[Exeunt YORK, WARWICK, and VERNON.

Exe. Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice :
For had the passions of thy heart burst out,
I fear we should have seen decipher'd there
More rancorous spite, more furious raging broils,
Than yet can be imagin'd or suppos'd.
But howsoever, no simple man that sees
This jarring discord of nobility,
This should ring of each other in the court,
This factious handying of their favourites,
But that it doth presage some ill event.
'T is much, when sceptres are in children's hands :
But more, when envy breeds unkind division ;
There comes the ruin, there begins confusion. [Exit.

SCENE II.—France. Before Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT, with his Forces.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpeter :
Summon their general unto the wall.

[Trumpet sounds a parley. Enter, on the walls, the General of the French Forces, and others.

English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth,
Servant in arms to Harry king of England ;
And thus he would,—Open your city gates ;
Be humble to us ; call my sovereign yours,
And do him homage as obedient subjects ;
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power :
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants,
Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire ;
Who, in a moment, even with the earth
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Gsn. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror, and their bloody scourge !
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter, but by death :
For, I protest, we are well fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight :
If thou retire, the dauphin, well appointed,
Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee :
On either hand thee there are squadrons pitch'd,

To wall thee from the liberty of flight ;
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have ta'en the sacrament,
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo ! there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant man,
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit :
This is the latest glory of thy praise,
That I, thy enemy, due<sup>a</sup> thee withal :
For ere the glass that now begins to run
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well coloured,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.

[Drum etc.]

Hark ! hark ! the dauphin's drum, a warning bell,
Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul,
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.

[Exeunt General, &c., from the

Tal. He fables not, I hear the enemy :—
Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings
O, negligent and heedless discipline !
How are we park'd, and bounded in a pale ;
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs !
If we be English deer, be then in blood :<sup>b</sup>
Not rascal-like,<sup>c</sup> to fall down with a pinch ;
But rather moody-mad and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay :
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of us, my friends.
God, and Saint George ! Talbot, and England's Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight ! [Exit.

SCENE III.—Plains in Gascony.

Enter York, with Forces ; to him a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd again
That dogg'd the mighty army of the dauphin ?

Mess. They are return'd, my lord : and give
That he is march'd to Bourdeaux with his power,
To fight with Talbot : As he march'd along,
By your espials were discovered
Two mightier troops than that the dauphin led ;
Which join'd with him, and made their march Bourdeaux.

York. A plague upon that villain Somerset,
That thus delays my promised supply
Of horsemen, that were levied for this siege !
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid ;
And I am lowt'd<sup>d</sup> by a traitor villain,
And cannot help the noble chevalier :
God comfort him in this necessity !
If he miscarry, farewell wars in France.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY.

Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English
Never so needful on the earth of France,
Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot ;
Who now is girdled with a waist of iron,
And hemm'd about with grim destruction :
To Bourdeaux, warlike duke ! to Bourdeaux, York !
Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's
York. O God ! that Somerset, who in prospect

Lucy. The fraud of England, not the force of France,
 Hath now entrapp'd the noble-minded Talbot:
 Never to England shall he bear his life;
 But dies, betray'd to fortune by your strife.

Som. Come, go; I will despatch the horsemen straight:
 Within six hours they will be at his aid.

Lucy. Too late comes rescue; he is ta'en, or slain:
 For fly he could not, if he would have fled;
 And fly would Talbot never, though he might.

Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot then adieu!

Lucy. His fame lives in the world, his shame in you.

[Exit.

SCENE V.—The English Camp near Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT and JOHN his Son.

Tal. O young John Talbot! I did send for thee,
 To tutor thee in stratagems of war;
 That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd,
 When sapless age, and weak unable limbs,
 Should bring thy father to his drooping chair.

But,—O malignant and ill-boding stars!—
 Now thou art come unto a feast of death,
 A terrible and unavoided* danger:
 Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest horse;
 And I'll direct thee how thou shalt escape
 By sudden flight: come, dally not, begone.

John. Is my name Talbot? and am I your son?
 And shall I fly? O, if you love my mother,
 Dishonour not her honourable name,
 To make a bastard and a slave of me:
 The world will say,—He is not Talbot's blood,
 That basely fled, when noble Talbot stood.

Tal. Fly, to revenge my death, if I be slain.

John. He that flies so will ne'er return again.

Tal. If we both stay, we both are sure to die.

John. Then let me stay; and, father, do you fly:

Your loss is great, so your regard should be;
 My worth unknown, no loss is known in me.
 Upon my death the French can little boast;
 In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost.
 Flight cannot stain the honour you have won;
 But mine it will, that no exploit have done:
 You fled for vantage, every one will swear;
 But, if I bow, they'll say it was for fear.
 There is no hope that ever I will stay,
 If the first hour I shrink, and run away.

Here, on my knee, I beg mortality,
 Rather than life preserv'd with infamy.

Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one tomb?

John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's womb!

Tal. Upon my blessing I command thee go.

John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.

Tal. Part of thy father may be sav'd in thee.

John. No part of him but will be shame in me.

Tal. Thou never hadst renown, nor canst not lose it.

John. Yes, your renowned name: Shall flight abuse
 it?

Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain.

John. You cannot witness for me, being slain.

If death be so apparent, then both fly.

Tal. And leave my followers here, to fight and die?
 My age was never tainted with such shame.

John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame?

No more can I be sever'd from your side,
 Than can yourself ycurself in twain divide:

Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I;

For live I will not if my father die.

Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair sou,

Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon.

Come, side by side together live and die;

And soul with soul from France to heaven fly. [Exit.

* Unavoided—not to be avoided.

SCENE VI.—A Field of Battle.

Alarum: Excursions, wherein TALBOT'S Son is hemmed about, and TALBOT rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight:
The regent hath with Talbot broke his word,
And left us to the rage of France his sword.
Where is John Talbot?—pause, and take thy breath;
I gave thee life, and rescued thee from death.

John. O twice my father! twice am I thy son:
The life thou gav'st me first was lost and done;
Till with thy warlike sword, despite of fate,
To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.

Tal. When from the dauphin's crest thy sword struck
fire,

It warm'd thy father's heart with proud desire
Of bold-fac'd victory. Then leaden age,
Quicken'd with youthful spleen and warlike rage,
Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy,
And from the pride of Gallia rescued thee.
The ireful bastard Orleans—that drew blood
From thee, my boy; and had the maidenhood
Of thy first fight—I soon encountered;
And, interchanging blows, I quickly shed
Some of his bastard blood; and, in disgrace,
Bespoke him thus: "Contaminated, base,
And misbegotten blood I spill of thine,
Mean and right poor; for that pure blood of mine,
Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave boy:"—
Here, purposing the Bastard to destroy,
Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's care;
Art thou not weary, John? How didst thou fare?
Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly,
Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry?
Fly, to revenge my death, when I am dead;
The help of one stands me in little stead.
O, too much folly is it, well I wot,
To hazard all our lives in one small boat.
If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage,
To-morrow I shall die with mickle age:
By me they nothing gain an if I stay,
'T is but the short'ning of my life one day:
In thee thy mother dies, our household's name,
My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame:
All these, and more, we hazard by thy stay;
All these are sav'd if thou wilt fly away.

John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart;

These words of yours draw life-blood from my heart;
On that advantage, bought with such a shame,
(To save a paltry life, and slay bright fame.)
Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly,
The coward horse that bears me fall and die:
And like me to the peasant boys of France;
To be shame's scorn, and subject of mischance.
Surely, by all the glory you have won,
An if I fly I am not Talbot's son:
Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot;
If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.

Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Crete,
Thou Icarus; thy life to me is sweet:
If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side;
And, commendable prov'd, let 's die in pride. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the same.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter TALBOT wounded, supported by a Servant.

Tal. Where is my other life?—mine own is gone;—
O, where's young Talbot? where is valiant John?
Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity,
Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at thee.
When he perceiv'd me shrink, and on my knee,
His bloody sword he brandish'd over me,

And, like a hungry lion, did commence
Rough deeds of rage and stern impatience;
But when my angry guardant stood alone,
Tend'ring my ruin, and assail'd of none,
Dizzy-ey'd fury, and great rage of heart,
Suddenly made him from my side to start
Into the clust'ring battle of the French:
And in that sea of blood my boy did drench
His overmounting spirit; and there died
My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

Enter Soldiers, bearing the body of JOHN TALBOT.

Serv. O my dear lord! lo, where your son is!
Tal. Thou antic death, which laugh'st us hence Anon, from thy insulting tyranny,
Coupled in bonds of perpetuity,
Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky,
In thy despite shall 'scape mortality.
O thou whose wounds become hard-favour'd death,
Speak to thy father, ere thou yield thy breath:
Brave death by speaking, whether he will or no;
Imagine him a Frenchman, and thy foe.
Poor boy! he smiles, methinks; as who should
Had death been French, then death had died too.
Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms;
My spirit can no longer bear these harms.
Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have,
Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave.

Alarums. Exeunt Soldiers and Servant, leaving two bodies. Enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, BURGUNDY, BASTARD, LA PUCELLE, and Forces.

Char. Had York and Somerset brought rescue
We should have found a bloody day of this.

Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging
Did flesh his puny sword in Frenchmen's blood!

Puc. Once I encounter'd him, and thus I said:
"Thou maiden youth, be vanquish'd by a maid!
But, with a proud, majestic high scorn,
He answer'd thus: "Young Talbot was not born
To be the pillage of a giglot wench!"
So, rushing in the bowels of the French,
He left me proudly, as unworthy fight.

Bur. Doubtless he would have made a noble
See, where he lies inheerd in the arms
Of the most bloody nurser of his harms.

Bast. Hew them to pieces, hack their bones
Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's wound.

Char. O, no; forbear: for that which we have
During the life, let us not wrong it dead.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY, attended; a French soldier preceding.

Lucy. Herald, conduct me to the dauphin's
To know who hath obtain'd the glory of the day.

Char. On what submissive message art thou?

Lucy. Submission, dauphin! 't is a mere word;

We English warriors wot not what it means.
I come to know what prisoners thou hast taken,
And to survey the bodies of the dead.

Char. For prisoners ask'st thou? hell our prey
But tell me whom thou seek'st.

Lucy. But where's<sup>b</sup> the great Alcides of the Valiant lord Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury?

Created, for his rare success in arms,
Great earl of Washford, Waterford, and Vale;
Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinfield,
Lord Strange of Blackmere, lord Verdun of Albion, Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, lord Furnival of St.

<sup>a</sup> Raging wood—raging mad.

<sup>b</sup> But where's. It appears to us that Lucy asks in a tion of surprise when he does not see Talbot, supposed be prisoner

victorious lord of Falconbridge;
the noble order of Saint George,
saint Michael, and the golden fleece;
asual to Henry the sixth,
was within the realm of France?
ere is a silly stately style indeed!
that two-and-fifty kingdoms hath,
so tedious a style as this.
thou magnifiest with all these titles,
and fly-blown, lies here at our feet.
'Talbot slain? the Frenchman's only scourge, his terror and black Nemesis?
his eyeballs into bullets turn'd,
rage, might shoot them at your faces!
would but call these dead to life!
ought to fright the realm of France:

Were but his picture left among you here,
It would amaze the proudest of you all.
Give me their bodies; that I may bear them hence,
And give them burial as beseems their worth.
Puc. I think this upstart is old Talbot's ghost,
He speaks with such a proud commanding spirit,
For God's sake, let him have 'em; to keep them here,
They would but stink and putrefy the air.
Char. Go, take their bodies hence.
Lucy. I'll bear them hence:
But from their ashes shall be rear'd
A phoenix that shall make all France afraid.
Char. So we be rid of them do with 'em what thou wilt.
And now to Paris, in this conquering vein;
All will be ours, now bloody Talbot's slain. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

KING HENRY, GLOSTER, and EXETER.
Have you perus'd the letters from the pope,
the duke of Burgundy, and the earl of Armagnac?
Have you seen, my lord; and their intent is this,—
To give us unto your excellence,
A solemn peace concluded of
The realms of England and of France.
How doth your grace affect their motion?
Alas, my good lord; and as the only means
To bring us to our christian blood,
And quietness on every side.
Ay, marry, uncle; for I always thought
Impious and unnatural
Murther and bloody strife
Among professors of one faith.
Alas, my lord,—the sooner to effect,
And this knot of amity,— Armagnac—near knit to Charles,
The great authority in France—
The only slaughter to your grace
With a large and sumptuous dowry.
Marriage, uncle! alas! my years are young;
My study and my books
In dalliance with a paramour.
The ambassadors; and, as you please,
Have their answers every one:
I'll content with any choice
That shall bring in my country's weal.
Legate, and two Ambassadors, with Winchester in a Cardinal's habit,
Alas! is my lord of Winchester install'd,
Unto a cardinal's degree?
I would he were that will be verified,
Which did sometime prophesy,—
That he should come to be a cardinal,
And his cap co-equal with the crown.*
My lords ambassadors, your several suits
Have been consider'd and debated on.
The king is both good and reasonable:
The king, are we certainly resolv'd
To make conditions of a friendly peace;
Which my lord of Winchester, we mean
To transport presently to France.
I'll be for the proffer of my lord your master,—
I'll commend his highness so at large,
Of the lady's virtuous gifts,
And the value of her dowry,—
I'll commend she shall be England's queen.
In argument and proof of which contract,
* Immunity—barbarity.

Bear her this jewel, [to the Amb.] pledge of my affection.
And so, my lord protector, see them guarded,
And safely brought to Dover; where, inshipp'd,
Commit them to the fortune of the sea.
[Exeunt K. HEN. and Train; GLOS., EXE., and Amb.]
Win. Stay, my lord legate; you shall first receive
The sum of money which I promised
Should be deliver'd to his holiness
For clothing me in these grave ornaments.
Leg. I will attend upon your lordship's leisure.
Win. Now, Winchester will not submit, I trow,
Or be inferior to the proudest peer.
Humphrey of Gloster, thou shalt well perceive,
That, neither in birth, or for authority
The bishop will be overcome by thee:
I'll either make thee stoop and bend thy knee,
Or sack this country with a mutiny. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—France. Plains in Anjou.

Enter CHARLES, BURGUNDY, ALENÇON, LA PUCELLE, and Forces, marching.
Char. These news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits:
'T is said the stout Parisians do revolt,
And turn again unto the warlike French.
Alen. Then march to Paris, royal Charles of France,
And keep not back your powers in dalliance.
Puc. Peace be amongst them if they turn to us;
Else, ruin combat with their palaces!
Enter a Messenger.
Mess. Success unto our valiant general,
And happiness to his accomplices!
Char. What tidings send our scouts? I prithee speak.
Mess. The English army, that divided was Into two parties, is now conjoin'd in one;
And means to give you battle presently.
Char. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warning is;
But we will presently provide for them.
Bur. I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there;
Now he is gone, my lord, you need not fear.
Puc. Of all base passions, fear is most accur'd:—
Command the conquest, Charles, it shall be thine;
Let Henry fret, and all the world repine.
Char. Then on, my lords; and France be fortunate!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same. Before Angiers.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter LA PUCELLE.
Puc. The regent conquers, and the Frenchmen fly.

Now, help, ye charming spells, and periapts ; *
 And ye choice spirits that admonish me,
 And give me signs of future accidents !
 You speedy helpers, that are substitutes
 Under the lordly monarch of the north,<sup>b</sup>
 Appear, and aid me in this enterprise !

Enter Fiends.

This speedy and quick appearance argues proof
 Of your accustom'd diligence to me.
 Now, ye familiar spirits, that are cull'd
 Out of the powerful regions under earth,
 Help me this once, that France may get the field.

[They walk about and speak not.]

O, hold me not with silence over-long !
 Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,
 I'll lop a member off, and give it you,
 In earnest of a further benefit ;
 So you do condescend to help me now.—

[They hang their heads.]

No hope to have redress ?—My body shall Pay recompense, if you will grant my suit.

[They shake their heads.]

Cannot my body, nor blood-sacrifice,
 Entreat you to your wonted furtherance ?
 Then take my soul ; my body, soul, and all,
 Before that England give the French the foil. [They depart.]
 See ! they forsake me. Now the time is come
 That France must veil her lofty-plumed crest,
 And let her head fall into England's lap.
 My ancient incantations are too weak,
 And hell too strong for me to buckle with :
 Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust. [Exit.]

Alarums. Enter French and English, fighting. LA PUCELLE and YORK fight hand to hand. LA PU-CELLE is taken. The French fly.

York. Damsel of France, I think I have you fast :
 Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms,
 And try if they can gain your liberty.
 A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace !
 See, how the ugly witch doth bend her brows,
 As if, with Circe, she would change my shape.

Puc. Chang'd to a worse shape thou canst not be.

York. O, Charles the dauphin is a proper man ;
 No shape but his can please your dainty eye.

Puc. A plaguing mischief light on Charles, and thee !
 And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd
 By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds !

York. Fell, banning hag ! enchantress, hold thy tongue.

Puc. I prithee, give me leave to curse a while.

York. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake. [Exeunt.]

Alarums. Enter SUFFOLK, leading in LADY MARGARET.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.
 [Gazes on her.]

O fairest beauty, do not fear, nor fly ;
 For I will touch thee but with reverent hands.
 I kiss these fingers [kissing her hand] for eternal peace,
 And lay them gently on thy tender side.
 Who art thou ? say, that I may honour thee.

Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a king,
 The king of Naples ; whosoe'er thou art.

Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd.
 Be not offended, nature's miracle,
 Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me :
 So doth the swan her downy cygnets save,
 Keeping them prisoner underneath her wings.

* Periapts—amulets—charms.

 the four principal devils invoked by witches."

Yet if this servile usage once offend,
 Go, and be free again, as Suffolk's friend.

[She turns on

O, stay !—I have no power to let her pass
 My hand would free her, but my heart say
 As plays the sun upon the glassy streams,
 Twinkling another counterfeited beam,
 So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eye
 Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak
 I'll call for pen and ink, and write my name
 Fie, De la Poole ! disable not thyself ;
 Hast not a tongue ? is she not here thy prisoner ?
 Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight ?
 Ay ; beauty's princely majesty is such,
 Confounds the tongue, and makes the sense dumb.

Mar. Say, earl of Suffolk, if thy name
 What ransom must I pay before I pass ?
 For I perceive I am thy prisoner.

Suf. How canst thou tell, she will deny Before thou make a trial of her love ?

Mar. Why speak'st thou not ? what ransom
Suf. She's beautiful ; and therefore to
 She is a woman ; therefore to be won.

Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom, yea,

Suf. Fond man ! remember that thou hast

Then how can Margaret be thy paramour ?

Mar. I were best to leave him, for he will

Suf. There all is marr'd ; there lies a curse

Mar. He talks at random ; sure, the matter

Suf. And yet a dispensation may be had

Mar. And yet I would that you would

Suf. I'll win this lady Margaret. For

Why, for my king : Tush ! that's a wood

Mar. He talks of wood : it is some cap

Suf. Yet so my fancy may be satisfied

And peace established between these realms

But there remains a scruple in that too :

For though her father be the king of Naples

Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor,

And our nobility will scorn the match.

Mar. Hear ye, captain ? Are you not

Suf. It shall be so, disdain they ne'er shall

Henry is youthful, and will quickly yield

Madam, I have a secret to reveal.

Mar. What though I be enthrall'd ? he shall

And will not any way dishonour me.

Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say

Mar. Perhaps I shall be rescued by the king

And then I need not crave his courtesy.

Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in this

Mar. Tush ! women have been captivates

Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so ?

Mar. I cry you mercy, 't is but quid pro quo

Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you not

Your bondage happy, to be made a queen

Mar. To be a queen in bondage is more

Than is a slave in base servility ;

For princes should be free.

Suf. And so shall ye

If happy England's royal king be free.

Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom

Suf. I'll undertake to make thee Henry's

To put a golden sceptre in thy hand,

And set a precious crown upon thy head,

If thou wilt condescend to be my—

Mar. What

Suf. His love.

Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife

Suf. No, gentle madam ; I unworthy am

To woo so fair a dame to be his wife,

And have no portion in the choice myself.

How say you, madam ; are you so content

n if my father please, I am content.
 Men call our captains, and our colours, forth:
 I am, at your father's castle walls,
 To have a parley, to confer with him.

[Troops come forward.

Drum sounded. Enter REIGNIER on the walls.
 O Reignier, see, thy daughter prisoner.
 To whom?

To me.

Suffolk, what remedy?
 I am, and unapt to weep,
 I am on fortune's fickleness.
 There is remedy enough, my lord:
 And for thy honour, give consent)
 Her shall be wedded to my king;
 With pain have woo'd and won thereto;
 Her easy-held imprisonment
 I'll thy daughter princely liberty.
 He seeks Suffolk as he thinks?

Fair Margaret knows
 I doth not flatter, face, or feign.
 Upon thy princely warrant, I descend,
 To answer of thy just demand.

[Exit from the walls.

And here I will expect thy coming.

Drum sounds. Enter REIGNIER, below.
 Welcome, brave earl, into our territories;
 In Anjou what your honour pleases.
 I think, Reignier, happy for so sweet a child,
 To have a companion with a king:
 He makes your grace unto my suit?
 Do you not dost deign to woo her little worth,
 A princely bride of such a lord;
 Whom I may quietly
 Govern, the county Maine, and Anjou,
 Or oppression, or the stroke of war,
 Or shall be Henry's, if he please.
 It is her ransom, I deliver her;
 Two counties, I will undertake,
 Shall well and quietly enjoy.
 And I again, in Henry's royal name,
 Into that gracious king,
 Or hand, for sign of plighted faith.
 As ruler of France, I give thee kingly thanks,
 Who is in traffic of a king:
 I think, I could be well content
 To have my own attorney in this case.

[Aside.

To go to England with this news,
 To have his marriage to be solemniz'd;
 O Reignier! set this diamond safe
 In places, as it becomes.
 To embrace thee, as I would embrace
 My prince, king Henry, were he here.
 To sell, my lord! Good wishes, praise, and Prayers,

Which ever have of Margaret. [Going.
 Well, sweet madam! But hark you, Margaret;
 My commendations to my king?
 My commendations as become a maid,
 And of his servant, say to him.
 He sends sweetly plac'd, and modestly directed.
 O, I must trouble you again,—
 He is open to his majesty?

O, my good lord; a pure unspotted heart,
 I sent with love, I send the king.
 I wish this withal. [Kisses her.
 I do for thyself; I will not so presume,
 To have peerish tokens to a king.

[Exeunt REIGNIER and MARGARET.
 Rest thou for myself!—But, Suffolk, stay;
 Do not wander in that labyrinth;
 Beware, and ugly treasons, lurk,
 My way with her wondrous praise:

Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount;
 Mad, natural graces that extinguish art;
 Repeat their semblance often on the seas,
 That, when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet,
 Thou mayst bereave him of his wits with wonder. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Camp of the Duke of York, in Anjou.

Enter YORK, WARWICK, and others.

York. Bring forth that sorceress, condemn'd to burn.

Enter LA PUCELLE, guarded, and a Shepherd.

Shep. Ah, Joan! this kills thy father's heart outright!
 Have I sought every country far and near,
 And now it is my chance to find thee out,
 Must I behold thy timeless cruel death?
 Ah, Joan, sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with thee!

Puc. Decrepit miser!<sup>a</sup> base ignoble wretch!
 I am descended of a gentler blood;
 Thou art no father, nor no friend, of mine.

Shep. Out, out!—My lords, an please you, 't is not so;
 I did beget her all the parish knows:
 Her mother liveth yet, can testify
 She was the first fruit of my bachelorship.

War. Graceless! wilt thou deny thy parentage?
 York. This argues what her kind of life hath been,
 Wicked and vile; and so her death concludes.

Shep. Fie, Joan! that thou wilt be so obstacle!<sup>b</sup>
 God knows thou art a collop of my flesh;
 And for thy sake have I shed many a tear:
 Deny me not, I prithee, gentle Joan.

Puc. Peasant, avaunt!—You have suborn'd this man,
 Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.

Shep. 'T is true, I gave a noble to the priest,
 The morn that I was wedded to her mother.
 Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl.
 Wilt thou not stoop? Now cursed be the time
 Of thy nativity! I would, the milk
 Thy mother gave thee, when thou suck'dst her breast,
 Had been a little ratsbane for thy sake!

Or else, when thou didst keep my lambs a-field,
 I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee!
 Dost thou deny thy father, cursed drab?
 O, burn her, burn her; hanging is too good. [Exit.

York. Take her away; for she hath liv'd too long,
 To fill the world with vicious qualities.

Puc. First, let me tell you whom you have condemn'd:
 Not me begotten of a shepherd swain,
 But issued from the progeny of kings;
 Virtuous, and holy; chosen from above,
 By inspiration of celestial grace,
 To work exceeding miracles on earth.

I never had to do with wicked spirits:
 But you,—that are polluted with your lusts,
 Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents,
 Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices,—
 Because you want the grace that others have,
 You judge it straight a thing impossible
 To compass wonders, but by help of devils.
 No, misconceived! Joan of Arc hath been
 A virgin from her tender infancy,
 Chaste and immaculate in very thought;
 Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effus'd,
 Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven.

York. Ay, ay;—away with her to execution.

War. And hark ye, sirs; because she is a maid,
 Spare for no fagots, let there be enow;
 Place barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake,
 That so her torture may be shortened.

Puc. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts?
 Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity;
 That warranteth by law to be thy privilege.

<sup>a</sup> Miser—wretch, miserable creature.

I am with child, ye bloody homicides :
Murder not then the fruit within my womb,
Although ye hale me to a violent death.

York. Now Heaven forefend! the holy maid with child?

War. The greatest miracle that e'er ye wrought :
Is all your strict preciseness come to this?

York. She and the dauphin have been juggling :
I did imagine what would be her refuge.

War. Well, go to ; we will have no bastards live ;
Especially, since Charles must father it.

Puc. You are deceiv'd ; my child is none of his ;
It was Alençon that enjoy'd my love.

York. Alençon! that notorious Machiavel!
It dies, an if it had a thousand lives.

Puc. O, give me leave, I have deluded you ;
'T was neither Charles nor yet the duke I nam'd,
But Reignier, king of Naples, that prevail'd.

War. A married man! that's most intolerable.

York. Why, here's a girl! I think she knows not well,
There were so many, whom she may accuse.

War. It's sign she hath been liberal and free.

York. And yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure.
Strumpet, thy words condemn thy brat, and thee :
Use no treaty, for it is in vain.

Puc. Then lead me hence ;—with whom I leave my curse :

May never glorious sun reflex his beams
Upon the country where you make abode!
But darkness and the gloomy shade of death
Environ you ; till mischief, and despair,
Drive you to break your necks, or hang yourselves!

[Exit guarded.]

York. Break thou in pieces, and consume to ashes,
Thou foul accursed minister of hell!

Enter CARDINAL BEAUFORT, attended.

Car. Lord regent, I do greet your excellence
With letters of commission from the king.
For know, my lords, the states of Christendom,
Mov'd with remorse of these outrageous broils,
Have earnestly implor'd a general peace
Betwixt our nation and the aspiring French ;
And here at hand the dauphin and his train,
Approacheth to confer about some matter.

York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect?
After the slaughter of so many peers,
So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers,
That in this quarrel have been overthrow'n,
And sold their bodies for their country's benefit,
Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?
Have we not lost most part of all the towns,
By treason, falsehood, and by treachery,
Our great progenitors had conquered?
O, Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief
The utter loss of all the realm of France.

War. Be patient, York : if we conclude a peace,
It shall be with such strict and severe covenants
As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter CHARLES, attended ; ALENÇON, BASTARD, REIGNIER, and others.

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed
That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in France,
We come to be inform'd by yourselves
What the conditions of that league must be.

York. Speak, Winchester ; for boiling cholier chokes
The hollow passage of my poison'd voice,
By sight of these our baleful<sup>a</sup> enemies.

Win. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus :
That, in regard king Henry gives consent,
Of mere compassion and of lenity,
To ease your country of distressful war,
And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,

<sup>a</sup> Baleful—baneful.

You shall become true liegemen to his crown :
And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear
To pay him tribute, and submit thyself,
Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him,
And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

Alen. Must he be then as shadow of himself?
Adorn his temples with a coronet ;
And yet, in substance and authority,
Retain but privilege of a private man?
This proffer is absurd and reasonless.

Char. 'T is known already that I am possess'd
With more than half the Gallian territories,
And therein reverenc'd for their lawful king :
Shall I, for lucre of the rest unvanquish'd,
Detract so much from that prerogative,
As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole?
No, lord ambassador ; I'll rather keep
That which I have, than, coveting for more,
Be cast from possibility of all.

York. Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret
Used intercession to obtain a league ;
And, now the matter grows to compromise,
Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison?
Either accept the title thou usurp'st,
Of benefit proceeding from our king,
And not of any challenge of desert,
Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

Reig. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy
To cavil in the course of this contract :
If once it be neglected, ten to one,
We shall not find like opportunity.

Alen. To say the truth, it is your policy,
To save your subjects from such massacre,
And ruthless slaughters, as are daily seen
By our proceeding in hostility :
And therefore take this compact of a truce,
Although you break it when your pleasure serves.

[Aside, to CHARLES.]

War. How say'st thou, Charles? shall our country stand?

Char. It shall :
Only reserv'd, you claim no interest
In any of our towns of garrison.

York. Then swear allegiance to his majesty ;
As thou art knight, never to disobey,
Nor be rebellious to the crown of England,
Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England.—

[CHARLES, and the rest, give tokens of fealty.]
So, now dismiss your army when ye please ;
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still.
For here we entertain a solemn peace. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, in conference with SURVEYOR, GLOSTER and EXETER following.

K. Hen. Your wondrous rare description, noble
Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me :
Her virtues, graced with external gifts,
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart ;
And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide,
So am I driven, by breath of her renown,
Either to suffer shipwrack, or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suf. Tush! my good lord! this superficial tale
Is but a preface of her worthy praise :
The chief perfections of that lovely dame
(Had I sufficient skill to utter them)
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit.
And, which is more, she is not so divine,
So full replete with choice of all delights,
But, with as humble lowliness of mind,

it to be at your command ;
 mean, of virtuous chaste intents,
 honour Henry as her lord.
 And otherwise will Henry ne'er presume.
 My lord protector, give consent that may be England's royal queen.
 Would I give consent to flatter sin.
 My lord, your highness is betroth'd to a lady of esteem ;
 would you then dispense with that contract,
 to disgrace your honour with reproach ?
 Would you oath a ruler with unlawful oaths ;
 that at a triumph having vow'd strength, forsaketh yet the lists to his adversary's odds :
 that daughter is unequal odds,
 she may be broke without offence.
 What, I pray, is Margaret more than that ?
 Is she no better than an earl,
 whose glorious titles he excel.
 My lord, her father is a king,
 Naples and Jerusalem ;
 whose great authority in France
 will confirm our peace,
 as the Frenchmen in allegiance.
 Would so the earl of Armagnac may do,
 as his near kinsman unto Charles.
 Would he, his wealth doth warrant a liberal dower,
 his richer sooner will receive than give.
 My lords ! my lords ! disgrace not so your king, would he should be so abject, base, and poor,
 for wealth, and not for perfect love.
 Would he to enrich his queen,
 would he seek a queen to make him rich :
 would he peasants bargain for their wives,
 would he men for oxen, sheep, or horse.
 Would he a matter of more worth would he sell in by attorneyship ;
 would he a man whose will, but whom his grace affects,
 would he a companion of his nuptial bed :
 would he, my lords, since he affects her most,
 would he these reasons bindeth us,
 would he as she should be preferr'd.
 Would he a redlock forced but a hell,
 would he a discord and continual strife ?
 would he a contrary bringeth forth bliss,

And is a pattern of celestial peace.
 Whom should we match with Henry, being a king,
 But Margaret, that is daughter to a king ?
 Her peerless feature, joined with her birth,
 Approves her fit for none but for a king ;
 Her valiant courage, and undaunted spirit,
 (More than in women commonly is seen,)
 Will answer our hope in issue of a king ;
 For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
 Is likely to beget more conquerors,
 If with a lady of so high resolve
 As is fair Margaret he be link'd in love.
 Then yield, my lords ; and here conclude with me,
 That Margaret shall be queen, and none but she.
K. Hen. Whether it be through force of your report,
 My noble lord of Suffolk ; or for that
 My tender youth was never yet attain'd
 With any passion of inflaming love,
 I cannot tell ; but this I am assur'd,
 I feel such sharp dissention in my breast,
 Such fierce alarms both of hope and fear,
 As I am sick with working of my thoughts.
 Take, therefore, shipping ; post, my lord, to France ;
 Agree to any covenants ; and procure
 That lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come
 To cross the seas to England and be crown'd
 King Henry's faithful and anointed queen :
 For your expenses and sufficient charge,
 Among the people gather up a tenth.
 Be gone, I say ; for, till you do return,
 I rest perplexed with a thousand cares.
 And you, good uncle, banish all offence :
 If you do censure me by what you were,
 Not what you are, I know it will excuse
 This sudden execution of my will.
 And so conduct me, where, from company,
 I may revolve and ruminatè my grief. [Exit.]
Glo. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last.
 [Exeunt GLOS. and EXETER.]
Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd ; and thus he goes,
 As did the youthful Paris once to Greece ;
 With hope to find the like event in love,
 But prosper better than the Trojan did.
 Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the king ;
 But I will rule both her, the king, and realm. [Exit.]

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

THIS drama appears in the original folio edition of Shakspeare's plays under the title of 'The Second Part of Henry the Sixth, with the Death of the Good Duke Humphrey.' In the form in which it has been transmitted to us by the editors of that first collected edition of our author, it had not been previously printed. But in 1594 there appeared a separate play, in quarto, under the following title:—'The First Part of the Contention betwixt the two famous Houses of Yorke and Lancaster, with the Death of the Good Duke Humphrey, and the Banishment and Death of the Duke of Suffolke, and the Tragical End of the proud Cardiuall of Winchester, with the notable Rebellion of Jack Cade, and the Duke of Yorkes first Claime unto the Crowne.' Printed by Thomas Creede for Thomas Millington.' This play, in the entire conduct of the scenes, and in a great measure in the dialogue, is 'The Second Part of Henry the Sixth.' But the alterations and additions are so considerable in amount that it has been doubted whether the original authorship belongs to Shakspeare. The whole dramatic conception is in the original play, and we, therefore, have no doubts upon the matter.

Sir Walter Scott somewhere speaks, through one of his characters, of the "Lancastrian prejudices" of Shakspeare. The great novelist had probably in his mind the delineation of Richard. But it would be difficult, we think, to have conducted the entire chronicle history of the 'Contention between the two famous Houses of York and Lancaster' with more rigid impartiality. This just and tolerant view of human events and characters constitutes one of the most remarkable peculiarities of the mind of Shakspeare. Let us turn to the very first scenes of these dramas, and we shall find the character of the Lancastrian Margaret gradually displaying itself in an aptitude for bold and dangerous intrigue, founded upon her pride and impatience of a rival in authority. The Duchess of Gloster is tempted by her own weak ambition to meddle with the "lime-twigs" that have been set for her. But it is the passionate hatred of Margaret, lending itself to schemes of treachery and bloodshed, that drives on the murder of the "good Duke Humphrey." With the accomplices of Margaret the retribution is instant and terrible. The banished Suffolk falls, not by the hand of the law, but by some mysterious agency which appears to have armed against him a power mightier than the law, which seizes upon its victim with an obdurate ferocity, and hurries him to death in the name of a wild and irregular justice. To the second great conspirator against the Protector the retribution is even more fearful—the death, not of violence, but of mental torture, far more terrible than any bodily pain. The justice who slew the other conspirator against Humphrey had yet unsheathed its sword. His punishment was postponed till the battle-day of Wakefield.

The scenes of the first four acts of the Second 'Henry VI.' may appear to a superficial observer to be very slightly linked with the after-scenes of the contest of the Roses. But it was the object of it to show the beginnings of faction, continued on the same form from the previous drama. The Protectorship was essentially a government of the weak through the jealousies which it engendered and the intrigues by which it was surrounded. But the error of the Protector left the government more weakly supported as it then was to the capricious guidance and the imbecility of Henry and the violence of Margaret. Such a rule and popular commotions are the natural result. The author of the 'Contention,' with a depth of wisdom which Shakspeare invariably displays, prohibited the insurrection of Cade as a movement of the most brutal ignorance, instigated by a coarse and unscrupulous ambition upon promises which could be realised in no case of society, and for ends which proposed only such a state of anarchy and insecurity as would result from the overthrow of rule and order. Nor are these remarkable so much an episode only in this great dramatic history, as a necessary prelude, for York is in arms. The civil war is begun upon the popular tumult.

The civil war is begun. The Yorkists are in the field. The poet has delineated the character of the leader with a nice discrimination, and certainly without any of the coarseness of partisanship. He tells us that York is ambitious and courageous, but somewhat weak, and, to a great extent, a puppet in the hands of others. In the early scene in the Tower garden his ambition is rashly discovered, in a few words, commenced in accident and terminated in a less passion. The full development of his ambition is the result of his estimation of the character of the Protector and his sense of the advantage which he derives from the factions which grow out of an imbecile government. But he is still only a dissembler, exciting his passions with some shadowy visions of a crown, lending to the dark intrigues of his natural and avowed enemies, and calling up the terrible agency of popular vengeance, reckless of any consequences so that confusion might be produced. The schemes of York are successful, at length in arms. But he still dissembles. He precipitates that decided movement which prudence would have avoided; and the battle of Tewkesbury is the result.

SCENE.—IN VARIOUS PARTS OF ENGLAND.

ACT I.

London. A Room of State in the Palace.
*Trumpets; then hautboys. Enter, on one side, HENRY, DUKE OF GLOSTER, SALISBURY, and CARDINAL BEAUFORT; on the other,
MARGARET, led in by SUFFOLK; YORK,
BUCKINGHAM, and others following.*
By your high imperial majesty
I beg my departure for France,
As procurator to your excellence,
To marry princess Margaret for your grace;
So, in the famous ancient city, Tours,—
In presence of the kings of France and Sicil,
The dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Bretagne, and Alençon,
Seven earls, twelve barons, and twenty reverend bishops,—
I have perform'd my task, and was espous'd:
And humbly now upon my bended knee,
In sight of England and her lordly peers,

Deliver up my title in the queen
To your most gracious hands, that are the substance
Of that great shadow I did represent;
The happiest gift that ever marquess gave,
The fairest queen that ever king receiv'd.

K. Hen. Suffolk, arise.—Welcome, queen Margaret:
I can express no kinder sign of love,
Than this kind kiss.—O Lord, that lends me life,
Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness!
For thou hast given me, in this beauteous face,
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.

Q. Mar. Great king of England, and my gracious lord,

The mutual conference that my mind hath had,
By day, by night,—waking, and in my dreams,—
In courtly company, or at my beads,—
With you mine alder-liefest<sup>a</sup> sovereign,
Makes me the bolder to salute my king
With ruder terms, such as my wit affords,
And over-joy of heart doth minister.

K. Hen. Her sight did ravish; but her grace in speech,
Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
Makes me from wondering fall to weeping joys;
Such is the fulness of my heart's content.
Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my love.

All. [kneeling.] Long live queen Margaret, England's happiness!

Q. Mar. We thank you all. [Flourish.]

Suf. My lord protector, so it please your grace,
Here are the articles of contracted peace,
Between our sovereign and the French king Charles,
For eighteen months concluded by consent.

Glo. [Reads.] "Imprimis, It is agreed between the French King, Charles, and William de la Poole, marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry king of England, that the said Henry shall espouse the lady Margaret, daughter unto Reignier king of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem; and crown her queen of England, ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing.—Item,—That the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine shall be released and delivered to the king her father"—

K. Hen. Uncle, how now?

Glo. Pardon me, gracious lord:
Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart,
And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no further.

K. Hen. Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read on.

Car. "Item,—It is further agreed between them, that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father; and she sent over of the king of England's own proper cost and charges, without having any dowry."

K. Hen. They please us well.—Lord marquess, kneel down;

We here create thee the first duke of Suffolk,
And girt thee with the sword. Cousin of York,
We here discharge your grace from being regent
In the parts of France, till term of eighteen months
Be full expir'd. Thanks, uncle Winchester, Gloster, York, Buckingham, Somerset,
Salisbury, and Warwick;

We thank you all for this great favour done,
In entertainment to my princely queen.
Come, let us in; and with all speed provide
To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt KING, QUEEN, and SUFFOLK.]

Glo. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state,
To you duke Humphrey must unload his grief;
Your grief, the common grief of all the land.
What! did my brother Henry spend his youth,
His valour, coin, and people, in the wars?
Did he so often lodge in open field,
In winter's cold, and summer's parching heat,

<sup>a</sup> Alder-liefest—dearest of all.

To conquer France, his true inheritance?

And did my brother Bedford toil his wits,
To keep by policy what Henry got?
Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham,
Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick,
Receiv'd deep scars in France and Normandy?
Or hath mine uncle Beaufort, and myself,
With all the learned council of the realm,
Studied so long, sat in the council-house,
Early and late, debating to and fro
How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe!
And hath his highness in his infancy
Been crown'd in Paris, in despite of foes?
And shall these labours, and these honours, die!
Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance,
Your deeds of war, and all our counsel, die?
O peers of England, shameful is this league!
Fatal this marriage! cancelling your fame;
Blotting your names from books of memory;
Razing the characters of your renown;
Defacing monuments of conquer'd France;
Undoing all, as all had never been!

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse
This peroration with such circumstance?

For France, 't is ours; and we will keep it still.

Glo. Ay, uncle, we will keep it, if we can:

But now it is impossible we should:

Suffolk, the new-made duke, that rules the roost,
Hath given the duchies of Anjou and Maine
Unto the poor king Reignier, whose large style
Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.

Sal. Now, by the death of him that died for all,
These counties were the keys of Normandy:—

But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son?

War. For grief, that they are past recovery:
For were there hope to conquer them again,
My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no tears:
Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both;
Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:
And are the cities that I got with wounds
Deliver'd up again with peaceful words?
Mort Dieu!

York. For Suffolk's duke, may he be suffocate,
That dims the honour of this warlike isle!
France should have torn and rent my very heart
Before I would have yielded to this league.
I never read but England's kings have had Large sums of gold, and dowries, with their wives:
And our king Henry gives away his own,
To match with her that brings no vantages.

Glo. A proper jest, and never heard before,
That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth,
For costs and charges in transporting her!
She should have stay'd in France, and starv'd in France
Before—

Car. My lord of Gloster, now you grow too hot:
It was the pleasure of my lord the king.

Glo. My lord of Winchester, I know your mind:
'T is not my speeches that you do dislike,
But 't is my presence that doth trouble you.
Rancour will out: Proud prelate, in thy face
I see thy fury: if I longer stay
We shall begin our ancient bickerings.
Lordings, farewell; and say, when I am gone,
I prophesied—France will be lost ere long.

Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage.

'T is known to you he is mine enemy:
Nay, more, an enemy unto you all;
And no great friend, I fear me, to the king.
Consider, lords,—he is the next of blood,
And heir apparent to the English crown;
Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,
There's reason he should be displeas'd at it.

lords; let not his smoothing words sour hearts; be wise, and circumspect, though the common people favour him,
 im—<sup>a</sup> Humphrey, the good duke of Gloster;
 their hands, and crying with loud voice—maintain your royal excellence!<sup>b</sup> God preserve the good duke Humphrey!<sup>c</sup> lords, for all this flattering gloss, he found a dangerous protector.
 Why should he then protect our sovereign,
 of age to govern of himself?
 Somerset, join you with me,
 together with the duke of Suffolk,
 tickly hoise duke Humphrey from his seat.
 his weighty business will not brook delay;
 the duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit.

kinsin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride,
 necessity of his place, be grief to us,
 watch the haughty cardinal;
 necessity is more intolerable than the princes in the land beside;
 he be displac'd, he'll be protector.
 Or thou, or I, Somerset, will be protector, like Humphrey, or the Cardinal.

[Exit BUCKINGHAM and SOMERSET.
 The duke went before, ambition follows him.
 They do labour for their own preferment, not us to labour for the realm.
 I but Humphrey duke of Gloster am like a noble gentleman.
 I scorn the haughty cardinal—
 a soldier than a man o' the church, and proud as he were lord of all—a ruffian, and demean himself as ruler of a commonweal.
 My son, the comfort of my age!
 thy plainness, and thy housekeeping
 the greatest favour of the commons, none but good duke Humphrey.
 For York, thy acts in Ireland,
 bring them to civil discipline;
 exploits, done in the heart of France,
 I wert regent for our sovereign,
 I thee fear'd and honour'd of the people:
 together, for the public good;
 I can, to bridle and suppress of Suffolk, and the cardinal,
 Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition;
 I may, cherish duke Humphrey's deeds
 I do tend the profit of the land.
 O God help Warwick, as he loves the land,
 on profit of his country!
 And so says York, for he hath greatest cause.
 I'll let 's make haste away, and look unto the gain.

into the main! O father, Maine is lost;
 he, which by main force Warwick did win,
 I have kept, so long as breath did last:
 he, father, you meant; but I meant Maine;
 I'll win from France, or else be slain.

[Exit WAR. and SAL.
 Maine and Maine are given to the French;
 the state of Normandy tickle* point, now they are gone:
 I chided on the articles;
 I agreed; and Henry was well pleas'd,
 two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter.
 I name them all: What is 't to them?
 they give away, and not their own.
 I make cheap pennyworths of their pillage,
 I see friends, and give to courtesans,
 I beg, like lords, till all be gone:

* Tickle—ascertain; the Saxon thel.

While as the silly owner of the goods
 Weeps over them, and wrings his hapless hands,
 And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof,
 While all is shar'd, and all is borne away;
 Ready to starve, and dare not touch his own,
 So York must sit, and fret, and bite his tongue,
 While his own lands are bargain'd for and sold.
 Methinks, the realms of England, France, and Ireland,
 Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood
 As did the fatal brand Althea burn'd,
 Unto the prince's heart of Calydon.<sup>a</sup>
 Anjou and Maine, both given unto the French!
 Cold news for me; for I had hope of France,
 Even as I have of fertile England's soil.
 A day will come when York shall claim his own;
 And therefore I will take the Nevils' parts,
 And make a show of love to proud duke Humphrey,
 And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown,
 For that 's the golden mark I seek to hit:
 Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,
 Nor hold the sceptre in his childish fist,
 Nor wear the diadem upon his head,
 Whose church-like humours fit not for a crown.
 Then, York, be still awhile, till time do serve:
 Watch thou, and wake, when others be asleep,
 To pry into the secrets of the state;
 Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love,
 With his new bride, and England's dear-bought queen,
 And Humphrey with the peers be fall'n at jars:
 Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,
 With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfum'd;
 And in my standard bear the arms of York,
 To grapple with the house of Lancaster;
 And, force perforce, I'll make him yield the crown,
 Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down.

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in the Duke of Gloster's House.

Enter GLOSTER and the DUCHESS.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like over-ripen'd corn, Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load?
 Why doth the great duke Humphrey knit his brows,
 As frowning at the favours of the world?
 Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth,
 Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?
 What seest thou there? king Henry's diadem,
 Enchas'd with all the honours of the world?
 If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face,
 Until thy head be circled with the same.
 Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious gold:
 What, is 't too short? I'll lengthen it with mine:
 And, having both together heav'd it up,
 We'll both together lift our heads to heav'n;
 And never more abase our sight so low
 As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.

Glo. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy lord,
 Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts:
 And may that thought, when I imagine ill
 Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry,
 Be my last breathing in this mortal world!
 My troublous dream this night doth make me sad.

Duch. What dream'd my lord? tell me, and I'll re-quite it

With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.

Glo. Methought this staff, mine office-badge in court,
 Was broke in twain; by whom I have forgot,
 But, as I think, it was by the cardinal;
 And, on the pieces of the broken wand
 Were plac'd the heads of Edmond duke of Somerset,

<sup>a</sup> Meleager, the prince of Calydon, died in great torments when his mother Althea threw into the flames the firebrand upon the preservation of which his life depended.

And William de la Poole first duke of Suffolk.

This was my dream; what it doth bode, God knows.

Duch. Tut, this was nothing but an argument.

That he that breaks a stick of Gloster's grove
Shall lose his head for his presumption.

But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet duke:

Methought, I sat in seat of majesty,

In the cathedral church of Westminster,

And in that chair where kings and queens are crown'd;

Where Henry, and dame Margaret, kneel'd to me,

And on my head did set the diadem.

Glo. Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide outright:

Presumptuous dame, ill-nurtur'd Eleanor!

Art thou not second woman in the realm?

And the protector's wife, belov'd of him?

Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,

Above the reach or compass of thy thought?

And wilt thou still be hammering treachery,

To tumble down thy husband and thyself,

From top of honour to disgrace's feet?

Away from me, and let me hear no more.

Duch. What, what, my lord! are you so choleric

With Eleanor, for telling but her dream?

Next time, I'll keep my dreams unto myself,

And not be check'd.

Glo. Nay, be not angry, I am pleas'd again.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My lord protector, 'tis his highness' pleasure,

You do prepare to ride unto St. Alban's,

Whereas<sup>a</sup> the king and queen do mean to hawk.

Glo. I go.—Come, Nell, thou wilt ride with us?

Duch. Yes, my good lord, I'll follow presently.

[Exeunt GLOSTER and Messenger.]

Follow I must, I cannot go before,

While Gloster bears this base and humble mind.

Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood,

I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks,

And smooth my way upon their headless necks.

And, being a woman, I will not be slack

To play my part in fortune's pageant.

Where are you there? Sir John!<sup>b</sup> nay, fear not, man,

We are alone; here's none but thee and I.

Enter HUME.

Hume. Jesu preserve your royal majesty!

Duch. What say'st thou, majesty! I am but grace.

Hume. But, by the grace of God, and Hume's advice,
Your grace's title shall be multiplied.

Duch. What say'st thou, man? hast thou as yet confer'd

With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch;

With Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer?

And will they undertake to do me good?

Hume. This they have promised,—to show your highness

A spirit rais'd from depth of underground,

That shall make answer to such questions

As by your grace shall be propounded him.

Duch. It is enough; I'll think upon the questions:

When from St. Alban's we do make return,

We'll see these things effected to the full.

Here, Hume, take this reward; make merry, man,

With thy confederates in this weighty cause. [Ex. DUCH.]

Hume. Hume must make merry with the duchess' gold;

Marry, and shall. But how now, sir John Hume?

Seal up your lips, and give no words but—mum!

The business asketh silent secrecy.

Dame Eleanor gives gold, to bring the witen.

Gold cannot come amiss, were she a devil.

Yet have I gold, flies from another coast:

<sup>b</sup> Sir John. Hume was a priest, and receives the title common to his order.

I dare not say from the rich cardinal.

And from the great and new-made duke of Set

Yet I do find it so: for, to be plain,

They, knowing dame Eleanor's aspiring humors

Have hired me to undermine the duchess,

And buzz these conjurations in her brain.

They say, A crafty knave does need no broker

Yet am I Suffolk and the cardinal's broker.

Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near

To call them both a pair of crafty knaves.

Well, so it stands: And thus, I fear, at last,

Hume's knavery will be the duchess' wrack;

And her attainure will be Humphrey's fall:

Sort how it will, I shall have gold for all.

SCENE III.—The same. A Room in the

Enter PETER, and others, with petitions.

1 Pet. My masters, let's stand close; my protector will come this way by and by, and then deliver our supplications in the quill.<sup>a</sup>

2 Pet. Marry, the Lord protect him, for be man! Jesu bless him!

Enter SUFFOLK and QUEEN MARGARET.

1 Pet. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the quill: I'll be the first, sure.

2 Pet. Come back, fool; this is the duke of and not my lord protector.

Suf. How now, fellow? wouldst anything?

1 Pet. I pray, my lord, pardon me! I told my lord protector.

Q. Mar. [Reading the superscription.] "To protector!" are your supplications to his? Let me see them: What is thine?

1 Pet. Mine is, an't please your grace, and Goodman, my lord cardinal's man, for keep house, and lands, and wife and all, from me.

Suf. Thy wife too? that's some wrong! What's yours?—What's here! [Reads.] "The duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the command ford."—How now, sir knave?

2 Pet. Alas, sir, I am but a poor petitioner whole township.

Peter. [Presenting his petition.] Against ter, Thomas Horner, for saying, That the duke was rightful heir to the crown.

Q. Mar. What say'st thou? Did the duke say, he was rightful heir to the crown?

Peter. That my master was? No, forsooth master said, That he was; and that the king usurper.

Suf. Who is there? [Enter Servants.]—Tell fellow in, and send for his master with a presently:—we'll hear more of your matter to king.

Q. Mar. And as for you that love to be present Under the wings of our protector's grace, Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

[Tears the Away, base cullions!—Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone. [Exeunt P

Q. Mar. My lord of Suffolk, say, is this the Is this the fashions in the court of England?

Is this the government of Britain's isle,

And this the royalty of Albion's king?

What, shall king Henry be a pupil still,

Under the surly Gloster's governance?

Am I a queen in title and in style,

And must be made a subject to a duke?

I tell thee, Poole, when in the city Tours

<sup>a</sup> In the quill, or in quill, must mean written—petitions. In the same way in print means printed.

n't a tilt in honour of my love,
 at away the ladies' hearts of France,
 king Henry had resembled thee,
 e, courtship, and proportion:
 is mind is bent to holiness,
 er Ave-Maries on his beads:
 pions are the prophets and apostles;
 ons, holy saws of sacred writ;
 r is his tilt-yard, and his loves n images of canoniz'd saints.
 the college of the cardinals
 hoose him pope, and carry him to Rome, he triple crown upon his head;
 e a state fit for his holiness.
 Madam, be patient: as I was cause ousness came to England, so will I nd work your grace's full content.
 r. Beside the haughty protector, have we Beaufort,
 rious churchman; Somerset, Buckingham, bling York: and not the least of these do more in England than the king.
 and he of these that can do most of all o more in England than the Nevils:
 and Warwick are no simple peers.
 e. Not all these lords do vex me half so much mood dame, the lord protector's wife.
 s it through the court with troops of ladies,
 an empress than duke Humphrey's wife;
 in court do take her for the queen:
 a duke's revenues on her back,
 er heart she scorns our poverty:
 at live to be aveng'd on her?
 nous base-born callat as she is,
 ed 'mongst her minions t' other day,
 train of her worst wearing-gown
 e worth than all my father's lands, dk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.
 Madam, myself have lim'd a bush for her;
 'd a quire of such enticing birds, will light to listen to the lays,
 r mouset to trouble you again.
 rest: And, madam, list to me;
 hold to counsel you in this:
 we fancy not the cardinal,
 we join with him, and with the lords,
 we brought duke Humphrey in disgrace.
 duke of York, this late complaint
 e but little for his benefit:
 come, we'll weed them all at last,
 yourself shall steer the happy helm.

KING HENRY, YORK and SOMERSET conversing with DUKE and DUCHESS OF GLOSTER, CAR-BEAUFORT, BUCKINGHAM, SALISBURY, and OCK.

For my part, noble lords, I care not which;
 et, or York, all's one to me.
 f York have ill demean'd himself in France,
 im be deny'd* the regentship.
 Somerset be unworthy of the place,
 we regent, I will yield to him.
 Whether your grace be worthy, yea, or no, t that: York is the worthier.
 ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak.
 e cardinal's not my better in the field.
 If in this presence are thy betters, Warwick.
 arwick may live to be the best of all.
 ce, son; and show some reason, Buckingham, est should be prefer'd in this.

Because the king, forsooth, will have it so.
 dant, the king is old enough himself censure; these are no women's matters.
 t—denied.

* Censure—opinion.

Q. Mar. If he be old enough, what needs your grace
 To be protector of his excellence?

Glo. Madam, I am protector of the realm;
 And at his pleasure will resign my place.

Suf. Resign it then, and leave thine insolence.
 Since thou wert king, (as who is king but thou?)
 The commonwealth hath daily run to wrack:
 The dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas;
 And all the peers and nobles of the realm
 Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty.

Car. The commons hast thou rack'd; the clergy's bags
 Are lank and lean with thy extortions.

Som. Thy sumptuous buildings, and thy wife's attire,
 Have cost a mass of public treasury.

Buck. Thy cruelty in execution,
 Upon offenders, hath exceeded law,
 And left thee to the mercy of the law.

Q. Mar. Thy sale of offices, and towns in France,
 If they were known, as the suspect is great,
 Would make thee quickly hop without thy head.

[Exit GLOSTER. The QUEEN drops her fan.
 Give me my fan: What, minion! can you not?

[Gives the DUCHESS a box on the ear.]

I cry you mercy, madam; was it you?

Duch. Was't I? yea, I it was, proud Frenchwoman:
 Could I come near your beauty with my nails,
 I'd set my ten commandments<sup>a</sup> in your face.

K. Hen. Sweet aunt, be quiet; 't was against her will.

Duch. Against her will! Good king, look to 't in time;
 She'll hamper thee, and dandle thee like a baby.
 Though in this place most master wear no breeches,
 She shall not strike dame Eleanor unreveng'd.

[Exit DUCH.]

Buck. Lord cardinal, I will follow Eleanor,
 And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds:
 She's tickled now: her fume needs no spurs,
 She'll gallop far enough to her destruction. [Ex. BUCK.]

Re-enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Now, lords, my choler being over-blown,
 With walking once about the quadrangle,
 I come to talk of commonwealth affairs.

As for your spiteful false objections,
 Prove them, and I lie open to the law:
 But God in mercy so deal with my soul,
 As I in duty love my king and country!
 But, to the matter that we have in hand:
 I say, my sovereign, York is meetest man
 To be your regent in the realm of France.

Suf. Before we make election, give me leave
 To show some reason, of no little force,
 That York is most unmeet of any man.

York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet.

First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride:
 Next, if I be appointed for the place,
 My lord of Somerset will keep me here,
 Without discharge, money, or furniture,
 Till France be won into the dauphin's hands.
 Last time, I danc'd attendance on his will,
 Till Paris was besieg'd, famish'd, and lost.

War. That can I witness; and a fouler fact
 Did never traitor in the land commit.

Suf. Peace, headstrong Warwick!

War. Image of pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter Servants of SUFFOLK, bringing in HONNOR and PETER.

Suf. Because here is a man accus'd of treason:
 Pray God, the duke of York excuse himself!

York. Doth any one accuse York for a traitor?

<sup>a</sup> Ten commandments. This phrase, which might more worthily fill the mouth of a lady of the fish-market, was common to the dramatists who wrote before the date of this play, and after.

GSTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, and SALISBURY ;
SES OF GLOSTER, MARGERY JOURDAIN, L, HUME, and BOLINGBROKE, under and furth, dame Eleanor Cobham, Glos-wife :

nd, and us, your guilt is great ;

hence to prison back again ;

[To JOURD., &c. unto the place of execution :

* Plot—spot.

The witch in Smithfield shall be burn'd to ashes,
And you three shall be strangled on the gallows.
You, madam, for you are more nobly born,
Despoiled of your honour in your life,
Shall, after three days' open penance done,
Live in your country here in banishment,
With sir John Stanley, in the isle of Man.

Duch. Welcome is banishment, welcome were my death.

Glo. Eleanor, the law, thou seest, hath judged thee ;
I cannot justify whom the law condemns.—

[Exeunt the Duch., and the other prisoners, guarded.
Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.
Ah, Humphrey, this dishonour in thine age
Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground !
I beseech your majesty give me leave to go ;
Sorrow would solace, and mine age would ease.

K. Hen. Stay, Humphrey duke of Gloster : ere thou go Give up thy staff ; Henry will to himself
Protector be : and God shall be my hope.
My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet ;
And go in peace, Humphrey ; no less belov'd
Than when thou wert protector to thy king.

Q. Mar. I see no reason why a king of years
Should be to be protected like a child.

God and king Henry govern England's helm :
Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm.

Glo. My staff?—here, noble Henry, is my staff :
As willingly do I the same resign,

As ere thy father Henry made it mine ;
And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it,
As others would ambitiously receive it.
Farewell, good king : when I am dead and gone,
May honourable peace attend thy throne. [Exit.

Q. Mar. Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret queen ;

And Humphrey duke of Gloster scarce himself,
That bears so shrewd a maim ; two pulls at once,—
His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off ;
This staff of honour raught<sup>a</sup>—There let it stand,
Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand.

Suf. Thus droops this lofty pine, and hangs his sprays ;

Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days.

York. Lords, let him go :—Please it your majesty,
This is the day appointed for the combat ;
And ready are the appellant and defendant,
The armourer and his man, to enter the lists,
So please your highness to behold the fight.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord ; for purposely therefore Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.

K. Hen. O' God's name, see the lists and all things fit
Here let them end it, and God defend the right !

York. I never saw a fellow worse bested,
Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,
The servant of this armourer, my lords.

Enter, on one side, HORNER, and his neighbours drinking to him so much that he is drunk ; and he enters bearing his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it ; a drum before him : at the other side, PETER, with a drum and a similar staff ; accompanied by prentices drinking to him.

1 Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack. And fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough.

2 Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneco.<sup>b</sup>

3 Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour : drink, and fear not your man.

Hor. Let it come, i' faith, and I 'll pledge you all ;
and a fig for Peter !

<sup>b</sup> Charneco—the name of a wine.

1 Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee; and be not afraid.

2 Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master: fight for credit of the prentices.

Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me, I pray you; for I think I have taken my last draught in this world.—Here, Robin, an if I die I give thee my apron; and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer:—and here, Tom, take all the money that I have.—O Lord, bless me, I pray God! for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.

Sal. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows.—Sirrah, what's thy name?

Peter. Peter, forsooth.

Sal. Peter! what more?

Peter. Thump.

Sal. Thump! then see thou thump thy master well.

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave and myself an honest man: and touching the duke of York, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen: And therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow, as Bevis of Southampton fell upon Ascapart.

York. Despatch;—this knave's tongue begins to double.

Sound trumpets alarum to the combatants.

[Alarum. They fight, and PETER strikes down his master.

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason.

York. Take away his weapon:—Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way.

Peter. O God! have I overcome mine enemies in this presence? O Peter, thou hast prevailed in right!

K. Hen. Go, take hence that traitor from our sight; For, by his death, we do perceive his guilt: And God, in justice, hath reveal'd to us The truth and innocence of this poor fellow, Which he had thought to have murder'd wrongfully. Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The same. A Street.

Enter GLOSTER and Servants, in mourning cloaks.

Glo. Thus, sometimes, hath the brightest day a cloud; And after summer evermore succeeds Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold: So cares and joys abound as seasons fleet. Sirs, what's o'clock?

Serv. Ten, my lord.

Glo. Ten is the hour that was appointed me, To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess; Unearth<sup>a</sup> may she endure the flinty streets, To tread them with her tender-feeling feet. Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook The abject people, gazing on thy face, With envious<sup>b</sup> looks still laughing at thy shame, That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels, When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets. But soft! I think she comes; and I'll prepare My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries.

Enter the DUCHESS OF GLOSTER, in a white sheet, with papers pinned upon her back, her feet bare, and a taper burning in her hand; SIR JOHN STANLEY, a Sheriff, and Officers.

Serv. So please your grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.

Glo. No, stir not, for your lives; let her pass by.

Duch. Come you, my lord, to see my open shame? Now thou dost penance too. Look, how they gaze! See, how the giddy multitude do point,

And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee! Ah, Gloster, hide thee from their hateful looks:

And in thy closet pent up rue my shame, And ban thine enemies, both mine and thine.

Glo. Be patient, gentle Nell; forget this grief.

Duch. Ah, Gloster, teach me to forget myself:

For, whilst I think I am thy married wife, And thou a prince, protector of this land, Methinks I should not thus be led along, Mail'd up in shame, with papers on my back; And follow'd with a rabble, that rejoice To see my tears, and hear my deep-fet<sup>a</sup> groans. The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet; And when I start the envious people laugh, And bid me be advised how I tread.

Ah, Humphrey, can I bear this shameful yoke?

Trowest thou that e'er I'll look upon the world;

Or count them happy that enjoy the sun?

No; dark shall be my light, and night my day;

To think upon my pomp shall be my hell.

Sometime I'll say, I am duke Humphrey's wife;

And he a prince, and ruler of the land:

Yet so he rul'd, and such a prince he was,

As he stood by, whilst I, his forlorn duchess,

Was made a wonder, and a pointing stock,

To every idle rascal follower.

But be thou mild, and blush not at my shame;

Nor stir at nothing, till the axe of death

Hang over thee, as sure it shortly will.

For Suffolk,—he that can do all in all

With her, that hateth thee, and hates us all,—

And York, and impious Beaufort, that false priest,

Have all lim'd bushes to betray thy wings,

And, fly thou how thou canst, they'll tangle thee:

But fear not thou until thy foot be snar'd,

Nor never seek prevention of thy foes.

Glo. Ah, Nell, forbear; thou aimest all awry:

I must offend before I be attained:

And had I twenty times so many foes,

And each of them had twenty times their power,

All these could not procure me any scath,<sup>b</sup>

So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless.

Wouldst have me rescue thee from this reproach?

Why, yet thy scandal were not wip'd away,

But I in danger for the breach of law.

Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell:

I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience;

These few days' wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your grace to his majesty's command, holden at Bury the first of this next month.

Glo. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein before! This is close dealing.—Well, I will be there.

[Exit Her.] My Nell, I take my leave:—and, master sheriff,

Let not her penance exceed the king's commission.

Sher. An't please your grace, here my commission stays:

And sir John Stanley is appointed now

To take her with him to the isle of Man.

Glo. Must you, sir John, protect my lady here?

Stan. So am I given in charge, may't please your grace.

Glo. Entreat her not the worse, in that I pray

You use her well:

The world may laugh again; and I may live

To do you kindness, if you do it her.

And so, sir John, farewell.

Duch. What, gone, my lord; and bid me not well?

Glo. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak.

[Exeunt GLOSTER and Servants.]

<sup>a</sup> Deep-fet—deep-fetched.

<sup>b</sup> Scath—harm.

Art thou gone too? All comfort go with thee, abides with me: my joy is—death;
 whose name I oft have been afraid, wish'd this world's eternity.—
 Prithce, go, and take me hence, whither, for I beg no favour,
 they me where thou art commanded.
 Why, madam, that is to the isle of Man;
 as used according to your state.
 That 's had enough, for I am but reproach:
 I then be used reproachfully?
 Like to a duchess, and duke Humphrey's lady, to that state you shall be used.

Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare
 Although thou hast been conduct of my shame!
Sher. It is my office; and, madam, pardon me.
Duch. Ay, ay, farewell; thy office is discharged.
 Come, Stanley, shall we go?
Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off this sheet,
 And go we to attire you for our journey.
Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my
 sheet;
 No, it will hang upon my richest robes,
 And show itself, attire me how I can.
 Go, lead the way; I long to see my prison. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Abbey at Bury

*The Parliament, KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, CARDINAL BRAUFORT, SUFFOLK, YORK,
 GLOSTER, and others.*

K. I muse,* my lord of Gloster is not come:
 his wont to be the hindmost man, occasion keeps him from us now.
C. Can you not see? or will you not observe the gentleness of his alter'd countenance?
 that a majesty he bears himself;
 that of late he is become,
 as, presumptory, and unlike himself?
 the time since he was mild and affable;
 we did but glance a far-off look,
 why he was upon his knee,
 the court admir'd him for submission;
 him now, and, be it in the morn,
 my name will give the time of day,
 his brow, and shows an angry eye,
 as by with stiff unbowed knee,
 the duty that to us belongs.
 we are not regarded when they grin;
 men tremble when the lion roars;
 glory is no little man in England,
 that he is near you in descent,
 if you fall he is the next will mount.
 then, it is no policy,—
 what a rancorous mind he bears, advantage following your decease,— would come about your royal person, stand to your highness' council.
 hath he won the commons' hearts;
 he please to make commotion,
 wou'd they all will follow him.
 the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;
 now, and they 'll o'ergrow the garden,
 his herbs for want of husbandry.
 care I bear unto my lord
 Hence these dangers in the duke.
 call it a woman's fear;
 if better reasons can supplant,
 like and say—I wou'd the duke Suffolk,—Buckingham,—and York,— allegation, if you can;
 have my words effectual.
 he hath your highness seen into this duke;
 not been put to speak my mind,
 wou'd have told your grace's tale,
 by his subornation,
 he, began her devilish practices:
 we not privy to those faults,
 sting of his high descent,

* I muse—I wonder.

(As next the king he was successive heir,
 And such high vaunts of his nobility,
 Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess,
 By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall.
 Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep;
 And in his simple show he harbours treason.
 The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb.
 No, no, my sovereign; Gloster is a man
 Unsounded yet, and full of deep deceit.
Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
 Devise strange deaths for small offences done?
York. And did he not, in his protectorship,
 Levy great sums of money through the realm,
 For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it?
 By means whereof the towns each day revolted.
Buck. Tut! These are petty faults to faults unknown, Which time will bring to light in smooth duke Hamphrey.
K. Hen. My lords, at once. The case you have of
 us,
 To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot,
 Is worthy praise: But shall I speak my conscience?
 Our kinsman Gloster is as innocent
 From meaning treason to our royal person,
 As is the sucking lamb, or harmless dove:
 The duke is virtuous, mild; and too well given,
 To dream on evil, or to work my downfall.
Q. Mar. Ah, what 's more dangerous than this fond alliance!
 Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow'd,
 For he 's disposed as the hateful raven.
 Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him,
 For he 's inclin'd as are the ravenous wolves.
 Who cannot steal a shape that means deceit?
 Take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Enter SOMERSET.

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign!
K. Hen. Welcome, lord Somerset. What news from France?
Som. That all your interest in those territories
 Is utterly bereft you; all is lost.
K. Hen. Cold news, lord Somerset: But God's will be done!
York. Cold news for me: for I had hope of France,
 As firmly as I hope for fertile England.
 Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud,
 And caterpillars eat my leaves away;
 But I will remedy this gear ere long
 Or sell my title for a glorious grave. [Aside.]

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. All happiness unto my lord the king!

Pardon, my liege, that I have stay'd so long.

Suf. Nay, Gloster, know that thou art come too soon,
Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art :
I do arrest thee of high treason here.

Glc. Well, Suffolk's duke, thou shalt not see me blush,

Nor change my countenance for this arrest ;
A heart unspotted is not easily daunted.
The purest spring is not so free from mud
As I am clear from treason to my sovereign :
Who can accuse me ? wherein am I guilty ?

York. 'T is thought, my lord, that you took bribes of France,

And, being protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay ;
By means whereof his highness hath lost France.

Glc. Is it but thought so ? What are they that think it ?

I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.
So help me God, as I have watch'd the night,—
Ay, night by night,—in studying good for England !
That doth that e'er I wrested from the king,
Or any groat I hoarded to my use,
Be brought against me at my trial day !
No ! many a pound of mine own proper store,
Because I would not tax the needy commons,
Have I dispersed to the garrisons
And never ask'd for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so much.
Glc. I say no more than truth, so help me God !

York. In your protectorship, you did devise Strange tortures for offenders, never heard of,
That England was defam'd by tyranny.

Glc. Why, 't is well known, that whiles I was protector

Pity was all the fault that was in me ;
For I should melt at an offender's tears,
And lowly words were ransom for their fault.
Unless it were a bloody murderer,
Or foul felonious thief, that fleec'd poor passengers,
I never gave them condign punishment :
Murder, indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur'd
Above the felon, or what trespass else.

Suf. My lord, these faults are easy, quickly answer'd :
But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge,
Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.
I do arrest you in his highness' name ;
And here commit you to my lord cardinal
To keep, until your further time of trial.

K. Hen. My lord of Gloster, 't is my special hope,
That you will clear yourself from all suspects ;
My conscience tells me you are innocent.

Glc. Ah, gracious lord, these days are dangerous.
Virtue is chok'd with foul ambition,
And charity chas'd hence by rancour's hand ;
Foul subornation is predominant,
And equity exil'd your highness' land.
I know their complot is to have my life ;
And, if my death might make this island happy,
And prove the period of their tyranny,
I would expend it with all willingness :
But mine is made the prologue to their play ;
For thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,
Will not conclude their plotted tragedy.
Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's malice,
And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate ;
Sharp Buckingham unburthens with his tongue
The envious load that lies upon his heart ;
And dogged York, that reaches at the moon,
Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back,
By false accuse doth level at my life :
And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest,
Causeless have laid disgraces on my head .
And, with your best endeavour, have stirr'd up

My liefest* liege to be mine enemy :

Ay, all of you have laid your heads together
Myself had notice of your conventicles,
And all to make away my guiltless life :
I shall not want false witness to condemn ;
Nor store of treasons to augment my guilt ;
The ancient proverb will be well affected,
A staff is quickly found to beat a dog.

Car. My liege, his railing is intolerable ;
If those that care to keep your royal person
From treason's secret knife, and traitors' rap
Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at,
And the offender granted scope of speech,
'T will make them cool in zeal unto your state.

Suf. Hath he not twit our sovereign lady
With ignominious words, though clerkly
As if she had suborned some to swear
False allegations to o'erthrow his state ?

Q. Mar. But I can give the loser leave !
Glc. Far truer spoke than meant : I lose Beshrew the winners, for they play'd me false
And well such losers may have leave to speak.

Buck. He 'll wrest the sense, and hold us
Lord cardinal, he is your prisoner.

Car. Sirs, take away the duke, and gush

Glc. Ah, thus king Henry throws away
Before his legs be firm to bear his body :
Thus is the shepherd beaten from thy side,
And wolves are gnawing who shall gnaw thee
Ah, that my fear were false ! ah, that it were
For, good king Henry, thy decay I fear.

[Exeunt Attendants, with

K. Hen. My lords, what to your wisest best,

Do, or undo, as if ourself were here.

Q. Mar. What, will your highness leave ment ?

K. Hen. Ay, Margaret ; my heart is drown'd Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes
My body round engirt with misery ;
For what's more miserable than discontent
Ah, uncle Humphrey ! in thy face I see
The map of honour, truth, and loyalty ;
And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to go
That e'er I prov'd thee false, or fear'd thy
What low'ring star now envies thy estate,
That these great lords, and Margaret our
Do seek subversion of thy harmless life ?
Thou never didst them wrong, nor no man
And as the butcher takes away the calf,
And binds the wretch, and beats it when it
Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house ;
Even so, remorseless, have they borne him
And as the dam runs lowing up and down
Looking the way her harmless young one
And can do nought but wail her darling's
Even so myself bewails good Gloster's case
With sad unhelpful tears ; and with dim
Look after him, and cannot do him good ;
So mighty are his vowed enemies.

His fortunes I will weep ; and, twixt each Say—" Who's a traitor, Gloster he is none !"

Q. Mar. Free lords, cold snow melts with hot beams.

Henry my lord is sold in great affairs,
Too full of foolish pity : and Gloster's shame
Beguiles him, as the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers ;
Or as the snake, roll'd in a flowering bank,
With shining checker'd slough, doth sting
That, for the beauty, thinks it excellent.
Believe me, lords, were none more woe than (And yet, herein I judge mine own wit good each that craves a quick expedient<sup>c</sup> stop !

 I give you in this weighty cause ?
 at Somerset be sent as regent thither ;
 at lucky ruler be employ'd ;
 fortune he hath had in France.
 ork, with all his far-fet policy,
 e regent there instead of me,
 old have stay'd in France so long.
 not to lose it all as thou hast done :
 d have lost my life betimes,
 e burthen of dishonour home,
 here so long, till all were lost.
 scar character'd on thy skin :
 reserv'd so whole, do seldom win.

* Motes—blasts—confounds.
<sup>b</sup> Expedient—expedient.
<sup>c</sup> Expedient—expedient.

Q. Mar. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging
 fire,

If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with :
 No more, good York ;—sweet Somerset, be still :
 Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been regent there, Might happily have prov'd far worse than his.

York. What, worse than naught ? nay, then a shame take all !

Som. And in the number, thee, that wishest shame !

Car. My lord of York, try what your fortune is.

The uncivil Kernes of Ireland are in arms,
 And temper clay with blood of Englishmen :
 To Ireland will you lead a band of men,
 Collected choicely, from each county some,
 And try your hap against the Irishmen ?

York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty.

Suf. Why, our authority is his consent ;
 And what we do establish he confirms :
 Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.

York. I am content : Provide me soldiers, lords, Whiles I take order for mine own affairs.

Suf. A charge, lord York, that I will see perform'd
 But now return we to the false duke Humphrey.

Car. No more of him ; for I will deal with him,
 That henceforth he shall trouble us no more.
 And so break off ; the day is almost spent :
 Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.

York. My lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days,
 At Bristol I expect my soldiers ;
 For there I 'll ship them all for Ireland.

Suf. I 'll see it truly done, my lord of York.

[Exeunt all but YORK.]

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful thoughts
 And change misdoubt to resolution :
 Be that thou hop'st to be ; or what thou art
 Resign to death, it is not worth the enjoying :
 Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the mean-born man,
 And find no harbour in a royal heart.

Faster than spring-time showers comes thought on thought,
 And not a thought but thinks on dignity.

My brain, more busy than the labouring spider,
 Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies.

Well, nobles, well, 't is politicly done,
 To send me packing with an host of men :
 I fear me you but warm the starved snake,
 Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts.

'T was men I lack'd, and you will give them me :
 I take it kindly ; yet, be well assur'd
 You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands.

Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty band,
 I will stir up in England some black storm
 Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven or hell :

And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage
 Until the golden circuit on my head,

Like to the glorious son's transparent beams,
 Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.<sup>a</sup>

And, for a minister of my intent,
 I have seduc'd a headstrong Kentishman,

John Cade of Ashford,

To make commotion, as full well he can,
 Under the title of John Mortimer.

In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade
 Oppose himself against a troop of Kernes ;
 And fought so long, till that his thighs with darts
 Were almost like a sharp-quill'd porcupine ;

And, in the end being rescued, I have seen
 Him caper upright like a wild Morisco,<sup>b</sup>

Shaking the bloody darts, as he his bells.
 Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafty Kerne,
 Hath he conversed with the enemy ;
 And undiscover'd come to me again,

<sup>a</sup> Flaw—a sudden gust of wind.

 of the morris-dance.

And given me notice of their villainies.
This devil here shall be my substitute;
For that John Mortimer, which now is dead,
In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble:
By this I shall perceive the commons' mind,
How they affect the house and claim of York.
Say, he be taken, rack'd, and tortured;
I know no pain they can inflict upon him
Will make him say—I mov'd him to those arms.
Say, that he thrive, (as 't is great like he will,)
Why, then from Ireland come I with my strength,
And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd:
For, Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,
And Henry put apart, the next for me. [Exit

SCENE II.—Bury. A Room in the Palace

Enter certain Murderers, hastily.

1 Mur. Run to my lord of Suffolk; let him know
We have despatch'd the duke, as he commanded.
2 Mur. O, that it were to do!—What have we done?
Didst ever hear a man so penitent?

Enter SUFFOLK.

1 Mur. Here comes my lord.
Suf. Now, sirs, have you despatch'd this thing?
1 Mur. Ay, my good lord, he 's dead.
Suf. Why, that 's well said. Go, get you to my house;
I will reward you for this venturesome deed.
The king and all the peers are here at hand:—
Have you laid fair the bed? are all things well,
According as I gave directions?
1 Mur. 'T is, my good lord.
Suf. Away, be gone! [Exeunt Murderers.

Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, CARDINAL
BEAUFORT, SOMERSET, Lords, and others.

K. Hen. Go, call our uncle to our presence straight:
Say, we intend to try his grace to-day,
If he be guilty, as 't is published.

Suf. I 'll call him presently, my noble lord. [Exit.

K. Hen. Lords, take your places:—And, I pray you all

Proceed no straiter 'gainst our uncle Gloster,
Than from true evidence, of good esteem,
He be approv'd in practice culpable.

Q. Mar. God forbid any malice should prevail,
That faultless may condemn a nobleman!
Pray God he may acquit him of suspicion!

K. Hen. I thank thee, Margaret; these words content me much.—

Re-enter SUFFOLK.

How now? why look'st thou pale? why tremblest thou?
Where is our uncle? what 's the matter, Suffolk?

Suf. Dead in his bed, my lord; Gloster is dead.

Q. Mar. Marry, God forefend!

Car. God's secret judgment:—I did dream to-night
The duke was dumb, and could not speak a word.

[The KING swoons.

Q. Mar. How fares my lord?—Help, lords! the king is dead.

Som. Rear up his body; wring him by the nose.

Q. Mar. Run, go, help, help!—O Henry, ope thine eyes!

Suf. He doth revive again:—Madam, be patient.

K. Hen. O heavenly God!

Q. Mar. How fares my gracious lord?

Suf. Comfort, my sovereign! gracious Henry, comfort!

K. Hen. What, doth my lord of Suffolk comfort me?

Came he right now to sing a raven's note,
Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers;
And thinks he that the chirping of a wren,
By crying comfort from a hollow breast,
Can chase away the first-conceived sound?
Hide not thy poison with such sugar'd words.
Lay not thy hands on me; forbear, I say;
Their touch affrights me as a serpent's sting.
Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight!
Upon thy eyeballs murderous tyranny
Sits in grim majesty, to fright the world.
Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wounding:
Yet do not go away:—Come, basilisk,
And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight:
For in the shade of death I shall find joy;
In life but double death, now Gloster's dead.

Q. Mar. Why do you rate my lord of Suffolk
Although the duke was enemy to him,
Yet he, most christianlike, laments his death:
And for myself, foe as he was to me,
Might liquid tears, or heart-offending groans,
Or blood-consuming sighs recall his life,
I would be blind with weeping, sick with groans,
Look pale as primrose with blood-drinking sighs,
And all to have the noble duke alive.
What know I how the world may deem of me?
For it is known we were-but hollow friends;
It may be judg'd I made the duke away:
So shall my name with slander's tongue be worn
And princes' courts be fill'd with my reproach.
This get I by his death: Ah me, unhappy!
To be a queen, and crown'd with infamy!

K. Hen. Ah, woe is me for Gloster, wretched!

Q. Mar. Be woe for me, more wretched than What, dost thou turn away, and hide thy face?
I am no loathsome leper, look on me.

What, art thou like the adder waxen deaf?
Be poisonous too, and kill thy forlorn queen.

Is all thy comfort shut in Gloster's tomb?
Why, then dame Margaret was ne'er thy joy:
Erect his statue then, and worship it,
And make my image but an alehouse sign.

Was I for this nigh wreck'd upon the sea;
And twice by awkward wind from England's bay
Drove back again unto my native clime?

What boded this, but well-forewarning wind
Did seem to say,—Seek not a scorpion's nest,
Nor set no footing on this unkind shore?

What did I then, but curs'd the gentle gusts,
And he that loos'd them forth their brazen covers,
And bid them blow towards England's blessed bay
Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock?

Yet Æolus would not be a murderer,
But left that hateful office unto thee:
The pretty vaulting sea refus'd to drown me;
Knowing that thou wouldst have me drown'd as
With tears as salt as sea, through thy unkindness
The splitting rocks cow'r'd in the sinking sands,
And would not dash me with their ragged sides;
Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,
Might in thy palace perish * Margaret.

As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,
When from thy shore the tempest beat us back,
I stood upon the hatches in the storm:
And when the dusky sky began to rob
My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view,
I took a costly jewel from my neck,—
A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,—
And threw it towards thy land;—the sea receiv'd it,
And so I wish'd thy body might my heart:
And even with this I lost fair England's view,
And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart;
And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles.

* Perish; used actively, as destroy.

ken of Albion's wished coast.
I have I tempted Suffolk's tongue (of thy foul inconstancy) witch me, as Ascanius did, to madding Dido would unfold his acts, commenc'd in burning Troy!
witch'd like her? or thou not false like him?
can no more! Die, Margaret!
weep that thou dost live so long.

Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY.

The Commons press to the door.

It is reported, mighty sovereign, duke Humphrey traitorously is murder'd and the cardinal Beaufort's means.
sons, like an angry hive of bees,
their leader, scatter up and down,
not who they sting in his revenge.
we calm'd their spleenful mutiny,
hear the order of his death.

That he is dead, good Warwick, 't is too true;

He died, God knows, not Henry:
chamber, view his breathless corpse,
sent then upon his sudden death.
That shall I do, my liege:—Stay, Salisbury, rude multitude, till I return.

K. goes into an inner room, and SAL. retires.
O thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts;

hands, that labour to persuade my soul
ent hands were laid on Humphrey's life!

pect be false, forgive me, God;
sent only doth belong to thee!
did I go to chafe his paly lips sty thousand kisses, and to drain face an ocean of salt tears;
y love unto his dumb deaf trunk,
my fingers feel his hand unfeeling:
vain are these mean obsequies;
wey his dead and earthy image,
it but to make my sorrow greater?

*ing doors of an inner chamber are thrown and GLOSTER is discovered dead in his bed:
K. and others standing by it.*

hence hither, gracious sovereign, view this body.

That is, to see how deep my grave is made:
his soul fled all my worldly solace:
him, I see my life in death.

as surely as my soul intends to live dread King, that took our state upon him from his Father's wrathful curse, that violent hands were laid ife of this thrice-famed duke.

breadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue!
nce gives lord Warwick for his vow?
se, how the blood is settled in his face!

seen a timely-parted ghost,
nblance, meagre, pale, and bloodless, descended to the labouring heart;
e conflict that it holds with death,
e same for aidance 'gainst the enemy;
e the heart there cools, and ne'er returneth
ed beautify the cheek again.

face is black, and full of blood;
is farther out than when he liv'd,
ghastly like a strangled man:
wear'd, his nostrils stretch'd with struggling;

parted ghost. The word ghost was used somewhat by old writers: it here undoubtedly means a body and from the soul.

give bloodless, by a licence of construction, includes in—the blood "being all descended," &c.

His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd
And tugg'd for life, and was by strength subdued.
Look on the sheets, his hair, you see, is sticking;
His well-proportion'd beard made rough and rugged,
Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodg'd.
It cannot be but he was murder'd here,
The least of all these signs were probable.

Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the duke to death?

Myself and Beaufort had him in protection;

And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers.

War. But both of you were vow'd duke Humphrey's foes;

And you, forsooth, had the good duke to keep:

'T is like you would not feast him like a friend;

And 't is well seen he found an enemy.

Q. Mar. Then you, belike, suspect these noblemen

As guilty of duke Humphrey's timeless death.

War. Who finds the heifer dead, and bleeding fresh,

And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
But will suspect 't was he that made the slaughter?

Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest,

But may imagine how the bird was dead,

Although the kite soar with unbloody beak?

Even so suspicious is this tragedy.

Q. Mar. Are you the butcher, Suffolk; where's your knife?

Is Beaufort term'd a kite; where are his talons?

Suf. I wear no knife to slaughter sleeping men;

But here 's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease,

That shall be scoured in his rancorous heart

That slanders me with murder's crimson badge;

Say, if thou dar'st, proud lord of Warwickshire,

That I am faulty in duke Humphrey's death.

[Exeunt CARDINAL, SOM., and others.]

War. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare
him?

Q. Mar. He dares not calm his contumelious spirit,
Nor cease to be an arrogant controller,

Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times.

War. Madam, be still, with reverence may I say;

For every word you speak in his behalf

Is slander to your royal dignity.

Suf. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour.

If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much,

Thy mother took into her blameful bed

Some stern untutor'd churl, and noble stock

Was graft with crab-tree slip; whose fruit thou art,

And never of the Nevils' noble race.

War. But that the guilt of murder bucklers thee,

And I should rob the deathsman of his fee,

Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,

And that my sovereign's presence makes me mild,

I would, false murderous coward, on thy knee

Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech,

And say—It was thy mother that thou meant'st,

That thou thyself wast born in bastardy:

And, after all this fearful homage done,

Give thee thy hire, and send thy soul to hell,

Pernicious bloodsucker of sleeping men!

Suf. Thou shalt be waking while I shed thy blood,

If from this presence thou dar'st go with me.

War. Away even now, or I will drag thee hence:

Unworthy though thou art, I'll cope with thee,

And do some service to duke Humphrey's ghost.

[Exeunt SUFFOLK and WARWICK.]

K. Hen. What stronger breastplate than a heart un tainted!

Thrice is he arm'd that hath his quarrel just;

And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel,

Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

[A noise within.]

Q. Mar. What noise is this?

2 H 2

Re-enter SUFFOLK and WARWICK, with their weapons drawn.

K. Hen. Why, how now, lords? your wrathful weapons drawn

Here in our presence? dare you be so bold?—
Why, what tumultuous clamour have we here?

Suf. The traitorous Warwick, with the men of Bury,
Set all upon me, mighty sovereign.

Noise of a crowd within. Re-enter SALISBURY.

Sal. Sirs, stand apart; the king shall know your mind.—
[Speaking to those within.]

Dread lord, the commons send you word by me,
Unless lord Suffolk straight be done to death,
Or banished fair England's territories,
They will by violence tear him from your palace,
And torture him with grievous ling'ring death.
They say, by him the good duke Humphrey died;
They say, in him they fear your highness' death,
And mere instinct of love, and loyalty,—
Free from a stubborn opposite intent,
As being thought to contradict your liking,—
Makes them thus forward in his banishment.
They say, in care of your most royal person,
That, if your highness should intend to sleep,
And charge that no man should disturb your rest,
In pain of your dislike, or pain of death;
Yet, notwithstanding such a strait edict,
Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
That slyly glided towards your majesty,
It were but necessary you were wak'd;
Lest, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber,
The mortal worm might make the sleep eternal:
And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,
That they will guard you whe'r you will or no,
From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is;
With whose envenomed and fatal sting,
Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth,
They say, is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king, my lord of Salisbury.

Suf. 'T is like, the commons, rude unpolish'd hinds,
Could send such message to their sovereign:
But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd,
To show how quaint an orator you are:
But all the honour Salisbury hath won,
Is, that he was the lord ambassador,
Sent from a sort of tinkers to the king.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king, or we will all break in.

K. Hen. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from me,
I thank them for their tender loving care;
And had I not been 'cited so by them,
Yet did I purpose as they do entreat;
For sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy
Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means.
And therefore, by His majesty I swear,
Whose far unworthy deputy I am,
He shall not breathe infection in this air
But three days longer, on the pain of death. [Exit SAL.]

Q. Mar. O Henry, let me plead for gentle Suffolk!

K. Hen. Ungentle queen, to call him gentle Suffolk.
No more, I say; if thou dost plead for him
Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath.
Had I but said, I would have kept my word;
But when I swear, it is irrevocable:
If, after three days' space, thou here be'st found
On any ground that I am ruler of,
The world shall not be ransom for thy life.
Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with me;
I have great matters to impart to thee.

[Exeunt K. HEN., WAR., Lords, &c.]

Q. Mar. Mischance and sorrow go along with you!

Heart's discontent, and sour affliction,
Be playfellows to keep you company!
There's two of you; the devil make a third
And threefold vengeance tend upon your sin.

Suf. Cease, gentle queen, these execration
And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.

Q. Mar. Fie, coward woman, and soft-beak!
Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemies?

Suf. A plague upon them! wherefore should I curse them?

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's
I would invent as bitter searching terms,
As curst, as harsh, and horrible to hear,
Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,
With full as many signs of deadly hate
As lean-fac'd Envy in her loathsome cave;
My tongue should stumble in mine earnest;
Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint;
My hair be fix'd on end, as one distract;
Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban,
And even now my burthen'd heart would burst
Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink,
Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they drink,
Their sweetest shade a grove of cypress-trees,
Their chiefest prospect murdering basilisks,
Their softest touch as smart as lizards' sting,
Their music frightful as the serpents' hiss;
And boding screech-owls make the concert
All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell—

Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk; thou hast curs'd thyself;

And these dread curses, like the sun 'gainst
Or like an overcharged gun, recoil,
And turn the force of them upon thyself.

Suf. You bade me ban, and will you bid
Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from Well could I curse away a winter's night,
Though standing naked on a mountain top,
Where biting cold would never let grass grow,
And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Q. Mar. O, let me entreat thee, cease! I'll kiss thy hand,

That I may dew it with my mournful tears,
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my woeful monuments.
O, could this kiss be printed in thy hand,

[Kiss]
That thou might'st think upon these by the way,
Through whom a thousand sighs are breath'd,
So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief
'T is but surmis'd whilst thou art standing
As one that surfeits thinking on a want.

I will repeal thee, or, be well assur'd,
Adventure to be banish'd myself:
And banish'd I am, if but from thee.
Go, speak not to me; even now be gone.—
O, go not yet!—Even thus two friends come,
Embrace, and kiss, and take ten thousand kisses,
Lother a hundred times to part than die.
Yet now farewell; and farewell life with thee.

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banish'd
Once by the king, and three times thrice by thee.
'T is not the land I care for, wert thou there;
A wilderness is populous enough,
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company:
For where thou art there is the world itself,
With every several pleasure in the world;
And where thou art not, desolation.
I can no more:—Live thou to joy thy life;
Myself no joy in nought, but that thou liv'st.

Enter VAUX.

Q. Mar. Whither goes VAUX so fast? what's his business?

To signify unto his majesty
 linal Beaufort is at point of death :
 nly a grievous sickness took him,
 as him gasp, and stare, and catch the air, ing God, and cursing men on earth.
 he talks as if duke Humphrey's ghost his aide : sometime, he calls the king, pers to his pillow, as to him,
 is of his overcharged soul :
 sent to tell his majesty
 now he cries aloud for him.
 Go tell this heavy message to the king.

[Exit VAUX.]

What is this world? what news are these?
 fore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,
 Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure?
 Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,
 the southern clouds contend in tears;
 the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows?
 hree hence : The king, thou know'st, is coming!
 found by me thou art but dead.
 I depart from thee I cannot live :
 y sight to die, what were it else,
 pleasant slumber in thy lap?
 d I breathe my soul into the air,
 nd gentle as the cradle-babe,
 m mother's dug between its lips :
 sm thy sight, I should be raging mad,
 ut for thee to close up mine eyes,
 ee with thy lips to stop my mouth;
 t thou either turn my flying soul,
 d breathe it so into thy body,
 it liv'd in sweet Elysium.
 thee were but to die in jest;
 to die were torture more than death :
 ay, befall what may befall.

Away! though parting be a fretful corsive,<sup>b</sup>
 ed to a deathful wound.

weet Suffolk : Let me hear from thee;
 oe'er thou art in this world's globe,
 n Iris that shall find thee out.

And take my heart with thee
 ewel, lock'd into the woeful'st cask lid contain a thing of worth.

Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we;
 This way fall I to death.

Q. Mar. This way for me. [Ex. severally]

SCENE III.—London. Cardinal Beaufort's Bedchamber.

Enter KING HENRY, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and others. The CARDINAL in bed; Attendants with him.

K. Hen. How fares my lord? speak, Beaufort, to thy sovereign.

Car. If thou be'st death, I'll give thee England's treasure,

Enough to purchase such another island,
 So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain.

K. Hen. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life,
 Where death's approach is seen so terrible!

War. Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee.

Car. Bring me unto my trial when you will.

Died he not in his bed? where should he die?

Can I make men live, wher they will or no?—

O! torture me no more, I will confess.—

Alive again? then show me where he is;

I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him.—

He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.—

Comb down his hair; look! look! it stands upright,

Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul!—

Give me some drink; and bid the apothecary

Bring the strong poison that I bought of him.

K. Hen. O thou eternal Mover of the heavens,

Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch!

O, beat away the busy meddling fiend

That lays strong siege unto this wretch's soul,

And from his bosom purge this black despair

War. See, how the pangs of death do make him grin.

Sal. Disturb him not, let him pass peaceably.

K. Hen. Peace to his soul, if God's good pleasure

be!

Lord cardinal, if thou think'st on heaven's bliss,

Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope.—

He dies, and makes no sign; O God, forgive him

ACT IV.

I.—Kent. The Sea-shore, near Dover.

d at sea. Then enter from a boat, a Captain, a Master's-Mate, WALTER WHIT-men, prisoners.

gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful day and-bowling wolves arouse the jades in tragic melancholy night, air drowsy, slow, and flagging wings

 men's graves, and from their misty jaws contagious darkness in the air.
 ring forth the soldiers of our prize;
 our pinnace anchors in the Downs,
 they make their ransom on the sand, narrative.

1 Gent. What is my ransom, master? let me know.

Mast. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head.

Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.

Cap. What, think you much to pay two thousand crowns,

And bear the name and port of gentlemen?—

Cut both the villains' throats,—for die you shall.—

The lives of those which we have lost in fight

Be counterpois'd with such a petty sum?*

1 Gent. I'll give it, sir; and therefore spare my life

2 Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straight.

Whit. I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard,

And therefore to revenge it shalt thou die; [To SUFF.]

And so should these, if I might have my will.

Cap. Be not so rash; take ransom, let him live.

Suff. Look on my George, I am a gentleman;

Rate me at what thou wilt thou shalt be paid.

Whit. And so am I; my name is Walter Whitmore.

How now? why start'st thou? what, doth death affright?

* Upon the hesitation to pay ransom the captain exclaims,

"What, think you much," &c. He then, parenthetically threatens death; and continues his half-interrogative sentence,

"What, 'The lives of those which we have lost in fight be counterpois'd," &c.

Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death.
A cunning man did calculate my birth,
And told me that by Water<sup>a</sup> I should die.
Yet let not this make thee be bloody minded;
Thy name is Gualtier, being rightly sounded.

Whit. Gualtier, or Walter, which it is I care not;
Never yet did base dishonour blur our name,
But with our sword we wip'd away the blot;
Therefore, when merchant-like I sell revenge,
Broke be my sword, my arms torn and defac'd,
And I proclaim'd a coward through the world!

[Lays hold on SUFFOLK.]

Suf. Stay, Whitmore; for thy prisoner is a prince,
The duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole.

Whit. The duke of Suffolk, muffled up in rags!

Suf. Ay, but these rags are no part of the duke;
[Jove sometime went disguis'd, and why not I?]

Cap. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be.

Suf. Obscure and lowly swain, king Henry's blood,
The honourable blood of Lancaster,
Must not be shed by such a jaded groom.
Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand, and held my stirrup?
Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth mule,
And thought thee happy when I shook my head?
How often hast thou waited at my cup,
Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board,
When I have feasted with queen Margaret?
Remember it, and let it make thee crest-fall'n;
Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride:
How in our voiding lobby hast thou stood,
And duly waited for my coming forth?
This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf,
And therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue.

Whit. Speak, captain, shall I stab the forlorn swain?

Cap. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.

Suf. Base slave! thy words are blunt, and so art thou.
Cap. Convey him hence, and on our long-boat's side Strike off his head.

Suf. Thou dar'st not for thy own.

[Cap. Yes, Poole.

Suf. Poole?]

Cap. Poole! Sir Poole! lord!

Ay, kennel, puddle, sink; whose filth and dirt
Troubles the silver spring where England drinks.
Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth,
For swallowing the treasure of the realm:
Thy lips, that kiss'd the queen, shall sweep the ground:
And thou, that smil'dst at good duke Humphrey's death,
Against the senseless winds shalt grin in vain,
Who, in contempt, shall hiss at thee again:
And wedded be thou to the hags of hell,
For daring to affy<sup>b</sup> a mighty lord
Unto the daughter of a worthless king,
Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem.
By devilish policy art thou grown great,
And, like ambitious Sylla, overgorg'd
With gobbets of thy mother's bleeding heart.
By thee Anjou and Maine were sold to France:
The false revolting Normans, thorough thee,
Did claim to call us lord; and Picardy
Hath slain their governors, surpris'd our forts,
And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home.
The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all,
Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain,
As hating thee, are rising up in arms:
And now the house of York,—thrust from the crown,
By shameful murder of a guiltless king,
And lofty proud encroaching tyranny,—

<sup>a</sup> In the Incantation Scene in Act I. we have this prophecy:—

“What fates await the duke of Suffolk?
By water shall he die, and take his end.”

It appears from this passage that Water was commonly pronounced Water.

<sup>b</sup> To affy—to betroth.

Burns with revenging fire; whose hopeful
Advance our half-fac'd sun, striving to shide
Under the which is writ Invitis nubibus.<sup>a</sup>
The commons here in Kent are up in arms
And, to conclude, reproach, and beggary,
Is crept into the palace of our king,
And all by thee:—Away! convey him hence.

Suf. O that I were a god, to shoot forth
Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges!
Small things make base men proud: this villain
Being captain of a pinnace, threatens more Than Bargulus the strong Illyrian pirate.
Drones suck not eagles' blood, but rob bees—
It is impossible that I should die
By such a lowly vassal as thyself.

Thy words move rage, and not remorse, in
I go of message from the queen to France;
I charge thee waft me safely cross the channel.

Cap. Walter,—

Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to

Whit. Thou shalt have cause to fear be

I Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him, speak

Suf. Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern as Us'd to command, untaught to plead for Far be it we should honour such as these

With humble suit; no, rather let my head
Stoop to the block than these knees bow to Save to the God of heaven, and to my king
And sooner dance upon a bloody pole
Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom.
True nobility is exempt from fear:—
More can I bear than you dare execute.

Cap. Hale him away, and let him talk

Suf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty
That this my death may never be forgot!—
Great men oft die by vile bezonians:<sup>b</sup>
A Roman sworder and banditto slave

Stabb'd Julius Cæsar; savage islanders,
Pompey the great: and Suffolk dies by pit

Cap. And as for these whose ransom we
It is our pleasure one of them depart:—
Therefore come you with us, and let him go

[Execute all but the first]

Re-enter Whitmore, with Suffolk.

Whit. There let his head and lifeless box
Until the queen his mistress bury it.

I Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle
His body will I bear unto the king:
If he revenge it not, yet will his friends;
So will the queen, that living held him dear

SCENE II.—Blackheath.

Enter GEORGE BEVIS and JOHN HASTINGS.

Geo. Come, and get thee a sword, though lath; they have been up these two days.

nap upon it.

mentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man? Some say the bee stings: but I say 't is the bee's wax, for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since.
How now? who 's there?

Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham.

Smith. The clerk of Chatham: he can write and read, and cast accompt.

Cade. O monstrous!

Smith. We took him setting of boys' copies.

Cade. Here 's a villain!

Smith. H' as a book in his pocket with red letters in 't.

Cade. Nay, then he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make obligations, and write court-hand.

Cade. I am sorry for 't: the man is a proper man, of mine honour; unless I find him guilty he shall not die.—Come hither, sirrah, I must examine thee: What is thy name?

Clerk. Emmanuel.

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters;—
'T will go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone:—Dost thou use to write thy name? or hast thou a mark to thyself, like an honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank God I have been so well brought up that I can write my name.

All. He hath confessed: away with him; he 's a villain and a traitor.

Cade. Away with him, I say: bang him with his pen and inkhorn about his neck.

[Exeunt some with the Clerk.

Enter MICHAEL.

Mich. Where 's our general?

Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly! sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the king's forces.

Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I 'll fell thee down:
He shall be encountered with a man as good as himself: He is but a knight, is 'a?

Mich. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently: Rise up sir John Mortimer. Now have at
him.

Enter SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD, and WILLIAM his brother, with drum and Forces.

Staf. Rebellious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent,
Mark'd for the gallows, lay your weapons down,
Home to your cottages, forsake this groom;
The king is merciful, if you revolt.

W. Staf. But angry, wrathful, and inclin'd to blood,
If you go forward: Therefore yield, or die.

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not;

It is to you, good people, that I speak,

Over whom, in time to come, I hope to reign;

For I am rightful heir unto the crown.

Staf. Villain, thy father was a plasterer;

And thou thyself a shearman, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a gardener.

W. Staf. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this:—Edmund Mortimer, earl of March,

Married the duke of Clarence' daughter:—Did he not?

Staf. Ay, sir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

W. Staf. That 's false.

Cade. Ay, there 's the question; but, I say, 'tis true

The elder of them, being put to nurse,

Was by a beggar-woman stolen away;

And, ignorant of his birth and parentage,
Became a bricklayer when he came to age :
His son am I ; deny it if you can.

Dick. Nay, 't is too true ; therefore he shall be king.

Smith. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it ; therefore, deny it not.

Staf. And will you credit this base drudge's words, That speaks he knows not what ?

All. Ay, marry, will we ; therefore get ye gone.

W. Staf. Jack Cade, the duke of York hath taught you this.

Cade. He lies, for I invented it myself. [Aside.—Go to, sirrah : Tell the king from me, that, for his father's sake, Henry the fifth, in whose time boys went to span-counter for French crowns, I am content he shall reign ; but I 'll be protector over him.

Dick. And, furthermore, we 'll have the lord Say's head, for selling the dukedom of Maine.

Cade. And good reason, for thereby is England maimed, and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow kings, I tell you, that that lord Say hath gelded the commonwealth, and made it an eunuch : and more than that, he can speak French, and therefore he is a traitor.

Staf. O gross and miserable ignorance !

Cade. Nay, answer, if you can : The Frenchmen are our enemies : go to them. I ask but this,—can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor, or no ?

All. No, no ; and therefore we 'll have his head.

W. Staf. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail,

Assail them with the army of the king.

Staf. Herald, away : and, throughout every town,
Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade ;
That those which fly before the battle ends
May, even in their wives' and children's sight,
Be hang'd up for example at their doors :
And you that be the king's friends follow me.

[Exeunt the two STAFFORDS, and Forces.]

Cade. And you that love the commons follow me.
Now show yourselves men, 't is for liberty.
We will not leave one lord, one gentleman :
Spare none, but such as go in clouted shoon ;
For they are thrifty honest men, and such
As would (but that they dare not) take our parts.

Dick. They are all in order, and march toward us.

Cade. But then are we in order, when we are most out of order. Come, march forward. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another part of Blackheath.

Alarum. The two parties enter and fight, and both the STAFFORDS are slain.

Cade. Where 's Dick the butcher of Ashford ?

Dick. Here, sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavedst thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house : therefore thus will I reward thee,—The Lent shall be as long again as it is ; and thou shalt have a licence to kill for a hundred lacking one.

Dick. I desire no more.

Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest no less. This monument of the victory will I bear ; and the bodies shall be dragged at my horse' heels, till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us.

Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols, and let out the prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come, let 's march towards London. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Enter KING HENRY, reading a supplication, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, and LORD SAY at a distance, QUEEN MARGARET, with SUFFOLK'S head.

Q. Mar. Oft have I heard that grief soft And makes it fearful and degenerate ; Think therefore on revenge, and cease to weep, But who can cease to weep, and look on this Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast, But where 's the body that I should embrace ?

Buck. What answer makes your grace supplication ?

K. Hen. I 'll send some holy bishop to excommunicate For God forbid, so many simple souls Should perish by the sword ! And I myself Rather than bloody war shall cut them short, Will parley with Jack Cade their general. But stay, I 'll read it over once again.

Q. Mar. Ah, barbarous villains ! bath thou Rul'd, like a wandering planet, over me : And could it not enforce them to relent, That were unworthy to behold the same ?

K. Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade has sworn his head.

Say. Ay, but I hope your highness shall not.

K. Hen. How now, madam ? Still lamenting, and mourning for Suffolk I fear me, love, if that I had been dead, Thou wouldst not have mourn'd so much.

Q. Mar. No, my love, I should not mourn for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Hen. How now ! what news ? why comest thou with such haste ?

Mess. The rebels are in Southwark. First Jack Cade proclaims himself lord Mortimer, descended from the duke of Clarence' house, and calls your grace usurper, openly, and vows to crown himself in Westminster. His army is a ragged multitude of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless ; Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death hath given them heart and courage to proceed. All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen, they call false caterpillars, and intend the death of us.

K. Hen. O graceless men ! they know not their duty.

Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Killingworth, until a power be rais'd to put them down.

Q. Mar. Ah ! were the duke of Suffolk these Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd.

K. Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee. Therefore away with us to Killingworth.

Say. So might your grace's person be in the sight of me is odious in their eyes ; And therefore in this city will I stay, And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London. The citizens fly and forsake their houses ; The rascal people, thirsting after prey, Join with the traitor ; and they jointly swear To spoil the city and your royal court.

Buck. Then linger not, my lord ; away.

K. Hen. Come, Margaret ; God, our heavenly father, bless our journey.

Enter GEORGE BEVIS, with the LORD SAY.

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times.—
 Ah, thou say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord! now art thou within point blank of our jurisdiction regal.
 What canst thou answer to my majesty, for giving up of Normandy unto monsieur Basimecu, the dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee, by these presence, even the presence of lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm, in erecting a grammar-school: and whereas, before, our forefathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used; and, contrary to the king, his crown and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face, that thou hast men about thee that usually talk of a noun, and a verb; and such abominable words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison; and because they could not read thou hast hanged them; when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride on a foot-cloth, dost thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when honest men than thou go in their hose and doublets.

Dick. And work in their shirt too; as myself, for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent,—

Dick. What say you of Kent?

Say. Nothing but this: 'T is bona terra, mala gens.

Cade. Away with him, away with him! he speaks Latin.

Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you will.
 Kent, in the commentaries Cæsar writ,

Is term'd the civill'st place of all this isle:

Sweet is the country, because full of riches;

The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy;

Which makes me hope you are not void of pity.

I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy;

Yet, to recover them, would lose my life.

Justice with favour have I always done;

Prayers and tears have mov'd me, gifts could never.

When have I aught exacted at your hands?

Kent to maintain, the king, the realm, and you,

Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks,

Because my book prefer'd me to the king,

And seeing ignorance is the curse of God,

Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven.

Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits,

You cannot but forbear to murder me.

This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings

For your behoof,—

Cade. Tut! when struck'st thou one blow in the field?

Say. Great men have reaching hands: oft have I struck

Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.

Geo. O monstrous coward! what, to come behind folks?

Say. These cheeks are pale for watching<sup>a</sup> for your good.

Cade. Give him a box o' the ear, and that will make

'em red again.

Say. Long sitting to determine poor men's causes

Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.

Cade. Ye shall have a hempen caudle then, and the pap of hatchet.

Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?

<sup>a</sup> For watching—in consequence of watching.

Say. The palsy, and not fear, provoketh me.

Cade. Nay, he nods at us; as who should say, I'll be even with you. I'll see if his head will stand steadier on a pole, or no: Take him away, and behead him.

Say. Tell me, wherein have I offended most? Have I affected wealth, or honour; speak? Are my chests fill'd up with extorted gold? Is my apparel sumptuous to behold? Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my death? These hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding. This breast from harbouring foul deceitful thoughts. O, let me live!

Cade. I feel remorse in myself with his words: but I'll bridle it; he shall die, an it be but for pleading so well for his life. Away with him! he has a familiar under his tongue; he speaks not o' God's name. Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently; and then break into his son-in-law's house, sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither.

All. It shall be done.

Say. Ah, countrymen! if when you make your prayers, God should be so obdurate as yourselves, How would it fare with your departed souls? And therefore yet relent, and save my life.

Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye. [Exeunt some, with LORD SAY.] The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute; there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead ere they have it: Men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command that their wives be as free as heart can wish, or tongue can tell.

Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside, and take up commodities upon our bills?*

Cade. Marry, presently.

All. O brave!

Re-enter Rebels, with the heads of LORD SAY and his Son-in-law.

Cade. But is not this braver?—Let them kiss one another, for they loved well when they were alive. Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night: for with these borne before us, instead of maces, will we ride through the streets; and, at every corner, have them kiss.—Away! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—Southwark.

Alarum. Enter CADE, and all his Rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish-street! down St. Magnus' corner! kill and knock down! throw them into Thames!—[A parley sounded, then a retreat.] What noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them kill?

Enter BUCKINGHAM and Old CLIFFORD, with Forces.

Buck. Ay, here they be that dare and will disturb thee:

Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the king Unto the commons, whom thou hast misled; And here pronounce free pardon to them all That will forsake thee, and go home in peace.

Clif. What say ye, countrymen? will ye relent, And yield to mercy, whilst 't is offer'd you; Or let a rabble lead you to your deaths? Who loves the king, and will embrace his pardon, * Upon our bills. This is an equivocal. The bills of Cade were not bills of debt (as bonds for the payment of money, executed in the simplest form, were anciently called), but the brown bills of the rabble soldiery.

Fling up his cap, and say—God save his majesty! Who hateth him, and honours not his father, Henry the fifth, that made all France to quake, Shake he his weapon at us, and pass by.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Cade. What, Buckingham, and Clifford, are ye brave?—And you, base peasants, do ye believe he will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London gates, that you should leave me at the White in Southwark? I thought ye would never have got out these arms, till you had recovered your ancient freedom: but you are all recreants and dastards; I delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let me break your backs with burthens, take your bowms from your heads, ravish your wives and daughters from your faces: For me,—I will make shift for one; so—God's curse light upon you all!

All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade.

Clif. Is Cade the son of Henry the fifth, That thus you do exclaim you'll go with him? Will he conduct you through the heart of France, And make the meanest of you earls and dukes? Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly to; Nor knows he how to live but by the spoil, Unless by robbing of your friends, and us. Were 't not a shame that whilst you live at rest, The fearful French, whom you late vanquished, Should make a start o'er seas, and vanquish you? Methinks, already, in this civil broil, I see them lordling it in London streets, Crying—Villageois! unto all they meet.

Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry, Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy: To France, to France, and get what you have lost; Spare England, for it is your native coast; Henry hath money, you are strong and manly; God on our side, doubt not of victory.

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the king and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever feather so lightly blown so and so as this multitude? The name of Henry the fifth hath done them to a hundred mischiefs, and makes them lands desolate. I see them lay their heads together to surprize me: my sword make way for me, for here I stay.—In despite of the devils and hell, have I come to the very midst of you! and heavens and honest witness, that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and ignominious treasons, make me betake me to my heels.

Buck. What, is he fled? go some, and follow him; And he that brings his head unto the king Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward.—

[Exeunt some of the rebels.] Follow me, soldiers; we'll devise a mean To reconcile you all unto the king. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX.—Killingworth Castle.

Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, and Forces, set, on the terrace of the Castle.

K. Hen. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly thing, And could command no more content than I? No sooner was I crept out of my cradle, But I was made a king, at nine months old: Was never subject long'd to be a king, As I do long and wish to be a subject.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and CLIFFORD.

Buck. Health and glad tidings in your ear!

K. Hen. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor pris'd? Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

er, a great number of CADE's Followers, with halters about their necks.

He 's fled, my lord, and all his powers do fled;

—called—a herb which is eaten salted—sallada.

And may enjoy such quiet walks as these?

This small inheritance my father left me
Contenteth me, and 's worth a monarchy.

I seek not to wax great by others' waning;
Or gather wealth I care not with what envy;

Sufficieth that I have maintains my state,
And sends the poor well pleased from my gate.

Cade. Here 's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his fee simple without leave.

Ah, villain, thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the king by carrying my head to him; but I 'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich, and swallow my sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why, rude companion, whatso'er thou be,
I know thee not: Why then should I betray thee?

Is 't not enough to break into my garden,
And, like a thief, to come to rob my grounds,

Climbing my walls in spite of me the owner,
But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms?

Cade. Brave thee? ay, by the best blood that ever was broached, and beard thee too. Look on me well:

I have eat no meat these five days: yet, come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door-nail, I pray God I may never eat grass more.

Iden. Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while England stands,

That Alexander Iden, an esquire of Kent,

Took odds to combat a poor famish'd man.
Oppose thy steadfast gazing eyes on mine,

See if thou canst outface me with thy looks.
Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser;

Thy hand is but a finger to my fist;
Thy leg a stick, compared with this truncheon;

My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast;
And if mine arm be heaved in the air,

Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth.
As for words, whose greatness answers words,

Let this my sword report what speech forbears.
Cade. By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard.—Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burly-boned clown in chines of beef ere thou sleep in thy sheath, I beseech Jove on my knees thou mayest be turned to hotnails. [They fight. CADE falls.] O, I am slain! famine, and no other, hath slain me: let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I 'd defy them all. Wither, garden; and be henceforth a burying-place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is 't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor?

Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed,

And hang thee o'er my tomb, when I am dead:
Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point;

But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat,
To emblaze the honour that thy master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell; and be proud of thy victory:
Tell Kent from me she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the world to be cowards; for I, that never feared any, am vanquished by famine, not by valour.

[Dies.]

Iden. How much thou wrong'st me, Heaven be my judge.

Die, damned wretch, the curse of her that bare thee!
And as I thrust thy body in with my sword,

So wish I, I might thrust thy soul to hell.
Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels

Unto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave,
And there cut off thy most ungracious head;

Which I will bear in triumph to the king,
Leaving thy trunk for crows to feed upon.
[Exit, dragging out the body]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The same. Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

The KING's Camp on one side. On the other, enter YORK attended, with drum and colours: his Forces at some distance.

York. From Ireland thus comes York, to claim his right,
And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head:
Ring, bells, aloud; burn, bonfires, clear and bright;
To entertain great England's lawful king.
Al, sancta majestas! who would not buy thee dear?
Let them obey that know not how to rule;
This hand was made to handle nought but gold:
I cannot give due action to my words,
Except a sword or sceptre balance it.
A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul,
On which I'll toss the fleur-de-luce of France.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me?
The king hath sent him, sure: I must dissemble.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting.

Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?

Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread liege,
To know the reason of these arms in peace;
Or why thou, being a subject as I am,
Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn,
Shouldst raise so great a power without his leave,
Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great.
O, I could hew up rocks, and fight with flint,
I am so angry at these abject terms;
And how, like Ajax Telamonius,
On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury!
I am far better born than is the king;
More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts:
But I must make fair weather yet a while,
Till Henry be more weak, and I more strong.—

[All the preceding is spoken aside.]

Buckingham, I prithe thee pardon me,
That I have given no answer all this while;
My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.
The cause why I have brought this army hither,
Is, to remove proud Somerset from the king,
Seditious to his grace, and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on thy part:
But if thy arms be to no other end,
The king hath yielded unto thy demand;
The duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honour, is he prisoner?

Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.

York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers.
Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves;
Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field,
You shall have pay, and everything you wish.
And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,
Command my eldest son, nay, all my sons,
As pledges of my fealty and love,
I'll send them all as willing as I live;
Lands, goods, horse, armour, anything I have
Is his to use, so Somerset may die.

Buck. York, I commend this kind submission:
We twain will go into his highness' tent.

Enter KING HENRY, attended

K. Hen. Buckingham, doth York intend to us,

That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm
York. In all submission and humility,
York doth present himself unto your highness.

K. Hen. Then what intend these forces bring?

York. To heave the traitor Somerset from
And fight against that monstrous rebel Cade
Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter IDEN, with CADE's head

Iden. If one so rude, and of so mean estate
May pass into the presence of a king,
Lo, I present your grace a traitor's head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.

K. Hen. The head of Cade?—Great thanks art thou!

O, let me view his visage being dead,
That living wrought me such exceeding dread.

Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that Iden. I was, an't like your majesty.

K. Hen. How art thou call'd? and where grew?

Iden. Alexander Iden, that 's my name,
A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king.

Buck. So please it you, my lord, 't was
He were created knight for his good service.

K. Hen. Iden, kneel down: [He kneels] knight.

We give thee for reward a thousand marks,
And will that thou henceforth attend on us.

Iden. May Iden live to merit such a boon,
And never live but true unto his liege!

K. Hen. See, Buckingham! Somerset
the queen;

Go, bid her hide him quickly from the duke.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET and SOMERSET

Q. Mar. For thousand Yorks he shall not
But boldly stand, and front him to his face.

York. How now! Is Somerset at liberty?
Then, York, unloose thy long-imprison'd
And let thy tongue be equal with thy hands.

Shall I endure the sight of Somerset?
False king! why hast thou broken faith with me?

Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse?
King did I call thee? no, thou art not king.

Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,
Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a
That head of thine doth not become a crown.

Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff,
And not to grace an awful princely sceptre.

That gold must round engirt these brows,
Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' shield,
Is able with the change to kill and cure.

Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up,
And with the same to act controlling laws.

Give place; by Heaven, thou shalt rule
O'er him whom Heaven created for thy rule.

Som. O monstrous traitor!—I arrest thee
Of capital treason 'gainst the king and crown.

Obey, audacious traitor; kneel for grace.

York. Wouldst have me kneel? first

Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war,
 And shame thine honourable age with blood?
 Why art thou old and want'st experience?
 Or wherefore dost abuse it if thou hast it?
 For shame! in duty bend thy knee to me,
 That bows unto the grave with mickle age.

Sal. My lord, I have consider'd with myself
 The title of this most renowned duke;
 And in my conscience do repute his grace
 The rightful heir to England's royal seat.

K. Hen. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have.

K. Hen. Canst thou dispense with Heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sin, to swear unto a sin;
 But greater sin, to keep a sinful oath.
 Who can be bound by any solemn vow
 To do a murtherous deed, to rob a man,
 To force a spotless virgin's chastity,
 To reave the orphan of his patrimony,
 To wring the widow from her custom'd right;
 And have no other reason for this wrong
 But that he was bound by a solemn oath?

Q. Mar. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

K. Hen. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself.

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast,
 I am resolv'd for death, or dignity.

Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true,
War. You were best to go to bed, and dream again,
 To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm
 Than any thou canst conjure up to-day;
 And that I'll write upon thy burgonet,
 Might I but know thee by thy household badge.

War. Now, by my father's badge, old Nevil's crest,
 The rampant bear, chain'd to the ragged staff,
 This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet,
 (As on a mountain-top the cedar shows,
 That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm.)
 Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy bear,
 And tread it under foot with all contempt,
 Despite the bearward that protects the bear.

Y. Clif. And so to arms, victorious father,
 To quell the rebels, and their 'complices.

Rich. Fie! charity, for shame! speak not in spite,
 For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night.

Y. Clif. Foul stigmatic,* that's more than thou canst tell.

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell.
 [Exeunt severally]

SCENE II.—Saint Alban's.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter WARWICK.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls!
 And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear,
 Now, when the angry trumpet sounds alarum,
 And dead men's cries do fill the empty air,
 Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me!
 Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
 Warwick is hourse with calling thee to arms.

Enter YORK.

How now, my noble lord? what, all a-foot?

York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steel;
 But match to match I have encounter'd him,
 And made a prey for carrion kites and crows
 Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well.

Enter CLIFFORD.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.

* Stigmatic. This was the appellation of an offender who had been branded—upon whom a stigma had been set. Young Clifford insults Richard with the natural stigma of his disformity.

York. Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase,
For I myself must hunt this deer to death.

War. Then, nobly, York; 't is for a crown thou fight'st.

As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd. [Exit.

Clif. What seest thou in me, York? why dost thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love,
But that thou art so fast mine enemy.

Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem,
But that 't is shown ignobly, and in treason.

York. So let it help me now against thy sword,
As I in justice and true right express it!

Clif. My soul and body on the action both!—

York. A dreadful lay!—address thee instantly.

[They fight, and CLIFFORD falls.

Clif. La fin couronne les œuvres. [Dies.

York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still.

Peace with his soul, Heaven, if it be thy will. [Exit.

Enter Young CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. Shame and confusion! all is on the rout;
Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds
Where it should guard. O war, thou son of hell,
Whom angry Heavens do make their minister,
Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part
Hot coals of vengeance!—Let no soldier fly:
He that is truly dedicate to war
Hath no self-love; nor he that loves himself
Hath not essentially, but by circumstance,
The name of valour.—O, let the vile world end,
[Seeing his dead father.

And the promised flames of the last day
Knit earth and heaven together!
Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,
Particularities and petty sounds
To cease!<sup>a</sup> Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,
To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve
The silver livery of advised age,
And in thy reverence, and thy chair-days, thus
To die in ruffian battle?—Even at this sight,
My heart is turn'd to stone: and, while 't is mine
It shall be stony. York not our old men spares;
No more will I their babes: tears virginal
Shall be to me even as the dew to fire;
And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclaims,
Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax.
Henceforth I will not have to do with pity:
Meet I an infant of the house of York,
Into as many gobbets will I cut it,
As wild Medea young Absyrtus did:
In cruelty will I seek out my fame.
Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house;

[Taking up the body.

As did Æneas old Anchises bear,
So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders;
But then Æneas bare a living load,
Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine. [Exit.

ing, and SOMERSET is killed.

The Castle in Saint Alban's, Somerset
Hath made the wizard famous in his death.<sup>b</sup>

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.
 [Throwing down the DUKE OF SOMERSET'S head.]
York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons.—
 But, is your grace dead, my lord of Somerset?
Norf. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!
Rich. Thus do I hope to shake king Henry's head.
War. And so do I, victorious prince of York.
 Before I see thee seated in that throne
 Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,
 I vow by Heaven, these eyes shall never close.
 This is the palace of the fearful king,
 And this the regal seat: possess it, York;
 For this is thine, and not king Henry's heirs'.
York. Assist me then, sweet Warwick, and I will,
 For hither we have broken in by force.
Norf. We'll all assist you; he that flies shall die.
York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk,—Stay by me, my lords;—
 And, soldiers, stay, and lodge by me this night.
War. And when the king comes offer him no violence,
 Unless he seek to thrust you out perforce. [They retire.]
York. The queen, this day, here holds her parliament,
 But little thinks we shall be of her council:
 By words, or blows, here let us win our right.
Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this house.
War. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd,
 Unless Plantagenet, duke of York, be king;
 And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice
 Hath made us by-words to our enemies.
York. Then leave me not, my lords; be resolute;
 I mean to take possession of my right.
War. Neither the king, nor he that loves him best,
 The proudest he that holds up Lancaster,
 Dares stir a wing if Warwick shake his bells.
 I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares:—
 Resolve thee, Richard; claim the English crown.
 [WAR. leads YORK to the throne, who seats himself.]
Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, CLIFFORD, NORTH-UMBERLAND, WESTMORELAND, EXETER, and others, with red roses in their hats.
K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits,
 Even in the chair of state! belike, he means (Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer)
 To aspire unto the crown, and reign as king.
 Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father;
 And thine, Lord Clifford; and you both have vow'd revenge
 On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends.
North. If I be not, Heavens be reveng'd on me!
Clif. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.
West. What, shall we suffer this? let's pluck him
 down:
 My heart for anger burns, I cannot brook it.
K. Hen. Be patient, gentle earl of Westmoreland.
Clif. Patience is for poltroons, and such as he;
 He durst not sit there had your father liv'd.
 My gracious lord, here in the parliament
 Let us assail the family of York.
North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin; be it so.
K. Hen. Ah, know you not the city favours them,
 And they have troops of soldiers at their beck?
Eze. But when the duke is slain they'll quickly fly.
K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart,
 To make a shambles of the parliament-house!
 Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats,
 Shall be the war that Henry means to use.—
 [They advance to the Duke.]
 Thou factious duke of York, descend my throne,
 And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet;
 I am thy sovereign.

 Who made the dauphin and the French king

 [Exeunt YORK and his Sons, WAR., NORF., MONTAGUE, Soldiers, and Attendants.
 K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court.
 Enter QUEEN MARGARET and the PRINCE OF WALES.
 Exe. Here comes the queen, whose look bewray<sup>a</sup> her

 I'll steal away.
 K. Hen. Exeter, so will I. [Going.
 Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me, I will follow thee.
 K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.
 Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes?
 Ah, wretched man! 'would I had died a maid,
 And never seen thee, never borne thee son,
 Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father!
 Hath he deserv'd to lose his birthright thus?
 Hadst thou but lov'd him half so well as I;
 Or felt that pain which I did for him once;
 Or nourish'd him, as I did with my blood;
 Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood there,
 Rather than have made that savage duke thine heir,
 And disinherited thine only son.
 Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me:
 If you be king, why should not I succeed?
 K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret; pardon me, sweet son;
 The earl of Warwick and the duke enforc'd me.
 Q. Mar. Enforc'd thee! art thou king, and wilt be forc'd?
 I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous wretch!
 Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me;
 And given unto the house of York such head,
 As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.
 To entail him and his heirs unto the crown,
 What is it, but to make thy sepulchre,
 And creep into it far before thy time?
 Warwick is chancellor, and the lord of Calais;
 Stern Faulconbridge commands the narrow seas;
 The duke is made protector of the realm;
 And yet shalt thou be safe? such safety finds
 The trembling lamb environed with wolves.
 Had I been there, which am a silly woman,
 The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes,
 Before I would have granted to that act.
 But thou prefer'st thy life before thine honour:
 And, seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself,
 Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,
 Until that act of parliament be repeal'd,
 Whereby my son is disinherited.
 The northern lords, that have forsworn thy colours,
 Will follow mine, if once they see them spread:
 And spread they shall be; to thy foul disgrace,
 And utter ruin of the house of York.
 Thus do I leave thee:—Come, son, let's away;
 Our army is ready; come, we'll after them.
 K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.
 Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already; go:
 thee gone.
 K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay with
 me?
 Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies.
 Prince. When I return with victory from the field
 I'll see your grace: till then, I'll follow her.
 Q. Mar. Come, son, away; we may not linger thus.
 [Exeunt QUEEN MARGARET and the PRINCE.
 K. Hen. Poor queen! how love to me, and to her son
 Hath made her break out into terms of rage!
 Reveng'd may she be on that hateful duke;
 Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,
 Will cost my crown, and, like an empty eagle,
 Tire on the flesh of me and of my son!
 The loss of those three lords torments my heart:

I'll write unto them, and entreat them fair;—
Come, cousin, you shall be the messenger.

SCENE II.—A Room in Sandal Castle, near Wakefield, in Yorkshire.

Enter EDWARD, RICHARD, and MONTAGUE.

Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.

Edw. No, I can better play the orator.

Mont. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter YORK.

York. Why, how now, sons and brother, at a strife?
What is your quarrel? how began it first?

Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention.

York. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns your grace, and us;
The crown of England, father, which is yours.

York. Mine, boy? not till king Henry be dead.

Rich. Your right depends not on his life, or death.

Edw. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it now:
By giving the house of Lancaster leave to breathe,
It will outrun you, father, in the end.

York. I took an oath that he should quietly reign.

Edw. But for a kingdom any oath may be broken:
I would break a thousand oaths to reign one year.

Rich. No; God forbid your grace should be forsworn.

York. I shall be if I claim by open war.

Rich. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak.

York. Thou canst not, son; it is impossible.

Rich. An oath is of no moment, being not took Before a true and lawful magistrate,
That hath authority over him that swears:
Henry had none, but did usurp the place;
Then, seeing 't was he that made you to depose,
Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous.
Therefore, to arms. And, father, do but think How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown;
Within whose circuit is Elysium,
And all that poets feign of bliss and joy.
Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest,
Until the white rose that I wear be dyed
Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart.

York. Richard, enough; I will be king, or die.
Brother, thou shalt to London presently,
And whet on Warwick to this enterprise.
Thou, Richard, shalt unto the duke of Norfolk,
And tell him privily of our intent.
You, Edward, shall unto my lord Cobham,
With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise:
In them I trust; for they are soldiers,
Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit.
While you are thus employ'd, what resteth more,
But that I seek occasion how to rise,
And yet the king not privy to my drift,
Nor any of the house of Lancaster?

Enter a Messenger.

But, stay; What news? why com'st thou in such post?

Mess. The queen, with all the northern earls and lords,

Intend here to besiege you in your castle:
She is hard by with twenty thousand men;
And therefore fortify your hold, my lord.

York. Ay, with my sword. What! think'st thou that we fear them?

Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me;
My brother Montague shall post to London:

While Warwick, Cobham, and the rest,
As have left protectors of the king,
Useful policy strengthen themselves,
Not simple Henry, nor his oaths.

—of sound judgment—of good understanding.

Mont. Brother, I go; I'll win them, fear
And thus most humbly I do take my leave.

Enter SIR JOHN and SIR HUGH MORTIMER.

York. Sir John, and sir Hugh Mortimer, m
You are come to Sandal in a happy hour;
The army of the queen mean to besiege us.

Sir John. She shall lot need, we'll meet field.

York. What, with five thousand men?

Rich. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a
A woman's general; what should we fear?

[A noise]

Edw. I hear their drums; let's set our
And issue forth, and bid them battle straight.

York. Five men to twenty!—though the od
I doubt not, uncle, of our victory.

Many a battle have I won in France,
When as the enemy hath been ten to one;
Why should I not now have the like success?

[Alarums]

Rut. Ah, whither shall I fly to 'scape the Ah, tutor! look where bloody Clifford come!

Enter CLIFFORD and Soldiers.

Clif. Chaplain, away! thy priesthood sa
As for the brat of this accursed duke,
Whose father slew my father, he shall die.

Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company.

Clif. Soldiers, away with him.

Tut. Ah, Clifford! murder not this innoc
Lest thou be hated both of God and man.

[Exit, forced off]

Clif. How now! is he dead already? O
That makes him close his eyes?—I'll open

Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the
That trembles under his devouring paws:

And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey;
And so he comes, to rend his limbs asunder.

Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword,
And not with such a cruel threat'ning look.

Sweet Clifford, hear me speak before I die:
I am too mean a subject for thy wrath;
Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live.

Clif. In vain thou speak'st, poor boy;
blood

Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words
Rut. Then let my father's blood open it
He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.

Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives
Were not revenge sufficient for me;

No, if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves,
And hung their rotten coffins up in chains,

It could not slake mine ire, nor ease my hate
The sight of any of the house of York

Is as a fury to torment my soul;
And till I root out their accursed line,
And leave not one alive, I live in hell.

Therefore—
Rut. O, let me pray before I take my death

To thee I pray: Sweet Clifford, pity me!

Clif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords
Rut. I never did thee harm: Why should
me?

Clif. Thy father hath.

Rut. But 't was ere I was Thou hast one son, for his sake pity me!

Lest in revenge thereof,—sith God is just,—
He be as miserably slain as I.

Ah, let me live in prison all my days,

nor I give occasion of offence,
nor me die, for now thou hast no cause.
No cause?

He slew my father; therefore, die.

[CLIFFORD stabs him.]

Non faciant, laudis summa sit ista tua! [Dies.]
Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet!
thy son's blood, cleaving to my blade,
upon my weapon, till thy blood,
with this, do make me wipe off both. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—The same.

Alarum. Enter YORK.

The army of the queen hath got the field;
both are slain in rescuing me;
my followers to the eager foe and fly, like ships before the wind, pursued by hunger-starved wolves.
God knows what hath bechanced them:
I know,—they have demean'd themselves
born to renown, by life, or death.
As did Richard make a lane to me;
I cried,—“Courage, father! fight it out!”
As oft came Edward to my side, in the faultchion, painted to the hilt of those that had encounter'd him:
the hardest warriors did retire,
I led,—“Charge! and give no foot of ground!”
—“A crown, or else a glorious tomb!
or an earthly sepulchre!”
we charg'd again: but, out, alas!
again; as I have seen a swan
ess labour swim against the tide, her strength with over-matching waves.

[A short alarum within.] the fatal followers do pursue;

faint, and cannot fly their fury:
I strong I would not shun their fury:
are number'd that make up my life;
I stay, and here my life must end.

Enter MARGARET, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, and Soldiers.

My Clifford,—rough Northumberland,— quenchless fury to more rage;
hast, and I abide your shot.
Field to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.
to such mercy as his ruthless arm,
right payment, show'd unto my father.
then hath tumbled from his car,
evening at the noontide prick.
My ashes, as the phoenix, may bring forth
I will revenge upon you all:
I hope I throw mine eyes to heaven, hate'er you can afflict me with.
you not? what! multitudes, and fear?
cowards fight, when they can fly no further;
peck the falcon's piercing talons;
thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
invectives 'gainst the officers.
Clifford, but bethink thee once again,
thought o'erturn my former time:
canst for blushing, view this face;
my tongue, that slanders him with cowardice,
then hath made thee faint and fly ere this.
will not bandy with thee word for word;
with thee blows, twice two for one. [Draws.] Hold, valiant Clifford! for a thousand causes, along awhile the traitor's life:—
kiss him deaf: speak thou, Northumberland.

Johnes would read budg'd. Steevens thinks that means “we juggled, made bad or bungling work of to rally.”

North. Hold, Clifford; do not honour him so much
To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart:
What valour were it when a cur doth grin
For one to thrust his hand between his teeth,
When he might spurn him with his foot away?
It is war's prize to take all vantages:
And ten to one is no impeach of valour.

[They lay hands on YORK, who struggles]

Clif. Ay, ay, so strives the woodcock with the gin.

North. So doth the coney struggle in the net.

[YORK is taken prisoner]

York. So triumph thieves upon their conquer'd booty
So true men yield, with robbers so o'ermatch'd.

North. What would your grace have done unto him now?

Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,

Come, make him stand upon this molehill here;
That raught<sup>a</sup> at mountains with outstretched arms
Yet parted but the shadow with his hand.
What! was it you that would be England's king?
Was't you that revell'd in our parliament,
And made a preachment of your high descent?
Where are your mess of sons, to back you now?
The wanton Edward, and the lusty George?
And where 's that valiant crook-back prodigy,
Dicky your boy, that, with his grumbling voice,
Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies?
Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland?
Look, York; I stain'd this napkin with the blood
That valiant Clifford, with his rapier's point,
Made issue from the bosom of the boy:
And, if thine eyes can water for his death,
I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.
Alas, poor York! but that I hate thee deadlly,
I should lament thy miserable state.
I prithee, grieve, to make me merry, York,
What, hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine entrails,
That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death?
Why art thou patient, man? thou shouldst be mad;
And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus.
Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.
Thou wouldst be fee'd, I see, to make me sport;
York cannot speak unless he wear a crown.
A crown for York;—and, lords, bow low to him.
Hold you his hands, whilst I do set it on.

[Putting a paper crown on his head]

Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king!
Ay, this is he that took king Henry's chair;
And this is he was his adopted heir.
But how is it that great Plantagenet
Is crown'd so soon, and broke his solemn oath?
As I bethink me you should not be king
Till our king Henry had shook hands with death.
And will you pale<sup>b</sup> your head in Henry's glory,
And rob his temples of the diadem,
Now in his life, against your holy oath?
O, 't is a fault too, too unpardonable!
Off with the crown; and, with the crown, his head;
And, whilst we breathe, take time to do him dead.

Clif. That is my office, for my father's sake.

Q. Mar. Nay, stay; let's near the orisons he makes.

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France,

Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's tooth!
How ill-beseeming is it in thy sex
To triumph, like an Amazonian trull,
Upon their woes whom fortune captivates!
But that thy face is, vizard-like, unchanging,
Made impudent with use of evil deeds,
I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush:
To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom deriv'd,

<sup>a</sup> Raught. The ancient preterite of to reach.

<sup>b</sup> Pale—impale—encircle.

Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless.

Thy father bears the type of king of Naples,
Of both the Sicils, and Jerusalem,
Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman.
Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult ?
It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud queen ;
Unless the adage must be verified,
That beggars, mounted, run their horse to death.
'T is beauty that doth oft make women proud ;
But God he knows thy share thereof is small :
'T is virtue that doth make them most admir'd ;
The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at :
'T is government that makes them seem divine ;
The want thereof makes thee abominable :
Thou art as opposite to every good
As the Antipodes are unto us,
Or as the south to the septentrion.
O, tiger's heart, wrapp'd in a woman's hide !
How wouldst thou drain the life-blood of the child,
To bid the father wipe his eyes withal,
And yet be seen to bear a woman's face ?
Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible ;
Thou, stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless.
Bidd'st thou me rage ? why, now thou hast thy wish :
Wouldst have me weep ? why, now thou hast thy will :
For raging wind blows up incessant showers,
And when the rage allays the rain begins.
These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies ;
And every drop cries vengeance for his death,
'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false Frenchwoman.
North. Beshrew me, but his passions move me so
That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.
York. That face of his the hungry cannibals

Would not have touch'd, would not have
blood :

But you are more inhuman, more inexorable
O, ten times more, than tigers of Hyrcania.
See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears :
This cloth thou dipp'dst in blood of my son
And I with tears do wash the blood away.
Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this

[He gives back the handkerchief.]

And, if thou tell'st the heavy story right,
Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears.
Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears.
And say,—Alas it was a piteous deed !—
There, take the crown, and with the crown
And, in thy need, such comfort come to thee
As now I reap at thy too cruel hand !
Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world
My soul to heaven, my blood upon your hands.
North. Had he been slaughterman to all
I should not for my life but weep with him
To see how inly sorrow gripes his soul.

Q. Mar. What, weeping-ripe, my lord
land ?

Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.
Clif. Here 's for my oath, here 's for my will

Q. Mar. And here 's to right our gentle

York. Open thy gate of mercy, gracious
My soul flies through these wounds to seek

Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on So York may overlook the town of York.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.

Drums. Enter EDWARD and RICHARD, with their Forces, marching.

Educ. I wonder how our princely father 'scap'd ;
Or whether he be 'scap'd away, or no,
From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit ;
Had he been ta'en, we should have heard the news ;
Had he been slain, we should have heard the news ;
Or, had he 'scap'd, methinks we should have heard
The happy tidings of his good escape.

How fares my brother ? why is he so sad ?

Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolv'd
Where our right valiant father is become.
I saw him in the battle range about ;
And watch'd him, how he singled Clifford forth.
Methought, he bore him in the thickest troop
As doth a lion in a herd of neat :

Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs ;
Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry,
The rest stand all aloof, and bark at him.

So far'd our father with his enemies ;
So fled his enemies my warlike father ;
Methinks, 't is prize enough to be his son.
See how the morning opes her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun !
How well resembles it the prime of youth,
Trim'd like a younker, prancing to his love !

Educ. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns ?

Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect sun .
Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.
See, see ! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,
As if they vow'd some league inviolable :

Now are they but one lamp, one light, one
In this the heaven figures some event.

Educ. 'T is wondrous strange, the like heard of.

I think it cites us, brother, to the field ;
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our meeds,
Should, notwithstanding, join our lights to
And overshine the earth, as this the world.
Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I be Upon my target three fair shining suns.

Rich. Nay, bear three daughters ;—by speak it,

You love the breeder better than the male.

Enter a Messenger.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks fore
Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue

Mess. Ah, one that was a woeful looker
When as the noble duke of York was slain
Your princely father, and my loving lord.

Educ. O, speak no more ! for I have been Rich. Say how he died, for I will hear.

Mess. Environed he was with many foes
And stood against them, as the hope of Troy
Against the Greeks that would have enter'd
But Hercules himself must yield to odds ;
And many strokes, though with a little axe
Hew down and fell the hardest-timber'd oak
By many hands your father was subdued ;
But only slaughter'd by the ireful arm
Of unrelenting Clifford and the queen :
Who crown'd the gracious duke, in high
Laugh'd in his face ; and, when with grief

* Moeis—merita.

queen gave him, to dry his cheeks, spied in the harmless blood
 by Rutland, by rough Clifford slain;
 many scorns, many foul taunts,
 on his head, and on the gates of York came; and there it doth remain, spectacle that e'er I view'd.
 O duke of York, our prop to lean upon,
 now gone, we have no staff, no stay!
 O glorious Clifford, thou hast slain
 Europe for his chivalry;
 how hast thou vanquish'd him,
 and, had he would have vanquish'd thee!
 His palace is become a prison:
 O break from hence! that this my body ground be closed up in rest:
 O forth shall I joy again,
 or, shall I see more joy.
 O not weep; for all my body's moisture to quench my furnace-burning heart:
 O ungodly unload my heart's great burthen;
 O wind, that I should speak withal,
 O winds that fire all my breast,
 O up with flames that tears would quench,
 O make less the depth of grief:
 O O babes; blows and revenge for me!—
 O if thy name, I'll venge thy death,
 O and by attempting it.
 O come that valiant duke hath left with thee;
 O and his chair with me is left.
 O if thou be that princely eagle's bird,
 O rest by gazing 'gainst the sun:
 O O stokeiom, throne and kingdom say;
 O thine, or else thou wert not his.

Enter WARWICK and MONTAGUE, with Forces.

Now, fair lords? What fare? what news and?
 O lord of Warwick, if we should recount news, and at each word's deliverance in our flesh, till all were told,
 O O add more anguish than the wounds.
 O O, the duke of York is slain.
 O Warwick! Warwick! that Plantagenet
 O O me dearly as his soul's redemption,
 O O lord Clifford done to death.
 O O days ago I drown'd these news in tears:
 O O did more measure to your woes,
 O O you things sith then befallen.
 O O by fray at Wakefield fought,
 O O rare father breath'd his latest gasp,
 O O lightly as the posts could run,
 O O me of your loss, and his depart.
 O O how, keeper of the king,
 O O soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends,
 O O appointed, as I thought,
 O O as St. Alban's to intercept the queen,
 O O me in my behalf along:
 O O what news I was advertised
 O O coming with a full intent
 O O the decree in parliament,
 O O Henry's oath and your succession.
 O O make,—we at St. Alban's met,
 O O O'd, and both sides fiercely fought:
 O O it was the coldness of the king,
 O O O'll gently on his warlike queen,
 O O O y soldiers of their heated spleen;
 O O O was report of her success;
 O O common fear of Clifford's rigour,
 O O to his captives—blood and death,
 O O O but, to conclude with truth,
 O O like to lightning came and went;
 O O like the night-owl's lazy flight,

Or like a lazy thresher with a flail—
 Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends.
 I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
 With promise of high pay and great rewards:
 But all in vain; they had no heart to fight,
 And we, in them, no hope to win the day,
 So that we fled: the king unto the queen;
 Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself,
 In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you;
 For in the marches here, we heard, you were Making another head to fight again.

Edw. Where is the duke of Norfolk, gentle Warwick?
 And when came George from Burgundy to England?

War. Some six miles off the duke is with the soldiers:
 And for your brother, he was lately sent
 From your kind aunt, duchess of Burgundy,
 With aid of soldiers to this needful war.

Rich. 'T was odds, belike, when valiant Warwick fled:
 Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit,
 But ne'er, till now, his scandal of retire.

War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear.
 For thou shalt know, this strong right hand of mine
 Can pluck the diadem from saint Henry's head,
 And wring the awful sceptre from his fist,
 Were he as famous and as bold in war,
 As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Rich. I know it well, lord Warwick; blame me not
 'T is love I bear thy glories makes me speak.
 But, in this troublous time, what 's to be done?
 Shall we go throw away our coats of steel,
 And wrap our bodies in black mourning gowns,
 Numbering our Ave-Maries with our beads?
 Or shall we on the helmets of our foes
 Tell our devotion with revengeful arms?
 If for the last, say, Ay, and to it, lords.

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out,
 And therefore comes my brother Montague.
 Attend me, lords. The proud insulting queen,
 With Clifford and the haught Northumberland,
 And of their feather many more proud birds,
 Have wrought the easy melting king like wax.

He swore consent to your succession,
 His oath enrolled in the parliament;
 And now to London all the crew are gone,
 To frustrate both his oath, and what beside
 May make against the house of Lancaster.
 Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong:
 Now, if the help of Norfolk, and myself,
 With all the friends that thou, brave earl of March,
 Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure,
 Will but amount to five-and-twenty thousand,
 Why, Via! to London will we march again;
 And once again bestride our foaming steeds,
 And once again cry—Charge upon our foes!
 But never once again turn back and fly.

Rich. Ay, now, methinks, I hear great Warwick
 speak:

Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day
 That cries—Retire, if Warwick bid him stay.

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean;
 And when thou fall'st (as God forbid the hour!)
 Must Edward fall, which peril Heaven forefend!

War. No longer earl of March, but duke of York;
 The next degree is England's royal throne:
 For king of England shalt thou be proclaim'd
 In every borough as we pass along;
 And he that throws not up his cap for joy
 Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.
 King Edward, valiant Richard, Montague,
 Stay we no longer dreaming of renown,
 But sound the trumpets, and about our task.

Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,
 (As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds.)
 I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine.

Edw. Then strike up, drums;—God, and Saint George, for us!

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now? what news?

Mess. The duke of Norfolk sends you word by me, The queen is coming with a puissant host; And craves your company for speedy counsel.

War. Why, then it sorts, brave warriors; Let 's away.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Before York.

Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, the PRINCE OF WALES, CLIFFORD, and NORTHUMBERLAND, with Forces.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York.

Yonder 's the head of that arch-enemy That sought to be encompass'd with your crown: Doth not the object cheer your heart, my lord?

K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wrack;—

To see this sight, it irks my very soul. Withhold revenge, dear God! 't is not my fault, Nor wittingly have I infring'd my vow.

Clif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity And harmful pity must be laid aside.

To whom do lions cast their gentle looks?
Not to the beast that would usurp their den.
Whose hand is that the forest bear doth lick?
Not his that spoils her young before her face.
Who 'scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting?
Not he that sets his foot upon her back.
The smallest worm will turn being trodden on;
And doves will peck in safeguard of their brood.
Ambitious York did level at thy crown,
Thou smiling, while he knit his angry brows:
He, but a duke, would have his son a king,
And raise his issue, like a loving sire;
Thou, being a king, bless'd with a goodly son,
Didst yield consent to disinherit him,
Which argued thee a most unloving father.
Unreasonable creatures feed their young;
And though man's face be fearful to their eyes,
Yet, in protection of their tender ones,
Who hath not seen them (even with those wings
Which sometime they have used with fearful flight)
Make war with him that climb'd unto their nest,
Offering their own lives in their youngs' defence?
For shame, my liege, make them your precedent!
'Were it not pity that this goodly boy
Should lose his birthright by his father's fault;
And long hereafter say unto his child,—
"What my great-grandfather and grandsire got,
My careless father fondly gave away?"
Ah, what a shame were this! Look on the boy;
And let his manly face, which promiseth
Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart
To hold thine own, and leave thine own with him.

K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator, Inferring arguments of mighty force.
But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear
That things ill got had ever bad success?
And happy always was it for that son,
Whose father for his hoarding went to hell?
I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind;
And 'would my father had left me no more!
For all the rest is held at such a rate
As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep,
Than in possession any jct of pleasure.
Ah, cousin York! 'would thy best friends did know
How it doth grieve me that thy head is here!

Q. Mar. My lord, cheer up your spirits; our foes are nigh,

And this soft courage makes your followers!
You promis'd knighthood to our forward son
Unsheathe your sword, and dub him present
Edward, kneel down.

K. Hen. Edward Plantagenet, arise
And learn this lesson,—Draw thy sword in!

Prince. My gracious father, by your king
I'll draw it as apparent to the crown,
And in that quarrel use it to the death.

Clif. Why, that is spoken like a toward!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Royal commanders, be in readiness
For, with a band of thirty thousand men,
Comes Warwick backing of the duke of York
And in the towns, as they do march along,
Proclaims him king, and many fly to him;
Darraign* your battle, for they are at hand.

Clif. I would your highness would depart
The queen hath best success when you are!

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord, and leave you tune.

K. Hen. Why, that 's my fortune too; 't stay.

North. Be it with resolution then to fight!

Prince. My royal father, cheer those nobles
And hearten those that fight in your defence.
Unsheathe your sword, good father;
George!

March. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD OF WICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now, perjur'd Henry! wilt thou
And set thy diadem upon my head;
Or bide the mortal fortune of the field!

Q. Mar. Go, rate thy minions, proud in Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms,
Before thy sovereign, and thy lawful king!

Edw. I am his king, and he should bow
I was adopted heir by his consent:
Since when, his oath is broke; for, as I bear
You, that are king though he do wear the crown,
Have caus'd him, by new act of parliament
To blot out me and put his own son in.

Clif. And reason too;

Who should succeed the father but the son?

Rich. Are you there, butcher?—O, I can

Clif. Ay, crook-back; here I stand, to Or any be the proudest of thy sort.

Rich. 'T was you that kill'd young Richard
not?

Clif. Ay, and old York, and yet not so

Rich. For God's sake, lords, give signal

War. What say'st thou, Henry, wilt thou crown?

Q. Mar. Why, how now, long-tongued dare you speak?

When you and I met at St. Alban's last,
Your legs did better service than your hands.

War. Then 't was my turn to fly, and so

Clif. You said so much before, and yet

War. 'T was not your valour, Clifford thence.

North. No, nor your manhood that durst
stay.

Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee revenged
Break off the parley; for scarce I can refrain
The execution of my big-swoln heart.
Upon that Clifford, that cruel child-killer.

Clif. I slew thy father: Call'st thou him

Rich. Ay, like a dastard, and a traitor
As thou didst kill our tender brother Rutland.
But, ere sunset, I'll make thee curse the day

* Darraign—prepare.

are done with words, my lords, and hear
speak.

Defy them then, or else hold close thy lips.
Prishee, give no limits to my tongue;
and privileg'd to speak.
I beg, the wound that bred this meeting

'd by words; therefore be still.
O, executioner, unsheathe thy sword:
made us all, I am resolv'd his manhood lies upon his tongue.

Henry, shall I have my right or no?
Men have broke their fasts to-day,
I'll dine unless thou yield the crown.
In deny, their blood upon thy head;
Justice puts his armour on.

That be right which Warwick says is right,
Wrong, but everything is right.
I never got thee, there thy mother stands;
I, thou hast thy mother's tongue.

That thou art neither like thy sire nor dam;
I mis-shapen stigmatic,<sup>a</sup>
Whose destinies to be avoided,
Like lizards' dreadful stings.

Of Naples, hid with English guilt,
Bears the title of a king,
Which should be call'd the sea,
Not knowing whence thou art extraught,
I grieve to detect thy base-born heart?

Sp of straw were worth a thousand crowns,
Whom nameless callet know herself.
I was fairer far than thou,
My husband may be Menelaus;
Agamemnon's brother wrong'd
A woman as this king by thee.

Thou'ld in the heart of France,
A king, and made the dauphin stoop:
I catch'd according to his state,
I kept that glory to this day:
I took a beggar to his bed,
My poor sire with his bridal day,
I saw sunshine brew'd a shower for him,
I saw father's fortunes forth of France,
I saw edition on his crown at home.

I broach'd this tumult but thy pride?
I am meek, our title still had slept:
I claim until another age.
When we saw our sunshine made thy spring,
I summer bred us no increase,
I to thy usurping root:
I the edge hath something hit ourselves,
I us, since we have begun to strike,
I have eave till we have beven thee down,
I growing with our heated bloods.
I in this resolution, I defy thee;
I by longer conference,
I I best the gentle king to speak.
I us!—let our bloody colours wave!
I story, or else a grave.
I ay, Edward.
I wrangling woman; we'll no longer stay:
I till cost ten thousand lives to-day.

See Note on 'Henry VI., Part II.,' Act V., equivalent to what we now call a kena.

Rich. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself?

Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,
Broach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance:
And, in the very pangs of death, he cried,—
Like to a dismal clangour heard from far.—
"Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my death!"
So underneath the belly of their steeds,
That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood,
The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood
I'll kill my horse, because I will not fly.
Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth rage:
And look upon, as if the tragedy
Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors?
Here on my knee I vow to God above,
I'll never pause again, never stand still,
Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine,
Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edw. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine;
And, in this vow, do chain my soul to thine;
And, ere my knee rise from the earth's cold face,
I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
Thou setter up and plucker down of kings!
Beseeching thee, if with thy will it stands
That to my foes this body must be prey,
Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may hope,
And give sweet passage to my sinful soul!
Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,
Where'er it be, in heaven, or on earth.

Rich. Brother, give me thy hand; and, gentle Warwick,
Let me embrace thee in my weary arms:
I, that did never weep, now melt with woe,
That winter should cut off our spring-time so.
War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords, farewell.
Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops,
And give them leave to fly that will not stay;
And call them pillars that will stand to us;
And, if we thrive, promise them such rewards
As victors wear at the Olympian games:
This may plant courage in their quailing breasts;
For yet is hope of life, and victory.
Fore-slow* no longer, make we hence amain. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same. Another Part of the Field.
Excursions. Enter RICHARD and CLIFFORD.
Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone:
Suppose this arm is for the duke of York,
And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge,
Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall.
Clif. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone:
This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York;
* Fore-slow—delay—tolter.

Rich. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone:
This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York;

Rich. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone:
This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York;

And this the hand that slew thy brother Rutland ;
 And here 's the heart that triumphs in their death,
 And cheers these hands that slew thy sire and brother,
 To execute the like upon thyself ;
 And so, have at thee.

[They fight. WARWICK enters ; CLIFFORD flies.]

Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase ;
 For I myself will hunt this wolf to death. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY.

K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning's war,
 When dying clouds contend with growing light ;
 What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,
 Can neither call it perfect day nor night.
 Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea,
 Forc'd by the tide to combat with the wind ;
 Now sways it that way, like the self-same sea
 Forc'd to retire by fury of the wind :
 Sometime, the flood prevails ; and then, the wind :
 Now, one the better ; then, another best ;
 Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,
 Yet neither conqueror, nor conquered :
 So is the equal poise of this fell war.
 Here on this molehill will I sit me down.
 To whom God will, there be the victory !
 For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too,
 Have chid me from the battle ; swearing both
 They prosper best of all when I am thence.
 'Would I were dead ! if God's good will were so :
 For what is in this world but grief and woe ?
 O God ! methinks it were a happy life,
 To be no better than a homely swain :
 To sit upon a hill, as I do now,
 To carve out dials quaintly, point by point,
 Thereby to see the minutes how they run :
 How many make the hour full complete,
 How many hours bring about the day,
 How many days will finish up the year,
 How many years a mortal man may live.
 When this is known, then to divide the times :
 So many hours must I tend my flock ;
 So many hours must I take my rest ;
 So many hours must I contemplate ;
 So many hours must I sport myself ;
 So many days my ewes have been with young ;
 So many weeks ere the poor fools will yearn ;
 So many years ere I shall shear the fleece ;
 So minutes, hours, days, weeks, months, and years,
 Pass'd over to the end they were created,
 Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave.
 Ah, what a life were this ! how sweet ! how lovely !
 Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade
 To shepherds, looking on their silly sheep,
 Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy
 To kings, that fear their subjects' treachery ?
 O, yes it doth ; a thousand-fold it doth.
 And to conclude,—the shepherd's homely curds,
 His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
 His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
 All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
 Is far beyond a prince's delicates,
 His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
 His body couched in a curious bed,
 When care, mistrust, and treason wait on him.

Alarum. Enter a Son that has killed his Father, dragging in the dead body.

Son. Ill blows the wind that profits nobody.
 This man, whom hand to hand I slew in fight,
 May be possessed with some store of crowns :
 And I, that haply take them from him now,
 May yet ere night yield both my life and them

To some man else, as this dead man doth we.
 Who's this ?—O God ! it is my father's face,
 Whom in this conflict I unawares have kill'd.
 O neavy times, begetting such events !
 From London by the king was I press'd forth ;
 My father, being the earl of Warwick's man,
 Came on the part of York, press'd by his master ;
 And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life,
 Have by my hands of life bereaved him.
 Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did !
 And pardon, father, for I knew not thee !
 My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks ;
 And no more words till they have flow'd their fill.

K. Hen. O piteous spectacle ! O bloody time !
 Whiles lions war, and battle for their dens,
 Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity.
 Weep, wretched man, I'll aid thee, tear for tear,
 And let our hearts, and eyes, like civil war,
 Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharg'd with grief.

Enter a Father who has killed his Son, with the in his arms.

Fath. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me,
 Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold ;
 For I have bought it with an hundred blows.
 But let me see :—is this our foeman's face ?
 Ah, no, no, no, it is mine only son !
 Ah, boy, if any life be left in thee,
 Throw up thine eye ; see, see, what showers are Blown with the windy tempest of my heart,
 Upon thy wounds, that kill mine eye and heart !
 O, pity, God, this miserable age !
 What stratagems,<sup>a</sup> how fell, how butcherly,
 Erroneous, mutinous, and unnatural,
 This deadly quarrel daily doth beget !
 O boy, thy father gave thee life too soon,
 And hath bereft thee of thy life too late !

K. Hen. Woe above woe ! grief more than grief !

O, that my death would stay these ruthless deeds !
 O pity, pity, gentle Heaven, pity !
 The red rose and the white are on his face,
 The fatal colours of our striving houses :
 The one, his purple blood right well resembles ;
 The other, his pale cheeks, methinks, present :
 Wither one rose, and let the other flourish !
 If you contend, a thousand lives must wither.

Son. How will my mother, for a father's death
 Take on with me, and ne'er be satisfied !

Fath. How will my wife, for slaughter of my Shed seas of tears, and ne'er be satisfied !

K. Hen. How will the country, for these chances,

Mis-think the king, and not be satisfied !

Son. Was ever son so rued a father's death ?

Fath. Was ever father so bemoan'd a son ?

K. Hen. Was ever king so griev'd for subjects' death ?
 Much is your sorrow ; mine, ten times so much.

Son. I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep
 [Exit, with the]

Fath. These arms of mine shall be thy weep
 sheet ;

My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre ;
 For from my heart thine image ne'er shall go
 My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell ;
 And so obsequious<sup>b</sup> will thy father be,
 Sad for the loss of thee, having no more,
 As Priam was for all his valiant sons.
 I'll bear thee hence ; and let them fight that will
 For I have murder'd where I should not kill.
 [Exit, with the]

<sup>a</sup> Stratagems here means disastrous events—not means events of war, its surprises and snares.

<sup>b</sup> Obsequious—performing obsequies.

Sad-hearted men, much overgone with care, king more woeful than you are.

*Excursions. Enter QUEEN MARGARET,
PRINCE OF WALES, and EXETER.*

Fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled,
ick rages like a chafed bull:
death doth hold us in pursuit.
Mount you, my lord; towards Berwick post
rain:

Richard, like a brace of greyhounds fearful flying hare in sight, eyes, sparkling for very wrath,
steel grasp'd in their ireful hands,
sacks; and therefore hence amain.
ay! for vengeance comes along with them:
ot to expostulate, make speed;
ie after, I'll away before.
Nay, take me with thee, good sweet Exeter;
ear to stay, but love to go queen intends. Forward; away! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The same.

Alarum. Enter CLIFFORD, wounded.

He burns my candle out, ay, here it dies,
les it lasted, gave king Henry light.
er! I fear thy overthrow,
y body's parting with my soul.
d fear, glued many friends to thee:
fall, thy tough commixtures melt.
Henry, strength'ning mis-proud York,
m people swarm like summer flies:]
r fly the gnats but to the sun?
ines now but Henry's enemies?
hadst thou never given consent ou should check thy fiery steeds, g ear never had scorch'd the earth:
hadst thou sway'd as kings should do,
tber, and his father, did,
round unto the house of York,
then had sprung like summer flies;
housand in this luckless realm,
mourning widows for our death,
ix day hadst kept thy chair in peace.
th cherish weeds, but gentle air?
akes robbers bold, but too much lenity?
plaints, and careless are my wounds.
y, nor strength to hold out flight;
merciless, and will not pity;
hands I have deserv'd no pity.
got into my deadly wounds,
effuse of blood doth make me faint:
and Richard, Warwick, and the rest;
our fathers' bosoms, split my breast.

[He faints.]

And retreat. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, D. MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Soldiers.

we breathe we, lords; good fortune bids us rise,
the frowns of war with peaceful looks.
pursue the bloody-minded queen;
him Henry, though he were a king, ill, fill'd with a fretting gust,
an argosy to stem the waves.
ou, lords, that Clifford fled with them?
s, 't is impossible he should escape:
before his face I speak the words,
er Richard mark'd him for the grave:
wae'er he is, he's surely dead.

[CLIFFORD groans, and dies.]
base soul is that which takes her heavy leave?

Rich. A deadly groan, like life and death's departing
Edw. See who it is: and, now the battle 's ended,
If friend, or foe, let him be gently used.

Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 't is Clifford;
Who, not contented that he lopp'd the branch
In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth,
But set his murdering knife unto the root
From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring,—
I mean, our princely father, duke of York.

War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head,

Your father's head, which Clifford placed there:
Instead whereof let this supply the room;
Measure for measure must be answered.

Edw. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house
That nothing sung but death to us and ours:
Now death shall stop his dismal threatening sound,
And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.

[Attendants bring the body forward.]

War. I think his understanding is bereft:—
Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee?—
Dark cloudy death o'ershades his beams of life,
And he nor sees, nor hears us what we say.

Rich. O, would he did! and so, perhaps, he doth;
'T is but his policy to counterfeit,
Because he would avoid such bitter taunts
Which in the time of death he gave our father.

Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager words.

Rich. Clifford, ask mercy, and obtain no grace.

Edw. Clifford, repent in bootless penitence.

War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults.

Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults.

Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.

Edw. Thou pitied'st Rutland, I will pity thee.

Geo. Where 's captain Margaret, to fence you now?

War. They mock thee, Clifford! swear as thou wast wont.

Rich. What, not an oath? nay, then the world goes hard

When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath:
I know by that he 's dead: And, by my soul,
If this right hand would buy two hours' life,
That I in all despite might rail at him,
This hand should chop it off; and with the issuing blood
Stifle the villain, whose unslaked thirst
York and young Rutland could not satisfy.

War. Ay, but he 's dead: Off with the traitor's head,
And rear it in the place your father's stands.
And now to London with triumphant march,
There to be crowned England's royal king.

From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to France
And ask the lady Bona for thy queen:
So shalt thou sinew both these lands together;
And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread

The scatter'd foe, that hopes to rise again;

For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,
Yet look to have them buzz, to offend thine ears.

First, will I see the coronation;

And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea,
To effect this marriage, so it please my lord.

Edw. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be:

For on thy shoulder do I build my seat;

And never will I undertake the thing
Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting.

Richard, I will create thee duke of Gloster;

And George, of Clarence; Warwick, as ourself,
Shall do, and undo, as him please best.

Rich. Let me be duke of Clarence; George, of Gloster;

For Gloster's dukedom is too ominous.

War. Tut! that 's a foolish observation;

Richard, be duke of Gloster. Now to London,
To see these honours in possession. [Exeunt.]

* Enger—our—sharp.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Chase in the North of England.

Enter Two Keepers, with cross-bows in their hands.

1 Keep. Under this thick-grown brake we'll shroud ourselves;

For through this laund<sup>a</sup> anon the deer will come;
And in this covert will we make our stand,
Culling the principal of all the deer.

2 Keep. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot.

1 Keep. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow
Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.

Here stand we both, and aim we at the best:

And, for the time shall not seem tedious,

I'll tell thee what befell me on a day.

In this self-place where now we mean to stand.

2 Keep. Here comes a man, let 's stay till he be past.

Enter KING HENRY, disguised, with a prayer-book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love,
To greet mine own land with my wishful sight.

No, Harry, Harry, 't is no land of thine;

Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrung from thee,

Thy balm wash'd off, wherewith thou wast anointed:

No bending knee will call thee Caesar now,

No humble suitors press to speak for right,

No, not a man comes for redress of thee;

For how can I help them, and not myself?

1 Keep. Ay, here 's a deer whose skin 's a keeper's fee:

This is the quondam king; let 's seize upon him.

K. Hen. Let me embrace these sour adversities;

For wise men say it is the wisest course.

2 Keep. Why linger we? let us lay hands upon him.

1 Keep. Forbear a while; we'll hear a little more.

K. Hen. My queen and son are gone to France for aid;

And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick

Is thither gone, to crave the French king's sister

To wife for Edward: If this news be true,

Poor queen and son, your labour is but lost;

For Warwick is a subtle orator,

And Lewis a prince soon won with moving words.

By this account, then, Margaret may win him;

For she 's a woman to be pitied much:

Her sighs will make a battery in his breast;

Her tears will pierce into a marble heart;

The tiger will be mild while she doth mourn;

And Nero will be tainted with remorse,

To hear, and see, her plaints, her brinish tears.

Ay, but she 's come to beg; Warwick, to give:

She, on his left side, craving aid for Henry;

He, on his right, asking a wife for Edward.

She weeps, and says—her Henry is depos'd;

He smiles, and says—his Edward is install'd;

That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no more;

Whiles Warwick tells his title, smooths the wrong,

Inferreth arguments of mighty strength;

And, in conclusion, wins the king from her,

With promise of his sister, and what else,

To strengthen and support king Edward's place.

O Margaret, thus 't will be; and thou, poor soul,

Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn.

2 Keep. Say, what art thou that talk'st of kings and queens?

K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to:

A man at least, for less I should not be:

Men may talk of kings, and why not I?

sp. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king,

m. Why, so I am, in mind; and that 's enough.

p. But if thou be a king, where is thy crown?

d. (the same as l.wn) is, according to Camden, "a sing trees."

K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not
Not deck'd with diamonds and Indian stones
Nor to be seen: my crown is call'd content.
A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy.

2 Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd,
Your crown content and you must be content
To go along with us: for, as we think,
You are the king king Edward hath depos'd
And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance
Will apprehend you as his enemy.

K. Hen. But did you never swear and be

2 Keep. No, never such an oath; nor w

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOSTER, CLAR

LADY GREY.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloster, at Saint Al

This lady's husband, sir John Grey, was s

His lands then seiz'd on by the conqueror

Her suit is now, to repossess those lands;

Which we in justice cannot well deny,

Because in quarrel of the house of York

The worthy gentleman did lose his life.

It were dishonour to deny it her.

K. Edw. It were no less; but yet I'll m

Glo. Yea! is it so?

I see the lady hath a thing to grant,

Before the king will grant her humble suit.

 or good faith, you'll catch a blow.

 forbid that! for he'll take vantages. [Aside.
 How many children hast thou, widow?
 me.
 nk he means to beg a child of her. [Aside.
 then whip me; he'll rather give her two.
 [Aside.
 Three, my most gracious lord.
 shall have four, if you'll be rul'd by him.
 [Aside.
 If were pity they should lose their father's

 Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it then.
 lords, give us leave: I'll try this widow's

 ke leave, and leave you to the crutch.
 us and CLARENCE retire to the other side.
 Now, tell me, madam, do you love your

 and would you not do much to do them

 o do them good I would sustain some harm.

 Therefore I came unto your majesty.
 'll tell you how these lands are to be got.
 So shall you bind me to your highness' ice.
 hat service wilt thou do me, if I give them?
 hat you command that rests in me to do.
 but you will take exceptions to my boon.
 No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.

 Why, then I will do what your grace com-

 Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my nk't thou I sue so much to get?

 ly love till death, my humble thanks, my ers;
 ch virtue begs and virtue grants.
 o, by my troth, I did not mean such love.
 Why, then you mean not as I thought you at now you partly may perceive my mind.
 y mind will never grant what I perceive

 o tell thee plain, I aim to lie with thee.
 o tell you plain, I had rather lie in prison.
 by, then thou shalt not have thy hus-
 's lands.
 Why, then mine honesty shall be my dower;
 as I will not purchase them.
 herein thou wrong'st thy children mightily.

L. Grey. Herein your highness wrongs both them and
 me.
 But, mighty lord, this merry inclination
 Accords not with the sadness* of my suit;
 Please you dismiss me, either with ay or no.
K. Edw. Ay, if thou wilt say ay to my request:
 No, if thou dost say no to my demand.
L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.
Glo. The widow likes him not, she knits her brows.
 [Aside.
Clar. He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom.
 [Aside.
K. Edw. [Aside.] Her looks do argue her replete with modesty;
 Her words do show her wit incomparable.
 All her perfections challenge sovereignty:
 One way, or other, she is for a king;
 And she shall be my love, or else my queen.
 Say, that king Edward take thee for his queen?
L. Grey. 'T is better said than done, my gracious
 lord:
 I am a subject fit to jest withal,
 But far unfit to be a sovereign.
K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee,
 I speak no more than what my soul intends;
 And that is, to enjoy thee for my love.
L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto:
 I know I am too mean to be your queen,
 And yet too good to be your concubine.
K. Edw. You cavil, widow; I did mean my queen.
L. Grey. 'T will grieve your grace my son should call you father.
K. Edw. No more than when my daughters call thee mother.
 Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children;
 And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor,
 Have other some: why, 'tis a happy thing
 To be the father unto many sons.
 Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen.
Glo. The ghostly father now hath done his shrift!
 [Aside.
Clar. When he was made a shriver, 't was for shrift.
 [Aside.
K. Edw. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had.
Glo. The widow likes it not, for she looks very sad.
K. Edw. You'd think it strange if I should marry her.
Clar. To whom, my lord?
K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself.
Glo. That would be ten days' wonder at the least.
Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.
Glo. By so much is the wonder in extremes.
K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers: I can tell you both Her suit is granted for her husband's lands.
 Enter a Nobleman.
Nob. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken,
 And brought your prisoner to your palace gate.
K. Edw. See that he be convey'd unto the Tower:
 And go we, brothers, to the man that took him,
 To question of his apprehension.
 Widow, go you along;—Lords, use her honourable.
 [Exeunt K. EDW., LADY GREY, CLARENCE, and Lord.
Glo. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.
 'Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all,
 That from his loins no hopeful branch may spring,
 To cross me from the golden time I look for!
 And yet, between my soul's desire and me,
 (The lustful Edward's title buried,)
 Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward,
 And all the unlook'd-for issue of their bodies,
 To take their rooms, ere I can place myself:
 A cold premeditation for my purpose!

* Sadness—seriousness.

Why, then I do but dream on sovereignty ;
 Like one that stands upon a promontory,
 And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,
 Wishing his foot were equal with his eye ;
 And chides the sea that sunders him from thence,
 Saying, he 'll lade it dry to have his way ;
 So do I wish the crown, being so far off ;
 And so I chide the means that keep me from it ;
 And so I say, I 'll cut the causes off,
 Flattering me with impossibilities.
 My eye 's too quick, my heart o'erweens too much,
 Unless my hand and strength could equal them.
 Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard ;
 What other pleasure can the world afford ?
 I 'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,
 And deck my body in gay ornaments,
 And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks.
 O miserable thought ! and more unlikely
 Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns !
 Why, love forswore me in my mother's womb :
 And, for I should not deal in her soft laws,
 She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe
 To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub ;
 To make an envious mountain on my back,
 Where sits deformity to mock my body ;
 To shape my legs of an unequal size ;
 To disproportion me in every part,
 Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd bear-whelp,
 That carries no impression like the dam.
 And am I then a man to be lov'd ?
 O, monstrous fault, to harbour such a thought !
 Then, since this earth affords no joy to me
 But to command, to check, to o'erbear such
 As are of better person than myself,
 I 'll make my heaven to dream upon the crown ;
 And, whiles I live, to account this world but hell,
 Until my mis-shap'd trunk, that bears this head,
 Be round impaled with a glorious crown.
 And yet I know not how to get the crown,
 For many lives stand between me and home ;
 And I,—like one lost in a thorny wood,
 That rents the thorns, and is rent with the thorns,
 Seeking a way, and straying from the way ;
 Not knowing how to find the open air,
 But toiling desperately to find it out,—
 Torment myself to catch the English crown :
 And from that torment I will free myself,
 Or hew my way out with a bloody axe.
 Why, I can smile, and murder whiles I smile :
 And cry, content, to that which grieves my heart ;
 And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,
 And frame my face to all occasions.
 I 'll drown more sailors than the mermaid shall ;
 I 'll slay more gazers than the basilisk ;
 I 'll play the orator as well as Nestor ;
 Deceive more sily than Ulysses could ;
 And, like a Sinon, take another Troy :
 I can add colours to the cameleon ;
 Change shapes with Proteus, for advantages,
 And set the murderous Machiavel to school.
 Can I do this, and cannot get a crown ?
 Tut ! were it farther off I 'll pluck it down. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—France. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter LEWIS the French King, and LADY BONA, attended ; the KING takes his state. Then enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE EDWARD her son, and the EARL OF OXFORD.

K. Lew. Fair queen of England, worthy Margaret.
 [Rising.]

Sit down with us ; it ill befits thy state
 And birth that thou shouldst stand, while Lewis doth sit.
Q. Mar. No, mighty king of France ; now Margaret

Must strike her sail, and learn awhile to serve,
 Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
 Great Albion's queen in former golden days ;
 But now mischance hath trod my title down,
 And with dishonour laid me on the ground ;
 Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
 And to my humble seat conform myself.

K. Lew. Why, say, fair queen, whence spring deep despair ?

Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes
 tears,

And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in K. Lew. Whate'er it be, be thou still like thyself
 And sit thee by our side : yield not thy neck

[Seats her by]
 To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
 Still ride in triumph over all mischance.
 Be plain, queen Margaret, and tell thy grief ;
 It shall be eas'd if France can yield relief.

Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my thoughts,

And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak.
 Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis,
 That Henry, sole possessor of my love,
 Is, of a king, become a banish'd man,
 And forc'd to live in Scotland a forlorn ;
 While proud ambitious Edward, duke of York,
 Usurps the regal title, and the seat
 Of England's true-anointed lawful king.
 This is the cause that I, poor Margaret,
 With this, my son, prince Edward, Henry's heir,
 Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid ;
 And if thou fail us all our hope is done ;
 Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help ;
 Our people and our peers are both misled,
 Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight,
 And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.

K. Lew. Renowned queen, with patience cal storm,
 While we bethink a means to break it off.

Q. Mar. The more we stay the stronger grows

K. Lew. The more I stay the more I 'll succeed

Q. Mar. O, but impatience waiteth on true
 And see, where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter WARWICK, attended.

K. Lew. What 's he approacheth boldly to sence ?

Q. Mar. Our earl of Warwick, Edward's friend.

K. Lew. Welcome, brave Warwick ! What thee to France ?

[Descending from his state. QUEEN MARGARET

Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to
 For this is he that moves both wind and tide.

War. From worthy Edward, king of Albion,
 My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend,
 I come, in kindness and unfeigned love,
 First, to do greetings to thy royal person ;
 And then to crave a league of amity ;
 And, lastly, to confirm that amity
 With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafest to grant
 That virtuous lady Bona, thy fair sister,
 To England's king in lawful marriage.

Q. Mar. If that go forward Henry's hope is dead

War. And, gracious madam [to BONA], in our behalf,

I am commanded, with your leave and favour,
 Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue
 To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart ;
 Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears,
 Hath plac'd thy beauty's image, and thy virtues.

Q. Mar. King Lewis, and lady Bona, bear me Before you answer Warwick. His demand from Edward's well-meant honest love, deceit, bred by necessity;

 in tyrants safely govern home,
 and they purchase great alliance?
 in tyrant, this reason may suffice,
 y' liveth still: but were he dead,
 since Edward stands, king Henry's son, ere, Lewis, that by this league and marriage not on thy danger and dishonour:
 usurpers sway the rule awhile,
 is are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.
 injurious Margaret!

And why not queen?
 because thy father Henry did usurp;
 o more art prince than she is queen.
 in Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt, subdue the greatest part of Spain;
 John of Gaunt, Henry the fourth,
 om was a mirror to the wisest;
 that wise prince, Henry the fifth,
 prowess conquered all France:
 our Henry lineally descends,
 ford, how haps it in this smooth discourse
 t, how Henry the sixth hath lost ich Henry the fifth had gotten?
 these peers of France should smile at that.
 rest, you tell a pedigree
 e and two years; a silly time escription for a kingdom's worth. y, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy age,

obeyedst thirty and six years, wray thy treason with a blush?
 in Oxford, that did ever fence the right, or falsehood with a pedigree?
 leave Henry, and call Edward king.
 I him my king, by whose injurious doom together, the lord Aubrey Vere, o death? and more than so, my father,
 downfall of his mellow'd years,
 re brought him to the door of death?
 ck, no; while life upholds this arm,
 pholds the house of Lancaster.
 nd I the house of York.

Queen Margaret, prince Edward, and Oxford,
 at our request to stand aside,
 e further conference with Warwick.
 Heavens grant that Warwick's words be-stich him not!

[Retiring with the PRINCE and OXFORD.]
 Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,

your true king? for I were loth to him that were not lawful chosen.
 because I pawn my credit and mine honour.

But is he gracious in the people's eye?
 be more, that Henry was unfortunate.
 Then further, all dissembling set aside, truth the measure of his love ster Bona.

Such it seems seems a monarch like himself.
 e often heard him say, and swear,
 is love was an eternal plant,
 e root was fix'd in virtue's ground,
 and fruit maintain'd with beauty's sun;
 in envy, but not from disdain,
 lady Bona quit his pain.

Now, sister, let us hear your firm resolve.
 our grant, or your denial, shall be mine:—
 es. [To WAR.] that often ere this day, ve heard your king's desert recounted,
 with tempted judgment to desire.

K. Lew. Then, Warwick, thus,—Our sister shall be Edward's;

And now forthwith shall articles be drawn Touching the jointure that your king must make,
 Which with her dowry shall be counterpois'd:
 Draw near, queen Margaret, and be a witness
 That Bona shall be wife to the English king.

Prince. To Edward, but not to the English king.

Q. Mar. Deceitful Warwick! it was thy device
 By this alliance to make void my suit;
 Before thy coming Lewis was Henry's friend.

K. Lew. And still is friend to him and Margaret;
 But if your title to the crown be weak,
 As may appear by Edward's good success,
 Then 't is but reason that I be releas'd
 From giving aid, which late I promised.
 Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand
 That your estate requires, and mine can yield.

War. Henry now lives in Scotland, at his ease;
 Where, having nothing, nothing he can lose.
 And as for you yourself, our quondam queen,
 You have a father able to maintain you;
 And better 't were you troubled him than France.

Q. Mar. Peace, impudent and shameless Warwick,
 peace;

Proud setter-up and puller-down of kings!
 I will not hence till with my talk and tears,
 Both full of truth, I make king Lewis behold
 Thy sly conveyance,* and thy lord's false love;
 For both of you are birds of self-same feather.

[A horn sounded within.]

K. Lew. Warwick, this is some post to us, or thee.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you;
 Sent from your brother, marquis Montague;—
 These from our king unto your majesty;—
 And, madam, these for you; from whom—I know not.

[To MARGARET. They all read their letters.]

Oxf. I like it well, that our fair queen and mistress Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his.

Prince. Nay, mark, how Lewis stamps as he were nettled:
 I hope all 's for the best.

K. Lew. Warwick, what are thy news? and yours, fair queen?

Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill my heart with unhop'd joys.

War. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discontent.

K. Lew. What! has your king married the lady Grey?
 And now, to soothe your forgery and his,
 Sends me a paper to persuade me patience?
 Is this the alliance that he seeks with France?
 Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?

Q. Mar. I told your majesty as much before:
 This proveth Edward's love and Warwick's honesty.

War. King Lewis, I here protest, in sight of Heaven,
 And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss,
 That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's;
 No more my king, for he dishonours me;
 But most himself, if he could see his shame.
 Did I forget, that by the house of York
 My father came untimely to his death?
 Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece?
 Did I impale him with the regal crown?
 Did I put Henry from his native right;
 And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame?
 Shame on himself; for my desert is honour.
 And to repair my honour lost for him,
 I here renounce him, and return to Henry:
 My noble queen, let former grudges pass,
 And henceforth I am thy true servitor;
 I will revenge his wrong to lady Bona,
 And replant Henry in his former state.

* Concealment—juggling—artifice.

Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love;

And I forgive and quite forget old faults,
And joy that thou becom'st king Henry's friend

War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned friend,
That if king Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us
With some few bands of chosen soldiers,
I'll undertake to land them on our coast,
And force the tyrant from his seat by war.
'T is not his new-made bride shall succour him:
And as for Clarence, as my letters tell me,
He's very likely now to fall from him;
For matching more for wanton lust than honour,
Or than for strength and safety of our country.

Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be reveng'd,
But by thy help to this distressed queen?

Q. Mar. Renowned prince, how shall poor Henry live,
Unless thou rescue him from foul despair?

Bona. My quarrel and this English queen's are one.

War. And mine, fair lady Bona, joins with yours.

K. Lew. And mine with hers, and thine, and Margaret's.

Therefore, at last, I firmly am resolv'd,
You shall have aid.

Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once.

K. Lew. Then, England's messenger, return in post;
And tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
That Lewis of France is sending over maskers,
To revel it with him and his new bride:
Thou seest what 's past, go fear* thy king withal.

Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,
I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.

Q. Mar. Tell him, my mourning weeds are laid aside,
And I am ready to put amour on.

War. Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong;
And therefore I'll uncrown him, ere 't be long.
There 's thy reward; be gone. [Exit Mess.]

K. Lew. But, Warwick, thou,
And Oxford, with five thousand men,
Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle:
And, as occasion serves, this noble queen
And prince shall follow with a fresh supply.

Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one doubt;
What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty?

War. This shall assure my constant loyalty:
That if our queen and this young prince agree,
I'll join mine eldest daughter, and my joy,
To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands.

Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for motion:

Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous,
Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick;
And, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable,
That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves
And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand.

[He gives his hand to Warwick.]
K. Lew. Why stay we now? These soldiers be levied,

And thou, lord Bourbon, our high admiral,
Shall waft them over with our royal fleet.

I long till Edward fall by war's mischance,
For mocking marriage with a dame of France.

[Exit all but Warwick.]
War. I came from Edward as ambassador,
But I return his sworn and mortal foe:

Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me,
But dreadful war shall answer his demand.

Had he none else to make a stale* but me?
Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow.

I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown,
And I'll be chief to bring him down again:

Not that I pity Henry's misery,
But seek revenge on Edward's mockery. [4

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter GLOSTER, CLARENCE, SOMERSET, MONTAGUE,
and others.

Glo. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you
Of this new marriage with the lady Grey?
Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?

Clar. Alas, you know, 't is far from hence to France;
How could he stay till Warwick made return?

Som. My lords, forbear this talk; here comes the king.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, attended; LADY GREY, as Queen; PEMBROKE, STAFFORD, HASTINGS,
and others.

Glo. And his well-chosen bride.

Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think.

K. Edw. Now, brother of Clarence, how like you our choice,

That you stand pensive, as half malcontent?

Clar. As well as Lewis of France, or the earl of Warwick;

Which are so weak of courage and in judgment,
That they'll take no offence at our abuse.

K. Edw. Suppose they take offence without a cause,
They are but Lewis and Warwick; I am Edward,
Your king and Warwick's, and must have my will.

Glo. And you shall have your will, because our king;
Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too?
Glo. Not I: no.

God forbid that I should wish them sever'd

* Fear—affright.

Whom God hath join'd together: ay, and 't were
To sunder them that yoke so well together.

K. Edw. Setting your scorns and your unlikes Tell me some reason, why the lady Grey
Should not become my wife, and England's queen,
And you too, Somerset and Montague,
Speak freely what you think.

Clar. Then this is my opinion, that king Lewis Becomes your enemy, for mocking him
About the marriage of the lady Bona.

Glo. And Warwick, doing what you gave in
Is now dishonoured by this new marriage.

K. Edw. What, if both Lewis and Warwick peas'd

By such invention as I can devise?

Mont. Yet, to have join'd with France in such alliance
Would more have strengthen'd this our commonwealth
'Gainst foreign storms, than any home-bred marriage.

Hast. Why, knows not Montague that of itself
England is safe, if true within itself?

Mont. Yes, but the safer when it is back'd France.

Hast. 'T is better using France than trusting France.
Let us be back'd with God, and with the seas,
Which he hath given for fence impregnable,
And with their helps only defend ourselves;
In them, and in ourselves, our safety lies.

Clar. For this one speech, lord Hastings well deserves
To have the heir of the lord Hungerford.

K. Edw. Ay, what of that? it was my will and
And, for this once, my will shall stand for law.

* Stale—stalking-horse.

thinks, your grace hath not done well for and daughter of lord Scales her of your loving bride;
 had have fitted me, or Clarence:
 hide you bury brotherhood.
 see you would not have bestow'd the heir myville on your new wife's son, or brothers to go speed elsewhere.
 alas, poor Clarence! is it for a wife discontent? I will provide thee.
 seeking for yourself you show'd your judgment;
 I shall give me leave
 to make in mine own behalf;
 and, I shortly mind to leave you.
 save me, or tarry, Edward will be king,
 and unto his brother's will.
 My lords, before it pleas'd his majesty to take to title of a queen,
 I wish, and you must all confess it ignoble of descent,
 that I myself have had like fortune.
 He honours me and mine,
 and, to whom I would be pleasing,
 goes with danger and with sorrow.
 I love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns:
 or what sorrow can befall thee,
 I rather wish you foes than hollow friends;
 my sovereign, whom they must obey?
 they shall obey, and love thee too,
 I seek for hatred at my hands:
 I do, yet will I keep thee safe,
 I feel the vengeance of my wrath.
 yet say not much, but think the more.

[Aside.]

Enter a Messenger.

Now, messenger, what letters or what news from my sovereign liege, no letters; and few words, without your special pardon,
 I have to say to you.
 So, we pardon thee: therefore, in brief,
 I would have words as near as thou canst guess them.
 I have taken Lewis unto our letters?
 I depart, these were his very words:
 Edward, thy supposed king,
 France is sending over maskers to hide him and his new bride."
 Lewis so brave? belike he thinks me
 a coward.
 Lady Bona to my marriage?
 I were her words, utter'd with mild discountenance.
 I hope he'll prove a widower shortly,
 and I will give him a willow garland for his sake.
 I blame not her, she could say little less;
 I sing. But what said Henry's queen?
 I said that she was there in place."
 I told him," quoth she, "my mourning weeds were on me,
 I thought to put armour on."
 I like she minds to play the Amazon.
 Warwick to these injuries?
 I have more incens'd against your majesty than I can discharge with these words:
 I wish, that he hath done me wrong,
 I will uncrown him ere 't be long.
 I wish I durst the traitor breathe out so proud
 words.
 I wish, that he were thus forewarn'd:
 I would have wars, and pay for their presumption.
 I wish, that Warwick friends with Margaret?

* In place—there present.

Mess. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship

That young prince Edward marries Warwick's daughter.

Clar. Belike, the elder; Clarence will have the younger.

Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast,
 For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter;
 That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage
 I may not prove inferior to yourself.
 You that love me and Warwick, follow me.

[Exit CLARENCE, and SOMERSET follows.]

Glo. Not I.

My thoughts aim at a further matter;
 I stay not for love of Edward, but the crown. [Aside.]

K. Edu. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick!

Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen;

And haste is needful in this desperate case.

Pembroke, and Stafford, you in our behalf

Go levy men, and make prepare for war.

They are already, or quickly will be landed:

Myself in person will straight follow you.

[Exit PEMBROKE and STAFFORD.]

But, ere I go, Hastings and Montague,

Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest,

Are near to Warwick by blood, and by alliance:

Tell me, if you love Warwick more than me?

If it be so, then both depart to him;

I rather wish you foes than hollow friends;

But if you mind to hold your true obedience,

Give me assurance with some friendly vow,

That I may never have you in suspect.

Mont. So God help Montague, as he proves true!

Hast. And Hastings, as he favours Edward's cause!

K. Edu. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?

Glo. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand you.

K. Edu. Why so; then am I sure of victory.

Now therefore let us hence; and lose no hour,
 Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Plain in Warwickshire.

Enter WARWICK and OXFORD, with French and other Forces.

War. Trust me, my lord, all hitherto goes well;
 The common people by numbers swarm to us.

Enter CLARENCE and SOMERSET.

But, see, where Somerset and Clarence come;

Speak suddenly, my lords; are we all friends?

Clar. Fear not that, my lord.

War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto Warwick;

And welcome, Somerset: I hold it cowardice,

To rest mistrustful where a noble heart

Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love;

Else might I think that Clarence, Edward's brother,

Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings:

But welcome, sweet Clarence; my daughter shall be thine.

And now what rests, but, in night's coverture,

Thy brother being carelessly encamp'd,

His soldiers lurking in the towns about,

And but attended by a simple guard,

We may surprise and take him at our pleasure?

Our scouts have found the adventure very easy:

That as Ulysses, and stout Diomedes,

With slight and manhood stole to Rhesus' tents,

And brought from thence the Thracian fatal steeds;

So we, well cover'd with the night's black mantle,

At unawares may beat down Edward's guard,

And seize himself: I say not, slaughter him,

For I intend but only to surprise him.

You that will follow me to this attempt

Applaud the name of Henry, with your leader.

[They all cry Hears!]

Why, then, let 's on our way in silent sort :
For Warwick and his friends, God and St. George!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Edward's Camp near Warwick.

Enter certain Watchmen, to guard the King's tent.

1 Watch. Come on, my masters, each man take his stand ;

The king, by this, is set him down to sleep.

2 Watch. What, will he not to bed ?

1 Watch. Why, no : for he hath made a solemn vow
Never to lie and take his natural rest

Till Warwick, or himself, be quite suppress'd.

2 Watch. To-morrow then, belike, shall be the day,
If Warwick be so near as men report.

3 Watch. But say, I pray, what nobleman is that
That with the king here resteth in his tent ?

1 Watch. 'T is the lord Hastings, the king's chiefest friend.

3 Watch. O, is it so ? But why commands the king
That his chief followers lodge in towns about him,
While he himself keepeth in the cold field ?

2 Watch. 'T is the more honour, because more dangerous.

3 Watch. Ay ; but give me worship, and quietness,
I like it better than a dangerous honour.

If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,
'T is to be doubted he would waken him.

1 Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage.

2 Watch. Ay ; wherefore else guard we his royal tent,
But to defend his person from night-foes ?

*Enter WARWICK, CLARENCE, OXFORD, SOMERSET,
and Forces.*

War. This is his tent ; and see, where stands his guard.

Courage, my masters : honour now, or never !
But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

1 Watch. Who goes there ?

2 Watch. Stay, or thou diest.

[*WARWICK, and the rest, cry all—Warwick !
Warwick ! and set upon the Guard ; who fly, crying—Arm ! Arm ! WARWICK, and the rest, following them.*]

The drum beating, and trumpets sounding, re-enter WARWICK, and the rest, bringing the KING out in a gown, sitting in a chair : GLOSTER and HASTINGS fly.

Som. What are they that fly there ?

War. Richard and Hastings : let them go, here is the duke.

K. Edw. The duke ! why, Warwick, when we parted last,

Thou call'dst me king

War. Ay, but the case is alter'd :

When you disgrac'd me in my ambassade,

Then I degraded you from being king,

And come now to create you duke of York.

Alas ! how should you govern any kingdom,

That know not how to use ambassadors ;

Nor how to be contented with one wife ;

Nor how to use your brothers brotherly ;

Nor how to study for the people's welfare ;

Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies ?

K. Edw. Yea, brother of Clarence, art thou here too ?

Nay, then I see that Edward needs must down.

Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance,

Of thee thyself, and all thy complices,

Edward will always bear himself as king :

Though fortune's malice overthrow my state,

My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel

War. Then, for his mind, be Edward Engl

It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

[Exit KING EDWARD, led out ; SOMERSET

Oxf. What now remains, my lords, for us

But march to London with our soldiers ?

War. Ay, that 's the first thing that we

And see him seated in the regal throne.

SCENE V.—A Park near Middleham Yorkshire.

*Enter GLOSTER, HASTINGS, SIR WILLIAM
and others.*

Glo. Now, my lord Hastings, and

Stanley,

Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither

Into this chiefest thicket of the park.

Thus stands the case : You know our king

Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose

He hath good usage and great liberty ;

attended with weak guard,
 this way to disport himself.
 'd him by secret means,
 this hour, he make this way,
 ear of his usual game,
 And his friends, with horse and men,
 from his captivity.

KING EDWARD, and a Huntsman.

I may conquer fortune's spite,
 where fortune cannot hurt me;

people of this blessed land

Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,
 Hearrens, in thy nativity,

live-branch, and laurel crown,

War. And I choose Clarence only for protector

K. Hen. Warwick and Clarence, give me both your hands;

Now join your hands, and with your hands your hearts,
 That no dissention hinder government:

I make you both protectors of this land;
 While I myself will lead a private life,

And in devotion spend my latter days,
 To sin's rebuke, and my Creator's praise.

War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will?

Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent;
 For on thy fortune I repose myself.

War. Why, then, though loth, yet must I be content
 We 'll yoke together, like a double shadow

To Henry's body, and supply his place;
 I mean, in bearing weight of government,

While he enjoys the honour, and his ease.
 And, Clarence, now then it is more than needful,

Forthwith that Edward be pronounc'd a traitor,
 And all his lands and goods be confiscate.

Clar. What else? and that succession be determin'd.
 War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs,
 Let me entreat (for I command no more)

That Margaret your queen, and my son Edward
 Be sent for, to return from France with speed:

For, till I see them here, by doubtful fear
 My joy of liberty is half eclips'd.

Clar. It shall be done, my sovereign, with all speed.

K. Hen. My lord of Somerset, what youth is that,
 Of whom you seem to have so tender care?

Som. My liege, it is young Henry, earl of Richmond.
 K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope: If secret

Enter a Messenger.

War. What news, my friend?
 Mess. That Edward is escaped from your brother,

And fled, as he hears since, to Burgundy.
 War. Unsavoury news: But how made he escape?

Mess. He was convey'd by Richard duke of Gloster,
 And the lord Hastings, who attended him*

In secret ambush on the forest side,
 And from the bishop's huntsmen rescued him;

For hunting was his daily exercise.
 War. My brother was too careless of his charge.

But let us hence, my sovereign, to provide
 A salve for any sore that may betide.

[Exeunt. K. HEN., WAR., CLAR., Lieut., and Attendants.
 Som. My lord, I like not of this flight of Edward's.

For doubtless Burgundy will yield him help;
 And we shall have more wars before 't be long.

As Henry's late presaging prophecy
 Did glad my heart with hope of this young Richmond;

So doth my heart misgive me, in these conflicts
 What may befall him, to his harm and ours:

Therefore, lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,
 Forthwith we 'll send him hence to Brittany,

Till storms be past of civil enmity.
 Oxf. Ay; for if Edward repossess the crown,

'T is like that Richmond with the rest shall down
 Som. It shall be so; he shall to Brittany.

Come, therefore, let 's about it speedily. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Before York.

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOSTER, HASTINGS, and Forces.

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, lord Hastings, and the rest,
Yet thus far fortune maketh us amends,
And says, that once more I shall interchange
My waned state for Henry's regal crown.
Well have we pass'd, and now repass'd the seas,
And brought desired help from Burgundy:
What then remains, we being thus arriv'd
From Ravenspurgh haven before the gates of York,
But that we enter as into our dukedom?

Glo. The gates made fast!—Brother, I like not this;
For many men that stumble at the threshold
Are well foretold that danger lurks within.

K. Edw. Tush, man! abodements must not now affright us:
By fair or foul means we must enter in,
For hitner will our friends repair to us.

Hast. My liege, I'll knock once more to summon them.

Enter on the walls the Mayor of York, and his brethren.

May. My lords, we were forewarned of your coming,
And shut the gates for safety of ourselves;
For now we owe allegiance unto Henry.

K. Edw. But, master mayor, if Henry be your king, Yet Edward, at the least, is duke of York.

May. True, my good lord; I know you for no less.

K. Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom,
As being well content with that alone.

Glo. But when the fox hath once got in his nose,
He'll soon find means to make the body follow. [Aside.]

Hast. Why, master mayor, why stand you in a doubt?
Open the gates, we are king Henry's friends.

May. Ay, say you so? the gates shall then be open'd.
[Exeunt from above.]

Glo. A wise stout captain, and soon persuaded!

Hast. The good old man would fain that all were
well,

So 't were not 'long of him: but, being enter'd,
I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade Both him and all his brothers unto reason.

Re-enter the Mayor, and two Aldermen, below.

K. Edw. So, master mayor: these gates must not be shut,

But in the night, or in the time of war.
What! fear not, man, but yield me up the keys;
[Takes his keys.]

For Edward will defend the town, and thee,
And all those friends that deign to follow me.

Drum. Enter MONTGOMERY, and Forces, marching.

Glo. Brother, this is sir John Montgomery,
Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv'd.

K. Edw. Welcome, sir John! But why come you in arms?

Mont. To help king Edward in his time of storm,
As every loyal subject ought to do.

K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery: But we now forget

Our title to the crown; and only claim
Our dukedom, till God please to send the rest.

Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence again;
I came to serve a king, and not a duke.

Drummer, strike up, and let us march away.

[A march begun.]
Edw. Nay, stay, sir John, awhile; and we'll debate
that safe means the crown may be recover'd.

 Thus [kissing HENRY'S hand] I seal my lips, and bid adieu.
 Sweet Oxford, and my loving Montague,
 Fare ye well, once more a happy farewell.
 Well, sweet lords; let's meet at Coventry.
 [Exit WAR., CLAR., OXF., and MONT.]
 Here at the palace will I rest a while.
 What thinks your lordship?
 Power that Edward hath in field
 Is able to encounter mine.
 Doubt is that he will seduce the rest.
 But 's not my fear, my meed hath got me
 Opp'd mine ears to their demands,
 Their suits with slow delays;
 Been balm to heal their wounds,
 Hath allay'd their swelling griefs,
 And dried their water-flowing tears:
 Men desirous of their wealth,
 Press'd them with great subsidies.
 Of revenge, though they much err'd;
 Would they love Edward more than me?

No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace:
 And when the lion fawns upon the lamb,
 The lamb will never cease to follow him.
 [Shout within. A Lancaster! A Lancaster!
 Exit. Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these?
 Enter KING EDWARD, GLOSTER, and Soldiers.
 K. Edw. Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry, bear him
 Hence,
 And once again proclaim us king of England.
 You are the fount that makes small brooks to flow;
 Now stops thy spring; my sea shall suck them dry
 And swell so much the higher by their ebb.
 Hence with him to the Tower; let him not speak.
 [Exit some with KING HENRY
 And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,
 Where peremptory Warwick now remains:
 The sun shines hot, and if we use delay
 Cold-biting winter mars our hop'd-for hay.
 Glo. Away betimes, before his forces join,
 And take the great-grown traitor unawares:
 Brave warriors, march amain towards Coventry. [Exit

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Coventry.

He walls, WARWICK, the Mayor of Coventry,
 Two Messengers, and others.
 'Tis the post that came from valiant Oxford?
 'Tis thy lord, mine honest fellow?
 'Tis this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.
 'Tis far off is our brother Montague?
 'Tis the post that came from Montague?
 'Tis this at Dainty, with a puissant troop.
 Enter SIR JOHN SOMERVILLE.
 Somerville, what says my loving son?
 Guess, how nigh is Clarence now?
 With what rout I did leave him with his forces,
 How nigh here some two hours hence.
 [Drum heard.
 Clarence is at hand, I hear his drum.
 'Tis not his, my lord; here Southam lies;
 'Tis the honour bears marcheth from Warwick.
 'Tis should that be? belike, unlook'd-for friends.
 'Tis are at hand, and you shall quickly know.
 Enter KING EDWARD, GLOSTER, and Forces, marching.
 A trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parle.
 How the surly Warwick mans the wall.
 'Tis spite! is sportful Edward come?
 'Tis our scouts, or how are they seduc'd,
 'Tis I hear no news of his repair?
 'Tis war, Warwick, wilt thou open the city gates,
 'Tis forsake, and humbly bend thy knee,
 'Tis king, and at his hands beg mercy?
 'Tis partition thee these outrages.
 'Tis rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence,
 'Tis 't these up and pluck'd thee down,
 'Tis 't patron, and be penitent?
 'Tis 't still remain the duke of York.
 'Tis 't, at least, he would have said the king;
 'Tis 't the jest against his will?
 'Tis 't a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift?
 'Tis 't my faith, for a poor earl to give;
 'Tis 't advice for so good a gift.
 'Tis 't as I that gave the kingdom to thy brother.
 'Tis 't, then 't is mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight:
 And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again;
 And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject.
 K. Edw. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner.
 And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this,
 What is the body when the head is off?
 Glo. Alas, that Warwick had no more forecast,
 But whiles he thought to steal the single ten,
 The king was slyly finger'd from the deck!<sup>a</sup>
 You left poor Henry at the bishop's palace,
 And, ten to one, you'll meet him in the Tower.
 K. Edw. 'T is even so; yet you are Warwick still.
 Glo. Come, Warwick, take the time, kneel down,
 Kneel down:
 Nay, when? strike now, or else the iron cools.
 War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,
 And with the other fling it at thy face,
 Than bear so low a sail to strike to thee.
 K. Edw. Sail how thou caust, have wind and tide
 Thy friend;
 This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair,
 Shall, whiles thy head is warm, and new cut off,
 Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood,—
 "Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more.
 Enter OXFORD, with drum and colours.
 War. O cheerful colours! see, where Oxford comes Oxf. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster!
 [OXFORD and his Forces enter the City.
 Glo. The gates are open, let us enter too.
 K. Edw. So other foes may set upon our backs,
 Stand we in good array; for they, no doubt,
 Will issue out again and bid us battle:
 If not, the city being but of small defence,
 We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same.
 War. O, welcome, Oxford! for we want thy help.
 Enter MONTAGUE, with drum and colours.
 Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster!
 [He and his Forces enter the City.
 Glo. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason
 Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.
 K. Edw. The harder match'd, the greater victory:
 My mind presageth happy gain, and conquest.

<sup>a</sup> Deck. A pack of cards was formerly called a deck.

K. Edu. Hold, Richard, hold, for we have done too much.

Glo. Why should she live to fill the world with words?

K. Edu. What! doth she swoon? use means for her recovery.

Glo. Clarence, excuse me to the king my brother; I'll hence to London on a serious matter:

Erre ye come there, be sure to hear some news.

Clar. What? what?

Glo. The Tower! the Tower! [Exit.]

Q. Mar. O, Ned, sweet Ned! speak to thy mother, boy!

Canst thou not speak?—O traitors! murderers!—

They that stabb'd Cæsar shed no blood at all,

Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame,

If this foul deed were by, to equal it.

He was a man: this, in respect, a child;

And men ne'er spend their fury on a child.

What's worse than murderer, that I may name it?

No, no; my heart will burst, an if I speak:

And I will speak, that so my heart may burst.

Butchers and villains, bloody cannibals!

How sweet a plant have you untimely cropp'd!

You have no children, butchers! if you had,

The thought of them would have stirr'd up remorse:

But, if you ever chance to have a child,

Look in his youth to have him so cut off,

As, deathsmen! you have rid this sweet young prince!

K. Edu. Away with her; go, bear her hence perforce.

Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence, despatch me here;

Here sheathe thy sword, I'll pardon thee my death:

What! wilt thou not?—then, Clarence, do it thou.

Clar. By Heaven, I will not do thee so much ease.

Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.

Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it?

Q. Mar. Ay, but thou usest to forswear thyself:

'T was sin before, but now 't is charity.

What! wilt thou not? Where is that devil's butcher,

Richard,

Hard-favour'd Richard? Richard, where art thou?

Thou art not here: Murder is thy alms-deed;

Petitioners for blood thou ne'er putt'st back.

K. Edu. Away, I say; I charge ye, bear her hence.

Q. Mar. So come to you, and yours, as to this prince!

[Exit, led out forcibly.]

K. Edu. Where's Richard gone?

Clar. To London, all in post; and, as I guess,

To make a bloody supper in the Tower.

K. Edu. He's sudden, if a thing comes in his head.

Now march we hence: discharge the common sort

With pay and thanks, and let's away to London,

And see our gentle queen how well she fares:

By this, I hope, she hath a son for me. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—London. A Room in the Tower.

KING HENRY is discovered sitting, with a book in his hand; the Lieutenant attending. Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Good day, my lord! What, at your book so hard?

K. Hen. Ay, my good lord: My lord, I should say,

rather:

'T is sin to flatter, good was little better:

Good Gloster and good devil were alike,

And both preposterous; therefore, not good lord.

Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must confer.

[Exit Lieutenant.]

K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf:

So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece,

And next his throat unto the butcher's knife.

What scene of death hath Roscius now to act?

Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind;

The thief doth fear each bush an officer.

K. Hen. The bird that hath been limed in a bush,

With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush:

And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,

Have now the fatal object in my eye,

Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught, and kill'd.

Glo. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Cæsar,

That taught his son the office of a fowl;

And yet, for all his wings, the fool was down'd!

K. Hen. I, Dædalus; my poor boy, Icarus;

Thy father, Minos, that denied our course;

The sun, that sear'd the wings of my sweet boy,

Thy brother Edward; and thyself, the sea,

Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life.

Ab, kill me with thy weapon, not with words!

My breast can better brook thy dagger's point,

Than can my ears that tragic history.

But wherefore dost thou come? is 't for my life?

Glo. Think'st thou I am an executioner?

K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art;

If murdering innocents be executing,

Why, then thou art an executioner.

Glo. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.

K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd when first thou presume,

Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine.

And thus I prophesy,—that many a thousand,

Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear;

And many an old man's sigh, and many a widow's

And many an orphan's water-standing eye,—

Men for their sons', wives for their husbands',

And orphans for their parents' timeless death,*—

Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.

The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign;

The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time;

Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempests shook down tempests;

The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top,

And chattering pies in dismal discords sung.

Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain,

And yet brought forth less than a mother's hope;

To wit, an indigest deformed lump,

Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree.

Teeth hadst thou in thy head when thou wast lam,

To signify thou cam'st to bite the world:

And, if the rest be true which I have heard,

Thou cam'st—

Glo. I'll hear no more:—Die, prophet, in thy eyes!

[Stabs.]

For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd.

K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after!

O God! forgive my sins, and pardon thee!

Glo. What, will the aspiring blood of Lancaster

Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mount'd

See how my sword weeps for the poor king's death!

O, may such purple tears be always shed

From those that wish the downfall of our house!

If any spark of life be yet remaining,

Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee thither,—

[Stabs him.]

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear.

Indeed, 't is true that Henry told me of;

For I have often heard my mother say

I came into the world with my legs forward:

Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste,

And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right!

The midwife wonder'd: and the women cried,

"O, Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth!"

And so I was; which plainly signified

That I should snarl, and bite, and play the dog.

Then, since the Heavens have shap'd my body so,

Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it.

I have no brother, I am like no brother:

And this word love, which greybeards call divine,

Be resident in men like one another,

 us fast, to find us unprovided.
 t he 's deceiv'd, we are in readiness.
 This cheers my heart, to see your forwardness.
 We pitch our battle; hence we will not budg.

*Enter, at a distance, KING EDWARD,
CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and Forces.*

Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny rod,

Which, by the Heavens' assistance, and your strength,
 Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night.
 I need not add more fuel to your fire,
 For well I wot ye blaze to burn them out:
 Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords.

Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen, what I should say

My tears gainsay; for every word I speak,
 Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes.
 Therefore, no more but this: Henry, your sovereign,
 Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,
 His realm a slaughterhouse, his subjects slain,
 His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent;
 And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil.
 You fight in justice; then, in God's name, lords,
 Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.

[Exeunt both armies.]

SCENE V.—Another part of the same.

*Alarums: Excursions: and afterwards a retreat.
Then enter KING EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and Forces; with QUEEN MARGARET, OXFORD, and SOMERSET, prisoners.*

K. Edw. Now, here a period of tumultuous broils.
Away with Oxford to Hammes' castle straight:
For Somerset, off with his guilty head.

Go, bear them hence; I will not hear them speak.

Oxf. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with words.

Som. Nor I, but stoop with patience to my fortune.

[Exeunt OXFORD and SOMERSET, guarded.]

Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous world,
To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem.

K. Edw. Is proclamation made, that who finds Edward

Shall have a high reward, and be his life?

Glo. It is: and lo, where youthful Edward comes.

Enter Soldiers, with PRINCE EDWARD.

K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant, let us hear him speak.

What! can so young a thorn begin to prick?

Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make

For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,

And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to?

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York.

Suppose that I am now my father's mouth;

Resign thy chair, and, where I stand, kneel thou,

Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee,

Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to.

Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so resolv'd!

Glo. That you might still have worn the petticoat,

And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lancaster.

Prince. Let Æsop fable in a winter's night;

His currish riddles sort not with this place.

Glo. By Heaven, brat, I'll plague you for that word.

Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to men.

Glo. For God's sake, take away this captive scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-back rather.

K. Edw. Peace, wilful boy, or I will charm your tongue.

Clar. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert.

Prince. I know my duty, you are all undutiful

Lascivious Edward, and thou perjurd George,

And thou misshapen Dick, I tell ye all,

I am your better, traitors as ye are;

And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine.

K. Edw. Take that, the likeness of this railer here.

[Stabs him.]

Glo. Sprawl'st thou? take that, to end thy agony.

[GLO. stabs him.]

Clar. And there 's for twitting me with perjury.

[CLAR. stabs him.]

Q. Mar. O, kill me too!

Glo. Marry, and shall. [Offers to kill.]

RICHARD III.

served between the last of these four dramas, which everybody admits to be the work of the "greatest name in all literature," in an unbroken link with the previous drama, which some have been in the habit of assigning to some obscure and very inferior writer. We are taught to open the 'Life and Death of King Richard III.,' and to look upon the extraordinary being who utters the opening lines as some new creation, set before us in the perfect completeness of self-formed villainy. We have not learnt to trace the growth of the mind of this bold bad man; to see how his bravery became gradually darkened with ferocity; how his prodigious talents insensibly allied themselves with cunning and hypocrisy; how, in struggling for his house, he ultimately proposed to struggle for himself; how, in fact, the bad ambition would be naturally kindled in his mind, to seize upon the power which was sliding from the hands of the voluptuous Edward, and the "simple, plain Clarence."

The poet of the 'Richard III.' goes straightforward to his object; for he has made all the preparation in the previous dramas. No gradual development is wanting of the character which is now to sway the action. The struggle of the houses up to this point has been one only of violence; and it was therefore anarchical. "The big-boned" Warwick, and the fiery Clifford, alternately presided over the confusion. The power which changed the seemed little more than accident. But Richard proposed to himself to subject events to his domination, not by courage alone, or activity, or even by the legitimate exercise of a commanding intellect, but by the clearest and coolest perception of the strength which he must inevitably possess who unites the deepest sagacity to the most thorough unscrupulousness in its exercise, and is an equal master of the weapons of force and of craft.

uous in common with Iago. But labour with a "motiveless malignity." He has no vague suspicions, no petty remembrance of slight affronts, to stir disproportioned and unnatural vengeance. He does not hate his victims; but they stand as he does not love them, they perish. The blackest die disguise their crimes even as Richard shrinks not from their avowed purpose.

It is the result of the peculiar organization of his mind, formed as it had been by circumstances, as by nature, that he invariably puts on the attitude of one who is playing a part. The distance which makes the character (clearly not been made by the joinery of Cibber) stand out on the stage. It cannot be over-acted.

It is only in the actual presence of the character that Richard displays any portion of his character. His bravery required no display to hold it. In his last battle-field he employs the resources of his intellect in a worthy cause. Retribution is fast approaching. It was not the offended justice that he should die as a martyr, but the tortures of conscience were to precede. The drama has exhibited all it could do to present the pable images of terror haunting a man who is participating the end. "Ratcliff, I fear, is the revelation of the true inward man." But the terror is but momentary:—

"Let not our babbling dreams afflict us." To the last the poet exhibits the supreme intellect, his ready talent, and his spirit. The tame address of Richmond to his troops, the spirited exhortation of Richard, could not result of accident.

SCENE.—ENGLAND.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Enter GLOSTER.

Now is the winter of our discontent
 Looms summer by this sun of York;
 A cloud that low'd upon our house
 Besom of the ocean buried.
 My brows bound with victorious wreaths;
 My arms hung up for monuments;
 Myalarms chang'd to merry meetings;
 My vision to the cozenance of Edward IV., which Was the battle of Mortimer's Cross:—
 Dazzle mine eyes or do I see three suns?"

Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.
 Grim-visag'd war bath smooth'd his wrinkled front;
 And now, instead of mounting barbed<sup>a</sup> steeds,
 To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,
 He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber,
 To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.
 But I, that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
 Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass;—
 I, that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's majesty
 To strut before a wanton ambling nymph;—
 I, that am curtail'd of this fair proportion,

<sup>a</sup> Barbed. Barbed and barbed appear to have been differently applied to a caparisoned horse.

way to make the wench amends her husband and her father :
I : not all so much for love secret close intent, her, which I must reach unto.
before my horse to market :
breathes ; Edward still lives and reigns ;
gone then must I count my gains. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same. Another Street.

Procession of KING HENRY THE SIXTH, borne in coffin, Gentlemen bearing halberds, to and LADY ANNE as mourner.

down, set down your honourable load,— y be shrouded in a hearse,— hile obsequiously lament fall of virtuous Lancaster.
the house of Lancaster!
as remnant of that royal blood!
that I invoke thy ghost,
amentations of poor Anne,
Edward, to thy slaughter'd son,
se self-same hand that made these wounds!
windows that let forth thy life, hyleless balm of my poor eyes :
the hand that made these holes!
part that had the heart to do it!
ood that let this blood from hence!
hap betide that hated wretch,
as wretched by the death of thee,
fish to adders, spiders, toads,
sing venom'd thing that lives!
ve child, abortive be it,
nd untimely brought to light,
and unnatural aspect se hopeful mother at the view ;
hair to his unhappiness!
ve wife, let her be made
ble by the death of him,
made by my young lord, and thee!
ward Chertsey with your holy load,
Paul's to be interred there ;
you are weary of the weight,
siles I lament king Henry's corpse.
The bearers take up the corpse, and advance.

Enter GLOSTER.

you that bear the corpse, and set it down.
hat black magician conjures up this fiend,
ted charitable deeds?
sins, set down the corpse ; or, by Saint Paul, cease of him that disobeys!
y lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass.
anner'd dog! stand thou when I command :
hallend higher than my breast,
Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,
gan thee, beggar, for thy boldness.
[The bearers set down the coffin.] hat, do you tremble? are you all afraid?
e you not; for you are mortal, eyes cannot endure the devil.
a dreadful minister of hell!
ut power over his mortal body,
a canst not have; therefore be gone.
et saint, for charity, be not so curst.
al devil, for God's sake, hence, and trouble
not ;
t made the happy earth thy hell.
a cursing cries, and deep exclams.
ht to view thy heinous deeds,
pattern of thy butcheries.

Obsequiously—performing obsequies

O, gentlemen, see, see! dead Henry's wounds
Open their congeal'd mouths and bleed afresh!
Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity;
For 't is thy presence that exhales this blood
From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells;
Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural,
Provokes this deluge most unnatural.
O God, which this blood mad'st, revenge his death!
O earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge his death!
Either, Heaven, with lightning strike the murderer dead!
Or, earth, gape open wide and eat him quick,
As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood,
Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered!
Glo. Lady, you know no rules of charity,
Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.
Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of God nor man;
No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity.
Glo. But I know none, and therefore am no beast.
Anne. O wonderful, when devils tell the truth!
Glo. More wonderful, when angels are so angry!
Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman,
Of these supposed crimes to give me leave,
By circumstance, but to acquit myself.
Anne. Vouchsafe, diffus'd infection of a man,
For these known evils but to give me leave,
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self.
Glo. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have Some patient leisure to excuse myself.
Anne. Fouler than heart can think thee, thou canst make
No excuse current, but to hang thyself.
Glo. By such despair I should accuse myself.
Anne. And by despairing shalt thou stand excus'd,
For doing worthy vengeance on thyself,
That didst unworthy slaughter upon others.
Glo. Say, that I slew them not.
Anne. Then say, they were not slain.
But dead they are, and devilish slave, by thee.
Glo. I did not kill your husband.
Anne. Why, then he is alive.
Glo. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand.
Anne. In thy foul throat thou liest; queen Margaret saw
Thy murderous faulchion smoking in his blood;
The which thou once didst bend against her breast,
But that thy brothers beat aside the point.
Glo. I was provoked by her slanderous tongue,
That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders.
Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,
That never dream'st on aught but butcheries:
Didst thou not kill this king?
Glo. I grant ye.
Anne. Dost grant me, hedgehog? then, God grant me too,
Thou mayst be damned for that wicked deed!
O, he was gentle, mild, and virtuous.
Glo. The fitter for the King of heaven that hath him.
Anne. He is in heaven, woe thou shalt never come.
Glo. Let him thank me that help to send him thither;
For he was fitter for that place than earth.
Anne. And thou unfit for any place but hell.
Glo. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it.
Anne. Some dungeon.
Glo. Your bed-chamber.
Anne. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou liest!
Glo. So will it, madam, till I lie with you.
Anne. I hope so.
Glo. I know so.—But, gentle lady Anne,
To leave this keen encounter of our wits,
And fall somewhat into a slower method,
Is not the causer of the timeless deaths
Of these Plantagenets, Henry and Edward,
As blameful as the executioner?
Anne. Thou wast the cause, and most accurst effect, my person all this while :

 she finds, although I cannot,
 a marvellous proper man.
 argues for a looking-glass;
 in a score or two of tailors lions to adorn my body :
 kept in favour with myself,
 ain it with some little cost.
 ll turn you' fellow in<sup>s</sup> his grave;
 am lamenting to my love.

 see my shadow as I pass. [Exit.

I.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, LORD RIVERS, and LORD GREY.

patience, madam; there's no doubt his jesty
 cover his accustom'd health.
 that you brook it ill it makes him worse :
 God's sake, entertain good comfort,
 grace with quick and merry words.
 f he were dead, what would betide on me?
 other harm but loss of such a lord.
 The loss of such a lord includes all harms.
 Heavens have bless'd you with a goodly omforter when he is gone.
 h, he is young; and his minority he trust of Richard Gloster, ores not me, nor none of you.
 concluded he shall be protector?
 t is determin'd, not concluded yet :
 st be if the king miscarry.

ter BUCKINGHAM and STANLEY

re come the lords of Buckingham and nley.
 d time of day unto your royal grace!
 I make your majesty joyful as you have n!
 The countess Richmond, good my lord of
 nley,
 I prayer will scarcely say amen.
 notwithstanding she's your wife,
 t me, be you, good lord, assur'd
 n for her proud arrogance.
 beseech you, either not believe slanders of her false accusers;
 accus'd on true report,
 weakness, which, I think, proceeds rd sickness, and no grounded malice.
 w you the king to-day, my lord of Stanley?
 now, the duke of Buckingham and I m visiting his majesty.
 That likelihood of his amendment, lords?
 lam, good hope; his grace speaks cheery.
 od grant him health! did you confer with
 ?
 madam: he desires to make atonement
 duke of Gloster and your brothers, them and my lord chamberlain;
 earn<sup>b</sup> them to his royal presence.
 Would all were well!—but that will never ppiness is at the height.

GLOSTER, HASTINGS, and DORSET.

do me wrong, and I will not endure it :

—Exit.

Who are they that complain unto the king,
 That I, forsooth, am stern and love them not?
 By holy Paul, they love his grace but lightly
 That fill his ears with such dissentious rumours.
 Because I cannot flatter, and look fair,
 Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog,
 Duck with French nods and apish courtesy,
 I must be held a rancorous enemy.
 Cannot a plain man live, and think no harm,
 But thus his simple truth must be abus'd
 By silken, sly, insinuating Jacks?
Grey. To whom in all this presence speaks your grace?

Glo. To thee, that has, nor honesty nor grace.
 When have I injur'd thee? when done thee wrong?—
 Or thee?—or thee?—or any of your faction?
 A plague upon you all! His royal grace,—
 Whom God preserve better than you would wish!— Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing-while,
 But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloster, you mistake the matter :
 The king, of his own royal disposition,
 And not provok'd by any suitor else ;
 Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred,
 That in your outward action shows itself
 Against my children, brothers, and myself,
 Makes him to send ; that thereby he may gather
 The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it.

Glo. I cannot tell :—The world is grown so bad
 That wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch :
 Since every Jack became a gentleman,
 There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloster ;
 You envy my advancement, and my friends' ;
 God grant we never may have need of you!

Glo. Meantime, God grants that we have need of
 you :

Our brother is imprison'd by your means,
 Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility
 Held in contempt; while great promotions
 Are daily given, to ennoble those
 That scarce, some two days since, were worth a noble.

Q. Eliz. By Him that rais'd me to this careful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd,
 I never did incense his majesty
 Against the duke of Clarence, but have been An earnest advocate to plead for him.
 My lord, you do me shameful injury
 Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Glo. You may deny that you were not the mean
 Of my lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord; for—

Glo. She may, lord Rivers?—why, who knows not so?

She may do more, sir, than denying that :
 She may help you to many fair preferments ;
 And then deny her aiding hand therein,
 And lay those honours on your high desert.
 What may she not? She may,—ay, marry, may she,—

Riv. What, marry, may she?

Glo. What, marry, may she? marry with a king.
 A bachelor, and a handsome stripling too :
 I wis your grandam had a worsè match.

Q. Eliz. My lord of Gloster, I have too long borne Your blunt upbraidings and your bitter scoffs :
 By Heaven, I will acquaint his majesty
 Of those gross taunts that oft I have endure'd.
 I had rather be a country servant-maid
 Than a great queen, with this condition,
 To be so baited, scorn'd, and storm'd at :
 Small joy have I in being England's queen.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET, behind.

Q. Mar. And lessen'd be that small, God, I beseech him!

Thy honour, state, and seat, is due to me.

Glo. What? threaten you me with telling of the king?

Tell him, and spare not: look, what I have said

I will avouch in presence of the king:

I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower.

'T is time to speak, my pains are quite forgot.

Q. Mar. Out, devil! I do remember them too well:

Thou kill'dst my husband Henry in the Tower,

And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury.

Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband king,

I was a packhorse in his great affairs;

A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,

A liberal rewarder of his friends;

To royalize his blood I spilt mine own.

Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his, or thine.

Glo. In all which time, you, and your husband Grey,

Were factious for the house of Lancaster;—

And, Rivers, so were you:—Was not your husband

In Margaret's battle at Saint Alban's slain?

Let me put in your minds, if you forget,

What you have been, ere this, and what you are;

Withal, what I have been, and what I am.

Q. Mar. A murderous villain, and so still thou art.

Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father Warwick,

Ay, and forswore himself,—which Jesu pardon!—

Q. Mar. Which God revenge!

Glo. To fight on Edward's party, for the crown;

And, for his meed, poor lord, he is mew'd up:

I would to God my heart were flint like Edward's,

Or Edward's soft and pitiful like mine;

I am too childish-foolish for this world.

Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame, and leave this world,

Thou cacodæmon! there thy kingdom is.

Riv. My lord of Gloster, in those busy days,

Which here you urge to prove us enemies,

We follow'd then our lord, our sovereign king;

So should we you, if you should be our king.

Glo. If I should be?—I had rather be a pedlar;

Far be it from my heart, the thought thereof!

Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose

You should enjoy, were you this country's king;

As little joy you may suppose in me

That I enjoy, being the queen thereof.

Q. Mar. A little joy enjoys the queen thereof;

For I am she, and altogether joyless.

I can no longer hold me patient.— [Advancing.]

Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out

In sharing that which you have pill'd from me:

Which of you trembles not that looks on me?

If not, that I being queen you bow like subjects,

Yet that by you depos'd you quake like rebels?—

Ah, gentle villain, do not turn away!

Glo. Foul wrinkled witch, what mak'st thou in my sight?

Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd;

That will I make,* before I let thee go.

Glo. Wert thou not banished on pain of death?

Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment

Than death can yield me here by my abode.

A husband, and a son, thou ow'st to me,—

And thou, a kingdom;—all of you, allegiance:

This sorrow that I have, by right is yours;

And all the pleasures you usurp are mine.

Glo. The curse my noble father laid on thee,

* The double acceptance of the verb make is also exemplified in As You Like It:—

"Now, sir, what make you here?

Nothing: I am not taught to make anything."

When thou didst crown his warlike brows with paper

And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his eyes,

And then, to dry them, gav'st the duke a cloot,

Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland:—

His curses, then from bitterness of soul

Denounc'd against thee, are all fallen upon thee;

And God, not we, hath plaign'd thy bloody deed.

Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent.

Hast. O, 't was the foulest deed, to slay that babe

And the most merciless, that e'er was heard of.

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was report

Dor. No man but prophesied revenge for it.

Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see

Q. Mar. What! were you snarling all, before I came

Ready to catch each other by the throat,

And turn you all your hatred now on me?

Did York's dread curse prevail so much with Heaven

That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,

Their kingdom's loss, my woeful banishment,

Should all but answer for that peevish brat?

Can curses pierce the clouds, and enter heaven?—

Why, then give way, dull clouds, to my quick cur

Though not by war, by surfeit die your king,

As ours by murder, to make him a king!

Edward, thy son, that now is prince of Wales,

For Edward, our son, that was prince of Wales,

Die in his youth by like untimely violence!

Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,

Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self!

Long mayst thou live, to wait thy children's death,

And see another, as I see thee now,

Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine!

Long die thy happy days before thy death;

And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief,

Die neither mother, wife, nor England's queen;

Rivers, and Dorset, you were standers by,—

And so wast thou, lord Hastings,—when my son

Was stabb'd with bloody daggers: God, I pray him

That none of you may live your natural age,

But by some unlook'd accident cut off!

Glo. Have done thy charm, thou hateful wither'd!

Q. Mar. And leave out thee? stay, dog, for thou hear me.

If Heaven have any grievous plague in store,

Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,

O, let them keep it, till thy sins be ripe,

And then hurl down their indignation

On thee, the troubler of the poor world's peace!

The worm of conscience still be-gnaw thy soul!

Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv'st,

And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!

No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine,

Unless it be while some tormenting dream

Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!

Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog!

Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity

The slave of nature, and the son of hell!

Thou slander of thy heavy mother's womb!

Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins!

Thou rag of honour! thou detested—

Glo. Margaret.

Q. Mar. Richard!

Glo. Ha?

Q. Mar. I call thee not.

Glo. I cry thee mercy then; for I did think

That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter names.

Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look'd for no reply

O, let me make the period to my curse.

Glo. 'T is done by me; and ends in—Margaret.

Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath'd your curse against yourself.

Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my tune!

Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spider.

by web ensnareth thee about?
 thou whett'st a knife to kill thyself.
 I come that thou shalt wish for me to curse this pois'nous bunch-back'd toad.
 se-boding woman, end thy frantic curse,
 arm thou move our patience.
 foul shame upon you! you have all mov'd
 me.
 e you well serv'd, you would be taught or duty.
 y serve me well, you all should do me duty,
 he your queen, and you my subjects;
 well, and teach yourselves that duty.
 ate not with her, she is lunatic.
 Peace, master marquis, you are malapert:
 stamp of honour is scarce current:
 young nobility could judge to lose it, and be miserable!
 nd high have many blasts to shake them;
 all they dash themselves to pieces.
 counsel, marry; learn it, learn it, marquis.
 aches you, my lord, as much as me.
 and much more: But I was born so high,
 bldeth in the cedar's top,
 with the wind, and scorns the sun.
 nd turns the sun to shade;—alas! alas!
 son, now in the shade of death:
 out-shining beams thy cloudy wrath
 all darkness folded up.
 bldeth in our airy's nest;
 eest it, do not suffer it;
 s with blood, lost be it so!
 ce, peace, for shame, if not for charity.
 ege neither charity nor shame to me;
 with me have you dealt,
 lly my hopes by you are butcher'd.
 outrage, life my shame,— ame still live my sorrow's rage!
 e done, have done.
 princely Buckingham, I'll kiss thy hand,
 goe and amity with thee:
 ll thee and thy noble house!
 are not spotted with our blood,
 in the compass of my curse.
 no one here; for curses never pass
 ese that breathe them in the air.
 will not think but they ascend the sky,
 ake God's gentle-sleeping peace.
 m, take heed of yonder dog;
 e fawns he bites; and, when he bites,
 oth will rankle to the death:
 lo with him, beware of him;
 d hell have set their marks on him;
 ministers attend on him.
 cloth she say, my lord of Buckingham?
 ing that I respect, my gracious lord.
 hat, dost thou scorn me for my gentle asel,
 e devil that I warn thee from?
 ber this another day,
 I split thy very heart with sorrow;
 Margaret was a prophetess.
 you the subjects to his hate,
 ex, and all of you to God's! [Exit hair cloth stand on end to hear her curses.
 o cloth mine; I muse why she 's at liberty.
 ot blame her, by God's holy mother;
 too much wrong, and I repent of, that I have done to her.
 never did her any, to my knowledge.
 u have all the rantage of her wrong.
 o do somebody good,
 d in thinking of it now.
 Clarence, he is well repaid;

He is frank'd up to fattening for his pains;
 God pardon them that are the cause thereof!
Riv. A virtuous and a christianlike conclusion,
 To pray for them that have done scath to us.
Glo. So do I ever, being well advis'd:—
 For had I curs'd now, I had curs'd myself. [Aside.

Enter CATESBY.

Cates. Madam, his majesty doth call for you,—
 And for your grace,—and you, my noble lord.
Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come:— Lords, will you go with
 me?
Riv. We wait upon your grace. [Ex. all but GLOS.
Glo. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl.
 The secret mischiefs that I set abroad
 I lay unto the grievous charge of others.
 Clarence,—whom I, indeed, have cast in darkness,—
 I do beweepe to many simple gulls;
 Namely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham;
 And tell them, 't is the queen and her allies
 That stir the king against the duke my brother.
 Now they believe it; and withal whet me
 To be reveng'd on Rivers, Dorset, Grey:
 But then I sigh, and, with a piece of scripture,
 Tell them, that God bids us do good for evil:
 And thus I clothe my naked villainy
 With odd old ends, stolen forth of holy writ;
 And seem a saint, when most I play the devil.

Enter two Murderers.

But soft, here come my executioners.
 How now, my hardy, stout, resolved mates
 Are you now going to despatch this thing?
1 Murd. We are, my lord; and come to have the warrant,
 That we may be admitted where he is.
Glo. Well thought upon, I have it here about me:
 [Gives the warrant.
 When you have done, repair to Crosby-place.
 But, sirs, be sudden in the execution,
 Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead;
 For Clarence is well spoken, and, perhaps,
 May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.
1 Murd. Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to prate;
 Talkers are no good doers; be assur'd
 We go to use our hands, and not our tongues.
Glo. Your eyes drop millstones, when fools' eyes fall
 tears:
 I like you, lads,—about your business straight;
 Go, go, despatch.
2 Murd. We will, my noble lord. [Exit

SCENE IV.—The same. A Room in the Tower.

Enter CLARENCE and BRACKENBURY.

Brak. Why looks your grace so heavily to-day?
Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable night,
 So full of fearful dreams, of ugly sights,
 That, as I am a christian faithful man,
 I would not spend another such a night,
 Though 't were to buy a world of happy days
 So full of dismal terror was the time.
Brak. What was your dream, my lord? I pray you tell me.
Clar. Methought that I had broken from the Tower
 And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy;
 And in my company my brother Gloster:
 Who from my cabin tempted me to walk
 Upon the hatches; there we look'd toward England,
 And cited up a thousand heavy times,
 During the wars of York and Lancaster
 That had befall'n us. As we pac'd along
 Upon the giddy footing of the hatches

Methought that Gloster stumbled; and, in falling,
Struck me, that thought to stay him, overboard,
Into the tumbling billows of the main.

O Lord! methought what pain it was to drown!
What dreadful noise of water in mine ears!
What sights of ugly death within mine eyes!
Methought I saw a thousand fearful wracks;
A thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon;
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels,
All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea.
Some lay in dead men's skulls; and in those holes
Where eyes did once inhabit there were crept,
As 't were in scorn of eyes, reflecting gems,
That woo'd the slimy bottom of the deep,
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd by.

Brak. Had you such leisure in the time of death
To gaze upon these secrets of the deep?

Clar. Methought I had; and often did I strive
To yield the ghost: but still the envious flood Stopt in my soul, and would not let it forth
To find the empty, vast, and wand'ring air;
But smother'd it within my panting bulk,
Which almost burst to belch it in the sea.

Brak. Awak'd you not in this sore agony?

Clar. No, no, my dream was lengthen'd after life;
O, then began the tempest to my soul!
I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood
With that sour ferryman which poets write of,
Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.

The first that there did greet my stranger soul
Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick;
Who spake aloud,—“What scourge for perjury
Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?”
And so he vanish'd: Then came wandering by
A shadow like an angel, with bright hair
Dabbled in blood; and he shriek'd out aloud,— “Clarence is come,—false, fleeting, perjur'd Clarence,—
That stabb'd me in the field by Tewksbury;—
Seize on him, furies, take him unto torment!”—
With that, methought, a legion of foul fiends
Environ'd me, and howl'd in mine ears
Such hideous cries, that, with the very noise
I trembling wak'd, and, for a season after,
Could not believe but that I was in hell;
Such terrible impression made my dream.

Brak. No marvel, lord, though it affrighted you;
I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it.

Clar. O, Brakenbury, I have done these things,—
That now give evidence against my soul,—
For Edward's sake; and see how he requites me!
O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath on me alone;
O, spare my guiltless wife and my poor children!
I pray thee, gentle keeper, stay by me;
My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

Brak. I will, my lord: God give your grace good rest!—

[CLAR. retires.]

Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing hours,—
Makes the night morning, and the noontide night.
Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward toil;
And, for unfelt imaginations,
They often feel a world of restless cares:
So that, between their titles, and low name,
There 's nothing differs but the outward fame.

Enter the two Murderers.

1 Murd. Ho! who 's here?

Brak. What wouldst thou, fellow? and how cam'st thou hither?

1 Murd. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. What, so brief?

2 Murd. 'T is better, sir, than to be him see our commission, and talk no more.

[A paper is delivered to Brak.]

Brak. I am, in this, commanded to deli-
The noble duke of Clarence to your hands
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltless of the meaning
There lies the duke asleep,—and there, the
I 'll to the king; and signify to him
That thus I have resign'd to you my charge.

1 Murd. You may, sir; 't is a point of Fare you well.

2 Murd. What, shall we stab him as he

1 Murd. No; he 'll say 't was done as he wakes.

2 Murd. Why, he shall never wake un-judgment-day.

1 Murd. Why, then he 'll say we sleeping.

2 Murd. The urging of that word, jubred a kind of remorse in me.

1 Murd. What! art thou afraid?

2 Murd. Not to kill him, having a wit-be damned for killing him, from the which can defend me.

1 Murd. I thought thou hadst been res-
2 Murd. So I am, to let him live.

1 Murd. I 'll back to the duke of Gl-him so.

2 Murd. Nay, I prithee, stay a little passionate humour of mine will change to hold me but while one tells twenty.

1 Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now?

2 Murd. Some certain dregs of conscience within me.

1 Murd. Remember our reward, when done.

2 Murd. Come, he dies; I had forgot to

1 Murd. Where 's thy conscience now?

2 Murd. Oh, in the duke of Gloster's purse.

1 Murd. When he opens his purse to g-ward, thy conscience flies out.

2 Murd. 'T is no matter; let it go; it none, will entertain it.

1 Murd. What if it come to thee again?

2 Murd. I 'll not meddle with it, [it is thing,] it makes a man a coward; a man but it accuseth him; a man cannot swear him; a man cannot lie with his neighbour detects him: 'T is a blushing shame-face mutinies in a man's bosom; it fills one full it made me once restore a purse of gold that I found; it beggars any man that keeps it out of towns and cities for a dangerous thing man that means to live well endeavours to self, and live without it.

1 Murd. It is now even at my elbow, p-not to kill the duke.

2 Murd. Take the devil in thy mind him not: he would insinuate with thee, thee sigh.

1 Murd. I am strong fram'd, he cannot
me.

2 Murd. Spoken like a tall fellow that reputation. Come, shall we fall to work?

1 Murd. Take him on the costard with thy sword, and then throw him into the in the next room.

2 Murd. O excellent device! and make

1 Murd. Soft! he wakes.

2 Murd. Strike.

1 Murd. No, we 'll reason with him.

Clar. Where art thou, keeper? give me

You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon.
God's name, what art thou?

A man, as you are.

Not, as I am, royal.

Nor you, as we are, loyal.

My voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.

My voice is now the king's, my looks mine

low darkly, and how deadly, dost thou weak!

Do menace me: Why look you pale?

Go hither? Wherefore do you come?

To, to, to—

to murder me?

Yes, ay, ay.

Can scarcely have the hearts to tell me so, we cannot have the hearts to do it.

My friends, have I offended you?

Offended us you have not, but the king.

shall be reconcil'd to him again.

Never, my lord; therefore, prepare to die.

Are you drawn forth among a world of men, innocent? What is my offence?

Is there evidence that doth accuse me?

Has the quest have given their verdict up to a wrong judge? or who pronounc'd

the sentence of poor Clarence' death?

Am I convict by course of law, or am I condemn'd with death as most unlawful.

Or, as you hope for any goodness, spare, and lay no hands on me;

or, if you undertake is damnable.

What we will do we do upon command.

And he that hath commanded is our king.

Is he not the noble vassal! the great King of kings whose table of his law commanded, that he do no murder: Will you then obey his edict, and fulfil a man's?

For he holds vengeance in his hand, and will smite their heads that break his law.

And that same vengeance doth he hurl on

us,

swearing, and for murder too:

Let us receive the sacrament to fight for the house of Lancaster.

And, like a traitor to the name of God, didst thou swear that vow; and with thy treacherous blade

didst thou cut the bowels of thy sovereign's son.

Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

How canst thou urge God's dreadful law against us,

that broke it in such dear degree?

Was it for whose sake did I that ill deed?

Was it for my brother, for his sake:

or is it not to murder me for this;

or is his sin he is as deep as I.

Why should he be avenged for the deed,

and yet he doth it publicly;

and yet he quarrel from his powerful arm;

and yet he doth it by indirect or lawless course,

and yet he doth it to those that have offended him.

Who made thee then a bloody minister,

and yet thou springing, brave Plantagenet,

thyself a novice, was struck dead by thee?

Was it for my brother's love, the devil, and my rage.

Was it for my brother's love, our duty, and thy self,

or is it rather now to slaughter thee.

Why should I love my brother, hate not me;

I am his brother, and I love him well.

If you are hir'd for meed, go back again,

And I will send you to my brother Gloster;

Who shall reward you better for my life

Than Edward will for tidings of my death.

2 Murd. You are deceiv'd, your brother Gloster hates
you.

Clar. O, no; he loves me, and he holds me dear;

Go you to him from me.

Both Murd. Ay, so we will.

Clar. Tell him, when that our princely father York

Bless'd his three sons with his victorious arm,

[And charg'd us from his soul to love each other,]

He little thought of this divided friendship:

Bid Gloster think on this, and he will weep.

1 Murd. Ay, millstones; as he lesson'd us to weep.

Clar. O, do not slander him, for he is kind.

1 Murd. Right, as snow in harvest.—Come, you deceive yourself:

'T is he that sends us to destroy you here.

Clar. It cannot be, for he bewept my fortune,

And hugg'd me in his arms, and swore, with sobs,

That he would labour my delivery.

1 Murd. Why, so he doth, when he delivers you

From this earth's thralldom to the joys of heaven.

2 Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die,

my lord.

Clar. Have you that holy feeling in your souls,

To counsel me to make my peace with God,

And are you yet to your own souls so blind,

That you will war with God, by murdering me?

Oh, sirs, consider, they that set you on

To do this deed will hate you for the deed.

2 Murd. What shall we do?

Clar. Relent, and save your souls.

Which of you, if you were a prince's son,

Being pent from liberty, as I am now,

If two such murderers as yourselves came to you,

Would not entreat for life,—as you would beg

Were you in my distress?

1 Murd. Relent! No. 'T is cowardly and womanish.

Clar. Not to relent, is beastly, savage, devilish.—

My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks;

O, if thine eye be not a flatterer,

Come thou on my side, and entreat for me:

A begging prince, what beggar pities not?

2 Murd. Look behind you, my lord.

1 Murd. Take that, and that; if all this will not do,

I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within. [Stabs him.]

[Exit, with the body.]

2 Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately despatch'd!

How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands

Of this most grievous murder!

Re-enter first Murderer.

1 Murd. How now? what mean'st thou, that thou help'st me not?

By Heaven, the duke shall know how slack you have been.

2 Murd. I would he knew that I had sav'd his brother!

Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say;

For I repent me that the duke is slain.

1 Murd. So do not I; go, coward as thou art. [Exit.]

Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole,

Till that the duke give order for his burial;

And when I have my meed, I will away;

For this will out, and then I must not stay. [Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING EDWARD, (led in sick), QUEEN ELIZABETH, DORSET, RIVERS, HASTINGS, BUCKINGHAM, GREY, and others.

K. Edw. Why, so:—now have I done a good day's work;—

You peers, continue this united league:
I every day expect an embassy
From my Redeemer to redeem me hence;
And more to peace my soul shall part to heaven, ]
Since I have made my friends at peace on earth.
Rivers and Hastings, take each other's hand;
Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love.

Riv. By Heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate;

And with my hand I seal my true heart's love.

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like!

K. Edw. Take heed you dally not before your king;
Lest He that is the supreme King of kings
Confound your hidden falsehood, and award
Either of you to be the other's end.

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love!

Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart!

K. Edw. Madam, yourself are not exempt in this,— Nor you, son Dorset,—Buckingham, nor you;—
You have been factious one against the other.
Wife, love lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand;
And what you do, do it unfeignedly.

Q. Eliz. There, Hastings;—I will never more remember
Our former hatred, so thrive I and mine!

K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him,—Hastings, love lord marquis.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,
Upon my part shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I. [Embraces DORSET.]

K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal thou this league

With thy embracements to my wife's allies,
And make me happy in your unity.

Buck. Whenever Buckingham doth turn his hate Upon your grace [to the QUEEN], but with all duteous
love

Doth cherish you, and yours, God punish me
With hate in those where I expect most love!

When I have most need to employ a friend,
And most assured that he is a friend,

Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,

Be he unto me! this do I beg of Heaven,

When I am cold in love to you or yours.

[Embracing RIVERS, &c.]

K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham,

Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.

There wanteth now our brother Gloucester here,

To make the blessed period of this peace.

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble duke.

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Good morrow to my sovereign king, and queen;
And, princely peers, a happy time of day!

K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the day:

Gloucester, we have done deeds of charity;

Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate,

Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.

Glo. A blessed labour, my most sovereign lord.—

Among this princely heap, if any here,

By false intelligence or wrong surmise,

Hold me a foe;

If unwittingly, or in my rage,

Have aught committed that is hardly borne

By any in this presence, I desire

To reconcile me to his friendly peace;

'T is death to me to be at enmity;

I hate it, and desire all good men's love.

First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,

Which I will purchase with my duteous service;

Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham,

If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us;

Of you, and you, lord Rivers, and of Dorset—

That all without desert have frown'd on me;—

Of you, lord Woodville, and lord Scales, of you,—

Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen; indeed, of all,

I do not know that Englishman alive

With whom my soul is any jot at odds,

More than the infant that is born to-night;

I thank my God for my humility.

Q. Eliz. A holy-day shall this be kept hereafter

I would to God all strifes were well compounded.

My sovereign lord, I do beseech your highness

To take our brother Clarence to your grace.

Glo. Why, madam, have I offer'd love for this,

To be so flouted in this royal presence?

Who knows not that the gentle duke is dead?

[They all

You do him injury to scorn his corpse.

K. Edw. Who knows not he is dead! who knows he is?

Q. Eliz. All-seeing Heaven, what a world is this!

Buck. Look I so pale, lord Dorset, as the rest?

Dor. Ay, my good lord; and no man in the presence

But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks.

K. Edw. Is Clarence dead? the order was given

Glo. But he, poor man, by your first order died,

And that a winged Mercury did bear;

Some tardy cripple bore the countermand,

That came too lag to see him buried:

God grant that some, less noble and less loyal,

Nearer in bloody thoughts, and not in blood,

Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did,

And yet go current from suspicion!

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. A boon, my sovereign, for my services done

K. Edw. I prithee, peace; my soul is full of sin

Stan. I will not rise unless your highness hear me

K. Edw. Then say at once, what is it thou requestest

Stan. The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant's life

Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman,

Lately attendant on the duke of Norfolk.

K. Edw. Have I a tongue to doom my brother's death

And shall that tongue give pardon to a slayer?

My brother kill'd no man, his fault was thought,

And yet his punishment was bitter death.

Who sued to me for him? who, in my wrath,

Kneel'd at my feet, and bade me be advis'd?

Who spoke of brotherhood? who spoke of love?

Who told me how the poor soul did forsake

The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me?

Who told me in the field at Tewksbury,

When Oxford had me down, he rescued me,

And said, "Dear brother, live, and be a king!"

Who told me, when we both lay in the field,

Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me

Even in his garments; and did give himself

All thin and naked, to the numb-cold night?

All this from my remembrance brutish wrath

Sinfully pluck'd, and not a man of you

Had so much grace to put it in my mind.

But, when your carters, or your waiting-women

a drunken slaughter, and defac'd a image of our dear Redeemer, t are on your knees for pardon, pardon ;
 astly too, must grant it you :—
 brother not a man would speak, racious) speak unto myself or soul. The proudest of you all beholden to him in his life ;
 you would once plead for his life.
 ear thy justice will take hold you, and mine, and yours, for this.
 ings, help me to my closet.
 Clarence !
 KING, QUEEN, HAST., RIV., DOR., and GREY.
 s is the fruit of rashness ! Mark'd you not se guilty kindred of the queen
 , when they did hear of Clarence' death ?
 d urge it still unto the king :
 venge it. Come, lords ; will you go,
 Edward with our company ?
 e wait upon your grace. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same.

he DUCHESS OF YORK, with a Son and Daughter of CLARENCE.

nd grandam, tell us, is our father dead ?
 o, boy.
 Why do you weep so oft ? and beat your east ;
 " O Clarence, my unhappy son !"
 y do you look on us, and shake your head, orphans, wretches, castaways,
 noble father were alive ?
 y pretty cousins, you mistake me both ;
 t the sickness of the king,
 ose him, not your father's death :
 sorrow to wail one that 's lost.
 en you conclude, my grandam, he is dead.
 y uncle is to blame for this :
 venge it ; whom I will importune st prayers all to that effect.
 And so will I.
 eace, children, peace ! the king doth love
 ou well ;
 and shallow innocents,
 i guess who caus'd your father's death.
 andam, we can : for my good uncle Gloster se king, provok'd to 't by the queen, eachments to imprison him :
 my uncle told me so, he wept,
 me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek ;
 ly on him as on my father,
 old love me dearly as his child.
 Ah, that deceit should steal such gentle apes,
 virtuous visor hide deep vice !
 me, ay, and therein my shame,
 y dugs he drew not this deceit.
 nk you my uncle did dissemble, grandam ?
 y, boy.
 annot think it. Hark ! what noise is this ?

EN ELIZABETH, distractedly ; RIVERS and DORSET following her.

Ah ! who shall hinder me to wail and weep ?
 y fortune, and torment myself ?
 th black despair against my soul,
 elf become an enemy.
 hat means this scene of rude impatience ?
 To make an act of tragic violence.
 y lord, thy son, our king, is dead.
 the branches when the root is gone ?
 elations—kinsfolks. They are her grandchildren

Why wither not the leaves that want their sap ?
 If you will live, lament ; if die, be brief ;
 That our swift-winged souls may catch the king's ;
 Or, like obedient subjects, follow him
 To his new kingdom of ne'er-changing night.

Duch. Ah, so much interest have I in thy sorrow,
 As I had title in thy noble husband !
 I have bewept a worthy husband's death,
 And liv'd by looking on his images :
 But now, two mirrors of his princely semblance
 Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death ;
 And I for comfort have but one false glass,
 That grieves me when I see my shame in him.
 Thou art a widow ; yet thou art a mother,
 And hast the comfort of thy children left ;
 But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine arms
 And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble hands,
 Clarence and Edward. O, what cause have I (Thine being but a moiety of my moan)
 To over-go thy woes, and drown thy cries !

Son. Ah, aunt ! you wept not for our father's death,
 How can we aid you with our kindred tears ?

Daugh. Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd ;
 Your widow-dolour likewise be unwept !

Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation ;
 I am not barren to bring forth complaints :
 All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
 That I, being govern'd by the watery moon,
 May send forth plenteous tears to drown the world !
 Ah, for my husband, for my dear lord Edward !

Chil. Ah, for our father, for our dear lord Clarence !

Duch. Alas, for both, both mine, Edward and Clarence !

Q. Eliz. What stay had I but Edward ? and he 's gone.

Chil. What stay had we but Clarence ? and he 's
 gone.

Duch. What stays had I but they ? and they are
 gone.

Q. Eliz. Was never widow had so dear a loss.

Chil. Were never orphans had so dear a loss.

Duch. Was never mother had so dear a loss.

Alas ! I am the mother of these griefs ;
 Their woes are parcell'd, mine are general.
 She for an Edward weeps, and so do I ;
 I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she ;
 These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I ;
 I for an Edward weep, so do not they :—
 Alas ! you three on me, threefold distress'd,
 Pour all your tears, I am your sorrow's nurse,
 And I will pamper it with lamentations.

Dor. Comfort, dear mother : God is much displeas'd
 That you take with unthankfulness his doing ;
 In common worldly things 't is called ungrateful,
 With dull unwillingness to repay a debt,
 Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent ;
 Much more to be thus opposite with Heaven,
 For it requires the royal debt it lent you.

Riv. Madam, bethink you, like a careful mother,
 Of the young prince your son : send straight for him,
 Let him be crown'd ; in him your comfort lives :
 Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave,
 And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.

Enter GLOSTER, BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HASTINGS
 RATCLIFF, and others.

Glo. Sister, have comfort : all of us have cause
 To wail the dimming of our shining star ;
 But none can help our harms by wailing them.
 Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy,
 I did not see your grace :—Humbly on my knee
 I crave your blessing.

Duch. God bless thee, and put meekness in thy breast !
 Love, charity, obedience, and true duty !

Glo. Amen; and make me die a good old man!
That is the butt-end of a mother's blessing;
I marvel that her grace did leave it out. [Aside.]

Buck. You cloudy princes, and heart-sorrowing peers,
That bear this heavy mutual load of moan,
Now cheer each other in each other's love:
Though we have spent our harvest of this king,
We are to reap the harvest of his son.
The broken rancour of your high sworn hates,
But lately splinter'd, knit, and join'd together
Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept:
Me seemeth good, that, with some little train,
Forthwith from Ludlow the young king be fet
Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.

Riv. Why with some little train, my lord of Buckingham?

Buck. Marry, my lord, lest by a multitude,
The new-heal'd wound of malice should break out;
Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the estate is green and yet ungovern'd:
Where every horse bears his commanding rein,
And may direct his course as please himself,
As well the fear of harm, as harm apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Glo. I hope the king made peace with all of us;
And the compact is firm, and true, in me.

Riv. And so in me; and so, I think, in all:
Yet, since it is but green, it should be put
To no apparent likelihood of breach,
Which, haply, by much company might be urg'd:
Therefore I say, with noble Buckingham,
That it is meet so few should fetch the prince.

Hast. And so say I.

Glo. Then be it so; and go we to determine
Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow.
Madam, and you my sister, will you go
To give your censures* in this weighty business?

[Exeunt all but BUCK, and GLOSTER]

Buck. My lord, whoever journeys to the prince,
For God's sake, let not us two stay at home:
For, by the way, I'll sort occasion,
As index to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the queen's proud kindred from the prince.

Glo. My other self, my counsel's consistory,
My oracle, my prophet!—My dear cousin,
I, as a child, will go by thy direction.
Towards Ludlow then, for we'll not stay behind.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same. A Street.

Enter two Citizens, meeting.

1 Cit. Good morrow, neighbour: Whither away so fast?

2 Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself:
Hear you the news abroad?

1 Cit. Yes; that the king is dead.

2 Cit. Ill news, by'r lady; seldom comes the better:
I fear, I fear, 't will prove a giddy world.

Enter another Citizen.

3 Cit. Neighbours, God speed!

1 Cit. Give you good morrow, sir.

3 Cit. Doth the news hold of good king Edward's death?

2 Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true; God help, the while!

3 Cit. Then, masters, look to see a troublous world.

1 Cit. No, no; by God's good grace his son shall reign.

3 Cit. Woe to that land that's govern'd by a child!

2 Cit. In him there is a hope of government;

 parlous boy: Go to, you are too shrewd.
 madam, be not angry with the child.
 witchers have ears.

Enter a Messenger.

Here comes a messenger:

h news, my lord, as grieves me to report.
 ow doth the prince?
 Well, madam, and in health.
 at is thy news?
 d Rivers, and lord Grey, are sent to Pomfret,
 m sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.
 o hath committed them?
 mighty dukes, Gloster and Buckingham.
 what offence?
 sum of all I can I have disclos'd;
 what, the nobles were committed,
 en to me, my gracious lord.
 Ah me, I see the ruin of my house!

The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind;
 Insulting tyranny begins to jut
 Upon the innocent and awless throne:
 Welcome, destruction, blood, and massacre
 I see, as in a map, the end of all.

Duch. Accursed and unquiet wrangling days,
 How many of you have mine eyes beheld!
 My husband lost his life to get the crown;
 And often up and down my sons were toss'd,
 For me to joy, and weep, their gain and loss:
 And being seated, and domestic broils
 Clean over-blown, themselves, the conquerors,
 Make war upon themselves; brother to brother,
 Blood to blood, self against self: O, preposterous
 And frantic outrage, end thy damned spleen:
 Or let me die, to look on death no more!

Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy, we will to sanctuary Madam, farewell.

Duch. Stay, I will go with you.

Q. Eliz. You have no cause.

Arch. My gracious lady, go,
 [To the QUEEN.]

And thither bear your treasure and your goods.

For my part, I'll resign unto your grace

The seal I keep: And so betide to me,

As well I tender you, and all of yours!

Go, I'll conduct you to the sanctuary. [Exeunt

ACT III.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Drum sound. Enter the PRINCE OF WALES, BUCKINGHAM, CARDINAL BOUCHIER, and

elcome, sweet prince, to London, to your mber.

come, dear cousin, my thoughts' sovereign:
 ay hath made you melancholy.

Go, uncle; but our crosses on the way it tedious, wearisome, and heavy:

uncles here to welcome me.

prince, the untainted virtue of your years div'd into the world's deceit:

you distinguish of a man

outward show; which, God he knows, ever jumpeth with the heart.

which you want were dangerous;

attended to their sugar'd words,

lord, the mayor of London comes to greet

Enter the Lord Mayor, and his Train.

I bless your grace with health and happy ys!

I thank you, good my lord;—and thank you all.— [Exeunt Mayor, &c.]

y mother and my brother York

ere this have met us on the way:

dug is Hastings! that he comes not hether they will come, or no.

Enter HASTINGS.

al its good time, here comes the sweating
 d.

Welcome, my lord: What, will our mother
 me?

Hast. On what occasion, God he knows, not I,
 The queen your mother, and your brother York,
 Have taken sanctuary: The tender prince
 Would fain have come with me to meet your grace,
 But by his mother was perforce withheld.

Buck. Fie! what an indirect and peevish course

Is this of hers!—Lord cardinal, will your grace

Persuade the queen to send the duke of York

Unto his princely brother presently?

If she deny, lord Hastings, go with him,

And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

Card. My lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory

Can from his mother win the duke of York,

Anon expect him here: But if she be obdurate

To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid

We should infringe the holy privilege

Of blessed sanctuary! not for all this land

Would I be guilty of so great a sin.

Buck. You are too senseless-obstinate, my lord,

Too ceremonious and traditional:

Weigh it but with the grossness of this age,

You break not sanctuary in seizing him.

The benefit thereof is always granted

To those whose dealings have deserv'd the place,

And those who have the wit to claim the place:

This prince hath neither claim'd it, nor deserv'd it;

And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it:

Then, taking him from thence that is not there,

You break no privilege nor charter there.

Oft have I heard of sanctuary men;

But sanctuary children ne'er till now.

Card. My lord, you shall o'er-rule my mind for once.

Come on, lord Hastings, will you go with me?

Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may. [Exeunt CARDINAL and HASTINGS.]

Say, uncle Gloster, if our brother come,

Where shall we sojourn till our coronation?

Glo. Where it seems best unto your royal self.

If I may counsel you, some day or two

Your highness shall repose you at the Tower:

Then where you please, and<sup>a</sup> shall be thought most fit
For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place :—
Did Julius Caesar build that place, my lord ?

Glo. He did, my gracious lord, begin that place ;
Which, since, succeeding ages have re-edified.

Prince. Is it upon record ? or else reported Successively from age to age, he built it ?

Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were not register'd ;
Methinks, the truth should live from age to age,
As 't were retail'd<sup>b</sup> to all posterity,
Even to the general all-ending day.

Glo. So wise so young, they say, do never live long.

[Aside.

Prince. What say you, uncle ?

Glo. I say, without characters,<sup>c</sup> fame lives long.

Thus, like the formal Vice Iniquity, }
I moralize two meanings in one word.<sup>d</sup> }

[Aside.

Prince. That Julius Caesar was a famous man :

With what his valour did enrich his wit,
His wit set down to make his valour live :
Death makes no conquest of this conqueror ;
For now he lives in fame, though not in life.—
I 'll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham.

Buck. What, my gracious lord ?

Prince. An if I live until I be a man,
I 'll win our ancient right in France again,
Or die a soldier, as I liv'd a king.

Glo. Short summers lightly<sup>e</sup> have a forward spring.

[Aside.

Enter YORK, HASTINGS, and the CARDINAL.

Buck. Now, in good time, here comes the duke of York.

Prince. Richard of York ! how fares our noble brother ?

York. Well, my dread<sup>f</sup> lord ; so must I call you now.

Prince. Ay, brother ; to our grief, as it is yours ;
Too late<sup>g</sup> he died, that might have kept that title,
Which by his death hath lost much majesty.

Glo. How fares our cousin, noble lord of York ?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my lord,
You said that idle weeds are fast in growth ;
The prince my brother hath outgrown me far.

Glo. He hath, my lord.

York. And therefore is he idle ?

Glo. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so.

York. Then he is more beholden to you than I.

Glo. He may command me, as my sovereign ;
But you have power in me, as in a kinsman.

York. I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger.

Glo. My dagger, little cousin ? with all my heart.

Prince. A beggar, brother ?

York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give ;
And, being but a toy, which is no grief to give.

Glo. A greater gift than that I 'll give my cousin.

York. A greater gift ? O, that 's the sword to it.

Glo. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.

York. O then, I see, you will part but with light gifts ;

<sup>a</sup> Where is understood here ; if it were repeated, there would be no difficulty in the construction of the sentence.

<sup>b</sup> Retail'd. Retail and detail, according to Tooke, are both derived from tale—the past participle of the Anglo-Saxon verb tell-an, to tell. The truth "retail'd to all posterity" is the truth retold to all posterity.

<sup>d</sup> The equivocation which Richard uses consists in the repetition of the words "live long," which the Prince has caught, but with a different "meaning." He has moralized "two meanings" by retaining the same conclusion of his sentence, or "word."

<sup>g</sup> Late—lately.

In weightier things you 'll say a beggar, u

Glo. It is too weighty for your grace to

York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier

Glo. What, would you have my weapon

York. I would, that I might thank you
me.

Glo. How ?

York. Little.

Prince. My lord of York will still be c

Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me
Because that I am little, like an ape,

He thinks that you should bear me on you
Buck. With what a sharp-provided wit

To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle,
He prettily and aptly taunts himself :
So cunning, and so young, is wonderful.

Glo. My lord, will 't please you pass al

Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd.

en certifies your lordship, that this night
the boar had ras'd off his helm:
says, there are two councils kept;
ay be determin'd at the one,
e make you and him to rue at th' other.
e sends to know your lordship's pleasure,— presently take horse with him, ll speed post with him toward the north,
e danger that his soul divines.
e fellow, go, return unto thy lord:
t fear the separated councils:
and myself are at the one,
other is my good friend Catesby;
ing can proceed that toucheth us hall not have intelligence.
is fears are shallow, without instance:
s dreams, I wonder he 's so simple e mockery of unquiet slumbers:
ear, before the boar pursues,
euse the boar to follow us,
pursuit where he did mean no chase.
e master rise and come to me;
ll both together to the Tower, hall see, the boar will use us kindly.
ll go, my lord, and tell him what you say.

[Exit.]

Enter CATESBY.

my good morrows to my noble lord!
od morrow, Catesby; you are early stirring:
what news, in this our tottering state?
is a reeling world, indeed, my lord;
ve will never stand upright
d wear the garland of the realm.
ve! wear the garland! dost thou mean the own?
e, my good lord.
ll have this crown of mine cut from my oulders

An instance signifies here, as in other passages of example, fact in proof, corroboration.

Before I 'll see the crown so foul misplac'd.

But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?

Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find you forward
Upon his party, for the gain thereof:
And, thereupon, he sends you this good news,—
That, this same very day, your enemies,
The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret.

Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for that news,
Because they have been still my adversaries:
But, that I 'll give my voice on Richard's side,
To bar my master's heirs in true descent,
God knows, I will not do it, to the death.

Cate. God keep your lordship in that gracious mind!

Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelvemonth hence,
That they which brought me in my master's hate,
I live to look upon their tragedy.

Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older,
I 'll send some packing that yet think not on 't.

Cate. 'T is a vile thing to die, my gracious lord,
When men are unprepar'd, and look not for it.

Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so 't will do
With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey: and so 't will do
With some men else, who think themselves as safe
As thou and I; who, as thou know'st, are dear
To princely Richard, and to Buckingham.

Cate. The princes both make high account of you,—
For they account his head upon the bridge. [Aside]

Hast. I know they do; and I have well deserv'd it.

Enter STANLEY.

Come on, come on; where is your boar-spear, man?
Fear you the boar, and go so unprovided?

Stan. My lord, good morrow; and good morrow, Catesby:—

You may jest on, but, by the holy rood,
I do not like these several councils, I.

Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as yours;
And never, in my days, I do protest,
Was it so precious to me as 't is now:
Think you, but that I know our state secure,
I would be so triumphant as I am?

Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London,

Were jocund, and suppos'd their states were sure,
And they, indeed, had no cause to mistrust;
But yet, you see, how soon the day o'ercast.
This sudden stab of rancour I misdoubt;

Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward!

What, shall we toward the Tower? the day is spent.

Hast. Come, come, have with you.—Wot you what,
my lord?

To-day the lords you talk of are beheaded.

Stan. They, for their truth, might better wear their heads,

Than some that have accus'd them wear their hats.

But come, my lord, let 's away.

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before, I 'll talk with this good fellow.

[Exeunt STANLEY and CATESBY.]

How now, sirrah? how goes the world with thee?

Purs. The better that your lordship please to ask.

Hast. I tell thee, man, 't is better with me now,

Than when thou mett'st me last where now we meet:

Then was I going prisoner to the Tower,

By the suggestion of the queen's allies;

But now, I tell thee, (keep it to thyself,)

This day those enemies are put to death,

And I in better state than e'er I was.

Purs. God bold it, to your honour's good content!

Hast. Gramercy, fellow: There, drink that for me.

[Throwing him his purse.]

Purs. I thank your honour. [Exit Pursuivant.]

Enter a Priest.

Pr. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour.

Hast. I thank thee, good sir John, with all my heart. I am in your debt for your last exercise; Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

Pr. I'll wait upon your lordship.
Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain?
Your friends at Pomfret they do need the priest;
Your honour hath no shriving work in hand.

Hast. Good faith, and when I met this holy man,
The men you talk of came into my mind.
What, go you toward the Tower?

Buck. I do, my lord; but long I cannot stay there:
I shall return before your lordship thence.

Hast. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there.

Buck. And supper too, although thou know'st it not.
[Aside.]

Come, will you go?

Hast. I'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Pomfret. Before the Castle.

Enter RATCLIFF, with a guard, conducting RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN, to execution.

Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this,—
To-day shalt thou behold a subject die,
For truth, for duty, and for loyalty.

Grey. God keep the prince from all the pack of you!

A knot you are of damned bloodsuckers.

Vaugh. You live that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

Rat. Despatch; the limit of your lives is out.

Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison, Fatal and ominous to noble peers!
Within the guilty closure of thy walls
Richard the second here was hack'd to death:
And, for more slander to thy dismal seat,
We give to thee our guiltless blood to drink.

Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fallen upon our heads,

When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I,
For standing by when Richard stabb'd her son.

Riv. Then curs'd she Richard, then curs'd she Buckingham,

Then curs'd she Hastings:—O, remember, God,
To hear her prayer for them, as now for us!
And for my sister, and her princely sons,
Be satisfied, dear God, with our true blood,
Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt!

Rat. Make haste, the hour of death is expiate.<sup>a</sup>

Riv. Come, Grey,—come, Vaughan,—let us here embrace:

Farewell, until we meet again in heaven. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Tower.

BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HASTINGS, the BISHOP OF ELY, RATCLIFF, LOVEL, and others, sitting at a table: Officers of the council attending.

Hast. Now, noble peers, the cause why we are met is to determine of the coronation:

in God's name, speak, when is the royal day?

Buck. Are all things ready for that royal time?

Stan. They are; and wants but nomination.

Ely. To-morrow then I judge a happy day.

Buck. Who knows the lord protector's mind herein? most inward<sup>b</sup> with the noble duke?

Ely. Your grace, we think, should sooner mind.

Buck. We know each other's faces: for he knows no more of mine than I of yours; Nor I of his, my lord, than you of mine: Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.

Hast. I thank his grace, I know he loves: But, for his purpose in the coronation, I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd His gracious pleasure any way therein: But you, my honourable lords, may name the And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.

Re-enter BISHOP OF ELY.

Ely. Where is my lord the duke of Gloster sent for these strawberries.

E. V.—The same. The Tower Walls.

ETER and BUCKINGHAM, in rotten armour,

 EL and RATCLIFF, with HASTINGS'S head.
 patient, they are friends; Ratcliff and Lovel.
 e is the head of that ignoble traitor, he quaint stage direction of the folio edition of —pretending.

The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.

Glo. So dear I lov'd the man, that I must weep.
 I took him for the plainest harmless creature
 That breath'd upon the earth a christian;
 Made him my book, wherein my soul recorded
 The history of all her secret thoughts:
 So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of virtue,
 That, his apparent open guilt omitted,—
 I mean, his conversation with Shore's wife,—
 He liv'd from all attainder of suspects.

Buck. Well, well, he was the covert'st shelter'd traitor
 That ever liv'd.

Would you imagine, or almost believe,
 (Were 't not that, by great preservation,
 We live to tell it you,) the subtle traitor
 This day had plotted, in the council-house,
 To murder me, and my good lord of Gloster?

May. Had he done so?

Glo. What! think you we are Turks or infidels?
 Or that we would, against the form of law,
 Proceed thus rashly in the villain's death,
 But that the extreme peril of the case,
 The peace of England, and our persons' safety,
 Enforc'd us to this execution?

May. Now, fair befall you! he deserv'd his death;
 And your good graces both have well proceeded,
 To warn false traitors from the like attempts.
 I never look'd for better at his hands,
 After he once fell in with mistress Shore.

Glo. Yet had we not determin'd he should die,
 Until your lordship came to see his end;
 Which now the loving haste of these our friends,
 Something against our meaning, hath prevented:
 Because, my lord, we would have had you heard
 The traitor speak, and timorously confess
 The manner and the purpose of his treasons;
 That you might well have signified the same
 Unto the citizens, who, haply, may Misconster us in him, and wail his death.

May. But, my good lord, your grace's word shall serve

As well as I had seen and heard him speak:
 And do not doubt, right noble princes both,
 But I 'll acquaint our duteous citizens
 With all your just proceedings in this case.

Glo. And to that end we wish'd your lordship here,
 To avoid the censures of the carping world.

Buck. But since you came too late of our intent,
 Yet witness what you hear we did intend:
 And so, my good lord mayor, we bid farewell.

[Exit Lord Mayor.

Glo. Go after, after, cousin Buckingham.
 The mayor towards Guildhall hies him in all post:
 There, at your meetest vantage of the time,
 Infer the bastardy of Edward's children:
 Tell them, how Edward put to death a citizen,
 Only for saying he would make his son
 Heir to the crown; meaning, indeed, his house,
 Which by the sign thereof was termed so.
 Moreover, urge his hateful luxury,
 And bestial appetite in change of lust;
 Which stretch'd unto their servants, daughters, wives,
 Even where his raging eye, or savage heart,
 Without control lusted to make a prey.
 Nay, for a need, thus far come near my person:—
 Tell them, when that my mother went with child
 Of that insatiate Edward, noble York,
 My princely father, then had wars in France;
 And, by true computation of the time,
 Found that the issue was not his begot;
 Which well appeared in his lineaments,
 Being nothing like the noble duke my father:
 Yet touch this sparingly, as 't were far off;
 Because, my lord, you know my mother lives.

Buck. Doubt not, my lord: I'll play the orator,
As if the golden fee for which I plead
Were for myself; and so, my lord, adieu.
Glo. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynard's castle;
Where you shall find me well accompanied
With reverend fathers, and well-learned bishops.
Buck. I go; and, towards three or four o'clock,
Look for the news that the Guildhall affords.

[Exit BUCKINGHAM.]
Glo. Go, Lovel, with all speed to doctor Shaw.
Go thou [to CATE.] to friar Penker;—bid them both Meet me, within this hour, at Baynard's castle.
[Exeunt LOVEL and CATESBY.]
Now will I go, to take some privy order
To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight;
And to give order, that no manner person<sup>a</sup>
Have, any time, recourse unto the princes. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—A Street.Enter a Scrivener.

Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good lord Hastings;
Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd,
That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's.
And mark how well the sequel hangs together:
Eleven hours I have spent to write it over,
For yesternight by Catesby was it sent me;
The precedent was full as long a doing;
And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd,
Untainted, unexamined, free, at liberty.
Here 's a good world the while! Who is so gross
That cannot see this palpable device?
Yet who so bold but says he sees it not?
Bad is the world; and all will come to nought,
When such ill dealing must be seen in thought. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—The same. Court of Baynard's Castle.Enter GLOSTER and BUCKINGHAM, meeting.

Glo. How now, how now? what say the citizens?
Buck. Now by the holy mother of our Lord,
The citizens are mum, say not a word.
Glo. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children?
Buck. I did; with his contract with lady Lucy,
And his contract by deputy in France:
The insatiate greediness of his desire,
And his enforcement of the city wives;
His tyranny for trifles; his own bastardy,
As being got, your father then in France;
And his resemblance being not like the duke.
Withal, I did infer your lineaments,
Being the right idea of your father,
Both in your form and nobleness of mind;
Laid open all your victories in Scotland,
Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace,
Your bounty, virtue, fair humility;
Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose
Untouch'd, or slightly handled, in discourse.
And, when my oratory grew toward<sup>b</sup> end,
I bade them that did love their country's good Cry—"God save Richard, England's royal king!"
Glo. And did they so?
Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a word;
But, like dumb statues<sup>c</sup> or breathing stones,
Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale.
Which when I saw I reprehended them;
And ask'd the mayor, what meant this wilful silence:

<sup>a</sup> No manner person. This is the reading of the folio, and is a common idiom of our old language.

<sup>c</sup> Statues. The word here, as well as in "The Two Gentlemen of Verona" (Act IV. Scene 4), probably means picture.

His answer was, the people were not used
To be spoke to but by the recorder.
Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again;—
"Thus saith the duke, thus hath the duke
But nothing spoke in warrant from himself.
When he had done, some followers of mine
At lower end o' the hall, hurl'd up their cap
And some ten voices cried, "God save king
And thus I took the vantage of those few,— "Thanks, gentle citizens, and friends," quoth
"This general applause, and cheerful shout
Argues your wisdom, and your love to Rich
And even here brake off, and came away.

Glo. What tongueless blocks were they they not speak?
Will not the mayor then and his brethren
Buck. The mayor is here at hand: intend
Be not you spoke with but by mighty suit:
And look you, get a prayer-book in your hand
And stand between two churchmen, good man
For on that ground I'll make a holy descent
And be not easily won to our requests;
Play the maid's part, still answer nay, and Glo. I go: And if you plead as well for
As I can say nay to thee for myself,
No doubt we'll bring it to a happy issue.

Buck. Go, go, up to the leads; the lord mayor
[Exit.]
Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Welcome, my lord: I dance attendance
I think the duke will not be spoke withal.

Enter from the castle, CATESBY.
Now, Catesby! what says your lord to my
Cate. He doth entreat your grace, my lord,
To visit him to-morrow, or next day:
He is within, with two right reverend fathers
Divinely bent to meditation:
And in no worldly suits would he be mov'd
To draw him from his holy exercise.

Buck. Return, good Catesby, to the grace
Tell him, myself, the mayor and aldermen
In deep designs, in matter of great moment
No less importing than our general good,
Are come to have some conference with his

Cate. I'll signify so much unto him
Buck. Ah, ha, my lord, this prince is not
He is not lulling on a lewd love-bed,
But on his knees at meditation;
Not dallying with a brace of courtezans,
But meditating with two deep divines;
Not sleeping, to engross<sup>a</sup> his idle body,
But praying, to enrich his watchful soul:
Happy were England would this virtuous
Take on his grace the sovereignty thereof:
But, sure, I fear we shall not win him to it.

May. Marry, God defend his grace may!

Buck. I fear he will: Here Catesby comes
Re-enter CATESBY.

Now, Catesby, what says his grace?
Cate. He wonders to what end you have Such troops of citizens to come to him,
His grace not being warn'd thereof before;
He fears, my lord, you mean no good to him.

Buck. Sorry I am my noble cousin should Suspect me, that I mean no good to him:
By Heaven, we come to him in perfect love
And so once more return and tell his grace,
When holy and devout religious men
Are at their beads, 't is much to draw them
So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your grace ;
 But the respects thereof are nice and trivial,
 All circumstances well considered.
 You say that Edward is your brother's son ;
 So say we too, but not by Edward's wife :
 For first was he contract to lady Lucy,—
 Your mother lives a witness to his vow ;
 And afterwards by substitute betroth'd
 To Bona, sister to the king of France.
 These both put off, a poor petitioner,
 A care-craz'd mother to a many sons,
 A beauty-waning and distressed widow,
 Even in the afternoon of her best days,
 Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye,
 Seduc'd the pitch and height of his degree
 To base declension and loath'd bigamy ;
 By her, in his unlawful bed, he got
 This Edward, whom our manners call the prince
 More bitterly could I expostulate,
 Save that, for reverence to some alive,
 I give a sparing limit to my tongue.
 Then, good my lord, take to your royal self
 This proffer'd benefit of dignity :
 If not to bless us and the land withal,
 Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry
 From the corruption of abusing time,
 Unto a lineal true-derived course.

May. Do, good my lord ; your citizens entreat you.

Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love.

Cate. O make them joyful, grant their lawful suit.

Glo. Alas, why would you heap this care on me ?

I am unfit for state and majesty :

I do beseech you, take it not amiss ;

I cannot, nor I will not yield to you.

Buck. If you refuse it,—as in love and zeal,

Loth to depose the child, your brother's son,

As well we know your tenderness of heart,

And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,

Which we have noted in you to your kindred,

And equally, indeed, to all estates,—

Yet know, wher you accept our suit or no,

Your brother's son shall never reign our king ;

But we will plant some other in the throne,

To the disgrace and downfall of your house.

And in this resolution here we leave you ;—

Come, citizens, we will entreat no more.

Glo. O, do not swear, my lord of Buckingham.

[Exeunt BUCK, and Citizens.]

Cate. Call them again, sweet prince, accept their suit ;

If you deny them, all the land will rue it.

Glo. Will you enforce me to a world of cares ?

Call them again ; I am not made of stone,

But penetrable to your kind entreaties, [ Exit CATE ]

Albeit against my conscience and my soul.

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM, and the rest.

Cousin of Buckingham, and sage grave men,

Since you will buckle fortune on my back,

To bear her burthen, wher I will or no,

I must have patience to endure the load :

But if black scandal, or foul-fac'd reproach,

Attend the sequel of your imposition,

Your mere enforcement shall acquittance me

From all the impure blots and stains thereof:
For God doth know, and you may partly see,
How far I am from the desire of this.

May. God bless your grace! we see it, and will say it.

Glo. In saying so you shall but say the truth.

Buck. Then I salute you with this royal title,—
Long live king Richard, England's worthy king!

All. Amen.

Buck. To-morrow may it please you to be crown'd.
Glo. Even when you please, for you will be so.

Buck. To-morrow, then, we will attend your grace,
And so most joyfully we take our leave.

Glo. Come, let us to our holy work again:—

[To the B
Farewell, my cousin;—farewell, gentle friends.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Before the Tower.

Enter, on one side, QUEEN ELIZABETH, DUCHESS OF YORK, and MARQUIS OF DORSET; on the other, ANNE DUCHESS OF GLOSTER, leading LADY MARGARET PLANTAGENET, CLARENCE'S young daughter.

Duch. Who meets us here?—my niece<sup>a</sup> Plantagenet, Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloster?

Now, for my life, she's wand'ring to the Tower,
On pure heart's love, to greet the tender prince.
Daughter, well met.

Anne. God give your graces both
A happy and a joyful time of day!

Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister! Whither away?

Anne. No further than the Tower; and, as I guess,
Upon the like devotion as yourselves,
To gratulate the gentle princes there.

Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks; we'll enter all together:

Enter BRAKENBURY.

And, in good time, here the lieutenant comes.
Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave,
How doth the prince, and my young son of York?

Brak. Right well, dear madam: By your patience,
I may not suffer you to visit them;
The king hath strictly charg'd the contrary.

Q. Eliz. The king! who's that?

Brak. I mean the lord protector.

Q. Eliz. The Lord protect him from that kingly title!
Hath he set bounds between their love and me?
I am their mother, who shall bar me from them?

Duch. I am their father's mother, I will see them.

Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their mother:
Then bring me to their sights; I'll bear thy blame,
And take thy office from thee, on my peril.

Brak. No, madam, no, I may not leave it so;
I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me.

[Exit BRAKENBURY.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour hence,
And I'll salute your grace of York as mother,
And reverend looker-on, of two fair queens.
Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster,

[To the DUCHESS OF GLOSTER.

There to be crown'd Richard's royal queen.

Q. Eliz. Ah, cut my lace asunder!
That my pent heart may have some scope to beat,
Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news.

Anne. Despiteful tidings! O displeasing news!

Dor. Be of good cheer: Mother, how fares your grace?
Q. Eliz. O Dorset, speak not to me, get thee gone,
Death and destruction dog thee at thy heels;

Thy mother's name is ominous to children:
If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas,
And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell.
Go, hie thee, hie thee, from this slaughterhouse,

<sup>a</sup> Niece—grand-daughter. In 'Othello' nephews are put for grandchildren.

Lest thou increase the number of the dead;
And make me die the thrall of Margaret's curse,
Nor mother, wife, nor England's counted queen.

Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel,
Take all the swift advantage of the hours;
You shall have letters from me to my son
In your behalf, to meet you on the way:
Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay.

Duch. O ill-dispersing wind of misery!
O my accursed womb, the bed of death:
A cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world,
Whose unavoyd eye is murderous!

Stan. Come, madam, come; I in all haste
Anne. And I with all unwillingness will go.
O, would to God that the inclusive verge
Of golden metal that must round my brow
Were red-hot steel, to sear me to the brain!

Anointed let me be with deadly venom;
And die, ere men can say—God save the queen!

Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy grief
To feed my humour: wish thyself no harm.

Anne. No! why?—When he that is my husband
Came to me, as I follow'd Henry's corse;
When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his
Which issued from my other angel husband,
And that dear saint which then I weeping follow'd
O, when, I say, I look'd on Richard's face,
This was my wish,—“Be thou,” quoth I, “a
For making me, so young, so old a widow!
And when thou wedd'st let sorrow haunt thy life
And be thy wife (if any be so mad)
More miserable by the life of thee,
Than thou hast made me by my dear lord's death.
Lo, ere I can repeat this curse again,
Within so small a time, my woman's heart
Grossly grew captive to his honey words,
And prov'd the subject of mine own soul's curse,
Which hitherto hath held mine eyes from rest:
For never yet one hour in his bed
Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep,
But with his timorous dreams was still awak'd.
Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick;
And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me.

Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu! I pity thy complaint.
Anne. No more than with my soul I mourn for thee.
Dor. Farewell, thou woeful welcomer of plagues!

Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that tak'st thy leave of me!
Duch. Go thou to Richmond, and good farewell thee!

[To the B
Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee!

[To the B
Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee!

[To the B

Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen,
And each hour's joy wrack'd with a week of morn'<sup>a</sup> gracious sovereign.

Give me thy hand. Thus high, by thy

Why, Buckingham, I say I would be king.

Buckingham grows circumspect.

Oh, I know'st thou not any whom corrupting

Oh, now a discontented gentleman,

Oh, means match not his haughty spirit:
Oh, good as twenty orators,

Oh, His name, my lord, is Tyrrel.

Oh, partly know the man: Go, call him hi-

Oh, wing witty Buckingham
Oh, be the neighbour to my counsels:

Oh, eg held out with me untir'd,

Enter STANLEY.

Oh, Stanley? what 's the news?
Oh, my loving lord,

Oh, <sup>b</sup> Unrespective—inconsiderate

The marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled
To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.

K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby: rumour it abroad
That Anne, my wife, is very grievous sick;

I will take order for her keeping close.
Inquire me out some mean, poor gentleman,

Whom I will marry straight to Clarence's daughter.—
The boy is foolish, and I fear not him.—

Look, how thou dream'st!—I say again, give out
That Anne my queen is sick, and like to die:

About it; for it stands me much upon,
To stop all hopes whose growth may damage me.

[Exit CATESBY.]

I must be married to my brother's daughter,
Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass:

Murder her brothers, and then marry her!
Uncertain way of gain! But I am in

So far in blood, that sin will pluck on sin.
Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.

Re-enter Page, with TYRREL.

Is thy name Tyrrel?
Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.

K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?
Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord.

K. Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?
Tyr. Please you, but I had rather kill two enemies.

K. Rich. Why, then thou hast it; two deep enemies,
Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbers,

Are they that I would have thee deal upon:
Tyrrel, I mean those bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,
And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them.

K. Rich. Thou sing'st sweet music. Hark, come hither, Tyrrel:

Go, by this token:—Rise, and lend thine ear:
[Whispers.]

There is no more but so:—Say, it is done,
And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it.

Tyr. I will despatch it straight. [Exit.]

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind
The late request that you did sound me in.

K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond.

Buck. I hear the news, my lord.
K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son:—Well look unto it.

Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise,
For which your honour and your faith is pawn'd;

The earldom of Hereford, and the moveables,
Which you have promised I shall possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife; if she convey Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.

Buck. What says your highness to my just request?
K. Rich. I do remember me,—Henry the sixth

Did prophesy that Richmond should be king,
When Richmond was a little peevish boy.

A king!—perhaps—
Buck. My lord,—

K. Rich. How chance the prophet could not at that time

Have told me, I being by, that I should kill him?
Buck. My lord, your promise for the earldom,—

K. Rich. Richmond!—When last I was at Exeter,
The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle,

And call'd it Rouge-mont: at which name I started,
Because a bard of Ireland told me once

I should not live long after I saw Richmond.
Buck. My lord,—

K. Rich. Ay, what 's o'clock?
Buck. I am thus bold to put your grace in mind

Of what you promis'd me.

K. Rich. Well, but what 's o'clock ?

Buck. Upon the stroke of ten.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike.

Buck. Why, let it strike ?

K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack,<sup>a</sup> thou keep'st the stroke

Betwixt thy begging and my meditation.

I am not in the giving vein to-day.

Buck. Why, then resolve me whether you will, or no.

K. Rich. Thou troublest me ; I am not in the vein.

[Exeunt KING RICHARD and Train.]

Buck. And is it thus ? repays he my deep service
With such contempt ? made I him king for this ?

O, let me think on Hastings ; and be gone
To Brecknock, while my fearful head is on. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The same.

Enter TYRREL.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done ;
The most arch deed of piteous massacre
That ever yet this land was guilty of.
Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn
To do this piece of ruthless butchery,
Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs,
Melting with tenderness and mild compassion,
Wept like to children, in their death's sad story.
" O thus," quoth Dighton, " lay the gentle babes,"—
" Thus, thus," quoth Forrest, " girdling one another Within their alabaster innocent arms ;
Their lips were four red roses on a stalk,
And, in their summer beauty, kiss'd each other.
A book of prayers on their pillow lay :
Which once," quoth Forrest, " almost chang'd my mind ;
But, O, the devil"—there the villain stopp'd ;
When Dighton thus told on,—" we smothered
The most replenished sweet work of Nature,
That, from the prime creation, e'er she fram'd."—
Hence both are gone with conscience and remorse ;
They could not speak : and so I left them both,
To bear this tidings to the bloody king.

Enter KING RICHARD.

And here he comes :—All health, my sovereign lord !

K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel ! am I happy in thy news ?

Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave in charge
Beget your happiness, be happy then,
For it is done.

K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead ?

Tyr. I did, my lord.

K. Rich. And buried, gentle Tyrrel ?

Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower hath buried them ;
But where, to say the truth, I do not know.

K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon, at after supper,
When thou shalt tell the process of their death.
Meantime, but think how I may do thee good,
And be inheritor of thy desire.
Farewell till then.

Tyr. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.]

K. Rich. The son of Clarence have I pent up close ;
His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage ;
The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom ;
And Anne my wife hath bid this world good night.
Now, for I know the Bretagne Richmond aims
At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter,
And, by that knot, looks proudly on the crown,
To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord !

K. Rich. Good or bad news, that thou com'st in so bluntly ?

<sup>a</sup> The " Jack of the Clock-house " was an automaton, which struck the hour upon a bell.

Rat. Bad news, my lord : Morton is
mond ;

And Buckingham, back'd with the hard
Is in the field, and still his power increas'd

K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles
Than Buckingham and his rash-levied

Is leaden servitor to dull delay ;

Then fiery expedition be my wing,

Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp, and pierce like mine. [Exit Q. Mar.]

Duch. Why should calamity be full of words ?

Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client woes, Airy succeders of intestate joys,
 Poor breathing orators of miseries !

Let them have scope : though what they do impart
 Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart.

Duch. If so, then be not tongue-tied : go with me,
 And in the breath of bitter words let 's smother
 My damned son, that thy two sweet sons smother'd.

 The trumpet sounds,—be copious in exclams.

Enter KING RICHARD, and his Train, marching.

K. Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition ?

Duch. O, she that might have intercepted thee,
 By strangling thee in her accursed womb,
 From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast done.

Q. Eliz. Hid'st thou that forehead with a golden crown,

Where should be branded, if that right were right,
 The slaughter of the prince that ow'd<sup>a</sup> that crown,
 And the dire death of my poor sons and brothers ?

And little Ned Plantagenet, his son ?

Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan, Grey ?

Duch. Where is kind Hastings ?

K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets !—strike alarum, drums !

Let not the Heavens hear these tell-tale women

Rail on the Lord's anointed : Strike, I say.

[Flourish. Alarums.]

Either be patient, and entreat me fair,
 Or with the clamorous report of war
 Thus will I drown your exclamations.

Duch. Art thou my son ?

K. Rich. Ay ; I thank God, my father, and yourself.

Duch. Then patiently hear my impatience.

K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition,
 That cannot brook the accent of reproof.

Duch. O, let me speak.

K. Rich. Do, then ; but I 'll not hear.

Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words.

K. Rich. And brief, good mother ; for I am in haste.

Duch. Art thou so hasty ? I have stay'd for thee,
 God knows, in torment and in agony.

K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you ?

Duch. No, by the holy rood, thou know'st it well,
 Thou cam'st on earth to make the earth my hell.

A grievous burthen was thy birth to me ;

Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy ;

Thy school-days frightful, desperate, wild, and furious ;

Thy prime of manhood daring, bold, and venturous ;

Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody,

More mild, but yet more harmful, kind in hatred :

What comfortable hour canst thou name,

That ever grac'd me in thy company ?

K. Rich. 'Faith, none, but Humphrey Hower, that call'd your grace

To breakfast once, forth of my company.

If I be so disgracious in your eye,

Let me march on, and not offend you, madam.—

Strike up the drum.

<sup>a</sup> Uu d—owned.

Duch. I prithee, hear me speak.

K. Rich. You speak too bitterly.

Duch. Hear me a word,
For I shall never speak to thee again.

K. Rich. So.

Duch. Either thou wilt die, by God's just ordinance,
Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror;
Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish,
And never more behold thy face again.

Therefore, take with thee my most grievous curse;
Which, in the day of battle, tire thee more
Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st!

My prayers on the adverse party fight:
And there the little souls of Edward's children
Whisper the spirits of thine enemies,
And promise them success and victory.

Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;
Shame serves thy life, and doth thy death attend. [Exit.]

Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse

Abides in me; I say amen to her. [Going.]

K. Rich. Stay, madam, I must talk a word with you.

Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal blood
For thee to slaughter: for my daughters, Richard,
They shall be praying nuns, not weeping queens;
And therefore level not to hit their lives.

K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd Elizabeth, Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious.

Q. Eliz. And must she die for this? O, let her live,
And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty;
Slander myself, as false to Edward's bed;
Throw over her the veil of infamy:

So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,
I will confess she was not Edward's daughter.

K. Rich. Wrong not her birth, she is a royal princess.

Q. Eliz. To save her life, I'll say she is not so.

K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth.

Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers.

K. Rich. Lo, at their births good stars were opposite.

Q. Eliz. No, to their lives ill friends were contrary.

K. Rich. All unavoided is the doom of destiny.

Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes destiny:
My babes were destin'd to a fairer death,
If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life.

K. Rich. You speak as if that I had slain my cousins.

Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle cozen'd
Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life,
Whose hands soever lanc'd their tender hearts,

Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction:
No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt,
Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart,
To revel in the entrails of my lambs.

But that still use of grief makes wild grief fame,
My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys
Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;
And I, in such a desperate bay of death,
Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling reft,
Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.

K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise,
And dangerous success of bloody wars,
As I intend more good to you and yours,
Than ever you and yours by me were harm'd!

Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven,

To be discover'd, that can do me good?

K. Rich. The advancement of your children, gentle lady.

Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads?

K. Rich. Unto the dignity and height of fortune,
The high imperial type of this earth's glory.

Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrow with report of it;

Tell me, what state, what dignity, what honour,
thou demise to any child of mine?

Ch. Even all I have; ay, and myself and all,

Will I withal endow a child of thine;

So in the Lethe of thy angry soul

Thou drown the sad remembrance of those Which thou supposest I have done to thee.

Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of Last longer telling than thy kindness' date.

K. Rich. Then know, that, from my soul daughter.

Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it

K. Rich. What do you think?

Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter soul:

So, from thy soul's love, didst thou love her
And, from my heart's love, I do thank thee

K. Rich. Be not so hasty to confound us
I mean, that with my soul I love thy daughter
And do intend to make her queen of England

Q. Eliz. Well then, who dost thou mean
king?

K. Rich. Even he that makes her queen should be?

Q. Eliz. What, thou?

K. Rich. Even so: How thinkest thou?

Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her?

K. Rich. That I would

As one being best acquainted with her humors

Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me?

K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart.

Q. Eliz. Send to her, by the man that brothers,

A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon engrave
Edward, and York; then, haply, will she

Therefore present to her,—as sometime Marston
Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood

A handkerchief; which, say to her, did she
The purple sap from her sweet brother's blood

And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withal.

If this inducement move her not to love,

Send her a letter of thy noble deeds;

Tell her, thou mad'st away her uncle Clarence
Her uncle Rivers; ay, and, for her sake,

Mad'st quick conveyance with her good son
K. Rich. You mock me, madam; this is
To win your daughter.

Q. Eliz. There is no other way

Unless thou couldst put on some other shape
And not be Richard that hath done all this

K. Rich. Say, that I did all this for love

Q. Eliz. Nay, then indeed, she cannot hate thee,

Having bought love with such a bloody price
K. Rich. Look, what is done cannot be undone

Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes,
Which after-hours give leisure to repent.

If I did take the kingdom from your sons,
To make amends, I'll give it to your daughter

If I have kill'd the issue of your womb,
To quicken your increase, I will beget

Mine issue of your blood upon your daughter
A grandam's name is little less in love

Than is the doting title of a mother;
They are as children but one step below.

Even of your mettle, of your very blood;
Of all one pain,—save for a night of grief

Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like some
Your children were vexation to your youth,

But mine shall be a comfort to your age.
The loss, you have, is but a son being king.

And, by that loss, your daughter is made queen
I cannot make you what amends I would.

Therefore accept such kindness as I can.
Dorset, your son, that, with a fearful soul,

Leads discontented steps in foreign soil,
This fair alliance quickly shall call home emotions and great dignity :

 hat calls your beauteous daughter wife, shall call thy Dorset brother ;
 you be mother to a king,
 ruins of distressful times
 th double riches of content, have many goodly days to see :
 drops of tears that you have shed again, transform'd to orient pearl :
 or their loan, with interest
 a double gain of happiness.
 y mother, to thy daughter go ;
 her bashful years with your experience ;
 ears to hear a wooer's tale ;
 tender heart the aspiring flame ov'reignty ; acquaint the princess rest silent hours of marriage joys :
 his arm of mine hath chastised bel, dull-brain'd Buckingham, triumphant garlands will I come,
 y daughter to a conqueror's bed ;
 will retail my conquest won,
 ll be sole victress, Cæsar's Cæsar.
 What were I best to say ? her father's brother er lord ? Or shall I say, her uncle ?
 dew her brothers and her uncles ?
 title shall I woo for thee,
 he law, my honour, and her love,
 seem pleasing to her tender years ?
 Infer fair England's peace by this alliance.
 Which she shall purchase with still lasting ar.

Tell her, the king, that may command, treats.

That at her hands which the king's King bids.

Say, she shall be a high and mighty queen.
 To wail the title, as her mother doth.

Say, I will love her everlastingly.
 But how long shall that title, ever, last ?
 Sweetly in force unto her fair life's end.

But how long fairly shall her sweet life last ?
 As long as Heaven, and nature, lengthens it.

As long as hell, and Richard, likes of it.
 Say, I, her sovereign, am her subject low.

But she, your subject, loathes such sovgnty.

Be eloquent in my behalf to her.
 An honest tale speeds best, being plainly told.

Then, plainly to her tell my loving tale.
 Plain, and not honest, is too harsh a style.

Your reasons are too shallow and too quick.
 O, no, my reasons are too deep and dead ;—

d dead, poor infants, in their graves.
 Harp not on that string, madam ; that is past.

Harp on it still shall I, till heartstrings break.
 Now, by my George, my garter, and my own,— profan'd, dishonour'd, and the third usurp'd.

 I swear.

By nothing : for this is no oath.
 profan'd, hath lost his lordly honour ;

blemish'd, pawn'd his knightly virtue ;
 usurp'd, disgrac'd his kingly glory ;

thou wouldst swear to be believ'd,
 or something that thou hast not wrong'd.

Then, by myself,—
 Thyself is self-misused.

Now, by the world,—
 T is full of thy foul wrongs.

My father's death,—
 Thy life hath it dishonour'd.

Why then, by Heaven,—
 Heaven's wrong is most of all.

If thou didst fear to break an oath with Him,
 The unity the king my husband made
 Thou hadst not broken, nor my brothers died.
 If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by Him,
 The imperial metal, circling now thy head,
 Had grac'd the tender temples of my child ;
 And both the princes had been breathing here,
 Which now, two tender bedfellows for dust,
 Thy broken faith hath made the prey for worms.
 What canst thou swear by now ?

K. Rich. The time to come.

Q. Eliz. That thou hast wronged in the time o'erpast ;
 For I myself have many tears to wash

Hereafter time, for time past, wrong'd by thee.
 The children live whose fathers thou hast slaughter'd,

Ungovern'd youth, to wail it in their age ;
 The parents live whose children thou hast butcher'd,

Old barren plants, to wail it with their age.
 Swear not by time to come ; for that thou hast

Misused ere used, by times ill-used o'er-past.
K. Rich. As I intend to prosper, and repent,

So thrive I in my dangerous affairs
 Of hostile arms ! myself myself confound !

Heaven and fortune bar me happy hours !
 Day, yield me not thy light, nor night, thy rest !

Be opposite all planets of good luck
 To my proceeding ! if, with dear heart's love,

Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
 I tender not thy beauteous princely daughter !

In her consists my happiness, and thine ;
 Without her, follows to myself, and thee,

Herself, the land, and many a christian soul,
 Death, desolation, ruin, and decay :

It cannot be avoided but by this ;
 It will not be avoided but by this.

Therefore, dear mother, (I must call you so,)
 Be the attorney of my love to her.

Plead what I will be, not what I have been ;
 Not my deserts, but what I will deserve :

Urge the necessity and state of times,
 And be not peevish found in great designs.

Q. Eliz. Shall I be tempted of the devil thus ?
K. Rich. Ay, if the devil tempt thee to do good.

Q. Eliz. Shall I forget myself, to be myself ?
K. Rich. Ay, if yourself's remembrance wrong yourself.

Q. Eliz. Yet, thou didst kill my children.

K. Rich. But in your daughter's womb I bury them
 Where, in that nest of spicery, they will breed

Selves of themselves to your recomforture.
Q. Eliz. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will ?

K. Rich. And be a happy mother by the deed.
Q. Eliz. I go.—Write to me very shortly,

And you shall understand from me her mind.
K. Rich. Bear her my true love's kiss, and so farewell. [Kissing her. Exit Q. Eliz.

 Relenting fool, and shallow changing woman !
 How now ? what news ?

Enter RATCLIFF ; CATESBY following.

Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast
 Rideth a puissant navy to our shores

Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,
 Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back :

'T is thought that Richmond is their admiral ;
 And there they hull, expecting but the aid

Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore.
K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the duke of

Norfolk :—
 Ratcliff, thyself,—or Catesby ; where is he ?

Cate. Here, my good lord.
K. Rich. Catesby, fly to the duke.

Cate. I will, my lord, with all convenient haste.
K. Rich. Ratcliff, come hither : Post to Salisbury ;

When thou com'st thither,—Dull unmiadful villain,
 [To CATESBY.]
 Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the duke?

Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your highness' pleasure,

What from your grace I shall deliver to him.

K. Rich. O, true, good Catesby:—Bid him levy straight

The greatest strength and power that he can make,
 And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.

Cate. I go. [Exit.]

Rat. What, may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury?

K. Rich. Why, what wouldst thou do there, before I go?

Rat. Your highness told me I should post before.

Enter STANLEY.

K. Rich. My mind is chang'd.—Stanley, what news with you?

Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with the bearing;

Nor none so bad but well may be reported.

K. Rich. Heyday, a riddle! neither good nor bad!

What need'st thou run so many miles about,

When thou mayst tell thy tale the nearest way?

Once more, what news?

Stan. Richmond is on the seas.

K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him!

White-liver'd runagate, what doth he there?

Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess.

K. Rich. Well, as you guess?

Stan. Stirr'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton,
 He makes for England, here to claim the crown.

K. Rich. Is the chair empty? Is the sword unsway'd?

Is the king dead? the empire unpossess'd?

What heir of York is there alive but we?

And who is England's king but great York's heir?

Then, tell me, what makes he upon the seas?

Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess.

K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your liege,

You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman comes.

Thou wilt revolt, and fly to him, I fear.

Stan. No, my good lord, therefore mistrust me not.

K. Rich. Where is thy power then, to beat him back?

Where be thy tenants and thy followers?

Are they not now upon the western shore,

Safe conducting the rebels from their ships?

Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north.

K. Rich. Cold friends to me: What do they in the north,

When they should serve their sovereign in the west?

Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty king:

Pleaseth your majesty to give me leave,

I'll muster up my friends, and meet your grace,

Where, and what time, your majesty shall please.

K. Rich. Ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with Richmond:

But I'll not trust thee.

Stan. Most mighty sovereign,

You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful;

I never was, nor never will be, false.

K. Rich. Go then, and muster men. But leave behind

Your son, George Stanley; look your heart be firm,

Or else his head's assurance is but frail.

Stan. So deal with him as I prove true to you.

[Exit STANLEY.]

ACT V.

E. I.—Salisbury. An open place.

With the Guard, with BUCKINGHAM, led to execution.

Not king Richard let me speak with him?
My good lord: therefore be patient.
Kings, and Edward's children, Grey, and Mary, and thy fair son Edward,
All that have miscarried
Corrupted foul injustice!
Noble discontented souls
Behold this present hour,
Which mocks my destruction!
This day, fellow, is it not?
My lord.

Then All-Souls' day is my body's Sad day.

Which, in king Edward's time,
Fell on me, when I was found
A traitor, and his wife's allies:
Wherein I wish'd to fall
From him whom most I trusted:
All-Souls' day to my fearful soul,
To'd respite of my wrongs.
Where which I dallied with My feigned prayer on my bead,
Earnest what I begg'd in jest.
Once the swords of wicked men
Went points on their masters' bosoms:
My curse falls heavy on my neck,—
"Faith she," "shall split thy heart with
"Margaret was a prophetess."—
My officers, to the block of shame;
I did wrong, and blame the due of blame.

[Exeunt BUCKINGHAM, &c.]

E. II.—Plain near Tamworth.

With the colours, RICHMOND, OXFORD, BLUNT, SIR WALTER HERBERT, and
Forces, marching.

Arise in arms, and my most loving friends,
To smother the yoke of tyranny,
Which bows the bowels of the land
To'd on without impediment;
Which we from our father Stanley
Received comfort and encouragement.
Ours is bloody, and usurping boar,
Which on summer fields and fruitful vines,
Runs blood like wash, and makes his trough
With hell'd bosoms,—this foul swine
Lies in the centre of this isle,
Which men of Leicester, as we learn:
Which thither is but one day's march.
Which cheerly on, courageous friends,
To rest of perpetual peace
Noble trial of sharp war.
Which man's conscience is a thousand men,
Which doth this bloody homicide.

Which doth not but his friends will turn to us,
Which doth no friends but what are friends for

Which nearest need, will fly from him.
Which for our vantage. Then, in God's name,
Which doth:

Which doth visit, and flies with swallow's wings,
Which doth gods, and meaner creatures kings.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Bosworth Field.

Enter KING RICHARD and Forces; the DUKE OF NORFOLK, EARL OF SURREY, and others.

K. Rich. Here pitch our tent, even here in Bosworth field.

My lord of Surrey, why look you so sad?

Sur. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.

K. Rich. My lord of Norfolk!

Nor. Here, most gracious liege.

K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks: Ha! must we not?

Nor. We must both give and take, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Up with my tent: Here will I lie to-night;

[Soldiers begin to set up the King's tent

But where to-morrow?—Well, all's one for that.—

Who hath descried the number of the traitors?

Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power.

K. Rich. Why, our battalia trebles that account:

Besides, the king's name is a tower of strength,

Which they upon the adverse faction want.

Up with the tent.—Come, noble gentlemen,

Let us survey the vantage of the ground;—

Call for some men of sound direction:

Let's lack no discipline, make no delay;

For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day. [Exeunt.]

Enter, on the other side of the field, RICHMOND, SIR WILLIAM BRANDON, OXFORD, and other Lords.

Some of the Soldiers pitch Richmond's tent.

Richm. The weary sun hath made a golden set,

And, by the bright track of his fiery car,
Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow.

Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standard.

Give me some ink and paper in my tent;—

I'll draw the form and model of our battle,

Limit each leader to his several charge,

And part in just proportion our small power.

My lord of Oxford, you, sir William Brandon,

And you, sir Walter Herbert, stay with me:
The earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment;<sup>a</sup>

Good captain Blunt, bear my good night to him,
And by the second hour in the morning

Desire the earl to see me in my tent:

Yet one thing more, good captain, do for me;

Where is lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know?

Blunt. Unless I have mista'en his colours much,

(Which well I am assur'd I have not done,)

His regiment lies half a mile at least

South from the mighty power of the king.

Richm. If without peril it be possible,

Sweet Blunt, make some good means to speak with him,
And give him from me this most needful note.

Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake it;

And so, God give you quiet rest to-night!

Richm. Good night, good captain Blunt. Come,
gentlemen,

Let us consult upon to-morrow's business;

In to my tent, the dew is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the tent.]

Enter, to his tent, KING RICHARD, NORFOLK, RATOLIFF, and CATESBY.

K. Rich. What is 't o'clock?

Cate. It's supper-time, my lord;

It's nine o'clock.

K. Rich. I will not sup to-night.

<sup>a</sup> Keeps his regiment. The word regiment is several times used in this scene in the sense of a body of men, under the command (regiment) of a particular captain.

Give me some ink and paper.

What, is my beaver easier than it was?

And all my armour laid into my tent?

Cate. It is, my liege; and all things are in readiness.

K. Rich. Good Norfolk, hie thee to thy charge;

Use careful watch, choose trusty sentinels.

Nor. I go, my lord.

K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle Norfolk.

Nor. I warrant you, my lord. [Exit.

K. Rich. Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant at arms

To Stanley's regiment: bid him bring his power

Before sunrise, lest his son George fall

Into the blind cave of eternal night.

Fill me a bowl of wine.—Give me a watch!<sup>a</sup> [To CAT.

Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow.—

Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy.

Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy lord Northumberland?

Rat. Thomas the earl of Surrey, and himself,

Much about cock-shut<sup>b</sup> time, from troop to troop,

Went through the army cheering up the soldiers.

K. Rich. So, I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine:

I have not that alacrity of spirit,

Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.

Set it down.—Is ink and paper ready?

Rat. It is, my lord.

K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me.

Ratcliff, about the mid of night come to my tent,

And help to arm me.—Leave me, I say.

[K. RICH. retires into his tent. Exit RAT. and CATE.

RICHMOND'S tent opens, and discovers him and his

Officers, &c.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!

Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford

Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!

Tell me how fares our noble mother?

Stan. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother,

Who prays continually for Richmond's good:

So much for that. The silent hours steal on,

And flaky darkness breaks within the east.

In brief, for so the season bids us be,

Prepare thy battle early in the morning;

And put thy fortune to the arbitrement

Of bloody strokes, and mortal-staring war.

I, as I may, (that which I would I cannot,)

With best advantage will deceive the time,

And aid thee in this doubtful shock of arms:

But on thy side I may not be too forward,

Lest, being seen, thy brother tender George

Be executed in his father's sight.

Farewell: The leisure and the fearful time

Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love,

And ample interchange of sweet discourse,

Which so long sunder'd friends should dwell upon;

God give us leisure for these rites of love!

Once more, adieu:—Be valiant, and speed well!

Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment

I'll strive, with troubled thoughts, to take a nap;

Lest leaden slumber peise<sup>c</sup> me down to-morrow,

<sup>a</sup> A watch. The verb give—and the subsequent expression “bid my guard watch”—show that Richard is not asking for a sentinel, as some have supposed. The watch is the watch-light. The night-candle was divided by marks to indicate how long it had burned.

<sup>b</sup> Cock-shut. We incline to think that cock-shut time is equivalent to cock-roost time—the hour at which the cock goes to rest. As morning is cock-crow, evening may by a parallel image be cock-shut.

<sup>c</sup> Peise me down—weigh me down.

When I should mount with wings of victory

Once more, good night, kind lords and gentle men! [Exit Lords, &c., with

O Thou! whose captain I account myself,

Look on my forces with a gracious eye;

Put in their hands thy bruising irons of war

That they may crush down with a heavy fall

The usurping helmets of our adversaries!

Make us thy ministers of chastisement,

That we may praise thee in thy victory!

To thee I do commend my watchful soul,

Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes;

Sleeping, and waking, O, defend me still!

The Ghost of PRINCE EDWARD, son to HENRY

SIXTH, rises between the two tents.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow.

[To KING RICHARD.

Think, how thou stabb'dst me in my prime

At Tewksbury: Despair therefore, and die!

Be cheerful, Richmond; for the wrongs

Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf:

King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts thee.

The Ghost of KING HENRY THE SIXTH rises.

Ghost. When I was mortal, my anointed son, King Richard, did me wrong.

[To KING RICHARD.

By thee was punched full of deadly holes.

Think on the Tower and me: Despair, and die!

Harry the sixth bids thee despair, and die!

Virtuous and holy, be thou conqueror!

Harry, that prophesied thou shouldst be king,

Doth comfort thee in thy sleep: Live, and reign!

The Ghost of CLARENCE rises.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow.

[To KING RICHARD.

I, that was wash'd to death with fulsome water,

Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to death

To-morrow in the battle think on me,

And fall thy edgeless sword: Despair, and die!

Thou offspring of the house of Lancaster,

The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee:

Good angels guard thy battle! Live, and reign!

The Ghosts of RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN rise.

Riv. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow.

[To KING RICHARD.

Rivers, that died at Pomfret! Despair, and die!

Grey. Think upon Grey, and let thy sword fall: Despair, and die!

Vaugh. Think upon Vaughan; and, with me,

Let fall thy lance! Despair, and die!

All. Awake! and think, our wrongs will conquer him;—awake, and win the day!

The Ghost of HASTINGS rises.

Ghost. Bloody and guilty, guiltily awake!

[To KING RICHARD.

And in a bloody battle end thy days!

Think on lord Hastings; and despair, and die!

Quiet, untroubled soul, awake, awake!

Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake!

The Ghosts of the two young Princes of Wales rise.

Ghosts. Dream on thy cousins smooth sleep,

And bid thee bid within thy bosom, Richard,

And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death!

Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair, and die!

Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and with thee

Good angels guard thee from the hour of attack!

Live, and beget a happy race of kings!

Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish!

The Ghost of QUEEN ANNE rises.

Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy wife,
Lest a quiet hour with thee,
I sleep with perturbations:
In the battle think on me,
Edgeless sword: Despair, and die!—
Thou soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep;
[To RICHM.]
Success and happy victory;
My wife doth pray for thee.

The Ghost of BUCKINGHAM rises.

The first was I that help'd thee to the crown:
[To K. RICH.]

I that felt thy tyranny:
Noble think on Buckingham,
Error of thy guiltiness!
Ream on, of bloody deeds and death!
Despair; despairing, yield thy breath!
I hope, ere I could lend thee aid: [To RICHM.]
My heart, and be thou not dismay'd:
I'd angels fight on Richmond's side;
I fall in height of all his pride. [The twink.] K. RICH. starts out of his dream.

Give me another horse,—bind up my wounds,—

Jesu!—Soft; I did but dream.
In science, how dost thou afflict me!
My blue.—It is now dead midnight.
Drops stand on my trembling flesh.
Fear myself? there's none else by:
'Tis Richard; that is, I am I.
Wherever here? No;—Yes; I am:
What, from myself? Great reason: Why?
None. What? Myself upon myself?
Myself. Wherefore? for any good
I have done unto myself?
I rather hate myself,
Deeds committed by myself.
None: Yet I lie, I am not.
If speak well:—Fool, do not flatter,
He hath a thousand several tongues,
Whom brings in a several tale,
Who condemns me for a villain.
Nay, in the high'st degree,
A smurrer, in the dirt'st degree;
None, all used in each degree,
None, crying all,—Guilty! guilty!
None.—There is no creature loves me;
None shall pity me:—
None should they? since that I myself
If so pity to myself.
None souls of all that I had murder'd
First: and every one did threat
Vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Richard!
Who's there?
Ratcliff, my lord; 't is I. The early village gave me salutation to the morn;
I am up, and buckle on their armour.
O, Ratcliff, I have dream'd a fearful dream!—
Tell thou, will our friends prove all true?
Nay, my lord.
Ratcliff, I fear, I fear,—
I beseech my lord, be not afraid of shadows,
By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night
Shall move terror to the soul of Richard,
The substance of ten thousand soldiers,
Of, and led by shallow Richmond.
My lord, come, go with me:

Under our tents I'll play the eavesdropper,
To hear if any mean to shrink from me.

[Exit KING RICHARD and RATCLIFF.]

RICHMOND wakes. Enter OXFORD and others.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond.
Richm. Cry mercy, lords, and watchful gentlemen,
That you have ta'en a tardy sluggard here.
Lords. How have you slept, my lord?
Richm. The sweetest sleep, and fairest-boding dreams,
That ever enter'd in a drowsy head,
Have I since your departure had, my lords.
Methought, their souls whose bodies Richard murder'd,
Came to my tent, and cried—On! victory!
I promise you, my heart is very jocund
In the remembrance of so fair a dream.
How far into the morning is it, lords?

Lords. Upon the stroke of four.
Richm. Why, then 't is time to arm, and give direction.— [He advances to the troops.]

More than I have said, loving countrymen,
The leisure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell upon: Yet remember this,—
God, and our good cause, fight upon our side:
The prayers of holy saints and wronged souls,
Like high-rear'd bulwarks, stand before our faces;
Richard except, those whom we fight against
Had rather have us win, than him they follow.
For what is he they follow? truty, gentlemen,
A bloody tyrant, and a homicide;
One rais'd in blood, and one in blood establish'd;
One that made means to come by what he hath,
And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him:
A base foul stone, made precious by the foil
Of England's chair, where he is falsely set;
One that hath ever been God's enemy:
Then if you fight against God's enemy,
God will, in justice, ward you as his soldiers;
If you do sweat to put a tyrant down,
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;
If you do fight against your country's foes,
Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire;
If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;
If you do free your children from the sword,
Your children's children quit it in your age.
Then, in the name of God, and all these rights,
Advance your standards, draw your willing swords:
For me, the ransom of my bold attempt
Shall be this cold corpse on the earth's cold face;
But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt
The least of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound, drums and trumpets, boldly and cheerfully;
God and Saint George! Richmond and victory! [Exit.]

Re-enter KING RICHARD, RATCLIFF, Attendants, and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland, as touching Richard?
Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.
K. Rich. He said the truth: And what said Surrey then?
Rat. He smil'd and said, the better for our purpose.
K. Rich. He was i' the right; and so, indeed, it is.
[Clock strikes.]
Tell the clock there.—Give me a calendar.—
Who saw the sun to-day?
Rat. Not I, my lord.
K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine; for, by the book
He should have brav'd the east an hour ago:
A black day will it be to somebody.—
Ratcliff.—
Rat. My lord?
K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day

The sky doth frown and lour upon our army.
I would these dewy tears were from the ground.
Not shine to-day! Why, what is that to me,
More than to Richmond? for the self-same heaven
That frowns on me looks sadly upon him.

Enter NORFOLK.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord; the foe vaunts in the field.

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle:—Caparison my horse;—

Call up lord Stanley, bid him bring his power:
I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain,
And thus my battle shall be ordered.
My forward shall be drawn out all in length,
Consisting equally of horse and foot;
Our archers shall be placed in the midst;
John duke of Norfolk, Thomas earl of Surrey,
Shall have the leading of the foot and horse.
They thus directed, we will follow
In the main battle; whose puissance on either side
Shall be well winged with our chiefest horse.
This, and Saint George to boot!—What think'st thou,
Norfolk?

Nor. A good direction, warlike sovereign.
This found I on my tent this morning. [Giving a scroll.]

K. Rich. [Reads.] "Jockey of Norfolk, be not so bold, For Dickon thy master is bought and sold."

A thing devised by the enemy.—
Go, gentlemen, every man unto his charge:
Let not our babbling dreams affright our souls;
For conscience is a word that cowards use,
Devis'd at first to keep the strong in awe;
Our strong arms be our conscience, swords our law.
March on, join bravely, let us to 't pell-mell;
If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell.

What shall I say more than I have inferr'd?
Remember whom you are to cope withal;—
A sort of vagabonds, rascals, and runaways,
A scum of Britagnes, and base lackey peasants,
Whom their o'er-cloyed country vomits forth
To desperate ventures, and assur'd destruction.
You sleeping safe, they bring you to unrest;
You having lands, and bless'd with beauteous wives,
They would restrain the one, distain the other.
And who doth lead them but a paltry fellow,
Long kept in Bretagne at our mother's cost?
A milksop, one that never in his life
Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow?
Let's whip these stragglers o'er the seas again;
Lash hence these overweening rags of France,
These famish'd beggars, weary of their lives;
Who, but for dreaming on this fond exploit,
For want of means, poor rats, had hang'd themselves.
If we be conquer'd, let men conquer us,
And not these bastard Britagnes, whom our fathers
Have in their own land beaten, bob'd, and thump'd,
And, on record, left them the heirs of shame.
Shall these enjoy our lands? lie with our wives?
Ravish our daughters?—Hark, I hear their drum.

[Drum afar off.]

Fight, gentlemen of England! fight boldly, yeomen!
Draw, archers, draw your arrows to the head!
Spur your proud horses hard, and ride in blood;
Amaze the welkin with your broken staves!

Enter a Messenger.

What says lord Stanley? will he bring his power?

Mess. My lord, he doth deny to come.

K. Rich. Off with his son George's head!

Nor. My lord, the enemy is pass'd the marsh;
After the battle let George Stanley die.

K. Rich. A thousand hearts are great within my bosom:

Advance our standards, set upon our foes;
Our ancient word of courage, fair St. George,

Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons!
Upon them! Victory sits on our helms. [Ex.]

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter NORFOLK and Forces to him CATESBY.

Cate. Rescue, my lord of Norfolk, rescue, rescue!
The king enacts more wonders than a man,
Daring an opposite to every danger;
His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights,
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death:
Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost!

Alarum. Enter KING RICHARD.

K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

Cate. Withdraw, my lord, I'll help you to a horse!

K. Rich. Slave, I have set my life upon a horse,
And I will stand the hazard of the die:
I think there be six Richmonds in the field;
Five have I slain to-day, instead of him:
A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse! [Ex.]

Alarums. Enter KING RICHARD and Forces they fight; RICHARD is slain.

Retreat and flourish. Then enter RICHMOND and Forces.

Richm. God, and your arms, be prais'd, victors and friends;

The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead.

Stan. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou done to thee!

Lo, here, these long-usurped royalties,
From the dead temples of this bloody wretch,
Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal;
Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of heaven, say, amens, to thee!
But, tell me, is young George Stanley living?

Stan. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester;
Whither, if you please, we may withdraw us.

Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Stan. John duke of Norfolk, Walter lord Fitzwalter, Sir Robert Brakenbury, and sir William Brakenbury.

Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their rank;
Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled

That in submission will return to us;
And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament,

We will unite the white rose and the red;
Smile Heaven upon this fair conjunction,

That long hath frown'd upon their enmity!
What traitor bears me, and says not amen?

England hath long been mad, and scarr'd with blood;
The brother blindly shed the brother's blood,

The father rashly slaughter'd his own son,
The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire;

All this divided York and Lancaster,
Divided in their dire division.

O, now let Richmond and Elizabeth,
The true successors of each royal house,

By God's fair ordinance conjoin together!
And let their heirs (God, if thy will be so)

Enrich the time to come with smooth-fac'd peace,
With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days!

Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord,
That would reduce these bloody days again,

And make poor England weep in streams of blood!
Let them not live to taste this land's increase.

That would with treason wound this fair land's peace,
Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again;

That she may long live here, God say—Amen! [Ex.]

<sup>a</sup> They fight; Richard is slain. This is the stage-direction in all the old copies, and it is important to preserve it, in order to follow the course of the dramatic action. In the modern edition we have, "Enter King Richard and Richmond; and they fight."

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

THE famous 'History of the Life of King Henry the Eighth' was first published in the folio collection of Shakspeare's works in 1623. The text, taken as a whole, is singularly correct: it contains, no doubt, some few typographical errors, but certainly not so many as those which deform the ordinary reprints.

The date of the original production of this drama has been a subject of much discussion. The opinions in favour of its having been produced in the reign of Elizabeth are far more numerous than those which hold it to be a later production. But the accomplished Sir Henry Wotton, writing to his nephew on the 6th of July, 1613, gives a minute and graphic account of the fire at the Globe in that year:—"Now to let matters of state sleep, I will entertain you at the present with what happened this week at the Bankside. The king's players had a new play, called All is True, representing some principal pieces of the reign of Henry the Eighth, which was set forth with many extraordinary circumstances of pomp and majesty, even to the matting of the stage; the knights of the order, with their Georges and Garter, the guards with their embroidered coats and the like; sufficient, in truth, within a while to make greatness very familiar, if not ridiculous. Now King Henry, making a mask at the Cardinal Wolsey's house, and certain cannons being shot off at his entry, some of the paper, or other stuff wherewith one of them was stopped, did light on the thatch, where, being thought at first but an idle smoke, and their eyes being more attentive to the show, it kindled inwardly, and ran round like a train, consuming, within less than an hour, the whole house to the very ground. This was the fatal period of that virtuous fabric, wherein yet nothing did perish but wood and straw, and a few forsaken cloaks: only one man had his breeches set on fire, that would perhaps have broiled him, if he had not, by the benefit of a provident wit, put it out with bottle ale." Here, then, is a new play described, "representing some principal pieces of the reign of Henry VIII.;" and further, the passage of Shakspeare's play in which the "chambers" are discharged, being the "entry" of the king to the "mask at the cardinal's house," is the same to the letter. But the title which Sir Henry Wotton gives the new play is 'All is True.' Other persons call the play so represented 'Henry VIII.' Howes, in his continuation of Stow's Chronicle, so calls it. He writes some time after the destruction of the Globe, for he adds to his account of the fire, "and the next spring it was new builded in far fairer manner than before." He speaks of the title of the play as a familiar thing:—"the house being filled with people to behold the play, viz. of Henry the Eighth." When Howes wrote, was the title 'All is True' merged in the more obvious title derived from the subject of the play, and following the character of the titles of Shakspeare's other historical plays?

The commentators also hold that the Prologue was written by Ben Jonson, to allow him an occasion of sneering at Shakspeare's fools and battle-scenes. But we hold that the Prologue is a complete exposition of the idea of this drama. The Prologue is fastened upon Jonson, upon the theory that he wrote it upon Shakspeare's retirement from the stage, when the play was revived in his absence. We believe in the external evidence,—that a 'Henry VIII.' was written in 1613, when the Globe was burned; that this title agrees with the idea upon which the play was written; that it was then called 'All is True;' that this title agrees with the idea upon which the play was written. Those who believe written in the time of Elizabeth have to rely upon a piece of external evidence. We further believe in the internal evidence, that the play, as it was written in the time of James I., and that it received it in its original form. Those who are contrary have to resort to the hypothesis of a later date, and, further, have to explain how many of the allusions are, to a plain understanding, inconsistent. The theory, may be interpreted, by great ingenuity, to be consistent. We believe that Shakspeare, in his latest dramas, constructed an historical drama to complete his great series,—one that was agreeable to the tone of his mind after his fiftieth year:—

"Sad, high, and working, full of state and Those who take the opposite view hold that the play of the poet was to produce something which was acceptable to Queen Elizabeth. Our belief is in the one; the contrary belief may be the more correct.

Shakspeare has in this play closed his great series of 'Chronicle Histories.' This last of them was high, and working." It has laid bare the poet's worldly glory; it has shown the heavy "burden" of much honour." It has given us a picture of the world which succeeded the feudal strifes of the 'Chronicles.' Were they better times? To the poet the age of corruption was as "sad" as the age of justice, wielding a power more terrible than the sword. The poet's consolation is to be found in his prophetic views of the future.

We have a few words to add on the style of the drama. It is remarkable for the elliptical construction of many of the sentences, and for an occasional licence in the versification, which is not found in other of Shakspeare's works.

A theory has been set up that Jonson was consulted with the versification. We hold this notion untenable; for there is no play of Shakspeare's which has a more decided character of unity, no one in which any passage could be less easily struck out. We hold that Shakspeare worked in this particular upon the theory of art which he had proposed to himself, that wherever the nature of the scene would admit of it, he would use the elliptical construction, and the licence of the dialogue, whenever the speaker was necessarily rhetorical, closer to the language of life. Of all his historical plays, the 'Henry VIII.' is nearest in its story to his own times. It professes to be a "truth." It belongs to his own country, and to his own poetical indistinctness about it, either of its own or all is defined. If the diction and the versification had been more artificial, it would have been less

PROLOGUE.

No more to make you laugh; things now,
A weighty and a serious brow,
And working, full of state and woe,
The scenes as draw the eye to flow,
Present. Those that can pity, here
They think it well, let fall a tear;
It will deserve it. Such as give
They out of hope they may believe,
And truth too. Those that come to see
One or two, and so agree
They pass, if they be still and willing,
They may see away their shilling
Two short hours. Only they
To hear a merry, bawdy play,
Targets; or to see a fellow
Mudley cost, guarded with yellow,

Will be deceiv'd: for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As fool and fight is, beside forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
(To make that only true we now intend.)
Will leave us never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness' sake, and, as you are known
The first and happiest hearers of the town,
Be sad, as we would make you: Think, ye see
The very persons of our noble story,
As they were living; think, you see them great,
And follow'd with the general throng and sweat
Of thousand friends; then, in a moment, see
How soon this mightiness meets misery!
And if you can be merry then, I'll say
A man may weep upon his wedding-day.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. An Antechamber in the Palace.

Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK, at one door; at the other, the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, and the LORD ABERGAVENNY.

Buck. Good morrow, and well met. How have you done,

Since last we saw in France?

Nor. I thank your grace: Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely ague Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber, when Those suns of glory, those two lights of men, Met in the vale of Andren.<sup>a</sup>

Nor. Twixt Guynes and Arde: I was then present, saw them salute on horseback; Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung In their embracement as they grew together; Which had they, what four thron'd ones could have weigh'd

Such a compounded one?

Buck. All the whole time I was my chamber's prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost The view of earthly glory: Men might say, Till this time pomp was single, but now married To one above itself. Each following day Became the next day's master, till the last Made former wonders its: To-day, the French, All clinquant,<sup>b</sup> all in gold, like heathen gods, Shone down the English; and, to-morrow, they Made Britain, India: every man that stood Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were As cherubins, all gilt: the madams too, Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear The pride upon them, that their very labour Was to them as a painting: Now this mask Was cry'd incomparable; and the ensuing night Made it a fool, and beggar. The two kings, Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst, As presence did present them; him in eye Still him in praise: and, being present both, 'Twas said they saw but one; and no discernor Durst wag his tongue in censure.<sup>c</sup> When these suns (For so they phrase them) by their heralds challeng'd The noble spirits to arms, they did perform Beyond thought's compass; that former fabulous story,

Being now seen possible enough, got credit, That Bevis was believ'd.

Buck. O, you go far.

Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect In honour honesty, the tract of everything Would by a good discourser lose some life, Which action's self was tongue to.

Buck. All was royal; To the disposing of it nought rebell'd, Order gave each thing view; the office did Distinctly his full function. Who did guide? I mean, who set the body and the limbs Of this great sport together?

<sup>a</sup> Andren. So the original; so the Chroniclers. But the modern editors write "the vale of Arde." Arde, or Ardes, is the town, which in the next line is spelt Arde in the original. Andren, or Arden, is the village near the place of meeting.

Nor. As you guess: One, certes, that promises no element<sup>a</sup> In such a business.

Buck. I pray you, who, my lord? Nor. All this was order'd by the good discernor Of the right reverend cardinal of York.

Buck. The devil speed him! no man's pie is From his ambitious finger. What had he To do in these fierce vanities? I wonder That such a keech<sup>b</sup> can with his very bulk Take up the rays o' the beneficial sun, And keep it from the earth.

Nor. Surely, sir, There's in him stuff that puts him to these ends For, being not propp'd by ancestry, whose grace Chalks successors their way; nor call'd upon For high feats done to the crown; neither allied To eminent assistants; but spider-like, Out of his self-drawing web,—O! give us note: The force of his own merit makes his way; A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys A place next to the king.

Aber. I cannot tell What heaven hath given him, let some graver pierce into that; but I can see his pride Peep through each part of him: Whence has he If not from hell the devil is a niggard, Or has given all before, and he begins A new hell in himself.

Buck. Why the devil, Upon this French going-out, took he upon him, Without the privity o' the king, to appoint Who should attend on him? He makes up the Of all the gentry; for the most part such To whom as great a charge as little honour He meant to lay upon: and his own letter (The honourable board of council out) Must fetch him in his papers.

Aber. I do know Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have By this so sicken'd their estates, that never They shall abound as formerly.

Buck. O, many Have broke their backs with laying manners on: For this great journey. What did this vanity, But minister communication of A most poor issue?

Nor. Grievingly I think, The peace between the French and us not valuing The cost that did conclude it.

Buck. Every man, After the hideous storm that follow'd, was A thing inspir'd; and, not consulting broke Into a general prophecy,—That this tempest, Dashing the garment of this peace, aboded The sudden breach on 't.

Nor. Which is budded out: For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath our Our merchants' goods at Bourdeaux.

Aber. Is it thus?

Nor. The ambassador is silenc'd?

Aber. A proper title of a peace; and prodigious

At a superfluous rate!

<sup>a</sup> Element—constituent quality of mind. The Night' (Act III. Sc. 4) Malvolio says, "Go to, all! you are idle shallow things. I am not of you." <sup>b</sup> Keech. A "keech" is a lump of fat; and here denounces Wolsey as an overgrown blubber.

Why, all this business cardinal carried.

Like it your grace,
notice of the private difference and the cardinal. I advise you, from a heart that wishes towards you lenient safety,) that you read malice and his potency and where 't will not extend, its it. Bosom up my counsel, wholesome. Lo, where comes that rock your shunning.

And proofs as clear as founts in July, when
We see each grain of gravel, I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not treasonous.

Buck. To the king I'll say 't; and make my vouch as strong

As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox,
Or wolf, or both, (for he is equal ravenous
As he is subtle; and as prone to mischief,
As able to perform it: his mind and place
Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally.)
Only to show his pomp as well in France
As here at home, suggests<sup>a</sup> the king our master
To this last costly treaty, the interview,
That swallow'd so much treasure, and like a glass
Did break i' the rinsing.<sup>b</sup>

Nor. Faith, and so it did.

Buck. Pray, give me favour, sir. This cunning cardinal

The articles o' the combination drew
As himself pleas'd; and they were ratified,
As he cried, Thus let be: to as much end,
As give a crutch to the dead: But our count-cardinal

Has done this, and 't is well; for worthy Wolsey,
Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows,
(Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy
To the old dam, treason.)—Charles the emperor,
Under pretence to see the queen his aunt,
(For 't was, indeed, his colour; but he came To whisper Wolsey,) here makes visitation:
His fears were, that the interview betwixt
England and France might, through their amity,
Breed him some prejudice; for from this league
Peep'd harms that menac'd him: He privily
Deals with our cardinal; and, as I trow,—
Which I do well; for I am sure the emperor
Paid ere he promis'd; whereby his suit was granted
Ere it was ask'd;—but when the way was made,
And pay'd with gold, the emperor thus desir'd,
That he would please to alter the king's course,
And break the foresaid peace. Let the king know,
(As soon he shall by me,) that thus the cardinal
Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases,
And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry

To hear this of him; and could wish he were Something mistaken<sup>c</sup> in 't.

Buck. No, not a syllable;
I do pronounce him in that very shape
He shall appear in proof.

Enter BRANDON; a Sergeant at Arms before him and two or three of the Guard.

Bran. Your office, sergeant; execute it.

Serg. Sir,
My lord the duke of Buckingham, and earl
Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I Arrest thee of high treason, in the name
Of our most sovereign king.

Buck. Lo you, my lord,
The net has fallen upon me; I shall perish
Under device and practice.<sup>d</sup>

Bran. I am sorry
To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on
The business present: 'T is his highness' pleasure,
You shall to the Tower.

Buck. It will help me nothing
To plead mine innocence; for that die is on me,

" Fallen in the practice of a cruel's slaves."

Which makes my whitest part black. The will of heaven

Be done in this and all things!—I obey.—
O my lord Abergavenny, fare you well.

Bran. Nay, he must bear you company:—The king [To ABERGAVENNY.]

Is pleas'd you shall to the Tower, till you know
How he determines further.

Aber. As the duke said,
The will of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure
By me obey'd.

Bran. Here is a warrant from
The king, to attach lord Montacute; and the bodies
Of the duke's confessor, John de la Car,
One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor,—

Buck. So, so;
These are the limbs of the plot: no more, I hope.

Bran. A monk o' the Chartreux.

Buck. O, Michael Hopkins?

Bran. He.

Buck. My surveyor is false; the o'er-great cardinal
Hath show'd him gold: my life is spann'd already:
I am the shadow of poor Buckingham;
Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on,
By dark'ning my clear sun.—My lords, farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Council-Chamber.

Cornets. Enter KING HENRY, CARDINAL WOLSEY,
the Lords of the Council, SIR THOMAS LOVELL, Officers, and Attendants. The KING enters, leaning on the CARDINAL'S shoulder.

K. Hen. My life itself, and the best heart of it,
Thanks you for this great care: I stood i' the level
Of a full-charg'd confederacy, and give thanks
To you that chok'd it.—Let be call'd before us
That gentleman of Buckingham's: in person
I'll bear him his confessions justify;
And point by point the treasons of his master
He shall again relate.

The KING takes his State. The Lords of the Council take their several places. The CARDINAL places himself under the KING'S feet, on his right side.

A noise within, crying, Room for the Queen! Enter the QUEEN, ushered by the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK: she kneels. The KING riseth from his State, takes her up, kisses, and placeth her by him.

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel; I am a suitor.
K. Hen. Arise, and take place by us:—Half your suit

Never name to us; you have half our power;
The other moiety, ere you ask, is given;
Repeat your will, and take it.

Q. Kath. Thank your majesty.
That you would love yourself, and, in that love,
Not unconsider'd leave your honour, nor
The dignity of your office, is the point
Of my petition.

K. Hen. Lady mine, proceed.

Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few,
And those of true condition, that your subjects
Are in great grievance: there have been commissions
Sent down among them, which have flaw'd the heart
Of all their loyalties:—wherein, although,
My good lord cardinal, they vent reproaches
Most bitterly on you, as putter-on
Of these exactions, yet the king our master, (Whose honour heaven shield from soil!) even he escapes
not

Language unmannerly, yea, such which breaks
The sides of loyalty, and almost appears and rebellion.

Nor. Not almost appears,
It doth appear: for, upon these exactions,
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them longing, have put off
The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,
Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger,
And lack of other means, in desperate manner
Daring the event to the teeth, are all in uproar,
And Danger serves among them.

K. Hen. Taxation!
Wherein? and what taxation?—My lord cardinal
You that are blam'd for it alike with us,
Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, sir,
I know but of a single part, in aught
Pertains to the state; and front but in that file
Where others tell steps with me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord,
You know no more than others: but you frame Things, that are known alike, which are not what
To those which would not know them, and yet
Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are Most pestilent to the hearing; and to bear them
The back is sacrifice to the load. They say
They are devis'd by you; or else you suffer
Too hard an exclamation.

K. Hen. Still exaction!
The nature of it? In what kind, let's know,
Is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturesome
In tempting of your patience; but am bolden'd
Under your promis'd pardon. The subject's grief Comes through commissions, which compel from
The sixth part of his substance, to be levied
Without delay; and the pretence for this Is nam'd, your wars in France: This makes mouths:

Tongues spit their duties out; and cold hearts
Allegiance in them; their curses now
Live where their prayers did; and it's come to pass
This tractable obedience is a slave
To each incens'd will. I would your highness Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no primer baseness.

K. Hen. By my life,
This is against our pleasure.

Wol. And for me,
I have no further gone in this, than by
A single voice; and that not pass'd me, but
By learned approbation of the judges. If I am Traduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither know
My faculties, nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing,—let me say
'T is but the fate of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through. We must not stand
Our necessary actions, in the fear
To cope malicious censurers; which ever,
As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new trimm'd; but benefit no further Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as all,
Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up
For our best act. If we shall stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at.
We should take root here where we sit, or sit
State statutes only.

K. Hen. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fault
Things done without example, in their want
Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent
Of this commission? I believe not any * Once is here used in the sense of one.

and our subjects from our laws,
 in our will. Sixth part of each?
 contribution! Why, we take the lop, bark, and part o' the timber;
 we leave it with a root, thus hack'd sink the saw. To every county, question'd, send our letters, with each man that has denied his commission: Pray, look to 't; our care.

A word with you. [To the Secretary
others writ to every shire, grace and pardon. The griev'd commons
 ve of me; let it be nois'd, our intercession this revokement mes: I shall anon advise you proceeding. [Exit Secretary.

Enter Surveyor.

I am sorry that the duke of Buckingham displeasure.

It grieves many:
 is learn'd, and a most rare speaker, more bound; his training such smish and instruct great teachers, for aid out of himself. Yet see noble benefits shall prove
 'd, the mind growing once corrupt, cious forms, ten times more ugly were fair. This man so complete, I'd 'mongst wonders, and when we, wish'd list'ning, could not find each a minute; he, my lady, strous habits put the graces his, and is become as black in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear gentleman in trust) of him honour sad.—Bid him recount practices; whereof too little, hear too much, forth; and with bold spirit relate what eful subject, have collected of Buckingham.

Speak freely
 it was usual with him, every day his speech, That if the king issue die, he'd carry it so eptre his: These very words
 m utter to his son-in-law,
 ; to whom by oath he menac'd
 the cardinal.

Please your highness, note conception in this point.
 y his wish, to your high person malignant; and it stretches your friends.

My learn'd lord cardinal,
 a charity.

Speak on:
 he his title to the crown,
 to this point hast thou heard him eak ought?

He was brought to this becy of Nicholas Henton,
 at was that Henton?

Sir, a Chartreux friar, who fed him every minute sovereignty.

How know'st thou this?
 ong before your highness sped to France,
 at the Rose, within the parish
 e Poultney, did of me demand speech among the Londoners

Concerning the French journey: I replied,
 Men fear'd the French would prove perfidious,
 To the king's danger. Presently the duke
 Said, "T was the fear, indeed; and that he doubted,
 "T would prove the verity of certain words Spoke by a holy monk: "that off," says he,
 "Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
 John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour
 To hear from him a matter of some moment:
 Whom after under the confession's seal
 He solemnly had sworn, that, what he spoke,
 My chaplain to no creature living, but
 To me, should utter, with demure confidence
 This pausingly ensued—Neither the king, nor his heirs, (Tell you the duke) shall prosper: bid him strive
 To gain the love of the commonalty; the duke Shall govern England."

Q. Kath. If I know you well,
 You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office
 On the complaint o' the tenants: Take good heed
 You charge not in your spleen a noble person,
 And spoil your nobler soul! I say, take heed;
 Yes, heartily beseech you.

K. Hen. Let him on—Go forward.

Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
 I told my lord the duke, by the devil's illusions
 The monk might be deceiv'd; and that 't was dangerous
 for him

To ruminate on this so far, until
 It forg'd him some design, which, being believ'd,
 It was much like to do: He answer'd, "Tush!
 It can do me no damage;" adding further,
 That had the king in his last sickness fail'd,
 The cardinal's and sir Thomas Lovell's heads
 Should have gone off.

K. Hen. Ha! what so rank? Ah, ha!
 There's mischief in this man: Canst thou say further?
Surv. I can, my liege.

K. Hen. Proceed.
Surv. Being at Greenwich,
 After your highness had reprov'd the duke
 About sir William Blomer,—

K. Hen. I remember
 Of such a time—Being my sworn servant,
 The duke retain'd him his.—But on; What herce?
Surv. "If," quoth he, "I for this had been committed,

As, to the Tower, I thought,—I would have play'd
 The part my father meant to act upon
 The usurper Richard; who, being at Salisbury,
 Made suit to come in his presence; which if granted,
 As he made semblance of his duty, would Have put his knife into him."

K. Hen. A giant traitor!
Wol. Now, madam, may his highness live in freedom,
 And this man out of prison?

Q. Kath. God mend all!
K. Hen. There's something more would out of thee if what say'st?

Surv. After—"the duke his father,"—with "the knife,"—

He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger
 Another spread on his breast, mounting his eyes,
 He did discharge a horrible oath; whose tenour
 Was,—were he evil us'd, he would outgo
 His father, by as much as a performance
 Does an irresolute purpose.

K. Hen. There's his period,
 To sheath his knife in us. He is attach'd:
 Call him to present trial; if he may Find mercy in the law, 't is his; if none,
 Let him not seek 't of us: by day and night,
 He's traitor to the height. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain and LORD SANDS.

Cham. Is 't possible the spells of France should juggle

Men into such strange mysteries?<sup>a</sup>

Sands. New customs,
Though they be never so ridiculous,
Nay, let them be unmanly, yet are follow'd.

Cham. As far as I see, all the good our English
Have got by the late voyage is but merely
A fit or two o' the face; but they are shrewd ones;
For when they hold them, you would swear directly
Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin, or Clotharius, they keep state so.

Sands. They have all new legs, and lame ones; one would take it,

That never saw them pace before, the spavin,
A springhalt reign'd among them.

Cham. Death! my lord,
Their clothes are after such a pagan cut too,
That, sure, they have worn out christendom. How now?
What news, sir Thomas Lovell?

Enter SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

Lov. Faith, my lord,
I hear of none, but the new proclamation
That's clapp'd upon the court-gate.

Cham. What is 't for?
Lov. The reformation of our travell'd gallants,
That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors.

Cham. I am glad 't is there; now I would pray our monsieurs

To think an English courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louvre.

Lov. They must either
(For so run the conditions) leave those remnants
Of fool, and feather, that they got in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance,
Pertaining thereunto, (as fights, and fireworks;
Abusing better men than they can be,
Out of a foreign wisdom,) renouncing clean
The faith they have in tennis and tall stockings,
Short blister'd breeches, and those types of travel,
And understand again like honest men;
Or pack to their old playfellows: there, I take it,
They may, cum privilegio, wear away
The lag end of their lewdness, and be laugh'd at.

Sands. 'T is time to give them physic, their diseases
Are grown so catching.

Cham. What a loss our ladies
Will have of these trim vanities!

Lov. Ay, marry,
There will be woe indeed, lords; the sly whoresons
Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies;
A French song, and a fiddle, has no fellow.

Sands. The devil fiddle them! I am glad they're going;

(For, sure, there's no converting of them;)—now,
An honest country lord, as I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plainsong,
And have an hour of bearing; and, by'r lady,
Held current music too.

Cham. Well said, lord Sands;
Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

Sands. No, my lord;
Nor shall not, while I have a stump.

Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a going?

Lov. To the cardinal's;
Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham. O, 't is true:
This night he makes a supper, and a great one,

<sup>a</sup> Mysteries—artificial fashions.

To many lords and ladies; there will be
The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Lov. That churchman bears a bounteous
deed,

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds
His dewes fall everywhere.

Cham. No doubt he's rich
He had a black mouth that said other of

Sands. He may, my lord; he has worn
him,

Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doing.
Men of his way should be most liberal,
They are set here for examples.

Cham. True, they
But few now give so great ones. My hat
Your lordship shall along:—Come, good
We shall be late else; which I would not
For I was spoke to, with sir Henry Guildenstern
This night to be comptrollers.

Sands. I am your

Gentlewomen, as guests; at another
HENRY GUILDFORD.*

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from Salutes ye all: This night he dedicates
To fair content, and you: none here, but
In all this noble bevy, has brought with One care abroad: he would have all as
As first-good company, good wine, good
Can make good people. O, my lord, you

Enter Lord Chamberlain, LORD SANDS, THOMAS LOVELL.

The very thought of this fair company
Clapp'd wings to me.

Cham. You are young, sir Harry Guildenstern
Sands. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the care
But half my lay-thoughts in him, some of Should find a running banquet ere they
I think would better please them: By my
They are a sweet society of fair ones.

Lov. O, that your lordship were but
To one or two of these!

Sands. I would I were;
They should find easy penance.

Lov. Faith, how
Sands. As easy as a down-bed would

Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you Place you that side, I'll take the charge
His grace is eut'ring.—Nay, you must not
Two women plac'd together makes cold
My lord Sands, you are one will keep them
Pray, sit between these ladies.

Sands. By my faith
And thank your lordship.—By your leave,

[Sits himself between Anne Bullen and another lady.]

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me
I had it from my father.

Anne. Was he mad, sir?
Sands. O, very mad, exceeding mad.

But he would bite none; just as I do now
He would kiss you twenty with a tooth.

Cham. Well said,
So, now you are fairly seated:—Gentlemen
The penance lies on you, if these fair ladies
Pass away frowning.

Sands. For my little company
Let me alone.

Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, attended; and takes his state.

are welcome, my fair guests; that noble
ly,

is, that is not freely merry,
send: This, to confirm my welcome;
all good health.

[Drinks.]
Your grace is noble:—
such a bowl may hold my thanks,
e so much talking.

My lord Sands,
em to you: cheer your neighbours.
are not merry;—Gentlemen,
is this?

The red wine first must rise cheeks, my lord; then we shall have them
hence.

You are a merry gamester,
sir.

Yes, if I make my play.
our ladyship: and pledge it, madam,
such a thing,—

You cannot show me.
told your grace they would talk anon.
Drum and trumpets within: Chambers discharged.

What's that?
sok out there, some of ye. [Exit a Servant.]
What warlike voice?
end is this?—Nay, ladies, fear not;
cwa of war ye are privileged.

Re-enter Servant.
ow now? what is 't?

A noble troop of strangers;
em; they have left their barge, and landed;
make, as great ambassadors princes.

Good lord chamberlain, em welcome, you can speak the French
gue;
ceive them nobly, and conduct them
ence, where this heaven of beauty
t fall upon them:—Some attend him.— rit Chamberlain, attended. All arise, and tables removed.

r a broken banquet; but we'll mend it.
tion to you all: and, once more,
come on you;—Welcome all.

Enter the KING, and twelve others, as abited like shepherds, with sixteen torchashed by the Lord Chamberlain. They ly before the CARDINAL, and gracefully any! what are their pleasures?

ecause they speak no English, thus they y'd
grace:—That, having heard by fame ole and so fair assembly meet here, they could do no less,

Out of the great respect they bear to beauty,
But leave their flocks; and, under your fair conduct,
Crave leave to view these ladies, and entreat
An hour of revels with them.

Wol. Say, lord chamberlain,
They have done my poor house grace; for which I pay
them

A thousand thanks, and pray them take their pleasures.
[Ladies chosen for the dance. The KING chooses ANNE BULLEN.]

K. Hen. The fairest hand I ever touch'd! O, beauty, Till now I never knew thee. [Music. Dance

Wol. My lord.
Cham. Your grace?

Wol. Pray, tell them thus much from me:
There should be one amongst them, by his person,
More worthy this place than myself; to whom,
If I but knew him, with my love and duty
I would surrender it.

Cham. I will, my lord.
[Cham. goes to the company, and returns.]

Wol. What say they?
Cham. Such a one, they all confess,
There is, indeed; which they would have your grace
Find out, and he will take it.

Wol. Let me see then.—
[Comes from his state.]

By all your good leaves, gentlemen; Here I'll make My royal choice.

K. Hen. You have found him, cardinal:
[Unmasking]

You hold a fair assembly; you do well, lord:
You are a churchman, or I'll tell you, cardinal,
I should judge now unhappily.

Wol. I am glad
Your grace is grown so pleasant.

K. Hen. My lord chamberlain,
Prithee, come hither: What fair lady 's that?

Cham. An't please your grace, sir Thomas Bullen's daughter,
The viscount Rochford, one of her highness' women.

K. Hen. By heaven, she is a dainty one.—Sweetheart,
I were unmannerly to take you out,
And not to kiss you.—A health, gentlemen,
Let it go round.

Wol. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready
I' the privy chamber?

Lov. Yes, my lord.

Wol. Your grace,
I fear, with dancing is a little heated.

K. Hen. I fear, too much

Wol. There 's fresher air, my lord,
In the next chamber.

K. Hen. Lead in your ladies, every one.—Sweet partner,

I must not yet forsake you.—Let's be merry;—
Good my lord cardinal, I have half a dozen healths
To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure
To lead them once again; and then let's dream
Who's best in favour.—Let the music knock it.

[Exeunt, with trumpets.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Street.

Enter Two Gentlemen, meeting.

Whither away so fast?

O,—God save you!
I'll, to hear what shall become duke of Buckingham.

1 Gent.

I'll save you

That labour, sir. All 's now done, but the ceremony
Of bringing back the prisoner.

2 Gent. Were you there?

1 Gent. Yes, indeed, was I.

2 Gent. Pray speak what has happen'd

1 Gent. You may guess quickly what.

2 Gent. Is he found guilty?
 1 Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon it.
 2 Gent. I am sorry for 't.
 1 Gent. So are a number more.
 2 Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it?
 1 Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great duke Came to the bar; where to his accusations
 He pleaded still, not guilty, and alleg'd
 Many sharp reasons to defeat the law.
 The king's attorney, on the contrary,
 Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions
 Of divers witnesses; which the duke desir'd
 To have* brought, vid voce, to his face:
 At which appear'd against him, his surveyor;
 Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor; and John Car,
 Confessor to him; with that devil-monk,
 Hopkins, that made this mischief.
 2 Gent. That was he
 That fed him with his prophecies?
 1 Gent. The same.
 All these accus'd him strongly; which he fain
 Would have flung from him, but, indeed, he could not:
 And so his peers, upon this evidence,
 Have found him guilty of high treason. Much
 He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but all
 Was either pitied in him, or forgotten.
 2 Gent. After all this, how did he bear himself?
 1 Gent. When he was brought again to the bar, to hear
 His knell rung out, his judgment, he was stirr'd
 With such an agony, he sweat extremely,
 And something spoke in choler, ill, and hasty:
 But he fell to himself again, and sweetly
 In all the rest show'd a most noble patience.
 2 Gent. I do not think he fears death.
 1 Gent. Sure, he does not,
 He never was so womanish; the cause
 He may a little grieve at.
 2 Gent. Certainly
 The cardinal is the end of this.
 1 Gent. 'T is likely,
 By all conjectures: First, Kildare's attainer,
 Then deputy of Ireland; who remov'd,
 Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too,
 Lest he should help his father.
 2 Gent. That trick of state
 Was a deep envious one.
 1 Gent. At his return,
 No doubt he will requite it. This is noted,
 And generally, whoever the king favours,
 The cardinal instantly will find employment,
 And far enough from court too.
 2 Gent. All the commons
 Hate him perniciously, and, o' my conscience,
 Wish him ten fathom deep: this duke as much
 They love and dote on; call him bounteous Buckingham,
 The mirror of all courtesy.
*Enter BUCKINGHAM from his arraignment; Tipstaves before him; the axe with the edge towards him;
 halberds on each side; accompanied with SIR THOMAS LOVELL, SIR NICHOLAS VAUX, SIR WILLIAM SANDS, and common people.*
 1 Gent. Stay there, sir,
 And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of.
 2 Gent. Let 's stand close, and behold him.
Buck. All good people,
 You that thus far have come to pity me,
 Hear what I say, and then go home and lose me.
 I have this day receiv'd a traitor's judgment,
 And by that name must die: Yet, heaven bear witness,
 And if I have a conscience let it sink me,
 Even as the axe falls, if I be not faithful!

The law I bear no malice for my death,
 It has done, upon the premises, but justice:
 But those that sought it I could wish more christen'd
 Be what they will, I heartily forgive them:
 Yet let them look they glory not in mischief,
 Nor build their evils on the graves of great men;
 For then my guiltless blood must cry against them
 For further life in this world I ne'er hope,
 Nor will I sue, although the king have mercies
 More than I dare make faults. You few that lov'd
 And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham,
 His noble friends, and fellows, whom to leave
 Is only bitter to him, only dying,
 Go with me, like good angels, to my end;
 And, as the long divorce of steel falls on me,
 Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,
 And lift my soul to heaven.—Lead on, o' God's
Lov. I do beseech your grace, for charity,
 If ever any malice in your heart
 Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.
Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive you
 As I would be forgiven: I forgive all:
 There cannot be those numberless offences
 'Gainst me that I cannot take peace with:
 No black envy shall make my grave.
 Commend me to his grace;
 And if he speak of Buckingham, pray tell him,
 You met him half in heaven: my vows and prayers
 Yet are the king's; and, till my soul forsake,
 Shall cry for blessings on him: May he live
 Longer than I have time to tell his years!
 Ever belov'd, and loving, may his rule be!
 And, when old time shall lead him to his end,
 Goodness and he fill up one monument!
Lov. To the water side I must conduct your grace
 Then give my charge up to Sir Nicholas Vaux,
 Who undertakes you to your end.
Vaux. Prepare them,
 The duke is coming; see the barge be ready;
 And fit it with such furniture as suits
 The greatness of his person.
Buck. Nay, sir Nicholas,
 Let it alone; my state now will but mock me.
 When I came hither I was lord high constable,
 And duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward
 Yet I am richer than my base accusers,
 That never knew what truth meant: I now seal
 And with that blood will make them one day
 for 't.
 My noble father, Henry of Buckingham,
 Who first rais'd head against usurping Richard,
 Flying for succour to his servant Banister,
 Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd,
 And without trial fell; God's peace be with him!
 Henry the seventh succeeding, truly pitying
 My father's loss, like a most royal prince,
 Restor'd me to my honours, and, out of ruins,
 Made my name once more noble. Now his son,
 Henry the eighth, life, honour, name, and all
 That made me happy, at one stroke has taken
 For ever from the world. I had my trial,
 And, must needs say, a noble one; which makes
 A little happier than my wretched father:
 Yet thus far we are one in fortunes.—Both Fell by our servants, by those men we lov'd most
 A most unnatural and faithless service!
 Heaven has an end in all: Yet, you that bear me
 This from a dying man receive as certain:
 Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels,
 Be sure you be not loose; for those you make free
 And give your hearts to, when they once perceive
 The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
 Like water from ye, never found again
 But where they mean to sink ye. All good peo-

! I must now forsake ye; the last hour weary life is come upon me.

you would say something that is sad,
I fell.—I have done; and God forgive me!
[Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and Train.]

O, this is full of pity!—Sir, it calls, many curses on their heads
the authors.

If the duke be guiltless, woe: yet I can give you inkling
ing evil, if it fall,
is this.

Good angels keep it from us!
it be? You do not doubt my faith, sir?
This secret is so weighty, 't will require
th to conceal it.

Let me have it;
t much.

I am confident;
ir: Did you not of late days hear of a separation
king and Katharine?

Yes, but it held not:
king once heard it, out of anger
mand to the lord mayor, straight umour, and allay those tongues isperse it.

But that slander, sir,
uth now: for it grows again er it was; and held for certain l venture at it. Either the cardinal, at him near, have, out of malice queen, possess'd him with a scruple do her: To confirm this too, npeius is arriv'd, and lately;
for this business.

'T is the cardinal;
to revenge him on the emperor,
wing on him, at his asking,
ppric of Toledo, this is purpos'd.
think you have hit the mark: But is 't not el

did feel the smart of this? The cardinal will, and she must fall.

'T is woful.

pen here to argue this;
n private more.

[Exeunt.]

FL.—An Antechamber in the Palace.

e Lord Chamberlain, reading a letter.

The horses your lordship sent for, with all the re well chosen, ridden, and furnished. They l handsome; and of the best breed in the north.
s ready to set out for London, a man of my lord mmission, and main power, took 'em from me;
—His master would be serv'd before a subject, king; which stopped our mouths, sir."

I, indeed: Well, let him have them:
all, I think.

DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.

met, my lord chamberlain.
sd day to both your graces.
is the king employ'd?

I left him private,
oughts and troubles.

What 's the cause?
seems the marriage with his brother's wife near his conscience.

No, his conscience
near another lady.

'T is so:

This is the cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal:
That blind priest, like the eldest son of fortune,
Turns what he list. The king will know him one day.
Suf. Pray God he do! he'll never know himself else.

Nor. How holily he works in all his business!
And with what zeal! For now he has crack'd the league
Between us and the emperor, the queen's great nephew:
He dives into the king's soul; and there scatters
Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience,
Fears, and despairs, and all these for his marriage:
And out of all these to restore the king,
He counsels a divorce: a loss of her
That, like a jewel, has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre:
Of her that loves him with that excellence
That angels love good men with; even of her
That when the greatest stroke of fortune falls
Will bless the king: And is not this course pious?

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel! 'T is most true

These news are everywhere; every tongue speaks them,
And every true heart weeps for 't: All that dare
Look into these affairs see this main end,—
The French king's sister. Heaven will one day open
The king's eyes, that so long have slept upon
This bold bad man.

Suf. And free us from his slavery.

Nor. We had need pray,
And heartily, for our deliverance;
Or this imperious man will work us all
From princes into pages: all men's honours
Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd
Into what pitch he please.

Suf. For me, my lords,
I love him not, nor fear him; there 's my creed:
As I am made without him, so I'll stand,
If the king please; his curses and his blessings Touch me alike, they are breath I not believe in.
I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him
To him that made him proud, the pope.

Nor. Let 's in;
And, with some other business, put the king
From these sad thoughts, that work too much upon him:
My lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham. Excuse me;
The king hath sent me other-where: besides,
You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him:
Health to your lordships.

Nor. Thanks, my good lord chamberlain.
[Exit Lord Chamberlain.]

NORFOLK opens a folding-door. The KING is discovered sitting, and reading pensively.

Suf. How sad he looks! sure, he is much afflicted.
K. Hen. Who is there? ha?

Nor. Pray God, he be not angry.
K. Hen. Who 's there, I say? How dare you thrust yourselves

Into my private meditations?

Who am I? ha?

Nor. A gracious king, that pardons all offences
Malice ne'er meant: our breach of duty, this way
Is business of estate; in which, we come
To know your royal pleasure.

K. Hen. You are too bold;
Go to; I'll make ye know your times of business:
Is this an hour for temporal affairs? ha?

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

Who 's there? my good lord cardinal?—O my Wolsey
The quiet of my wounded conscience,
Thou art a cure fit for a king.—You're welcome,

[To CAMPEIUS]

Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom ;
Use us, and it :—My good lord, have great care
I be not found a talker. [To WOLSEY.]

Wol. Sir, you cannot.
I would your grace would give us but an hour
Of private conference.

K. Hen. We are busy ; go.
[To NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.]

Nor. This priest has no pride in him ?
Suf. Not to speak of ;
I would not be so sick though, for his place :
But this cannot continue. } Aside.
Nor. If it do,
I 'll venture one ;—have at him. }

Suf. I another.
[Exit NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.]

Wol. Your grace has given a precedent of wisdom
Above all princes, in committing freely
Your scruple to the voice of Christendom :
Who can be angry now ? what envy reach you ?
The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her,
Must now confess, if they have any goodness,
The trial just and noble. All the clerks,
I mean the learned ones, in christian kingdoms,
Have their free voices—Rome, the nurse of judgment,
Invited by your noble self, hath sent
One general tongue unto us, this good man,
This just and learned priest, cardinal Campeius ;
Whom, once more, I present unto your highness.

K. Hen. And, once more, in mine arms I bid him
welcome,
And thank the holy conclave for their loves ;
They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd for.

Cam. Your grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves,
You are so noble : To your highness' hand
I tender my commission ; by whose virtue,
(The court of Rome commanding,) you, my lord
Cardinal of York, are join'd with me their servant,
In the impartial judging of this business.

K. Hen. Two equal men. The queen shall be acquainted,
Forthwith, for what you come :—Where 's Gardiner ?

Wol. I know your majesty has always lov'd her
So dear in heart, not to deny her that
A woman of less place might ask by law,
Scholars allow'd freely to argue for her.

K. Hen. Ay, and the best she shall have ; and my favour
To him that does best ; God forbid else. Cardinal, Prithee call Gardiner to me, my new secretary ;
I find him a fit fellow. [Exit WOLSEY.]

Re-enter WOLSEY, with GARDINER.

Wol. Give me your hand : much joy and favour to
you ;
You are the king's now.

Gard. But to be commanded
For ever by your grace, whose hand has rais'd me. [Aside.]
K. Hen. Come hither, Gardiner.

[They converse apart.]
Cam. My lord of York, was not one doctor Pace
In this man's place before him ?

Wol. Yes, he was.
Cam. Was he not held a learned man ?
Wol. Yes, surely.

Cam. Believe me, there 's an ill opinion spread then Even of yourself, lord cardinal.

Wol. How ! of me ?
Cam. They will not stick to say you envied him ;
And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous,
Kept him a foreign man still ; which se griev'd him,
That he ran mad, and died.

Wol. Heaven's peace be
That 's christian care enough : for living men
There 's places of rebuke. He was a fool ;
For he would needs be virtuous : That good
If I command him, follows my appointment
I will have none so near else. Learn this,
We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons.
K. Hen. Deliver this with modesty to the

[Exit]
The most convenient place that I can think
For such receipt of learning, is Blackfriars ;
There ye shall meet about this weighty business
My Wolsey, see it furnish'd. O my lord,
Would it not grieve an able man, to leave
So sweet a bedfellow ? But, conscience, O,
't is a tender place, and I must leave her

SCENE III.—An Antechamber in the Apartments.

Enter ANNE BULLEN and an old man

Anne. Not for that neither :—Here 's pinches :
His highness having liv'd so long with her
So good a lady, that no tongue could ever
Pronounce dishonour of her,—by my life,
She never knew harm-doing ;—O now, after
So many courses of the sun enthron'd,
Still growing in a majesty and pomp,—
To leave a thousand-fold more bitter than
'T is sweet at first to acquire,—after this
To give her the avaunt ! it is a pity
Would move a monster.

Old L. Hearts of most ha-
Melt and lament for her.

Anne. O, God's will !
She ne'er had known pomp : though it be
Yet, if that quarrel<sup>a</sup> fortune, do divorce
It from the bearer, 't is a sufferance, pang
As soul and body's severing.

Old L. Alas, poor la-
She 's a stranger now again.

Anne. So much the Must pity drop upon her. Verily,
I swear, 't is better to be lowly born,
And range with humble livers in contest,
Than to be perk'd up in a glistening grief,
And wear a golden sorrow.

Old L. Our content
Is our best having.

Anne. By my troth and maid-
I would not be a queen.

Old L. Beshrew me, I w-
And venture maidenhead for 't ; and so w-
For all this spice of your hypocrisy :
You, that have so fair parts of woman on ;
Have too a woman's heart : which ever ye
Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty ;
Which, to say sooth, are blessings : and w-(Saving your mincing) the capacity
Of your soft cheveril<sup>b</sup> conscience would m-
If you might please to stretch it.

Anne. Nay, go-
Old L. Yes, troth, and troth,—You w-
queen ?

Anne. No, not for all the riches under Old L. 'T is strange : a three-pence hire me,

Old as I am, to queen it : But, I pray you
What think you of a duchess ? have you
To bear that load of title ?

<sup>a</sup> Quarrel is an arrow.

<sup>b</sup> Cheveril—kid-skin. So in ' Romeo and Julia a wit of cheveril, that stretcheth from an inch to broad."

No, in truth.
When you are weakly made: Pluck off a le;—
be a young count in your way, in blushing comes to: if your back unsafe this burden, 't is too weak boy.

How you do talk!
I would not be a queen
world.

In faith, for little England is an emballing: I myself Hampshire, although there 'long'd be crown but that. Lo, who comes here?
Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Good morrow, ladies. What wer't worth to now
your conference?

My good lord,
mand; it values not your asking:
sorrows we were pitying, was a gentle business, and becoming of good women: there is hope
tell.

Now I pray God, amen!
to bear a gentle mind, and heavenly bless-creatures. That you may, fair lady, speak sincerely, and high note 's many virtues, the king's majesty is good opinion of you to you, and honour to you no less flowing ness of Pembroke; to which title sound a-year, annual support, ance he adds.

I do not know of my obedience I should tender, y all is nothing; nor my prayers
a duly hallow'd, nor my wishes than empty vanities; yet prayers, and bes,

return. Beseech your lordship, speak my thanks, and my obedience, washing handmaid to his highness;
and royalty I pray for.

Lady,
to improve the fair conceit
of you.—I have perus'd her well; [Aside.
honour in her are so mingled,
we caught the king: and who knows yet,
if lady may proceed a gem
I this isle!—I'll to the king, poke with you.

My honour'd lord.
[Exit Lord Chamberlain.
by, this it is; see, see!
begging sixteen years in court, rather beggarly,) nor could twixt too early and too late, of pounds: and you, (O fate!) flash here, (fie, fie, fie upon
'd fortune!) have your mouth fill'd up pen it.

This is strange to me.
now tastes it? is it bitter? forty pence, no, lady once, ('t is an old story,
not be a queen, that would she not,
and in Egypt:—Have you heard it?
me, you are pleasant.

With your theme, I could be lark. The marchioness of Pembroke!
a little—descend a little: You refuse to be a see, try a count.

A thousand pounds a-year! for pure respect;
No other obligation: By my life,
That promises more thousands: Honour's train
Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time,
I know, your back will bear a duchess;—Say,
Are you not stronger than you were?

Anne. Good lady,
Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on 't. 'Would I had no being
If this salute my blood a jot; it faints me
To think what follows.

The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence: Pray, do not deliver
What here you have heard, to her.

Old L. What do you think me? [Exeunt

SCENE IV.—A Hall in Blackfriars.

Trumpets, sennet, and cornets. Enter two Vergers, with short silver wands; next them, Two Scribes, in the habits of doctors; after them, the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY alone; after him, the BISHOPS OF LINCOLN, ELY, ROCHESTER, and SAINT ASAPH; next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal, and a cardinal's hat; then Two Priests, bearing each a silver cross; then a Gentleman-Usher bare-headed, accompanied with a Sergeant at Arms, bearing a silver mace; then Two Gentlemen, bearing two great silver pillars; after them, side by side, the Two CARDINALS WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS; Two Noblemen with the sword and mace. [Then enter the KING and QUEEN, and their Trains.] The KING takes place under the cloth of state; the Two CARDINALS sit under him as judges. The QUEEN takes place at some distance from the KING. The BISHOPS place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; below them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the BISHOPS. The Crier and the rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.

Wol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read,
Let silence be commanded.

K. Hen. What 's the need?
It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides the authority allow'd;
You may then spare that time.

Wol. Be 't so:—Proceed.
Scribe. Say, Henry king of England, come into the court.

Crier. Henry king of England, &c.
K. Hen. Here.

Scribe. Say, Katharine queen of England, come into the court.

Crier. Katharine queen of England, &c.
[The QUEEN makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the KING, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you, do me right and justice;
And to bestow your pity on me: for
I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,
Born out of your dominions; having here
No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance
Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas, sir,
In what have I offended you? what cause
Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure,
That thus you should proceed to put me off,
And take your good grace from me? Heaven witness,
I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable:
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,
Yea, subject to your countenance; glad, or sorry,
As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour,
I ever contradicted your desire,

Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends
Have I not strove to love, although I knew
He were mine enemy? What friend of mine
That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice
He was from thence discharg'd? Sir, call to mind
That I have been your wife, in this obedience,
Upward of twenty years, and have been blest
With many children by you: If, in the course
And process of this time, you can report,
And prove it too, against mine honour aught,
My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty,
Against your sacred person, in God's name,
Turn me away; and let the foul'st contempt
Shut door upon me, and so give me up
To the sharpest kind of justice. Please you, sir,
The king, your father, was reputed for
A prince most prudent, of an excellent
And unmatched wit and judgment: Ferdinand,
My father, king of Spain, was reckon'd one
The wisest prince, that there had reign'd by many
A year before: It is not to be question'd
That they had gather'd a wise council to them
Of every realm, that did debate this business,
Who deem'd our marriage lawful: Wherefore I humbly
Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may Be by my friends in Spain advis'd; whose counsel
I will implore; if not, i' the name of God,
Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Wol. You have here, lady,
(And of your choice,) these reverend fathers; men
Of singular integrity and learning,
Yea, the elect of the land, who are assembled
To plead your cause: It shall be therefore bootless,
That longer you desire the court; as well
For your own quiet, as to rectify
What is unsettled in the king.

Cam. His grace
Hath spoken well, and justly: Therefore, madam,
It's fit this royal session do proceed;
And that, without delay, their arguments
Be now produc'd, and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord cardinal,
To you I speak.

Wol. Your pleasure, madam?
Q. Kath. Sir,

I am about to weep; but, thinking that
We are a queen, (or long have dream'd so,) certain
The daughter of a king, my drops of tears
I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Wol. Be patient yet.
Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble; nay, before,
Or God will punish me. I do believe,
Induc'd by potent circumstances, that
You are mine enemy; and make my challenge
You shall not be my judge: for it is you
Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me,
Which God's dew quench!—Therefore, I say again,
I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul
Refuse you<sup>a</sup> for my judge: whom, yet once more,
I hold my most malicious foe, and think not
At all a friend to truth.

Wol. I do profess
You speak not like yourself; who ever yet
Have stood to charity, and display'd the effects
Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom O'er topping woman's power. Malara, you do me wrong:
I have no spleen against you; nor injustice

<sup>a</sup> Sir W. Blackstone, who contributed a few notes to Shakspere, says that abhor and refuse are, in such a case, technical terms of the canon-law—Detestor and Recuso. The very words occur in Holinshed. Challenge has been previously used by the queen technically.

For you, or any: how far I have proceed
Or how far further shall, is warrant'd
By a commission from the consistory,
Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You
That I have blown this coal: I do deny
The king is present: if it be known to him
That I gainsay my deed, how may he we
And worthily, my falsehood? yea, as m
As you have done my truth. If he know
That I am free of your report, he know
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in h
It lies to cure me: and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you: The w
His highness shall speak in, I do beseech
You, gracious madam, to unthink your
And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lon
I am a simple woman, much too weak
To oppose your cunning. You are meel mouth'd;

You sign your place and calling, in full
With meekness and humility: but your
Is cramm'd with arrogancy, spleen, and
You have, by fortune, and his highness'
Gone slightly o'er low steps: and now a
Where powers are your retainers: and y
Domestics to you, serve your will, as t Yourself pronounce their office. I must
You tender more your person's honour th
Your high profession spiritual: That ag
I do refuse you for my judge; and here
Before you all, appeal unto the pope,
To bring my whole cause 'fore his holine
And to be judg'd by him.

[She curtsies to the KING, and e
Cam. The queen is o
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be tried by it; 't is not we She's going away.

K. Hen. Call her again.

Crier. Katharine queen of England, court.

Grif. Madam, you are call'd back.

Q. Kath. What need you note it?
your way:

When you are call'd, return.—Now the
They vex me past my patience:—pray
I will not tarry: no, nor ever more,
Upon this business, my appearance mak
In any of their courts.

[Exit QUEEN, GRIFFITH
Attendants.

K. Hen. Go thy ways, Ka
That man i' the world who shall report h
A better wife, let him in nought be trust
For speaking false in that: Thou art, al
(If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleless,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like govern
Obeying in commanding,—and thy part Sovereign and pious else, could speak the
The queen of earthly queens:—She is m
And, like her true nobility, she has Carried herself towards me.

Wol. Most gracious
In humblest manner I require your high
That it shall please you to declare, in be
Of all these ears, (for where I am robb'd
There must I be unloos'd; although not
At once and fully satisfied,) whether ever
Did broach this business to your highness
Laid any scruple in your way, which mig
Induce you to the question on't? or ever
Have to you,—but with thanks to God for A royal lady,—spake one the least word th justice of her present state, her good person ?

My lord cardinal,
you; yea, upon mine honour, an 't. You are not to be taught re many enemies, that know not e so, but, like to village curs, their fellows do: by some of these put in anger. You are excus'd:
be more justified? you ever the sleeping of this business; never be stir'd: but oft have hinder'd, oft, made toward it:—on my honour,
poor lord cardinal to this point, clear him. Now, what mov'd me to 't, d with time, and your attention:— the inducement. Thus it came;—give to 't:

ce first receiv'd a tenderness,
prick, on certain speeches utter'd p of Bayonne, then French ambassador;
n hither sent on the debating twixt the duke of Orleans and r Mary: 't the progress of this business, inate resolution, he bishop) did require a respite; might the king his lord advertise daughter were legitimate,
his our marriage with the dowager, or brother's wife. This respite shook f my conscience, enter'd me, splitting power, and made to tremble
f my breast; which forc'd such way, max'd considerations did throng,
in with this caution. First, methought, n the smile of heaven; who had nature, that my lady's womb, d a male child by me, should offices of life to 't, than ses to the dead: for her male issue e they were made, or shortly after ad air'd them: Hence I took a thought adgment on me; that my kingdom, the best heir o' the world, should not in 't by me: Then follows, that r danger which my realms stood in sue's fail: and that gave to me ning three. Thus hulling in

The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present here together; that's to say,
I meant to rectify my conscience,—which
I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,—
By all the reverend fathers of the land,
And doctors learn'd. First, I began in private
With you, my lord of Lincoln; you remember How under my oppression I did reek,
When I first mov'd you.

Lin. Very well, my liege.

K. Hen. I have spoke long; be pleas'd yourself to say

How far you satisfied me.

Lin. So please your highness,
The question did at first so stagger me,—
Bearing a state of mighty moment in 't,
And consequence of dread,—that I committed
The daring st counsel which I had, to doubt;
And did entreat your highness to this course,
Which you are running here.

K. Hen. I then mov'd you,
My lord of Canterbury; and got your leave
To make this present summons:—Unsolicited
I left no reverend person in this court;
But by particular consent proceeded,
Under your hands and seals. Therefore, go on;
For no dislike 't the world against the person
Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points
Of my alleged reasons, drive this forward:
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life,
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come with her,
Katharine our queen, before the primest creature
That's paragon'd o' the world.

Cam. So please your highness,
The queen being absent, 't is a needful fitness,
That we adjourn this court till further day:
Meanwhile must be an earnest motion
Made to the queen, to call back her appeal
She intends unto his holiness. [They rise to depart.]

K. Hen. I may perceive, [Aside.]
These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor
This dilatory sloth, and tricks of Rome.
My learn'd and well-beloved servant, Crammer,
Prithee, return! with thy approach, I know,
My comfort comes along. Break up the court:
I say, set on. [Exeunt in manner as they entered.]

ACT III.

—Palace at Bridewell. A Room in the Queen's Apartment.

Exit, and some of her Women, at work.

Take thy lute, wench: my soul grows sad
In troubles:
Disperse them if thou canst: leave working.

SONG.

hears with his lute made trees,
In the mountain-tops that freeze,
Bow themselves, when he did sing:
His ivy-rose, plants and flowers
Sprung: as sun and showers
Have had made a lasting spring.
Nothing that heard him play,
In the billows of the sea,
Lung their heads, and then lay by Sweet made is such art:
Sling care and grief of heart
All asleep, or, hearing, die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now?

Gent. An 't please your grace, the two great cardinals Wait in the presence.

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me?

Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.

Q. Kath. Pray their graces To come near. [Exit Gent.] What can be their business

With me, a poor weak woman, fallen from favour?
I do not like their coming. Now I think on 't,
They should be good men; their affairs as righteous,
But all hoods make not monks.

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPERUS.

Wol. Peace to your highness.

Q. Kath. Your graces find me here part of a housewife;

I would be all, against the worst may happen.

What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?

Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw Into your private chamber, we shall give you
The full cause of our coming.

Q. Kath. Speak it here;
There 's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience,
Deserves a corner: 'Would all other women
Could speak this with as free a soul as I do!
My lords, I care not, (so much I am happy Above a number,) if my actions
Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw them,
Envy and base opinion set against them,
I know my life so even: If your business
Seek me out, and that way I am wife in,
Out with it boldly: Truth loves open dealing.

Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenissima,—

Q. Kath. O good my lord, no Latin;
I am not such a truant since my coming,
As not to know the language I have liv'd in:
A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious;
Pray speak in English: here are some will thank
you,

If you speak truth, for their poor mistress' sake;
Believe me she has had much wrong: Lord cardinal,
The willing'st sin I ever yet committed
May be absolv'd in English.

Wol. Noble lady,
I am sorry my integrity should breed,
And service to his majesty and you,
So deep suspicion where all faith was meant.
We come not by the way of accusation,
To taint that honour every good tongue blesses;
Nor to betray you any way to sorrow;
You have too much, good lady: but to know
How you stand minded in the weighty difference Between the king and you; and to deliver,
Like free and honest men, our just opinions,
And comforts to your cause.

Cam. Most honour'd madam,
My lord of York,—out of his noble nature,
Zeal and obedience he still bore your grace;
Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure
Both of his truth and him, (which was too far,)—
Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace,
His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath. To betray me. [Aside.]
My lords, I thank you both for your good wills;
Ye speak like honest men; pray God, ye prove so!
But how to make ye suddenly an answer,
In such a point of weight, so near mine honour,
(More near my life, I fear,) with my weak wit,
And to such men of gravity and learning,
In truth, I know not. I was set at work
Among my maids; full little, God knows, looking Either for such men, or such business.
For her sake that I have been, (for I feel
The last fit of my greatness,) good your graces,
Let me have time, and counsel, for my cause;
Alas! I am a woman, friendless, hopeless.

Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears;

Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Q. Kath. In England
But little for my profit: Can you think, lords,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel?
Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness' pleasure,
(Though he be grown so desperate to be honest,)
And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends,
They that must weigh out* my afflictions,
that my trust must grow to, live not here:

* Weigh out—outweigh.

They are, as all my other comforts, far hence
In mine own country, lords.

Cam. I would your graces
Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.

Q. Kath.
Cam. Put your main cause into the king's He's loving, and most gracious; 't will be Both for your honour better, and your cause
For, if the trial of the law o'ertake you,
You 'll part away disgrac'd.

Wol. He tells you right.
Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for but Is this your christian counsel? out upon ye Heaven is above all yet; there sits a Judge
That no king can corrupt.

Cam. Your rage mistaketh
Q. Kath. The more shame for ye; I thought ye,

Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues
But cardinal sins, and hollow hearts, I fear
Mend them, for shame, my lords. Is this yet
The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady?
A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd,
I will not wish ye half my miseries,
I have more charity: But say, I warn'd ye Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest
The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.

Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction
You turn the good we offer into envy.

Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing: We
And all such false professors! Would ye
(If you have any justice, any pity;
If ye be anything but churchmen's habits)
Put my sick cause into his hands that hath Alas! he has banish'd me his bed already.
His love, too long ago: I am old, my lord,
And all the fellowship I hold now with him
Is only my obedience. What can happen
To me above this wretchedness? all your Make me a curse like this.

Cam. Your fears are Q. Kath. Have I liv'd thus long—(I myself,

Since virtue finds no friends)—a wife, a true
A woman (I dare say, without vain-glory)
Never yet branded with suspicion?
Have I with all my full affections
Still met the king? lov'd him next heaven

him?
Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him
Almost forgot my prayers to content him?
And am I thus rewarded? 't is not well, but Bring me a constant woman to her husband
One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his part
And to that woman, when she has done me wrong
Yet will I add an honour,—a great patience

Wol. Madam, you wander from the good.

Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself
To give up willingly that noble title
Your master wed me to: nothing but death
Shall e'er divorce my dignities.

Wol. Pray, hear.

Q. Kath. Would I had never trod this earth
Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it!
Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows
What will become of me now, wretched lady!
I am the most unhappy woman living.
Alas! poor wenches, where are now your friends?

[To]
Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where no port
No friends, no hope; no kindred weep for Almost no grave allow'd me:—Like the fish
That once was mistress of the field and sea
I 'll hang my head and perish.

If your grace
 e brought to know our ends are honest, more comfort : why should we, good lady,
 cause, wrong you ? alas ! our places,
 our profession is against it ;
 are such sorrows, not to sow them.
 i' sake, consider what you do ;
 ay hurt yourself, ay, utterly he king's acquaintance, by this carriage.
 f princes kiss obedience,
 y love it ; but to stubborn spirits and grow as terrible as storms.
 have a gentle, noble temper,
 en as a calm : Pray think us
 fess, peace-makers, friends, and servants.
 dam, you 'll find it so. You wrong your tues weak women's fears. A noble spirit, s put into you, ever casts as false coin, from it. The king loves you ; lose it not : For us, if you please n your business, we are ready tmost studies in your service.
 Do what ye will, my lords : And, pray,
 give me,
 d myself* unmannerly ;
 am a woman, lacking wit
 eemly answer to such persons.
 service to his majesty :
 heart yet ; and shall have my prayers.
 I have my life. Come, reverend fathers, counsels on me : she now begs,
 ought, when she set footing here,
 ave bought her dignities so dear. [Exeunt.]

—Antechamber to the King's Apartment.

DUKE OF NORFOLK, the DUKE OF SUFFOLK,
 OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

ou will now unite in your complaints hem with a constancy, the cardinal I under them : If you omit his time, I cannot promise shall sustain more new disgraces, ou bear already.

I am joyful
 least occasion, that may give me
 e of my father-in-law, the duke,
 'd on him.

Which of the peers
 enn'd gone by him, or at least flected ? when did he regard nobleness in any person,
 H ?

My lords, you speak your pleasures :
 erve of you and me I know ;
 i do to him, (though now the time us,) I much fear. If you cannot e to the king, never attempt him ; for he hath a witchcraft
 g in his tongue.

O, fear him not ;
 that is out : the king hath found at him, that for ever mars
 f his language. No, he 's settled, off, in his displeasure.

Sir, glad to hear such news as this sur.

*—deported myself.
 some. So in 'Measure for Measure :—

"Has he affections in him
 we can make him bite the law by the nose, e would force it ?"

Nor. Believe it, this is true,
 In the divorce, his contrary proceedings
 Are all unfolded ; wherein he appears,
 As I would wish mine enemy.

Sur. How came
 His practices to light ?

Suf. Most strangely.

Sur. O, how, how ?

Suf. The cardinal's letter to the pope miscarried,
 And came to the eye o' the king : wherein was read,
 How that the cardinal did entreat his holiness
 To stay the judgment o' the divorce : For if
 It did take place, "I do," quoth he, "perceive,
 My king is tangled in affection to
 A creature of the queen's, lady Anne Bullen."

Sur. Has the king this ?

Suf. Believe it.

Sur. Will this work ?

Cham. The king in this perceives him, how he coasts,

And hedges, his own way. But in this point
 All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic
 After his patient's death ; the king already Hath married the fair lady.

Sur. 'Would he had !

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my lord !
 For, I profess, you have it.

Sur. Now all my joy

Trace the conjunction !

Suf. My amen to 't !

Nor. All men's !

Suf. There 's order given for her coronation :

Marry, this is yet but young, and may be le<sup>d</sup>
 To some ears unrecounted.—But, my lords,
 She is a gallant creature, and complete
 In mind and feature ; I persuade me, from her Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall
 In it be memoriz'd.

Sur. But, will the king

Digest this letter of the cardinal's ?

The Lord forbid !

Nor. Marry, amen !

Suf. No, no ;

There be more wasps that buzz about his nose,
 Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal Campeius
 Is stolen away to Rome ; hath ta'en no leave ;
 Has left the cause o' the king unhandled ; and
 Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,
 To second all his plot. I do assure you,
 The king cried, ha ! at this.

Cham. Now, God incense him

And let him cry ha, louder !

Nor. But, my lord,

When returns Cranmer ?

Suf. He is return'd, in his opinions ; which Have satisfied the king for his divorce,
 Together with all famous colleges
 Almost in Christendom : shortly, I believe,
 His second marriage shall be publish'd, and Her coronation. Katharine no more
 Shall be call'd queen ; but princess dowager,
 And widow to prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranmer 's
 A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
 In the king's business.

Suf. He has ; and we shall see him
 For it, an archbishop.

Nor. So I hear.

Suf. 'T is so.

The cardinal—

Enter WOLSEY and CROMWELL.

Nor. Observe, observe, he 's moody.

Wol. The packet, Cromwell, gave it you the king !

Crom. To his own hand, in his bedchamber.
Wol. Look'd he o' the inside of the paper?
Crom. Presently
 He did unseal them: and the first he view'd,
 He did it with a serious mind; a heed
 Was in his countenance: You, he bade
 Attend him here this morning.
Wol. Is he ready
 To come abroad?
Crom. I think, by this he is.
Wol. Leave me a while.— [Exit CROMWELL.]
 It shall be to the duchess of Alençon,
 The French king's sister: he shall marry her.—
 Anne Bullen! No; I'll no Anne Bullens for him:
 There is more in it than fair visage.—Bullen!
 No, we'll no Bullens.—Speedily I wish
 To hear from Rome.—The marchioness of Pembroke!
Nor. He's discontented.
Suf. May be, he hears the king
 Does what his anger to him.
Sur. Sharp enough,
 Lord, for thy justice!
Wol. The late queen's gentlewoman; a knight's
 daughter,
 To be her mistress' mistress! the queen's queen!—
 This candle burns not clear; 't is I must snuff it;
 Then, out it goes.—What though I know her vir-tuous,
 And well deserving? yet I know her for A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to Our cause, that she should lie i' the bosom of Our hard-rul'd king. Again, there is sprung up
 An heretic, an arch one, Crammer; one
 Hath crawl'd into the favour of the king,
 And is his oracle.
Nor. He is vex'd at something.
Suf. I would 't were something that would fret the string,
 The master-cord of his heart!
Enter the KING, reading a schedule; and Lovell.
Suf. The king, the king.
K. Hen. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated
 To his own portion! and what expense by the hour
 Seems to flow from him! How, i' the name of thrift,
 Does he rake this together?—Now, my lords,
 Saw you the cardinal?
Nor. My lord, we have Stood here observing him: Some strange commotion
 Is in his brain: he bites his lip, and starts;
 Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
 Then, lays his finger on his temple; straight,
 Springs out into fast gait; then, stops again,
 Strikes his breast hard; and anon, he casts
 His eye against the moon: in most strange postures
 We have seen him set himself.
K. Hen. It may well be;
 There is a mutiny in his mind. This morning
 Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
 As I requir'd: And wot you what I found
 There; on my conscience, put unwittingly?
 Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing,—
 The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs, and ornaments of household; which I find at such proud rate, that it out-speaks
 Possession of a subject.
Nor. It's heaven's will:
 Some spirit put this paper in the packet
 To bless your eye withal.
K. Hen. If we did think
 His contemplation were above the earth,
 And fix'd on spiritua' object, he should still Dwell in his musings: but, I am afraid,

His thinkings are below the moon, not worth
 His serious considering.
 [He takes his seat, and whispers Lovell goes to WOLSEY.]
Wol. Heaven forgive me!
 Ever God bless your highness!
K. Hen. Good my lord,
 You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the due
 Of your best graces in your mind; the which
 You were now running o'er; you have scarce
 To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span
 To keep your earthly audit: Sure, in that I deem you an ill husband; and am glad
 To have you therein my companion.
Wol. Sir,
 For holy offices I have a time; a time
 To think upon the part of business, which I bear i' the state; and nature does require
 Her times of preservation, which, perforce,
 I her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,
 Must give my tendance to.
K. Hen. You have said
Wol. And ever may your highness yoke tag
 As I will lend you cause, my doing well
 With my well-saying!
K. Hen. 'T is well said again;
 And 't is a kind of good deed to say well:
 And yet words are no deeds. My father lov'd
 He said he did; and with his deed did crown
 His word upon you. Since I had my office,
 I have kept you next my heart; have not alien Employ'd you where high profits might come
 But par'd my present havings, to bestow
 My bounties upon you.
Wol. What should this mean
Sur. The Lord increase this business!
K. Hen. Have I not
 The prime man of the state? I pray you, tell me
 If what I now pronounce you have found true
 And, if you may confess it, say withal,
 If you are bound to us, or no. What say you?
Wol. My sovereign, I confess, your royal grace Shower'd on me daily, have been more than My studied purposes requite; which went Beyond all man's endeavours:—my endeavours
 Have ever come too short of my desires,
 Yet, fill'd with my abilities: Mine own ends
 Have been mine so, that evermore they pointed To the good of your most sacred person, and
 The profit of the state. For your great graces Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I
 Can nothing render but allegiant thanks;
 My prayers to heaven for you; my loyalty,
 Which ever has, and ever shall be growing,
 Till death, that winter, kill it.
K. Hen. Fairly answer'd;
 A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated: The honour of it
 Does pay the act of it; as, i' the contrary,
 The foulness is the punishment. I presume
 That, as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
 My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour
 On you, than any; so your hand, and heart,
 Your brain, and every function of your power,
 Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty
 As 't were in love's particular, be more
 To me, your friend, than any.
Wol. I do profess
 That for your highness' good I ever labour'd
 More than mine own; that am, have, and will be Though all the world should crack their oyes
 And throw it from their soul; though fables did Abound, as thick as thought could make them Appear in forms more horrid; yet my duty.

against the chiding flood,
 approach of this wild river break, drunken yours.

'T is nobly spoken :
 words, he has a loyal breast,
 seen him open 't.—Read o'er this ;
 [Giving him papers. and then to breakfast, with you have.
 NO, frowning upon CARDINAL WOLSEY :
 Nobles throng after him, smiling, and peering.

What should this mean ?
 anger 's this ? how have I reap'd it ?
 bring from me, as if ruin is eyes : so looks the chafed lion against huntsman that has gall'd him ;
 in nothing. I must read this paper :
 of his anger.—'T is so :
 undone me : 'T is the account of wealth I have drawn together ends ; indeed, to gain the popedom, ends in Rome. O negligence, fall by ! What cross devil his main secret in the packet
 ? Is there no way to cure this ?
 to beat this from his brains ?
 stir him strongly ; Yet I know to be right, in spite of fortune to set off again. What 's this—<sup>a</sup> To the live, with all the business lines. Nay then, farewell !

 the highest point of all my greatness :
 full meridian of my glory,
 my setting. I shall fall exhalation in the evening, to me more.

DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK, the CURRY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

the king's pleasure, cardinal : who coms you se great seal presently
 ; and to confine yourself
 , my lord of Winchester's, rather from his highness.

Stay, commission, lords ? words cannot carry rightly.

Who dare cross them,
 g's will from his mouth expressly ?
 find more than will, or words, to do it, malice,) know, officious lords, to deny it. Now I feel metal ye are moulded,—envy.
 follow my disgraces,
 and how sleek and wanton everything may bring my ruin !
 vicious courses, men of malice ;
 than warrant for them, and, no doubt, ed their fit rewards. That seal
 uch a violence, the king, or master,) with his own hand gave me :
 it, with the place and honours,
 , and, to confirm his goodness,
 as patent : Now, who 'll take it ?
 ag, that gave it.

It must be himself then.
 at a proud traitor, priest.

Proud lord, thou liest ;
 thy hours Surrey durst better
 t tongue than said so.

Thy ambition,

Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land
 Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law :
 The heads of all thy brother cardinals
 (With thee, and all thy best parts bound together)
 Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy !
 You sent me deputy for Ireland :
 Far from his succour, from the king, from all
 That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st him :
 Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,
 Absolv'd him with an axe.

Wol. This, and all else
 This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
 I answer is most false. The duke by law Found his deserts : how innocent I was
 From any private malice in his end,
 His noble jury and foul cause can witness.
 If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you,
 You have as little honesty as honour,
 That in the way of loyalty and truth
 Toward the king, my ever royal master,
 Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,
 And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my soul,
 Your long coat, priest, protects you ; thou shouldst feel
 My sword i' the life-blood of thee else.—My lords,
 Can ye endure to hear this arrogance ?
 And from this fellow ? If we live thus tamely
 To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet,
 Farewell nobility ; let his grace go forward,
 And dare us with his cap, like larks.

Wol. All goodness
 Is poison to thy stomach.

Sur. Yes, that goodness
 Of gleaning all the land's wealth into one,
 Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion ;
 The goodness of your intercepted packets,
 You writ to the pope, against the king : your goodness
 Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.
 My lord of Norfolk, as you are truly noble,
 As you respect the common good, the state
 Of our despis'd nobility, our issues,
 Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen,—
 Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles
 Collected from his life :—I 'll startle you
 Worse than the sacring bell, when the brown wench
 Lay kissing in your arms, lord cardinal.

Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise this
 man,

But that I am bound in charity against it !

Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the king's hand :

But, thus much, they are foul ones.

Wol. So much fairer,
 And spotless, shall mine innocence arise,
 When the king knows my truth.

Sur. This cannot save you :
 I thank my memory, I yet remember
 Some of these articles ; and out they shall.
 Now, if you can blush, and cry guilty, cardinal,
 You 'll show a little honesty.

Wol. Speak on, sir ;
 I dare your worst objections : if I blush,
 It is, to see a nobleman want manners.

Suf. I 'd rather want those than my head. Have at
 you.

First, that, without the king's assent or knowledge,
 You wrought to be a legate ; by which power
 You main'd the jurisdiction of all bishops.

Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or else
 To foreign princes, Ego et Rex meus
 Was still inscrib'd ; in which you brought the king
 To be your servant.

Suf. Then, that, without the knowledge
 Either of king or council, when you went

Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal.

Sur. Item, you sent a large commission
To Gregory de Cassalis, to conclude,
Without the king's will, or the state's allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara.

Suf. That, out of mere ambition, you have caus'd
Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin.

Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance,
(By what means got, I leave to your own conscience,)
To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities; to the mere undoing
Of all the kingdom. Many more there are:
Which, since they are of you, and odious,
I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. O my lord,
Press not a falling man too far; 't is virtue:
His faults lie open to the laws; let them,
Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see him
So little of his great self.

Sur. I forgive him.

Suf. Lord cardinal, the king's further pleasure is,— Because all those things, you have done of late
By your power legatine within this kingdom,
Fall into the compass of a præmunire,—
That therefore such a writ be sued against you;
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,
Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be
Out of the king's protection:—This is my charge.

Nor. And so we'll leave you to your meditations
How to live better. For your stubborn answer,
About the giving back the great seal to us,
The king shall know it, and, no doubt, shall thank you.
So fare you well, my little good lord cardinal.

[Ereunt all but WOLSEY.]

Wol. So farewell to the little good you bear me.
Farewell, a long farewell, to all my greatness!
This is the state of man: To-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hopes, to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him:
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost;
And,—when he thinks, good easy man, full surely
His greatness is a ripening,—nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur'd,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory;
But far beyond my depth: my high-blown pride
At length broke under me; and now has left me,
Weary, and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me.
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye;
I feel my heart new open'd: O, how wretched
Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours!
There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have;
And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.—

Enter CROMWELL, amazedly.

Why, how now, Cromwell?

Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.

Wol. What, amaz'd
At my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder
A great man should decline? Nay, an you weep,
I am fallen indeed.

Crom. How does your grace?

Wol. Why, well;
Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell.
I know myself now; and I feel within me
A peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience. The king has cur'd me,
I humbly thank his grace; and from these shoulders,

* Mere—absolute.

These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken
A load would sink a navy, too much honour
O, 't is a burden, Cromwell, 't is a burden,
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven.

Crom. I am glad your grace has made
of it.

Wol. I hope I have: I am able now, my (Out of a fortitude of soul I feel.)

To endure more miseries, and greater far,
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.
What news abroad?

Crom. The heaviest, and the
Is your displeasure with the king.

Wol. God bless

Crom. The next is, that sir Thomas More Lord chancellor in your place.

Wol. That's some
But he's a learned man. May he continue
Long in his highness' favour, and do justice
For truth's sake, and his conscience; that When he has run his course, and sleeps in May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on What more?

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with Install'd lord archbishop of Canterbury.

Wol. That's news indeed.

Crom. Last, that the
Whom the king hath in secrecy long marr'd
This day was view'd in open, as his queen
Going to chapel; and the voice is now
Only about her coronation.

Wol. There was the weight that pull'd Cromwell,

The king has gone beyond me; all my glory
In that one woman I have lost for ever:
No sun shall ever usher forth mine honour
Or gild again the noble troops that waited Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Cromwell,
I am a poor fallen man, unworthy now
To be thy lord and master: Seek the king
That sun, I pray, may never set! I have What, and how true thou art: he will add
Some little memory of me will stir him,
(I know his noble nature,) not to let Thy hopeful service perish too: Good Cromwell, Neglect him not; make use now, and provide
For thine own future safety.

Crom. O, my lord,

Must I then leave you? must I needs forego
So good, so noble, and so true a master?
Bear witness, all that have not hearts of iron,
With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord
The king shall have my service; but my part
For ever, and for ever, shall be yours.

Wol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed
In all my miseries; but thou hast forc'd me
Out of thy honest truth to play the woman.
Let's dry our eyes: and thus far hear me,
And,—when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And sleep in dull cold marble, where no more
Of me more must be heard of,—say, I taught
Say, Wolsey,—that once trod the ways of glory,
And sounded all the depths and shoals of hell,
Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise!
A sure and safe one, though thy master misdeed
Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me,
Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition!
By that sin fell the angels; how can man
The image of his Maker, hope to win by it!
Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee;
Corruption wins not more than honesty.

Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues. Be just, and Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's and truth's; then if thou fall'st, O Cromwell, a blessed martyr. Serve the king;

 thee, lead me in:
 an inventory of all I have,
 penny; 't is the king's: my robe, tegrity to heaven, is all call mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell,

Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal
 I serv'd my king, he would not in mine age
 Have left me naked to mine enemies.

Crom. Good sir, have patience.
Wol. So I have. Farewell!
 The hopes of court! my hopes in heaven do dwell.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Street in Westminster.

Enter Two Gentlemen, meeting.

You are well met once again.

And so are you.

You come to take your stand here, and behold

mine pass from her coronation?

'T is all my business. At our last encounter, of Buckingham came from his trial.

'T is very true: but that time offer'd sorrow;
 and joy.

'T is well: The citizens, have shown at full their royal minds,
 to have their rights, they are ever forward,
 in this day with shows,
 and sights of honour.

Never greater,
 assure you, better taken, sir.
 May I be bold to ask what that contains,
 in your hand?

Yes; 't is the list of the coronation.
 of Suffolk is the first, and claims steward; next, the duke of Norfolk, and marshal: you may read the rest.
 I thank you, sir; had I not known those customs,

we been beholding* to your paper.
 Tell you, what 's become of Katharine,
 the dowager? how goes her business?
 That I can tell you too. The archbishop try, accompanied with other of reverend fathers of his order, a court at Dunstable, six miles off thill, where the princess lay; to which she cited by them, but appear'd not:
 absent, for not appearance, and late scruple, by the main assent of learned men she was divorc'd, her marriage made of none effect:
 now, she was remov'd to Kimbolton, remains now, sick.

Alas, good lady!— [Trumpets.
 They stand: stand close, the queen is coming.

THE ORDER OF THE PROCESSION.

With flourish of Trumpets: then, enter, the Chancellor, with the purse and mace before the King, and the Duke of Suffolk singing.

[Music.
of London bearing the mace. Then Garter, his coat of arms, and, on his head, a gilt cop-er crown.

the Duke of Dorset, bearing a sceptre of gold, on his head a demi-coronal of gold. With him, the Earl of Surrey, bearing the rod of silver with the dove, crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of SS.

6. Duke of Suffolk, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high-steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head. Collars of SS.

7. A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports; under it, the Queen in her robe; in her hair richly adorned with pearl, crowned. On each side of her, the Bishops of London and Winchester.

8. The old Duchess of Norfolk, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the Queen's train.

9. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

2 Gent. A royal train, believe me.—These I know;—
 Who 's that that bears the sceptre?

1 Gent. Marquis Dorset:
 And that the earl of Surrey, with the rod.

2 Gent. A bold brave gentleman: and that should be
 The duke of Suffolk.

1 Gent. 'T is the same; high-steward.

2 Gent. And that my lord of Norfolk?

1 Gent. Yes.

2 Gent. Heaven bless thee!

[Looking on the QUEEN.

Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.—

Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel;
 Our king has all the Indies in his arms,
 And more, and richer, when he strains that lady;
 I cannot blame his conscience.

1 Gent. They that bear
 The cloth of honour over her, are four barons
 Of the Cinque-ports.

2 Gent. Those men are happy; and so are all, are near her.

I take it, she that carries up the train
 Is that old noble lady, duchess of Norfolk.

1 Gent. It is; and all the rest are countesses.

2 Gent. Their coronets say so. These are stars, in deed;

And, sometimes, falling ones.

1 Gent. No more of that.

[Exit Procession, with a great flourish of trumpets.

Enter a Third Gentleman.

God save you, sir! where have you been broiling?

3 Gent. Among the crowd in the abbey; where a finger
 Could not be wedg'd in more; I am stifled
 With the mere rankness of their joy.

2 Gent. You saw the ceremony?

3 Gent. That I did.

1 Gent. How was it?

3 Gent. Well worth the seeing.

2 Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.

3 Gent. As well as I am able. The rich stream
 Of lords, and ladies, having brought the queen

*—This is not a corrupt word, but one constantly written of Shakspeare's day. We have an example in his 'Great's Worth of Wit.'

To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off
A distance from her : while her grace sat down
To rest a while, some half an hour, or so,
In a rich chair of state, opposing freely
The beauty of her person to the people.
Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman
That ever lay by man : which when the people
Had the full view of, such a noise arose
As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest,
As loud, and to as many tunes : hats, cloaks,
Doublets, I think, flew up : and had their faces
Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy
I never saw before. Great-bellied women,
That had not half a week to go, like rams<sup>a</sup>
In the old time of war, would shake the press,
And make them reel before them. No man living
Could say, "This is my wife," there ; all were woven
So strangely in one piece.

2 Gent. But, what follow'd ?

3 Gent. At length her grace rose, and with modest paces
Came to the altar : where she kneel'd, and, saint-like,
Cast her fair eyes to heaven, and pray'd devoutly.
Then rose again, and bow'd her to the people :
When by the archbishop of Canterbury
She had all the royal makings of a queen ;
As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown,
The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems,
Laid nobly on her ; which perform'd, the choir,
With all the choicest music of the kingdom,
Together sung Te Deum. So she parted,
And with the same full state pac'd back again
To York-place, where the feast is held.

1 Gent. Sir,
You must no more call it York-place, that is past :
For, since the cardinal fell, that title 's lost ;
'T is now the king's, and call'd Whitehall.

3 Gent. I know it,
But 't is so lately alter'd, that the old name
Is fresh about me.

2 Gent. What two reverend bishops
Were those that went on each side of the queen ?

3 Gent. Stokesly and Gardiner ; the one, of Winchester,
(Newly prefer'd from the king's secretary.)
The other, London.

2 Gent. He of Winchester
Is held no great good lover of the archbishop's,
The virtuous Cranmer.

3 Gent. All the land knows that :
However, yet there 's no great breach ; when it comes,
Cranmer will find a friend will not shrink from him.

2 Gent. Who may that be, I pray you ?

3 Gent. Thomas Cromwell,
A man in much esteem with the king, and truly
A worthy friend.—The king
Has made him master o' the jewel-house,
And one, already, of the privy-council.

2 Gent. He will deserve more.
3 Gent. Yes, without all doubt Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which
Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests ;
Something I can command. As I walk thither,
I 'll tell ye more.

Both. You may command us, sir. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Kimbolton.

THARINE, Dowager, sick ; led between GRIF-FITH and PATIENCE.

How does your grace ?

O, Griffith, sick to death :
† laden branches, bow to the earth,

<sup>a</sup> Rams—battering-rams.

Willing to leave their burden : reach a chair—
So,—now, methinks, I feel a little ease.
Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou led'st me
That the great child of honour, cardinal Wolsey
Was dead ?

Grif. Yes, madam ; but I think your grace
Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to 't.

Kath. Prithce, good Griffith, tell me how he
If well, he stepp'd before me, happily,
For my example.

Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam :
For after the stout earl Northumberland
Arrested him at York, and brought him forward
(As a man sorely tainted) to his answer,
He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill,
He could not sit his mule.

Kath. Alas, poor man !

Grif. At last, with easy roads, he came to Le Lodg'd in the abbey ; where the reverend abbot
With all his convent, honourably receiv'd him ;
To whom he gave these words,—“ O father abbot,
An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye ;
Give him a little earth for charity !”
So went to bed : where eagerly his sickness
Pursued him still ; and, three nights after this,
About the hour of eight, (which he himself Foretold should be his last,) full of repentance,
Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,
He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest ; his faults lie gently Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak his
And yet with charity :—He was a man
Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking
Himself with princes ; one, that by suggestion
Tied all the kingdoms : simony was fair play ;
His own opinion was his law : 't the presence
He would say untruths ; and be ever double,
Both in his words and meaning : He was new
But where he meant to ruin, pitiful :
His promises were, as he then was, mighty ;
But his performance, as he is now, nothing.
Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.

Grif. Noble madam,
Men's evil manners live in brass ; their virtues
We write in water. May it please your highness
To hear me speak his good now ?

Kath. Yes, good Griffith,
I were malicious else.

Grif. This cardinal,
Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly
Was fashion'd to much honour from his cradle.
He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one ;
Exceeding wise, fair spoken, and persuading ;
Lofty, and sour, to them that lov'd him not ;
But, to those men that sought him, sweet as honey
And though he were unsatisfied in getting,
(Which was a sin,) yet in bestowing, madam,
He was most princely : Ever witness for him
Those twins of learning, that he rais'd in you,
Ipswich, and Oxford ! one of which fell with him
Unwilling to outlive the good that did it ;
The other, though unfinish'd, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtues.
His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him ;
For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little :
And, to add greater honours to his age
Than man could give him, he died fearing God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other weak
No other speaker of my living actions.

honour from corruption.
 honest chronicler as Griffith.
 it hated living, thou hast made me,
 icious truth, and modesty,
 shes honour: Peace be with him!
 near me still; and set me lower.
 ng to trouble thee.—Good Griffith, musicians play me that sad note cnell, whilst I sit meditating tial harmony I go to.

Sad and solemn music.

is asleep: Good wench, let's sit down
 t. ake her;—Softly, gentle Patience.

*Enter, solemnly tripping one after another Personages, clad in white robes, wearing ads garlands of bays, and golden vizards faces; branches of bays, or palm, in le. They first congee unto her, then d at certain changes, the first two hold a and over her head; at which, the other reverend curtsies; then the two that held d deliver the same to the other next two, ve the same order in their changes, and e garland over her head: which done, r the same garland to the last two, who hervee the same order: at which, (as it spiration,) she makes in her sleep signs of and holdeth up her hands to heaven: and e dancing vanish, carrying the garland
 . The music continues.*

its of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone?
 e here in wretchedness behind ye?
 lam, we are here.

It is not you I call for:
 enter, since I slept?

None, madam.
 ? Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop a banquet; whose bright faces
 d beams upon me, like the sun?
 'd me eternal happiness;
 : me garlands, Griffith, which I feel rthy yet to wear: I shall,

a most joyful, madam, such good dreams fancy.

Bid the music leave,
 sh and heavy to me. [Music ceases.]

Do you note,
 ver grace is alter'd on the sudden?
 e face is drawn? How pale she looks, rthy cold? Mark her eyes!
 is going, wench; pray, pray.
 Heaven comfort her!

Enter a Messenger.
 't like your grace,—

You are a saucy fellow:
 so more reverence?

You are to blame,
 e will not lose her wonted greatness,
 de behaviour: go to, kneel.
 umbly do entreat your highness' pardon;
 e me unmannerly: There is staying
 s, sent from the king, to see you.
 mit him entrance, Griffith: But this fellow
 : see again.

[Exeunt GRIFFITH and Messenger.]

Enter GRIFFITH, with CAPUCIUS.

If my sight fail not,

You should be lord ambassador from the emperor,
 My royal nephew, and your name Capucius.

Cap. Madam, the same, your servant.
Kath. O my lord,
 The times, and titles, now are alter'd strangely
 With me, since first you knew me. But, I pray you,
 What is your pleasure with me?

Cap. Noble lady,
 First, mine own service to your grace; the next,
 The king's request that I would visit you;
 Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me
 Sends you his princely commendations,
 And heartily entreats you take good comfort.

Kath. O my good lord, that comfort comes too late;

'T is like a pardon after execution:
 That gentle physic, given in time, had cur'd me;
 But now I am past all comforts here, but prayers.
 How does his highness?

Cap. Madam, in good health.

Kath. So may he ever do! and ever flourish.
 When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor name
 Banish'd the kingdom!—Patience, is that letter
 I caus'd you write, yet sent away?

Pat. No, madam. [Giving it to KATH.]

Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
 This to my lord the king.

Cap. Most willing, madam.

Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness
 The model of our chaste loves, his young daughter:
 The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings on her!—
 Beseeching him, to give her virtuous breeding;

(She is young, and of a noble modest nature:
 I hope, she will deserve well;) and a little
 To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd him, Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor petition
 Is, that his noble grace would have some pity

Upon my wretched women, that so long
 Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully:
 Of which there is not one, I dare avow,
 (And now I should not lie,) but will deserve,
 For virtue, and true beauty of the soul,
 For honesty, and decent carriage,
 A right good husband, let him be a noble;

And, sure, those men are happy that shall have them.
 The last is, for my men;—they are the poorest,
 But poverty could never draw them from me;—
 That they may have their wages duly paid them,
 And something over to remember me by;

If heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer life,
 And able means, we had not parted thus.

These are the whole contents:—And, good my lord,
 By that you love the dearest in this world,
 As you wish christian peace to souls departed,
 Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the king
 To do me this last right.

Cap. By heaven, I will;

Or let me lose the fashion of a man!

Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember me
 In all humility unto his highness:

Say, his long trouble now is passing
 Out of this world: tell him, in death I bless'd him,
 For so I will.—Mine eyes grow dim.—Farewell,
 My lord.—Griffith, farewell.—Nay, Patience,
 You must not leave me yet. I must to bed;
 Call in more women.—When I am dead, good wench,
 Let me be us'd with honour; strew me over
 With maiden flowers, that all the world may know
 I was a chaste wife to my grave: embalm me,
 Then lay me forth: although unqueen'd, yet like
 A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me.
 I can no more. [Exeunt, leading KATH.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Gallery in the Palace.

Enter GARDINER, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a torch before him, met by SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?

Boy. It hath struck.

Gar. These should be hours for necessities,
Not for delights; times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us
To waste these times.—Good hour of night, sir Thomas!
Whither so late?

Lov. Came you from the king, my lord?

Gar. I did, sir Thomas; and left him at primero
With the duke of Suffolk.

Lov. I must to him too,
Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave.

Gar. Not yet, sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter?

It seems you are in haste; an if there be
No great offence belongs to't, give your friend
Some touch of your late business: Affairs that walk
(As, they say, spirits do) at midnight, have
In them a wilder nature, than the business
That seeks despatch by day.

Lov. My lord, I love you;
And durst commend a secret to your ear
Much weightier than this work. The queen's in labour,
They say, in great extremity; and fear'd,
She'll with the labour end.

Gar. The fruit she goes with,
I pray for heartily; that it may find
Good time, and live: but for the stock, sir Thomas,
I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Methinks, I could Cry the amen; and yet my conscience says
She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, sir, sir,—
Hear me, sir Thomas: You are a gentleman
Of mine own way; I know you wise, religious;
And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well,—
'T will not, sir Thomas Lovell, take't of me,— Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she,
Sleep in their graves.

Lov. Now, sir, you speak of two
The most remark'd i'the kingdom. As for Cromwell,— Beside that of the jewel-house, he's made master
O' the rolls, and the king's secretary; further, sir,
Stands in the gap and trade<sup>a</sup> of more preferments,
With which the time will load him: The archbishop
Is the king's hand and tongue: And who dare speak
One syllable against him?

Gar. Yes, yes, sir Thomas,
There are that dare; and I myself have ventur'd
To speak my mind of him: and, indeed, this day, Sir, (I may tell it you,) I think I have Insens'd the lords o' the council, that he is (For so I know he is, they know he is)
A most arch heretic, a pestilence
That does infect the land: with which they mov'd,
Have broken with<sup>b</sup> the king; who hath so far Given ear to our complaint, (of his great grace
And princely care, foreseeing those fell mischiefs
Our reasons laid before him,) he hath commanded,
To-morrow morning to the council-board

<sup>b</sup>—communicated with. So in the 'Two Gentlemen':—

'I am to break with thee of some affairs.'

He be convented.<sup>a</sup> He's a rank weed, sir
And we must root him out. From your
I hinder you too long: good night, sir Thomas.

Lov. Many good nights, my lord; I want. [Exeunt GARDINER

As LOVELL is going out, enter the KING
DUKE OF SUFFOLK.

K. Hen. Charles, I will play no more to My mind's not on't, you are too hard for

K. Hen. But little, Charles;

What you commanded me, but by her w
I sent your message; who return'd her th

Most heartily to pray for her.

K. Hen. What say'st

To pray for her? what, is she crying out?
Lov. So said her woman; and that her su

K. Hen. Alas, good lad

Suf. God safely quit her of her burden,
With gentle travail, to the gladdening of
Your highness with an heir!

K. Hen. 'T is midnight

Prithee to bed; and in thy prayers remember
The estate of my poor queen. Leave me
For I must think of that, which company
Will not be friendly to.

Suf. I wish your highness

A quiet night, and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

K. Hen. Charles, good night.

Enter SIR ANTHONY DENNY.

Well, sir, what follows?

Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the
As you commanded me.

K. Hen. Ha! Canterbury

Den. Ay, my good lord.

K. Hen. 'T is true: Where is Cran. I am fearful:—Wherefore frowns

K. Hen. How now, my lord? You do
Wherefore I sent for you.

Cran. It is my duty

To attend your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Pray you

My good and gracious lord of Canterbury,
Come, you and I must walk a turn together
I have news to tell you: Come, come, give

And am right sorry to repeat what follows:
I have, and most unwillingly, of late sire your answer, you must take o you, and be well contented onse our Tower: You a brother of us, succeed, or else no witness ainst you.

I humbly thank your highness;
lad to catch this good occasion to be winnow'd, where my chaff fly asunder: for, I know unds under more calumnious tongues poor man.

Stand up, good Canterbury;
thy integrity, is rooted
I: Give me thy hand, stand up;
ilk. Now, by my holy-dame,
f man are you? My lord, I look'd given me your petition, that en some pains to bring together ur accusers; and to have heard you nce further.

Most dread liege,
d on is my truth and honesty;
l, I, with mine enemies,
er my person; which I weigh not, irtues vacant. I fear nothing
d against me.

Know you not stands i' the world, with the whole world?
e many, and not small; their practices me proportion; and not ever the truth o' the question carries erdict with it: At what ease inds procure knaves as corrupt t you? such things have been done.
oppos'd; and with a malice

When you of better luck,
s'd witness, than your master,
you are, whiles here he liv'd dy earth? Go to, go to;
pice for no leap of danger,
wn destruction.

God, and your majesty,
sistence, or I fall into for me!

Be of good cheer;
ore prevail, than we give way to.
you; and this morning see efore them; if they shall chance, with matters, to commit you,
ions to the contrary
and with what vehemency ill instruct you: if entreaties no remedy, this ring
d your appeal to us
re them.—Look, the good man weeps!
mine honour. God's blest mother!
e-hearted; and a soul
y kingdom.—Get you gone,
e hid you.—[Exit CRANMER] He has el his tears.

Enter an old Lady.

[L.] Come back. What mean you?
t come back; the tidings that I bring oldness manners.—Now, good angels
I head, and shade thy person et wings!

K. Hen. Now, by thy looks
I guess thy message. Is the queen deliver'd?
Say, ay; and of a boy.

Lady. Ay, ay, my liege,
And of a lovely boy: The God of heaven
Both now and ever bless her—'t is a girl,
Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger; 't is as like you
As cherry is to cherry.

K. Hen. Lovell,—

Enter LOVELL.

Lov. Sir.

K. Hen. Give her an hundred marks. I 'll to the queen. [Exit KING.]

Lady. An hundred marks! By this light, I 'll have more.

An ordinary groom is for such payment.
I will have more, or scold it out of him.
Said I for this the girl is like to him?
I will have more, or else unsay 't; and now
While it is hot, I 'll put it to the issue. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Lobby before the Council-Chamber.

Enter CRANMER; Servants, Door-Keeper, &c., attending.

Cran. I hope I am not too late; and yet the gentle-
man,
That was sent to me from the council, pray'd me
To make great haste. All fast? what means this?— Hoo!

Who waits there?—Sure, you know me?

D. Keep. Yes, my lord;

But yet I cannot help you.

Cran. Why?

D. Keep. Your grace must wait till you be call'd for

Enter Doctor BUTTS.

Cran. So.

Butts. This is a piece of malice. I am glad,
I came this way so happily: The king
Shall understand it presently. [Exit BUTTS.]

Cran. [Aside.] 'T is Butts,
The king's physician; as he pass'd along,
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me!
Pray heaven, he sound not my disgrace! For certain,
This is of purpose laid by some that hate me,
(God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice.)
To quench mine honour: they would shame to make me
Wait else at door; a fellow-counsellor,
Among boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their pleasures
Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter, at a window above, the KING and BUTTS.

Butts. I 'll show your grace the strangest sight,—

K. Hen. What 's that, Butts?

Butts. I think your highness saw this many a day.

K. Hen. Body o' me, where is it?

Butts. There, my lord:

The high promotion of his grace of Canterbury;
Who holds his state at door, 'mongst pursuivants,
Pages, and footboys.

K. Hen. Ha! 'T is he, indeed:

Is this the honour they do one another?
'T is well there's one above them yet. I had thought
They had parted* so much honesty among them,
(At least, good manners,) as not thus to suffer
A man of his place, and so near our favour,
To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures,
And at the door too, like a post with packets.
By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery;
Let them alone, and draw the curtain close;
We shall bear more anon. [Exeunt.]

* Parted—squared.

The Council-Chamber.

Enter the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Suffolk, Earl of Surrey, Lord Chamberlain, Gardiner, and Cromwell. The Chancellor places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand; a seat being left void above him, as for the Archbishop of Canterbury. The rest seat themselves in order on each side. Cromwell at the lower end, as secretary.

Chan. Speak to the business, master secretary : Why are we met in council ?

Crom. Please your honours, The chief cause concerns his grace of Canterbury.

Gar. Has he had knowledge of it ?

Crom. Yes.

Nor. Who waits there ?

D. Keep. Without, my noble lords ?

Gar. Yes.

D. Keep. My lord archbishop ;

and has done half an hour, to know your pleasures.

Chan. Let him come in.

D. Keep. Your grace may enter now.

[Cranmer approaches the council-table.

Chan. My good lord archbishop, I am very sorry To sit here at this present, and behold That chair stand empty : But we all are men, In our own natures frail, and capable Of our flesh ; few are angels : out of which frailty, And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us, Have misdeem'd yourself, and not a little, Toward the kin first, then his laws, in filling The whole realm, by your teaching and your chaplains, (For so we are inform'd,) with new opinions, Divers and dangerous ; which are heresies, And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious.

Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too, My noble lords : for those that tame wild horses Pace them not in their hands to make them gentle ; But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur them, Till they obey the manage. If we suffer (Out of our easiness, and childish pity To one man's honour) this contagious sickness, Farewell, all physic ; and what follows then ? Commotions, uproars, with a general taint Of the whole state : as, of late days, our neighbours, The upper Germany, can dearly witness, Yet freshly pitied in our memories.

Cran. My good lords, hitherto, in all the progress Both of my life and office, I have labour'd, And with no little study, that my teaching, And the strong course of my authority, Might go one way, and safely ; and the end Was ever to do well : nor is there living (I speak it with a single heart, my lords) A man that more detests, more stirs against, Both in his private conscience and his place, Defacers of a public peace, than I do. Pray heaven the king may never find a heart With less allegiance in it ! Men, that make Envy, and crooked malice, nourishment, Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships, That, in this case of justice, my accusers, Be what they will, may stand forth face to face, And freely urge against me.

Suf. Nay, my lord, That cannot be ; you are a counsellor, And, by that virtue, no man dare accuse you.

Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment,

We will be short with you. 'T is his highness' pleasure, And our consent, for better trial of you, From hence you be committed to the Tower, Where, being but a private man again,

You shall know many dare accuse you boldly, More than, I fear, you are provided for.

Cran. Ah, my good lord of Winchester, I think You are always my good friend ; if your will pass, I shall both find your lordship judge and juror, You are so merciful : I see your end, 'T is my undoing : Love and meekness, lord, Become a churchman better than ambition ; Win straying souls with modesty again, Cast none away. That I shall clear myself, Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience, I make as little doubt, as you do conscience, In doing daily wrongs. I could say more, But reverence to your calling makes me modest.

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary, That's the plain truth ; your painted gloss deceives

To men that understand you, words and weakness. Crom. My lord of Winchester, you are a little, By your good favour, too sharp ; men so noble, However faulty, yet should find respect For what they have been : 't is a cruelty, To load a falling man.

Gar. Good master secretary, I cry your honour mercy ; you may, worst Of all this table, say so.

Crom. Why, my lord ?

Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer Of this new sect ? ye are not sound.

Crom. Not sound ?

Gar. Not sound, I say.

Crom. 'Would you were half so honest !

Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears.

Gar. I shall remember this bold language.

Crom. Ha.

Remember your bold life too.

Chan. This is too much ;

Forbear, for shame, my lords.

Gar. I have done.

Crom. And I.

Chan. Then thus for you, my lord,—It stands agreed

I take it, by all voices, that forthwith

You be conveyed to the Tower a prisoner ;

There to remain, till the king's further pleasure

Be known unto us : Are you all agreed, lords ?

All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,

But I must needs to the Tower, my lords ?

Gar. What else ?

Would you expect ? You are strangely troublesome.

Let some o' the guard be ready there.

Enter Guard.

Cran. For me !

Must I go like a traitor thither ?

Gar. Receive him,

And see him safe i' the Tower.

Cran. Stay, good my lord,

I have a little yet to say. Look there, my lords,

By virtue of that ring, I take my cause

Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it

To a most noble judge, the king my master.

Chan. This is the king's ring.

Suf. 'T is no counterfeit.

Suf. 'T is the right ring, by heaven : I told you

When we first put this dangerous stoue a rolling,

SCENE III.—The Palace Yard.

Noise and tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals; Do you take the court for Paris-garden? ye rude slaves, leave your gaping.*

[Within.] Good master porter, I belong to the larder.

Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, you rogue: Is this a place to roar in?—Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones; these are but switches to them.—I'll scratch your heads: You must be seeing christenings? Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals?

Man. Pray, sir, be patient; 't is as much impossible
(Unless we sweep them from the door with cannons)
To scatter them, as 't is to make them sleep

On May-day morning; which will never be:
We may as well push against Paul's, as stir them.

Port. How got they in, and be hang'd?

Man. Alas, I know not; How gets the tide in?

As much as one sound cudgel of four foot
(You see the poor remainder) could distribute,
I made no spare, sir.

Port. You did nothing, sir.

Man. I am not Samson, nor sir Guy, nor Colbrand, to mow them down before me: but, if I spare any that had a head to hit, either young or old, he or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker, let me never hope to see a chine again; and that I would not for a cow, God save her.

[Within.] Do you hear, master porter?

Port. I shall be with you presently, good master puppy.—Keep the door close, sirrah.

Man. What would you have me do?

Port. What should you do, but knock them down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? Bless me, what a fry of fornication is at door! On my christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand;
here will be father, godfather, and all together.

Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog-days now reign in's nose; all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other penance: That fire-drake<sup>b</sup> did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me; he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her pink'd porringer fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I mis'd the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out, clubs!
when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope of the Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on; I made good my place; at length they came to the broomstaff to me; I defied them still; when suddenly a file of boys behind them, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let them win the work: The devil was amongst them, I think, surely.

Port. These are the youths that thunder at a playhouse, and fight for bitten apples; that no audience, but the Tribulation of Tower-hill, or the limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of them in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days; besides the running banquet of two beattles, that is to come.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here! They grow still too, from all parts they are coming, As if we kept a fair here! Where are these porters, These lazy knaves?—Ye have made a fine hand, fellows. There 's a trim rabble let in: Are all these Your faithful friends o' the suburbs? We shall have Great store of room, no doubt, left for the ladies, When they pass back from the christening.

Port. An 't please your honour We are but men; and what so many may do, Not being torn a pieces, we have done: An army cannot rule them.

Port. Make way there for the princess.

Man. You great fellow, stand close up, or I 'll make your head ache.

Port. You i' the camblet, get up o' the rail; I 'll pick you o'er the pales else. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Palace.

*Enter trumpets, sounding; then Two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, Garter, CRANMER, DUKE OF NORFOLK, with his marshal's staff, DUKE OF SUFFOLK, Two Noblemen bearing great standing bowls for the christening gifts; then Four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the DUCHESS OF NORFOLK, godmother, bearing the child richly habited in a mantle, &c. ## INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

'ROMEO AND JULIET' was first printed in the year 1597. The second edition was printed in 1599. The title of that edition declares it to be "Newly corrected, augmented, and amended." There can be no doubt whatever that the corrections, augmentations, and emendations were those of the author. We know of nothing in literary history more curious or more instructive than the example of minute attention, as well as consummate skill, exhibited by Shakspeare in correcting, augmenting, and amending the first copy of this play.

"Of the truth of Juliet's story, they (the Veronese) seem teracious to a degree, insisting on the fact—giving a date (1303), and showing a tomb. It is a plain, open, and partly decayed sarcophagus, with withered leaves in it, in a wild and desolate conventual garden, once a cemetery, now ruined to the very graves. The situation struck me as very appropriate to the legend, being blighted as their love." Byron thus described the tomb of Juliet to his friend Moore, as he saw it at the close of autumn, when withered leaves had dropped into the decayed sarcophagus, and the vines that are trailed above it had been stripped of their fruit. His letter to Moore, in which this passage occurs, is dated the 7th November. But this wild and desolate garden only struck Byron as appropriate to the legend—to that simple tale of fierce hatreds and fatal loves which tradition has still preserved, amongst those who may never have read Luigi da Porto or Bandello, the Italian romancers who give the tale, and who, perhaps, never heard the name of Shakspeare. To the legend only is the blighted place appropriate. For who that has ever been thoroughly imbued with the story of Juliet, as told by Shakspeare,—who that has heard his "glorious song of praise on that inexpressible feeling which ennoble the soul and gives to it its highest sublimity, and which elevates even the senses themselves into soul,"*—who that, in our great poet's matchless delineation of Juliet's love, has perceived "whatever is most intoxicating in the odour of a southern spring, languishing in the song of the nightingale, or voluptuous on the first opening of the rose," †—who, indeed, that looks upon the tomb of the Juliet of Shakspeare, can see only a shapeless ruin amidst wildness and desolation?

"—— A grave? O, no, a lantern,
For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes
This vault a feasting presence full of light."

In 'Romeo and Juliet' the principle of limiting the pathetic according to the degree in which it is calculated to produce emotions of pleasure, is interwoven with the whole structure and conduct of the play. The tragical part of the story, from the first scene to the last, is held in subjection to the beautiful. It is not only that the beautiful comes to the relief of the tragic, as in 'Lear' and 'Othello,' but here the tragic is only a mode of exhibiting the beautiful under its most striking aspects. Shakspeare never intended that the story of 'Romeo and Juliet' should lacerate the heart. When Mrs. Inchbald, therefore, said, in her preface to the acted play, "'Romeo and Juliet' is called a pathetic tragedy, but it is a reality—it charms the understanding and the imagination, without melting, though it touches the heart,"—she paid the highest tribute to Shakspeare's skill as an artist, for he had thus worked out his own idea.

Coleridge has described the homogeneous totality of interest—which is the great characteristic of this play, by one of those beautiful analogies which could only proceed from the pen of a true poet.

"Whence arises the harmony that strikes the eye in the wildest natural landscapes,—in the relative positions of rocks, the harmony of colours in the hues of the lichens, the leaves of the beech and the stems and rich brown branches of the birch, the mountain trees, varying from verging autumn to the turning spring,—compared with the visual effect of the greater number of artificial plantations, and the result is this, that the natural landscape is effected, not by a single energy modified ab intra in each element part. And, as this is the particular example of the Shaksperian drama generally, so is it characteristic of the 'Romeo and Juliet.'"*

Schlegel carried out the proofs of this Essay on 'Romeo and Juliet'; † in which, in his own words, he "went through the whole of the play, and demonstrated the inward connection of each with reference to the whole; showed the particular circle of characters and relations around the two lovers; explained the signs of the mirth here and there scattered; and justified the use of the occasional heightening given to the colours." ‡ Schlegel wisely did this to exhibit more remarkably in Shakspeare than in any other poet "the thorough formation of a work, even in the minutest part, according to a leading idea—the animating spirit over all the mechanism." § The general criticism of Schlegel upon 'Romeo and Juliet' is based upon a perfect comprehension of this great principle upon which Shakspeare has written. The following is the close of a celebrated passage in 'Romeo and Juliet,' which has often been quoted as it is altogether so true and so beautiful, that it resists the pleasure of circulating it still more.

"Whatever is most intoxicating in the odour of a southern spring, languishing in the song of the nightingale, or voluptuous on the first opening of the rose, breathed into this poem. But, even more than the earliest blossoms of youth and beauty decay on from the first timidly-bold declaration of love and modest return, to the most unlimited passion and irrevocable union; then, amidst alternating rapture and despair, to the death of the two lovers, still appear enviable as their love survives them, and by their death they have obtained a triumph over the separating power. The sweetest and the bitterest, and hatred, festivity and dark forebodings, embraces and sepulchres, the fulness of life and the void of desolation, are all here brought close to each other, and all these contrasts are so blended in the harmonious and wonderful work into a unity of impression, that which the whole leaves behind in the mind is a single but endless sigh." ||

ACTING THE GREATER PART OF THE PLAY, IN VERONA; ONCE (IN THE FIFTH ACT) AT MANTUA.

PROLOGUE.

Beholds, both alike in dignity,
Two households, whose feud breeds
In Verona, where we lay our scene,
Ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Which civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
The fatal loins of these two foes
From star-cross'd lovers take their life;
The death-mark'd love-bonds which their Disadvantage's piteous overthrows
Do with their death bury their parents' strife.

The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;
The which if you with patient ears attend,
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A public Place.

MONTAGUE and GREGORY, armed with swords and bucklers.
Greg. O' my word, we'll not carry coals.
Mont. Then we should be colliers.
Greg. Ay, if we be in choler, we'll draw.
Mont. If you live, draw your neck out of the collar.
Greg. I'll not draw you out of the collar, being moved.
Mont. You are not quickly moved to strike.
Greg. I'll strike you, if the house of Montague moves me.
Mont. It was not till you said so, that my coals was to submit to servile offices.

Gre. To move is to stir; and to be valiant, is to stand; therefore, if thou art moved, thou runn'st away.
Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.
Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.
Sam. True; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall:—therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.
Gre. The quarrel is between our masters, and us their men.
Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant:
2 O

when I have fought with the men, I will be civil with the maids, and cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids?

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maiden-heads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Gre. They must take it sense, that feel it.

Sam. Me they shall feel, while I am able to stand; and 't is known I am a pretty piece of flesh.

Gre. 'T is well, thou art not fish; if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor John.* Draw thy tool; here comes of the house of Montagues.

Enter ABRAM and BALTHASAR.

Sam. My naked weapon is out; quarrel, I will back thee.

Gre. How? turn thy back, and run?

Sam. Fear me not.

Gre. No, marry: I fear thee!

Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin.

Gre. I will frown, as I pass by; and let them take it as they list.

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. Is the law of our side, if I say—ay?

Gre. No.

Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir; but I bite my thumb, sir.

Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?

Abr. Quarrel, sir? no, sir.

Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you; I serve as good a man as you.

Abr. No better.

Sam. Well, sir.

Enter BENVOLIO, at a distance.

Gre. Say—better; here comes one of my master's kinsmen.

Sam. Yes, better.

Abr. You lie.

Sam. Draw, if you be men.—Gregory, remember thy swashing blow.<sup>b</sup>

Ben. Part, fools; put up your swords; you know not what you do. [They fight.]

[Beats down their swords.]

Enter TYBALT.

Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?

Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace; put up thy sword, Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What, draw, and talk of peace? I hate the word,

As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee:

Have at thee, coward. [They fight.]

Enter several partisans of both houses, who join the fray; then enter Citizens, with clubs.

Cit. Clubs, bills, and partisans! strike! beat them down!

Down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues!

Enter CAPULET, in his gown; and LADY CAPULET.

Cap. What noise is this?—Give me my long sword, ho!

La. Cap. A crutch, a crutch!—Why call you for a sword?

Cap. My sword, I say!—Old Montague is come, And flourishes his blade in spite of me.

* Poor John—bake, dried and salted.

<sup>b</sup> The swashing blow was a blow upon the buckler.

Enter MONTAGUE and LADY MONTAGUE.

Mon. Thou villain Capulet,—Hold me not, let

La. Mon. Thou shalt not stir a foot to seek a

Enter PRINCE, with Attendants.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace, Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel,—

Will they not hear?—what ho! you men, you boys!

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage With purple fountains issuing from your veins

On pain of torture, from those bloody hands Throw your mistemper'd weapons to the ground

And hear the sentence of your moved prince. Three civil broils, bred of an airy word,

By thee, old Capulet, and Montague, Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets;

And made Verona's ancient citizens Cast by their grave beseeching ornaments,

To wield old partisans, in hands as old, Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate

If ever you disturb our streets again, Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.

For this time, all the rest depart away: You, Capulet, shall go along with me;

And, Montague, come you this afternoon, To know our farther pleasure in this case,

To old Free-town, our common judgment-place. Once more, on pain of death, all men depart.

[Exeunt PRINCE and Attendants; CAPULET, CAPULET, TYBALT, Citizens, and Servants.]

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroad? Speak, nephew, were you by, when it began?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary And yours, close fighting ere I did approach:

I drew to part them; in the instant came The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd;

Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears, He swung about his head, and cut the winds,

Who, nothing hurt withal, hiss'd him in scorn: While we were interchanging thrusts and blows,

Came more and more, and fought on part and part Till the prince came, who parted either part.

La. Mon. O, where is Romeo?—saw you his last night? Right glad am I, he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd Peer'd forth the golden window of the east,

A troubled mind drove me to walk abroad; Where, underneath the grove of sycamore,

That westward rooteth from this city's side, So early walking did I see your son:

Towards him I made; but he was 'ware of me, And stole into the covert of the wood:

I, measuring his affections by my own,— That most are busied when they are most alone,—

Pursued my humour, not pursuing his, And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen, With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,

Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs; But all so soon as the all-cheering sun

Should in the farthest east begin to draw The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,

Away from light steals home my heavy son, And private in his chamber pens himself;

Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out, And makes himself an artificial night:

Black and portentous must this humour prove, Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

Mon. I neither know it, nor can learn of him.

Ben. Have you importun'd him by any means?

Mon. Both by myself, and many others, friends But he, his own affections' counsellor,

—I will not say, how true—
 if so secret and so close,
 sounding and discovery,
 d bit with an envious worm,
 pread his sweet leaves to the air,
 his beauty to the sun.
 t learn from whence his sorrows grow, s willingly give cure, as know.

Enter ROMEO, at a distance.

where he comes : So please you, step aside ;
 is grievance, or be much denied.
 ould thou wert so happy by thy stay,
 shrift.—Come, madam, let 's away.

[Exit MONTAGUE and Lady.
d morrow, cousin.

Is the day so young?
 new struck nine.

Al me ! sad hours seem long.
 y father that went hence so fast ?
 s :—What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours ?
 t having that, which, having, makes them rt.

ove ?
 t—
 ove ?
 t of her favour, where I am in love.
 s, that love, so gentle in his view,
 tyrannous and rough in proof !
 s, that love, whose view is muffled still,
 out eyes, see pathways to his will !
 we dine ?—O me !—What fray was here ?
 not, for I have heard it all.
 s to do with hate, but more with love :—
 ) brawling love ! O loving hate !
 of nothing first created !
 stress ! serious vanity !
 chaos of well-seeming forms !
 ad, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health !
 sleep, that is not what it is !— d I, that feel no love in this.
 t laugh ?

No, coz, I rather weep.
 el heart, at what ?
 At thy good heart's oppression.
 y, such is love's transgression.—
 ne own lie heavy in my breast ;
 wilt propagate, to have it press'd
 f thine : this love, that thou hast shown, ore grief to too much of mine own.
 like made with the fume of sighs ;
 I, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes ;
 a sea nourish'd with loving tears :
 ise ? a madness most discreet,
 all, and a preserving sweet.

y coz. [ Going.
 Soft, I will go along ;
 ave me so, you do me wrong.
 t, I have lost myself ; I am not here ;
 Romeo, be 's some other where.
 me in sadness, who is that you love.
 at, shall I groan, and tell thee ?
 Groan ? why, no ;
 ll me, who.
 I a sick man in sadness make his will :— urg'd to one that is so ill !—
 cousin, I do love a woman.
 m'd so near, when I suppos'd you lov'd.
 ght good marksman !—And she 's fair I love.
 ight fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit.
 dI, in that hit, you miss : she 'll not be hit
 's arrow, she hath Dian's wit ;
 ng proof of chastity well arm'd,
 weak childish bow she lives unarm'd.

She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
 Nor bide the encounter of assailing eyes,
 Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold :
 O, she is rich in beauty ; only poor
 That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store.<sup>a</sup>

Ben. Then she hath sworn, that she will still live chaste ?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste,
 For beauty, starv'd with her severity,
 Cuts beauty off from all posterity.
 She is too fair, too wise, wisely too fair,
 To merit bliss by making me despair :
 She hath forsworn to love ; and, in that vow,
 Do I live dead, that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be rul'd by me, forget to think of her.

Rom. O teach me how I should forget to think.

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes ;
 Examine other beauties.

Rom. 'T is the way
 To call hers, exquisite, in question more :
 These happy masks, that kiss fair ladies' brows,
 Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair ;
 He that is stricken blind, cannot forget
 The precious treasure of his eyesight lost :
 Show me a mistress that is passing fair,
 What doth her beauty serve, but as a note
 Where I may read, who pass'd that passing fair ?
 Farewell : thou canst not teach me to forget.

Ben. I 'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt.
 [ Exit.

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter CAPULET, PARIS, and Servant.

Cap. And 's Montague is bound as well as I,
 In penalty alike ; and 't is not hard, I think,
 For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both ;
 And pity 't is, you liv'd at odds so long.
 But now, my lord, what say you to my suit ?

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before :
 My child is yet a stranger in the world,
 She hath not seen the change of fourteen years ;
 Let two more summers wither in their pride,
 Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made.
Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early made.

Earth hath swallow'd all my hopes but she,
 She is the hopeful lady of my earth.<sup>b</sup>
 But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
 My will to her consent<sup>c</sup> is but a part ;
 An she agree, within her scope of choice
 Lies my consent and fair according voice.
 This night I hold an old accustom'd feast,
 Whereto I have invited many a guest,
 Such as I love ; and you, among the store,
 One more, most welcome, makes my number more.
 At my poor house, look to behold this night
 Earth-treading stars, that make dark heaven light :
 Such comfort, as do lusty young men feel
 When well apparell'd April on the heel
 Of limping winter treads, even such delight
 Among fresh female buds shall you this night
 Inherit at my house ; hear all, all see,
 And like her most, whose merit most shall be :

<sup>a</sup> The scene ends here in (A) ; and the three first lines in the next scene are also wanting. (B) has them.

<sup>b</sup> so (D). The folio omits And.

<sup>c</sup> Lady of my earth. File de terre being the French phrase for an heiress, Steevens thinks that Capulet speaks of Juliet in this sense ; but Shakspeare uses earth for the mortal part, as in the 146th Sonnet :—

" Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth."

<sup>d</sup> My will to her consent. In proportion to, or with reference to, her consent.

Which on more view of many, mine, being one,
May stand in number, though in reckoning none.
Come, go with me;—Go, sirrah, trudge about
Through fair Verona; find those persons out, Whose names are written there, [gives a paper.] and to them say,

My house and welcome on their pleasure stay.

[Exeunt CAPULET and PARIS.]

Serv. Find them out, whose names are written here?
It is written—that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets; but I am sent to find those persons, whose names are writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned:—In good time.

Enter BENVOLIO and ROMEO.

Ben. Tut, man! one fire burns out another's burning,
One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish;
Turn giddy, and be holp by backward turning;
One desperate grief cures with another's languish:
Take thou some new infection to the eye,
And the rank poison of the old will die.

Rom. Your plaitain-leaf is excellent for that.

Ben. For what, I pray thee?

Rom. For your broken shin.

Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?
Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is:
Shut up in prison, kept without my food,
Whipp'd, and tormented, and—Good-e'en, good fellow.

Serv. God gi' good e'en.—I pray, sir, can you read?

Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery.

Serv. Perhaps you have learn'd it without book:

But I pray, can you read anything you see?

Rom. Ay, in I know the letters, and the language.

Serv. Ye say honestly; Rest you merry!

Rom. Stay, fellow: I can read.

[Reads.]

*Signor Martino, and his wife and daughters;
County Anselme, and his beauteous sisters; the lady widow of Vitruvio; Signor Placentio, and his lovely nieces; Mercutio, and his brother Valentine; Mine uncle Capulet, his wife, and daughters; My fair niece Rosaline; Livia; Signor Valerio, and his cousin Tybalt; Lucio, and the lively Helena.*

A fair assembly; [gives back the note.] Whither should they come?

Serv. Up.

Rom. Whither to supper?

Serv. To our house.

Rom. Whose house?

Serv. My master's.

Rom. Indeed, I should have ask'd you that before.

Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking: My master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crush a cup of wine.
Rest you merry. [Exit.]

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's

Sups the fair Rosaline, whom thou so lov'st;

With all the admired beauties of Verona:

Go thither: and, with unattainted eye,

Compare her face with some that I shall show,

And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.

Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye

Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires!

And these,—who, often drown'd, could never die,—

Transparent heretics, be burnt for liars!

One fairer than my love! the all-seeing sun

Ne'er saw her match, since first the world begun.

Ben. Tut! you saw her fair, none else being by,

Herself pois'd with herself in either eye:

But in that crystal scales,<sup>a</sup> let there be weigh'd

You lady's love against some other maid

<sup>a</sup> Scales—used as a singular noun.

That I will show you, shining at this feast,
And she shall scant show well, that now shows
Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown
But to rejoice in splendour of mine own. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter LADY CAPULET and NURSE.

La. Cap. Nurse, where 's my daughter?
Nurse, I have not seen her forth to me.

Nurse. Now by my maidenhead,—at twelve old,—

I bade her come.—What, lamb! what, lady-like?
God forbid!—where 's this girl?—what, Juliet!

Enter JULIET.

Jul. How now, who calls?

Nurse. Your mother.

Jul. Madam, I am here.

What is your will?

La. Cap. This is the matter:—Nurse, give awhile,

We must talk in secret.—Nurse, come back again:
I have remember'd me, thou shalt hear our cousin
Thou know'st, my daughter 's of a pretty age.

Nurse. Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

La. Cap. She 's not fourteen.

Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my
And yet to my teen<sup>a</sup> be it spoken, I have but fourteen

She is not fourteen.—How long is it now
To Lammas-tide?

La. Cap. A fortnight, and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year,

Come Lammas-eve at night, shall she be fourteen?

Susan and she,—God rest all Christian souls!—

Were of an age.—Well, Susan is with God;

She was too good for me: But, as I said,

On Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen;

That shall she, marry; I remember it well.

'T is since the earthquake now eleven years;

And she was wean'd,—I never shall forget it,—

Of all the days of the year, upon that day:

For I had then laid wormwood to my dug,

Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall,

My lord and you were then at Mantua:—

Nay, I do bear a brain:<sup>b</sup>—but, as I said,

When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple

Of my dug, and felt it bitter, pretty fool!

To see it tetchy, and fall out with the dug.

Shake, quoth the dove-house: 't was no need, I tell
To bid me trudge.

And since that time it is eleven years:

For then she could stand alone; nay, by the moon,

She could have run and waddled all about.

For even the day before, she broke her brow:

And then my husband—God be with his soul!

'A was a merry man!—took up the child:

Yea, quoth he, dost thou fall upon thy face?

Thou wilt fall backward, when thou hast more wits:

Wilt thou not, Jule? and, by my holy dam,

The pretty wretch left crying, and said—Ay:

To see now, how a jest shall come about!

I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,

I never should forget it; Wilt thou not, Jule? quoth

And, pretty fool, it stinted,<sup>c</sup> and said—Ay.

La. Cap. Enough of this; I pray thee, hold thy peace.

Nurse. Yes, madam; yet I cannot choose but
To think it should leave crying, and say—Ay!

And yet, I warrant, it had upon its brow

A bump as big as a young cockrel's stone;

knock; and it crieth bitterly.
 my husband, fall'st upon thy face?
 all backward, when thou com'st to age;
 not, Jule? it stinted, and said—Ay.
 I stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.
 Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his ace!
 the prettiest babe that e'er I nurs'd:
 I live to see thee married once,
 wish.

Marry, that marry is the very theme alk of:—Tell me, daughter Juliet, your disposition to be married?
 an honour that I dream not of.
 in honour! were not I thine only nurse,
 as hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat.
 Well, think of marriage now; younger an you,
 coma, ladies of esteem,
 dready mothers: by my count,
 her much upon these years
 re now a maid. Thus, then, in brief:—
 Paris seeks you for his love.
 k man, young lady! lady, such a man,
 reeld—Why, he's a man of wax.

Verona's summer hath not such a flower.
 Nay, he's a flower; in faith, a very flower.

What say you? can you love the gentle-an?
 you shall behold him at our feast;
 re volume of young Paris' face, slight writ there with beauty's pen;
 ery several lineament,
 r one another lends content;
 escur'd in this fair volume lies,
 n in the margin of his eyes.
 as book of love, this unbound lover,
 f him, only lacks a cover:
 ea in the sea; and 't is much pride,
 bout the fair within to hide:
 in many's eyes doth share the glory,
 d clasps locks in the golden story;
 n share all that he doth possess,
 him, making yourself no less.
 No less? nay, bigger; women grow by men.
 Speak briefly, can you like of Paris' love?
 I look to like, if looking liking move:
 re deep will I endart mine eye, consent gives strength to make it fly.

Enter a Servant.

adam, the guests are come, supper served up, my young lady asked for, the nurse cursed try, and everything in extremity. I must sit; I beseech you, follow straight.

We follow thee.—Juliet, the county stays.
 Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Street.

ROMEO, MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, with Five or Maskers, Torch-Bearers, and others.

What, shall this speech be spoke for our cause?
 e on without apology?
 e date is out of such prolixity:
 e no Cupid hood-wink'd with a scarf,
 Tartar's painted bow of lath,
 e ladies like a crow-keeper;
 heat-book prologue, faintly spoke omputer, for our entrance:
 re measure us by what they will,
 ndom—a corruption of the word perilous.

We'll measure them a measure, and be gone.
 Rom. Give me a torch,—I am not for this ambling;
 Being but heavy I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.
 Rom. Not I, believe me: you have dancing shoes,
 With nimble soles: I have a soul of lead,
 So stakes me to the ground I cannot move.

Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's wings,
 And soar with them above a common bound.
 Rom. I am too sore enpierced with his shaft,
 To soar with his light feathers; and to bound—
 I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe:
 Under love's heavy burden do I sink.

Mer. And, to sink in it, should you burden love:
 Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough,
 Too rude, too boist'rous; and it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love;
 Prick love for pricking, and you beat love down.—
 Give me a case to put my visage in:

[Putting on a mask.

A visor for a visor!—what care I,
 What curious eye doth quote<sup>a</sup> deformities?
 Here are the beetle-brows shall blush for me.

Ben. Come, knock, and enter; and no sooner in,
 But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A torch for me: let wantons light of heart,
 Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels;
 For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase,— I'll be a candle-holder, and look on,—
 The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut! dun's the mouse, the constable's own
 word:

If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire
 Of this, sir reverence, love, wherein thou stick'st
 Up to the ears.—Come, we burn daylight, ho.

Rom. Nay, that's not so.
 Mer. I mean, sir, in delay

We waste our lights in vain, lights, lights, by day.
 Take our good meaning; for our judgment sits
 Five times in that, ere once in our five wits.

Rom. And we mean well in going to this mask;
 But 't is no wit to go.

Mer. Why, may one ask?
 Rom. I dreamt a dream to-night.

Mer. And so did I.
 Rom. Well, what was yours?

Mer. That dreamers often lie.
 Rom. In bed, asleep, while they do dream things true.

Mer. O, then, I see, queen Mab hath been with you.
 She is the fairies' midwife; and she comes

In shape no bigger than an agate-stone
 On the fore-finger of an alderman,
 Drawn with a team of little atomies
 Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep:
 Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' legs,
 The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers;
 Her traces of the smallest spider's web;
 Her collars of the moonshine's watery beams;
 Her whip of cricket's bone; the lash of film;
 Her waggoner a small grey-coated gnat,
 Not half so big as a round little worm
 Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid;
 Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut,
 Made by the joiner squirrel, or old grub,
 Time out o' mind the fairies' coach-makers.

And in this state she gallops night by night
 Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of love:
 On courtiers' knees, that dream on court'sies straight;
 O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees;
 O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream;
 Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues.
 Because their breaths with sweetmeats tainted are.

<sup>a</sup> Quote—observe.

Sometimes she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,
And then dreams he of smelling out a suit :<sup>a</sup>
And sometimes comes she with a tithe-pig's tail,
Tickling a parson's nose as 'a lies asleep,
Then dreams he of another benefice :
Sometimes she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,
Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
Of healths five fathom deep ; and then anon
Drums in his ear ; at which he starts, and wakes ;
And, being thus frightened, swears a prayer or two,
And sleeps again. This is that very Mab
That plats the manes of horses in the night ;
And bakes the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs,
Which, once untangled, much misfortune bodes.
This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs,
That presses them, and learns them first to bear,
Making them women of good carriage.
This is she—

Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace.
Thou talk'st of nothing.

Mer. True, I talk of dreams,
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy ;
Which is as thin of substance as the air ;
And more inconstant than the wind who woos
Even now the frozen bosom of the north,
And, being anger'd, puffs away from thence,
Turning his face to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind, you talk of, blows us from ourselves ;
Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear, too early : for my mind misgives
Some consequence, yet hanging in the stars,
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night's revels ; and expire the term
Of a despised life, clos'd in my breast,
By some vile forfeit of untimely death :
But He, that hath the steerage of my course,
Direct my sail !—On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Hall in Capulet's House.

Musicians waiting. Enter Servants.

1 Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away ? he shift a trencher ! he scrape a trencher !

2 Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwashed too, 't is a foul thing.

1 Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate :—good thou, save me a piece of marchpane ;<sup>b</sup> and, as thou lovest me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone, and Nell.—Antony ! and Potpan !

2 Serv. Ay, boy ; ready.

1 Serv. You are looked for, and called for, asked for,
and sought for, in the great chamber.

2 Serv. We cannot be here and there too.—Cheerly, boys ; be brisk a while, and the longer liver take all.

[They retire behind.]

Enter CAPULET, &c., with the Guests, and the Maskers.

Cap. Welcome, gentlemen ! ladies, that have their toes

Unplagued with corns, will have a bout with you :—

Ah ha, my mistresses ! which of you all

Will now deny to dance ? she that makes dainty, she,

I'll swear, hath corns ; Am I come near ye now ?

Welcome, gentlemen ! I have seen the day,

That I have worn a visor ; and could tell

<sup>b</sup> Marchpane—a kind of sweet cake or biscuit, sometimes called almond-cake. Our macaroons are diminutive march-panes.

A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear,
Such as would please ; 't is gone, 't is gone, 't is gone,
You are welcome, gentlemen !—Come, musicians,
A hall ! a hall ! give room, and foot it, gnik.

[Music plays, and they dance.]

More light, ye knaves ; and turn the tables up,
And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot.—

Ah, sirrah, this unlooked-for sport comes well.

Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin<sup>c</sup> Capulet ;

For you and I are past our dancing days ;

How long is 't now, since last yourself and I

Were in a mask ?

2 Cap. By 'r lady, thirty years.

1 Cap. What, man ! 't is not so much, 't is much :

'T is since the nuptial of Lucentio,
Come pentecost as quickly as it will,

Some five-and-twenty years ; and then we mask'd.

2 Cap. 'T is more, 't is more : his son is older,

His son is thirty.

1 Cap. Will you tell me that ?

His son was but a ward two years ago.

Rom. What lady's that, which doth embrace hand

Of yonder knight ?

Serv. I know not, sir.

Rom. O, she doth teach the torches to burn bright !
Her beauty hangs upon the cheek of night
As a rich jewel in an Ethiop's ear ;
Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear !
So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows,
As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.
The measure done, I'll watch her place of stand,
And touching hers, make blessed my rude hand.
Did my heart love till now ? forswear it, sight !
For I ne'er saw true beauty till this night.

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague.

Fetch me my rapier, boy :—What ? dares the slave

Come hither, cover'd with an antic face,
To fleer and scorn at our solemnity ?

Now by the stock and honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

1 Cap. Why, how now, kinsman ? wherefore do you
so ?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe ;
A villain, that is hither come in spite,
To scorn at our solemnity this night.

1 Cap. Young Romeo is 't ?

Tyb. 'T is he, that villain !

1 Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone ;
He bears him like a portly gentleman ;
And, to say truth, Verona brags of him,
To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth ;
I would not for the wealth of all this town,
Here in my house, do him disparagement ;
Therefore be patient, take no note of him,
It is my will ; the which if thou respect,
Show a fair presence, and put off these frowns,
An ill-beseeming semblance for a feast.

Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest ;
I'll not endure him.

1 Cap. He shall be endur'd.
What, goodman boy !—I say, he shall !—Go to !
Am I the master here, or you ? go to.

You'll not endure him !—God shall mend my soul,
You'll make a mutiny among my guests !
You will set cock-a-hoop ! you'll be the man !

Tyb. Why, uncle, 't is a shame.

1 Cap. Go to, go to,
You are a saucy boy : Is 't so indeed ?
This trick may chance to scath<sup>b</sup> you ;—I know it.

<sup>c</sup> Good cousin Capulet. The worst cousin is usually applied to any collateral relation of whatever degree.

<sup>b</sup> To scath—to injure.

contrary<sup>a</sup> me!—marry, 't is time—

[To JULIET.
My shrine, the gentle sin is this,— o blushing pilgrims ready stand oth that rough touch with a tender kiss.
d pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too
uch, manuenerly devotion shows in this;
ave hands that pilgrims' hands do touch,
dm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.
ive not saints lips, and holy palmers too?
pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.
hem, dear saint, let lips do what hands do;
grant thou, lest faith turn to despair.
as do not move, though grant for prayers'
ke.
en move not, while my prayers' effect I take.

[Kissing her.
a have my lips the sin that they have took.
s from my lips? O trespass sweetly urg'd!
y sin again.
You kiss by the book.
adam, your mother craves a word with you.
hat is her mother?
Marry, bachelor,
is the lady of the house,

And a good lady, and a wise, and virtuous:
I nurs'd her daughter, that you talk'd withal.
I tell you,—he, that can lay hold of her,
Shall have the chinks.
Rom. Is she a Capulet?
O dear account! my life is my foe's debt.
Ben. Away, begone; the sport is at the best.
Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest.
I Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone;
We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.
Is it e'en so? Why, then I thank you all;
I thank you, honest gentlemen; good night:—
More torches here!—Come on, then let's to bed.
Ah, sirrah, [To 2 Cap.] by my fay, it waxes late;
I'll to my rest. [Exeunt all but JULIET and NURSE
Jul. Come hither, nurse: What is yof gentleman?
Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.
Jul. What's he, that now is going out of door?
Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be young Petruccio.
Jul. What's he, that follows there, that would not dance?
Nurse. I know not.
Jul. Go, ask his name:—if he be married,
My grave is like to be my wedding bed.
Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague;
The only son of your great enemy.
Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate!
Too early seen unknown, and known too late!
Prodigious birth of love it is to me,
That I must love a loathed enemy.
Nurse. What's this? What's this?
Jul. A rhyme I learn'd even now.
Of one I danc'd withal. [One calls within, JULIET.
Nurse. Anon, anon:—
Come, let's away; the strangers all are gone. [Exeunt.

Enter Chorus.

ACT II.

L.—An open Place adjoining Capulet's Garden.

Enter ROMEO.

I go forward, when my heart is here?
fall earth, and find thy centre out.
climbs the wall, and leaps down within it.
Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.
seo! my cousin Romeo!
He is wise;
life, hath stolen him home to bed.
ran this way, and leapt this orchard wall:
MERCUTIO.

Nay, I'll conjure too.
ours! madman! passion! lover!
in the likeness of a sigh,
se rhyme, and I am satisfied.

Sir Philip Sidney, and many other old writers, etc.
sixcomb.

Cry but—Ah me! pronounce but love and dove;
Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word,
One nick-name for her purblind son and heir,
Young Abraham<sup>b</sup> Cupid, he that shot so trim,
When king Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid.—
He heareth not, he stirreth not, he moveth not;
The ape<sup>c</sup> is dead, and I must conjure him.—
I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,
By her high forehead, and her scarlet lip,
By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh,
And the demesnes that there adjacent lie,
That in thy likeness thou appear to us.
Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.
Mer. This cannot anger him: 't would anger him

<sup>b</sup> All the old copies have "Abraham." This has been changed to "Adam," supposing the allusion was to the Adam, Bell of the old Ballad. The "Abraham" Cupid is the cheat—the "Abraham man" of our old statutes.
<sup>c</sup> The ape—an expression of kindly familiarity, applied to a young man.

To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle
Of some strange nature, letting it there stand
Till she had laid it, and conjur'd it down;
That were some spite: my invocation
Is fair and honest, and, in his mistress' name,
I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among these trees,
To be consorted with the humorous<sup>a</sup> night:
Blind is his love, and best befits the dark.

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark.
Now will he sit under a medlar tree,
And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit,
As maids call medlars, when they laugh alone.—
Romeo, good night:—I'll to my truckle-bed;
This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep:
Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then; for 't is in vain
To seek him here, that means not to be found. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Capulet's Garden.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. He jests at scars, that never felt a wound.—
[JULIET appears above, at a window.]
But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks!
It is the east, and Juliet is the sun!—
Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,
Who is already sick and pale with grief,
That thou her maid art far more fair than she:
Be not her maid,<sup>b</sup> since she is envious;
Her vestal livery is but sick and green,
And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.—
It is my lady: O, it is my love:
O, that she knew she were!

She speaks, yet she says nothing; What of that?
Her eye discourses, I will answer it.—
I am too bold, 't is not to me she speaks:
Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
Having some business, do entreat her eyes
To twinkle in their spheres till they return.
What if her eyes were there, they in her head?
The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars,
As daylight doth a lamp; her eye in heaven
Would through the airy region stream so bright,
That birds would sing and think it were not night.
See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand!
O, that I were a glove upon that hand,
That I might touch that cheek!

Jul. Ah me!
Rom. She speaks:—
O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art
As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,
As is a winged messenger of heaven
Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes
Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him,
When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds,
And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?
Deny thy father, and refuse thy name;
Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?
[Aside.]

Jul. 'T is but thy name that is my enemy;—
Thou art thyself though,<sup>c</sup> not a Montague.
What's Montague? it is nor hand nor foot,
Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part
Belonging to a man. O, be some other name!
What's in a name? that which we call a rose,
By any other name would smell as sweet;

<sup>a</sup> Humorous, dewy,—vaporous.

<sup>b</sup> Be not a votary to Diana.

<sup>c</sup> Juliet places his personal qualities in opposition to what she thought evil of his family.

So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,
Retain that dear perfection which he owes,
Without that title:—Romeo, doff thy name;
And for thy name, which is no part of thee,
Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:
Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd;
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that thus becomest
night,
So stumblest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name
I know not how to tell thee who I am;
My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,
Because it is an enemy to thee;
Had I it written I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have yet not drunk a hundred words
Of thy tongue's uttering, yet I know the sound:
Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

Rom. Neither, fair maid, if either thee dislike<sup>d</sup>
Jul. How cam'st thou hither, tell me! and wherefore?

The orchard walls are high and hard to climb;
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-punch walls;

For stony limits cannot hold love out:
And what love can do, that dares love attempt;
Therefore thy kinsmen are no stop to me.

Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder thee.
Rom. Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye
Than twenty of their swords; look thou but sweet,
And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee here.
Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from
eyes;

And, but thou love me,<sup>e</sup> let them find me here:
My life were better ended by their hate,
Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?
Rom. By love, that first did prompt me to say
He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.

I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far
As that vast shore wash'd with the farthest sea,
I would adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou know'st the mask of night is on my face;
Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek,
For that which thou hast heard me speak to-night.

Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain deny
What I have spoke. But farewell compliment!<sup>f</sup>
Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say—Ay;
And I will take thy word: yet, if thou swear'st,
Thou may'st prove false; at lovers' perjuries,
They say, Jove laughs. O, gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully:
Or, if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
I'll frown, and be perverse, and say thee nay,
So thou wilt woo; but, else, not for the world.
In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond;
And therefore thou may'st think my behaviour light;
But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true
Than those that have more cunning to be strange.
I should have been more strange, I must confess,
But that thou overheard'st, ere I was ware,
My true love's passion: therefore pardon me;
And not impute this yielding to light love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops,—

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant lunatic, that changes in her circle every hour and do.

Rom. Do not swear by the moon, thine inconstant
lunatic, that changes every hour and do.

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant
lunatic, that changes every hour and do.

Rom. Do not swear by the moon, thine inconstant
lunatic, that changes every hour and do.

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant
lunatic, that changes every hour and do.

Rom. Do not swear by the moon, thine inconstant
lunatic, that changes every hour and do.

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant
lunatic, that changes every hour and do.

<sup>d</sup> Dislike—displease.

<sup>e</sup> But thou love me—So thou do but love me.

<sup>f</sup> Farewell compliment—farewell respect for Romeo.

My—[Within.] Madam.

Jul. What o'clock to-morrow
 Shall I send to thee ?

Rom. By the hour of nine.
 Jul. I will not fail ; 't is twenty years till then.
 I have forgot why I did call thee back.

Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember it.
 Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there,
 Rememb'ring how I love thy company.

Rom. And I 'll still stay, to have thee still forget,
 Forgetting any other home but this.

Jul. 'Tis almost morning, I would have thee gone ;
 And yet no further than a wanton's bird ;
 Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
 Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,
 And with a silk thread plucks it back again,
 So loving-jealous of his liberty.

Rom. I would, I were thy bird.

Jul. Sweet, so would I :
 Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.
 Good night, good night ! parting is such sweet sorrow,
 That I shall say good night, till it be morrow. [Exit.

Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast !—
 'Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest !
 Hence will I to my ghostly friar's close cell ;
 His help to crave, and my dear hap to tell. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE, with a basket.

Fri. The grey-ey'd morn smiles on the frowning night,
 Checkering the eastern clouds with streaks of light ;
 And flecked* darkness like a drunkard reels
 From forth day's path, and Titan's fiery wheels :
 Now ere the sun advance his burning eye,
 The day to cheer, and night's dank dew to dry,
 I must up-fill this osier cage of ours,
 With baleful weeds, and precious-juiced flowers.
 The earth, that 's nature's mother, is her tomb ;
 What is her burying grave, that is her womb :
 And from her womb children of divers kind
 We sucking on her natural bosom find :
 Many for many virtues excellent,
 None but for some, and yet all different.
 O, mickle is the powerful grace, that lies
 In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities :
 For nought so vile that on the earth doth live,
 But to the earth some special good doth give ;
 Nor aught so good, but, strain'd from that fair use,
 Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse :
 Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied ;
 And vice sometime 's by action dignified.
 Within the infant rind of this weak flower
 Poison hath residence, and medicine power
 For this, being smelt, with that part cheers each part ;
 Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart.
 Two such opposed kings encamp them still
 In man as well as herbs,—grace, and rude will ;
 And, where the worse is predominant,
 Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Good morrow, father !
 Fri. Benedicite !

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me ?—
 Young son, it argues a distemper'd head,
 So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed :
 Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
 And where care lodges, sleep will never lie ;
 But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd brain
 Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign ;
 Therefore thy earliness doth me assure,
 Thou art up-rous'd by some distemp'ration,

* Flecked—dappled.

Or if not so, then here I hit it right—

Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true, the sweeter rest was mine.

Fri. God pardon sin! wast thou with Rosaline?

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no;
I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. That 's my good son: But where hast thou been then?

Rom. I 'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.

I have been feasting with mine enemy;

Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me,

That 's by me wounded; both our remedies

Within thy help and holy physic lies;

I bear no hatred, blessed man; for, lo,

My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift;

Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift.

Rom. Then plainly know, my heart's dear love is set

On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:

As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;

And all combin'd, save what thou must combine

By holy marriage: When, and where, and how,

We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of vow,

I 'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,

That thou consent to marry us to-day.

Fri. Holy Saint Francis! what a change is here!

Is Rosaline, that thou didst love so dear,

So soon forsaken? young men's love then lies

Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.

Jesu Maria! what a deal of brine

Hath wash'd thy fallow cheeks for Rosaline!

How much salt water thrown away in waste,

To season love, that of it doth not taste!

The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,

Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;

Lo, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit

Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet:

If e'er thou wast thyself, and these woes thine,

Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline;

And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence then—

Women may fall, when there 's no strength in men.

Rom. Thou chidd'st me oft for loving Rosaline.

Fri. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.

Rom. And had'st me bury love.

Fri. Not in a grave

To lay one in, another out to have.

Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she, whom I love now,

Doth grace for grace, and love for love allow;

The other did not so.

Fri. O, she knew well,

Thy love did read by rote, and could not spell.

But come, young waverer, come go with me,

In one respect I 'll thy assistant be;

For this alliance may so happy prove,

To turn your households' rancour to pure love.

Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.

Fri. Wisely, and slow; They stumble, that run fast.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Street.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?— Came he not home to-night?

Benv. Not to his father's; I spoke with his man.

Why, that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline,

is so, that he will sure run mad.

Alas, that the kinsman of old Capulet,

Should thus affront to his father's house,

Should thus challenge, on my life,

That Romeo will answer it.

How shall we answer him, that can write, may answer a letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's man dares, being dared.

Mer. Alas, poor Romeo, he is already dead with a white wench's black eye; shot through with a love-song; the very pin<sup>a</sup> of his heart pierces the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft; And is he a counter Tybalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?

Mer. More than prince of cats,<sup>b</sup> I can tell he is the courageous captain of compliments as you sing prick-song,<sup>c</sup> keeps time, distant portion; rests me his minim rest, one, two, as in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk blellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first of the first and second cause: Ah, the immortal puncto reverso! the hay!

Ben. The what?

Mer. The pox of such antic, lisping, affected ticks; these new tuners of accents!—By Jove, good blade!—a very tall man!—a very good Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grand should be thus afflicted with these strange fashionmongers, these pardon-mes, who stand on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the bench? O, their bons, their bons!

Enter ROMEO

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring flesh, how art thou fishified!—Now is he for that Petrarch flowed in: Laura, to his lady kitchen-wench;—marry, she had a better rhyme her: Dido, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a g-and Hero, hildings and harlots; Thisbe, a so,<sup>d</sup> but not to the purpose.—Signior Romeo there 's a French salutation to your French gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good morrow to you both. What did I give you?

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip: can you not constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business great; and, in such a case as mine, a man courtesy.

Mer. That 's as much as to say—such a constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning—to court'sy.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then is my pump well flowing.

Mer. Sure wit. Follow me this jest no hast worn out thy pump; that, when the shoe is worn, the jest may remain, after the wear singular.

Rom. O single-soled jest, solely sing-singleness!

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio; I will not be a match.

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs, cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if our wits run the wild-goose have done; for thou hast more of the wild-of thy wits, than, I am sure, I have in my
Was I with you there for the goose?

<sup>a</sup> The centre of the target, where the pin fastens.
<sup>b</sup> Tybert is the name given to the cat in the story of the Fox.

<sup>c</sup> Prick-song, music pricked, or noted, down, according to rule; in contradistinction to music ear, or sung from memory.

<sup>d</sup> The grey eye—the blue eye—was the most beautiful in the 'Venus and Adonis.' Venus says, 'Thine eye is like the grey eye of a cat.'

<sup>e</sup> Slip was the common name for counterlets in the pump was the shoe. We relate the wits in the pump were shaped as flowers.

ou wast never with me for anything, when such Jacks; and if I cannot, I 'll find those that shall.

Scurvy knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skains-mates:—And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure?

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure: if I had,

my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you: I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasione in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!—Pray you, sir, a word: and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bade me say, I will keep to myself: but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress.

I protest unto thee,—

Nurse. Good heart! and, i' faith, I will tell her as much: Lord, lord, she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir,—that you do protest;

which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.

Rom. Bid her devise some means to come to shrift

This afternoon;

And there she shall at friar Laurence' cell

Be shriv'd, and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.

Rom. Go to; I say, you shall.

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be there.

Rom. And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey-wall:

Within this hour my man shall be with thee;

And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair:

Which to the high top-gallant of my joy

Must be my convoy in the secret night.

Farewell!—Be trusty, and I 'll quite thy pains.

Farewell!—Commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee!—Hark you, sir.

Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say

Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom. I warrant thee; my man's as true as steel.

Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady

—Lord, lord!—when 't was a little prating thing,—

O, there's a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lieve see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the properer man: but I 'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the varsal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?

Rom. Ay, nurse; What of that? both with an R.

Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name. R is for the dog.* No; I know it begins with some other letter; and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it

Rom. Commend me to thy lady. [Exit

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times.—Peter!

Pet. Anon?

Nurse. Before, and apace. [Exeunt

SCENE V.—Capulet's Garden.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. The clock struck nine, when I did send the nurse,

In half an hour she promis'd to return.

* R was called the dog's letter—because it "birreth in the sound."

Perchance, she cannot meet him :—that 's not so.—
O, she 's lame! love's heralds should be thoughts,
Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams,
Driving back shadows over lowering hills:
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.
Now is the sun upon the highest hill
Of this day's journey; and from nine till twelve
Is three long hours,—yet she is not come.
Had she affections, and warm youthful blood,
She 'd be as swift in motion as a ball;
My words would bandy her to my sweet love,
And his to me:
But old folks, many feign as they were dead;
Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead.

Enter NURSE and PETER.

O God, she comes!—O honey nurse, what news?
Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. [Exit PETER.]

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse,—O lord! why look'st thou sad?

Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily;
If good, thou shalt be the music of sweet news
By playing it to me with so sour a face.

Nurse. I am weary, give me leave a while;
Fie, how my bones ache! What a jaunt have I had!

Jul. I would thou hadst my bones, and I thy news:
Nay, come, I pray thee, speak;—good, good nurse, speak.

Nurse. Jesu, what haste? can you not stay a while?
Do you not see that I am out of breath?

Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath
To say to me—that thou art out of breath?
The excuse that thou dost make in this delay
Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.

Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that;
Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance:
Let me be satisfied, Is 't good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice; you know not how to choose a man: Romeo! no, not he;
though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body,—though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare: He is not the flower of courtesy,—but,
I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb.—Go thy ways,
wench; serve God.—What, have you dined at home?

Jul. No, no: But all this did I know before;
What says he of our marriage? what of that!

Nurse. Lord, how my head aches! what a head have I!
It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces,
My back o' t' other side,—O, my back, my back!—
Bestrew your heart, for sending me about,
To catch my death with jaunting up and down!

Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not well:
Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my love?

Nurse. Your love says like an honest gentleman,
And a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome,
And, I warrant, a virtuous:—Where is your mother?

Jul. Where is my mother?—why, she is within;
Where should she be? How oddly thou repliest:
*Your love says like an honest gentleman,—
Where is your mother?*

Nurse. O, God's lady dear
Are you so hot? Marry, come up, I trow;
Is this the poultice for my aching bones?
Henceforward do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here 's such a coil,—Come, what says E

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift to-

Jul. I have.

Nurse. Then hie you hence to friar Laurence
There stays a husband to make you a wife:
Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks,
They'll be in scarlet straight at any news.
Hie you to church; I must another way.
To fetch a ladder, by the which your love
Must climb a bird's nest soon, when it is dark:
I am the drudge, and toil in your delight;
But you shall bear the burden soon at night.
Go, I'll to dinner; hie you to the cell.

Jul. Hie to high fortune!—honest nurse, fare

SCENE VI.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. So smile the heavens upon this holy act
That after-hours with sorrow chide us not!

Rom. Amen! but come what comes
It cannot countervail the exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her sight:
Do thou but close our hands with holy words,
Then love-devouring death do what he dare,
It is enough I may but call her mine.

Fri. These violent delights have violent ends
And in their triumph die; like fire and powder,
Which, as they kiss, consume: The sweetest morsel
Is loathsome in his own deliciousness,
And in the taste confounds the appetite:
Therefore, love moderately; long love doth so;
Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

Enter JULIET.

Here comes the lady;—O, so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint:
A lover may bestride the gossamers
That idle in the wanton summer air,
And yet not fall; so light is vanity.

Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor.

Fri. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us

Jul. As much to him, else are his thanks but Rom. Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy
Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be more
To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour air, and let rich music's tongue
Unfold the imagin'd happiness that both
Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Jul. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words,
Braggs of his substance; not of ornament:
They are but beggars that can count their wealth;
But my true love is grown to such excess,
I cannot sum up half my sum of wealth.

Fri. Come, come, with me, and we will make work;

For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone,
Till holy church incorporate two in one.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A public Place.

MERCUTIO, BRNOLIO, Page, and Servants.

ay thee, good Mercutio, let's retire;
I am not for this Capulet's abroad.
Meet, we shall not 'scape a brawl;
For ever hot days, is the mad blood stirring.

Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows, that he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his upon the table, and says, God send me no more and, by the operation of the second cup draws the drawer, when, indeed, there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow?
Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in the thy in Italy; and as soon moved to be moody, and soon moody to be moved.

Mer. And what to?

Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou! why wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or less, in his beard, than thou hast. Thou wilt reel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes. What eye, such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? Thy cheek is as full of quarrels, as an egg is full of meat; yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg, quarrelling. Thou hast quarrelled with a man laughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy head that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not cut with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before me? with another, for tying his new shoes with old laces? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling!

Mer. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour's quarter.

Mer. The fee-simple? O simple!

Enter TYBALT and others.

Mer. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Mer. By my heel, I care not.

Mer. Follow me close, for I will speak to them.

Mer. Good den: a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of us? Couple it something; make it a word and a blow.

Mer. You shall find me apt enough to that, sir, an you give me occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without me?

Mer. Mercutio, thou consortest with Romeo,—

Mer. Consort! what, dost thou make us minstrels! thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but words: here 's my fiddlestick; here 's that shall make dance. 'Zounds, consort!

Mer. We talk here in the public haunt of men:

Withdraw unto some private place,

Reason coldly of your grievances,

Then depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze;

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter ROMEO.

Mer. Well, peace be with you, sir! here comes my man.

Mer. But I 'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your livery: go before to field, he 'll be your follower; worship in that sense, may call him—man.

Mer. Romeo, the love I bear thee can afford better term than this—Thou art a villain.

Mer. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee

Excuse the appertaining rage

With a greeting:—Villain am I none;

Hence, farewell; I see thou know'st me not.

Mer. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries

Thou hast done me; therefore turn, and draw.

Mer. I do protest, I never injur'd thee;

Love thee better than thou canst devise,

Whom shalt know the reason of my love:

Go, good Capulet,—which name I tender

Early as mine own,—be satisfied.

Mer. calm, dishonourable, vile submission!

Mer. * carries it away. [Draws.

Mer. rat-catcher, will you walk?

Mer. at wouldst thou have with me?

Mer. d king of cats, nothing, but one of your

Mer. hat I mean to make bold withal, and, as

Mer. —the Italian term of art for the thrust with a you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pilcher* by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. I am for you. [Drawing

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.

Rom. Draw, Benvolio. Beat down their weapons.

Gentlemen, for shame, forbear this outrage;

Tybalt, Mercutio, the prince expressly hath Forbidden bandying in Verona streets.

Hold, Tybalt—good Mercutio—

[Exeunt TYBALT and his Partisans.

Mer. I am hurt.—

A plague o' both the houses!—I am sped:

Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Ben. What, art thou hurt?

Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry, 't is enough.—

Where is my page?—go, villain, fetch a surgeon.

[Exit Page.

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No, 't is not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door; but 't is enough, 't will serve: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world.—A plague o' both your houses!—What, a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic!—Why, the devil, came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio,

Or I shall faint.—A plague o' both your houses,

They have made worm's meat of me:

I have it, and soundly too:—Your houses.

[Exeunt MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO.

Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near ally,

My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt

In my behalf; my reputation stain'd

With Tybalt's slander, Tybalt, that an hour

Hath been my cousin.—O sweet Juliet,

Thy beauty hath made me effeminate,

And in my temper soften'd valour's steel.

Re-enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's dead;

That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds,

Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This day's black fate on more days doth depend;

This but begins the woe, others must end.

Re-enter TYBALT.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.

Rom. Alive! in triumph! and Mercutio slain!

Away to heaven, respective lenity,

And fire-eyed fury be my conduct now!—

Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again,

That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul

Is but a little way above our heads,

Staying for thine to keep him company;

Either thou, or I, or both, must go with him.

Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst consort him

here,

Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine that.

[They fight; TYBALT falls.

Ben. Romeo, away, be gone!

The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain:—

Stand not amaz'd:—the prince will doom thee death,

If thou art taken:—hence!—be gone!—away!

Rom. Oh! I am fortune's fool!

Ben. Why dost thou stay? [Exit ROM.

Nurse. You are a shrewish creature,
 And a contumacious one:—But, as I told you, once

Jul. O, she is dead, she is dead,
 What news? what news? what news?

Nurse. Are you so hot?—Alas, she is dead,
 Is this the good news that you tell me?

Henceforward she is dead, and true,
 Jul. Here is a letter from my dear lord,

Nurse. He is dead, he is dead,
 Jul. I feel him so, I feel him so,

Nurse. You are a shrewish creature,
 These are the good news that you tell me.

Now you are a shrewish creature,
 These are the good news that you tell me.

His face is like the image of his father,
 To catch my death;—but, as I told you, once

Me, that I feel him so, I feel him so,

Come, cord; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding bed;
 And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!
 Nurse. Hie to your chamber: I'll find Romeo
 To comfort you—I wot well where he is.
 Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night;
 I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence's cell.
 Jul. O find him! give this ring to my true knight,
 And bid him come to take his last farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Friar Laurence's Cell.
Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and ROMEO.
Fri. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful
 man;
 Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
 And thou art wedded to calamity.
Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince's doom?
 What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
 That I yet know not?
Fri. Too familiar
 Is my dear son with such sour company:
 I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.
Rom. What less than dooms-day is the prince's doom?
Fri. A gentler judgment vanish'd from his lips,
 Not body's death, but body's banishment.
Rom. Ha! banishment? be merciful, say—death.
 For exile hath more terror in his look,
 Much more than death: do not say—banishment.
Fri. Here from Verona art thou banished:
 Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.
Rom. There is no world without Verona walls,
 But purgatory, torture, hell itself.
 Hence-banished is banish'd from the world,
 And world's exile is death:—then banished
 Is death mis-term'd. Calling death banishment,
 Thou cutt'st my head off with a golden axe,
 And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.
Fri. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
 Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind prince,
 Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
 And turn'd that black word death to banishment.
 This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.
Rom. 'T is torture, and not mercy: heaven is here,
 Where Juliet lives; and every cat, and dog,
 And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
 Live here in heaven, and may look on her,
 But Romeo may not.—More validity,
 More honourable state, more courtship lives
 In carrion flies, than Romeo; they may seize
 On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
 And steal immortal blessing from her lips;
 Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
 Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
 This may flies do, when I from this must fly—
 (And say't thou yet, that exile is not death)—
 But Romeo may not, he is banished.
 Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground knife
 No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean,
 But—banished—to kill me; banished?
 O friar, the damned use that word in hell;
 Howlings attend it: How hast thou the heart,
 Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
 A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
 To mangle me with that word—banished?
Fri. Thou fond mad man, hear me a little speak.
Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banishment.
Fri. I'll give thee armour to keep off that word;
 Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
 To comfort thee, though thou art banished.
Rom. Yet banished!—Hang up philosophy!
 Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
 Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom;
 It helps not, it prevails not, talk no more.

Come, cord; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding bed;
 And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!
 Nurse. Hie to your chamber: I'll find Romeo
 To comfort you—I wot well where he is.
 Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night;
 I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence's cell.
 Jul. O find him! give this ring to my true knight,
 And bid him come to take his last farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful
man;

Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity.

Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince's doom?
What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?

Fri. Too familiar
Is my dear son with such sour company:
I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.

Rom. What less than dooms-day is the prince's doom?

Fri. A gentler judgment vanish'd from his lips,
Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha! banishment? be merciful, say—death.
For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death: do not say—banishment.

Fri. Here from Verona art thou banished:
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Verona walls,
But purgatory, torture, hell itself.

Hence-banished is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death:—then banished
Is death mis-term'd. Calling death banishment,
Thou cutt'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind prince,
Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banishment.
This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.

Rom. 'T is torture, and not mercy: heaven is here,
Where Juliet lives; and every cat, and dog,
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven, and may look on her,
But Romeo may not.—More validity,
More honourable state, more courtship lives
In carrion flies, than Romeo; they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips;
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
This may flies do, when I from this must fly—
(And say't thou yet, that exile is not death)—
But Romeo may not, he is banished.

Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground knife
No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean,
But—banished—to kill me; banished?
O friar, the damned use that word in hell;
Howlings attend it: How hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me with that word—banished?

Fri. Thou fond mad man, hear me a little speak.

Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banishment.

Fri. I'll give thee armour to keep off that word;
Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet banished!—Hang up philosophy!
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom;
It helps not, it prevails not, talk no more.

Fri. O, then I see that madmen have no ears.
Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Fri. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.
Rom. Thou canst not speak of what thou dost not feel: Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love, An hour but married, Tybalt murdered, Doting like me, and like me banished, Then might'st thou speak, thou might'st thou tear thy hair,

And fall upon the ground, as I do now,
Taking the measure of an unmade grave.

Fri. Arise; one knocks; good Romeo, hide thyself.
[Knocking within.]

Rom. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick groans, Mist-like, infold me from the search of eyes. [Knocking.]

Fri. Hark, how they knock!—Who's there?—Romeo, arise;
Thou wilt be taken:—Stay a while;—stand up;

Run to my study:—By and by:—God's will!
What simpleness is this?—I come, I come. [Knocking.]

Who knocks so hard? whence come you? what's your will?

Nurse. [Within.] Let me come in, and you shall know my errand;

I come from lady Juliet.

Fri. Welcome then.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. O holy friar, O, tell me, holy friar,
Where is my lady's lord, where's Romeo?

Fri. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.

Nurse. O, he is even in my mistress' case,
Just in her case!

Fri. O woeful sympathy!
Piteous predicament!

Nurse. Even so lies she,
Blubbing and weeping, weeping and blubbing:—
Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be a man:

For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;
Why should you fall into so deep an O?

Rom. Nurse!

Nurse. Ah sir! ah sir!—Well, death's the end of all.

Rom. Spak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with her?

Doth not she think me an old murderer,
Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy
With blood remov'd but little from her own?

Where is she? and how doth she? and what says
My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love?

Nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps;
And now falls on her bed; and then starts up,
And Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries,
And then down falls again.

Rom. As if that name,
Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand
Murder'd her kinsman.—O tell me, friar, tell me,
In what vile part of this anatomy

Doth my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack
The hateful mansion. [Draws his sword.]

Fri. Hold thy desperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art;
Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast:

Unseemly woman, in a seeming man!
And ill-beseeming beast, in seeming both!

Thou hast amaz'd me: by my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.

Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself?
And slay thy lady that in thy life lives,
By doing damned hate upon thyself?

Why rail'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?
Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do meet
In thee at once; which thou at once wouldst lose.

Fie, fie! thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy wit;
Which, like an usurer, abound'st in all,
And usest none in that true use indeed

Which would bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit.
Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,
Digressing from the valour of a man:

Thy dear love sworn, but hollow perjury,
Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish:

Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love,
Mis-shapen in the conduct of them both,
Like powder in a skill-less soldier's flask,
Is set on fire by thine own ignorance,
And thou dismember'd with thine own defence.

What, rouse thee, man! thy Juliet is alive,
For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;

There art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt; there art thou happy:

The law, that threaten'd death, became thy friend,
And turn'd it to exile; there art thou happy:

A pack of blessing lights upon thy back;
Happiness courts thee in her best array;

But, like a misbehav'd and sullen wench,
Thou puttest up thy fortune and thy love:

Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed,
Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her;

But, look, thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua;

Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,
Beg pardon of thy prince, and call thee back
With twenty hundred thousand times more joy
Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.

Go, before, nurse: commend me to thy lady;
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto:

Romeo is coming.

Nurse. O Lord, I could have staid here all the night
To hear good counsel: O, what learning is!

My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.

Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you, so Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late. [Exit Nurse.]

Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this!

Fri. Go hence: Good night; and here stands your state;

Either begone before the watch be set,
Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence:

Sojourn in Mantua: I'll find out your man,
And he shall signify from time to time
Every good hap to you, that chances here:

Give me thy hand; 't is late: farewell; good night!

Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
It were a grief so brief to part with thee:

Farewell. [Exit Friar.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and PARIS.

Cap. Things have fallen out, sir, so unluckily
That we have had no time to move our daughter:

Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
And so did I:—Well; we were born to die—
'T is very late, she'll not come down to-night:

I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no time to Madam, good night: commend me to your La. Cap. I will, and know her mind
morrow;

To-night she's mew'd<sup>a</sup> up to her chamber.

<sup>a</sup> Another term of falconry. The mew is the hawk's cage.

aris, I will make a desperate tender love: I think she will be rul'd by me: nay more, I doubt it not.
to her ere you go to bed;
here of my son Paris' love;
mark you me, on Wednesday next—what day is this?

Monday, my lord.
ay! ha! ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon, let it be:—o' Thursday, tell her, married to this noble earl:— eady? do you like this haste?
o great ado;—a friend, or two:— Tybalt being slain so late,
might we held him carelessly,
man, if we revel much:
I have some half a dozen friends,
and. But what say you to Thursday?
lord, I would that Thursday were tomorrow.

get you gone:—O' Thursday be it then:— let ere you go to bed, wife, against this wedding-day.—
lord.—Light to my chamber, ho!
so very late, that we ry by and by:—Good night. [Exeunt.]

V.—Loggia to Juliet's Chamber.

Enter ROMEO and JULIET.

you be gone? it is not yet near day:
the lark, and not the lark,
the fearful hollow of thine ear;
sings on you pomegranate-tree:
ere, it was the nightingale.
ere the lark, the herald of the morn, ere; look, love, what envious streaks of evening clouds in yonder east:
ere are burnt out, and jocund day
ere the misty mountain's tops;
ere and live, or stay and die.
ereight is not day-light, I know it, I:
erear that the sun exhales,
erehis night a torch-bearer,
ereon thy way to Mantua:
ereyet, thou need'st not to be gone.
erehe be ta'en, let me be put to death;
ereso thou wilt have it so,
ereprey is not the morning's eye,
erehe reflex of Cynthia's brow;
ere the lark, whose notes do beat ereaven so high above our heads:
ereare to stay than will to go;— ereand welcome!—Juliet wills it so.— ere soul? let's talk, it is not day.
ere t is, hie hence, be gone, away;
ere hat sings so out of tune,
ere discords, and unpleasing sharps.
ere lark makes sweet division;<sup>a</sup> ere so, for she divideth us:
ere lark and loathed toad change eyes;
ere all they had chang'd voices too!
ere n arm that voice doth us affray,
ere hence with hunts-up to the day.
ere ere; more light and light it grows.
ere light and light!—more dark and dark ere does.

Enter NURSE.

dam!
ere lady mother's coming to your chamber:
ere sike; be wary, look about. [Ex. Nurse.]
ere. A division in music is a number of quick ere syllable; a kind of warbling.

Jul. Then, window, let day in and let life out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and I'll descend.

Rom. descends.

Jul. Art thou gone so? love! lord! ay—husband!
friend!

I must hear from thee every day i' the hour,
For in a minute there are many days:
O! by this count I shall be much in years,
Ere I again behold my Romeo.

Rom. Farewell! I will omit no opportunity
That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.

Jul. O, think'st thou we shall ever meet again?

Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes shall serve
For sweet discourses in our time to come.

Jul. O God! I have an ill-divining soul;

Methinks, I see thee, now thou art so low,

As one dead in the bottom of a tomb;

Either my eyesight fails, or thou look'st pale.

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so do you:

Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu! adieu!

[Exit ROMEO.]

Jul. O fortune, fortune! all men call thee fickle:

If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him

That is renown'd for faith? Be fickle, fortune;

For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,

But send him back.

La. Cap. [Within.] Ho, daughter! are you up?

Jul. Who is 't that calls? is it my lady mother?

Is she not down so late, or up so early?

What unaccustom'd cause procures her hither?

Enter LADY CAPULET.

La. Cap. Why, how now, Juliet?

Jul. Madam, I am not well.

La. Cap. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death?

What wilt thou wash him from his grave with tears?

And if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him live:

Therefore, have done: some grief shows much of love;

But much of grief shows still some want of wit.

Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.

La. Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend

Which you weep for.

Jul. Feeling so the loss,

I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.

La. Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death,

As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.

Jul. What villain, madam?

La. Cap. That same villain, Romeo.

Jul. Villain and he be many miles asunder.

God pardon him! I do, with all my heart;

And yet no man, like he, doth grieve my heart.

La. Cap. That is, because the traitor lives.

Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands.

Would, none but I might venge my cousin's death!

La. Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not:

Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua,—

Where that same banish'd runagate doth live,—

Shall give him such an unaccustom'd dram,

That he shall soon keep Tybalt company:

And then I hope thou wilt be satisfied.

Jul. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied

With Romeo, till I behold him. Dead—

Is my poor heart, so for a kinsman vex'd:

Madam; if you could find out but a man

To bear a poison, I would temper it;

That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof,

Soon sleep in quiet. O, how my heart abhors

To hear him nam'd,—and cannot come to him,—

To wreak the love I bore my cousin

Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him!

La. Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man.

But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.

Jul. And joy comes well in such a needy time:
What are they, I beseech your ladyship?

La. Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child;
One, who, to put thee from thy heaviness,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy,
That thou expect'st not, nor I look'd not for.

Jul. Madam, in happy time, what day is that?

La. Cap. Marry, my child, early next Thursday morn,
The gallant, young, and noble gentleman,
The county Paris, at St. Peter's church,
Shall happily make thee a joyful bride.

Jul. Now, by St. Peter's church, and Peter too,
He shall not make me there a joyful bride.

I wonder at this haste; that I must wed
Ere he, that should be husband, comes to woo.

I pray you tell my lord and father, madam,
I will not marry yet; and, when I do, I swear,
It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,
Rather than Paris:—These are news indeed!

La. Cap. Here comes your father; tell him so yourself,
And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter CAPULET and NURSE.

Cap. When the sun sets, the earth doth drizzle dew;
But for the sunset of my brother's son,
It rains downright.—

How now? a conduit, girl? what, still in tears?
Evermore showering? In one little body

Thou counterfeit'st a bark, a sea, a wind:

For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,
Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body is,
Sailing in this salt flood; the winds, thy sighs;

Who,—raging with thy tears, and they with them,—
Without a sudden calm, will overset

Thy tempest-tossed body.—How now, wife?

Have you deliver'd to her our decree?

La. Cap. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks.

I would the fool were married to her grave!

Cap. Soft, take me with you, take me with you, wife.
How! will she none? doth she not give us thanks?

Is she not proud? doth she not count her bless'd,
Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought

So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom?

Jul. Not proud, you have; but thankful, that you have;
Proud can I never be of what I hate;

But thankful even for hate, that is meant love.

Cap. How now! how now, chop-logic! What is this?
Proud,—and, I thank you,—and, I thank you not;—

Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds,
But settle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next,

To go with Paris to St. Peter's church,

Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither.

Out, you green-sickness carrion! out, you baggage!
You tallow face!

La. Cap. Fie, fie! what, are you mad?

Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees,
Hear me with patience but to speak a word.

Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient wretch!
I tell thee what,—get thee to church o' Thursday,

Or never after look me in the face;

Speak not, reply not, do not answer me;

My fingers itch.—Wife, we scarce thought us bless'd,

That God had lent us but this only child;

But now I see this one is one too much,

And that we have a curse in having her;

Out on her, hilding!

Nurse. God in heaven bless her!—

You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.

Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? hold your tongue,
Good prudence; smatter with your gossips, go.

Nurse. I speak no treason.

Cap. O, God ye good den!

Nurse. May not one speak?

Cap.

Peace, you mumbling

Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl,
For here we need it not.

La. Cap. You are too hot.

Cap. God's bread! it makes me mad.

Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play,
Alone, in company, still my care hath been

To have her match'd; and having now provided
A gentleman of noble parentage,

Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly train'd,
Stuff'd (as they say) with honourable parts,

Proportion'd as one's heart could wish a man,—
And then to have a wretched puling fool,

A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender,
To answer—I 'll not wed,—I cannot love,

I am too young,—I pray you, pardon me;—
But, an you will not wed, I 'll pardon you:

Graze where you will, you shall not house with a

Look to 't, think on 't, I do not use to jest.

Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise:

An you be mine, I 'll give you to my friend;

An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die i' the streets

For, by my soul, I 'll ne'er acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine shall never do thee good:

'Trust to 't, bethink you, I 'll not be forsworn.

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,

That sees into the bottom of my grief?

O, sweet my mother, cast me not away!

Delay this marriage for a month, a week;

Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed

In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

La. Cap. Talk not to me, for I 'll not speak a

Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee.

Jul. O God!—O nurse! how shall this be prevent

My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;

How shall that faith return again to earth,

Unless that husband send it me from heaven

By leaving earth?—comfort me, counsel me.—

Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagem

Upon so soft a subject as myself!

What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy?

Some comfort, nurse.

Nurse. 'Faith, here 't is: Romeo

Is banished; and all the world to nothing,

That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you;

Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.

Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,

I think it best you married with the county.

O, he 's a lovely gentleman!

Romeo 's a dishclout to him; an eagle, madam,

Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye,

As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart

I think you are happy in this second match,

For it excels your first: or if it did not,

Your first is dead; or 't were as good he were,

As living here and you no use of him.

Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart?

Nurse. From my soul.

Or else beshrew them both.

Jul. Amen!

Nurse. What?

Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous

Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,

Having displeas'd my father, to Laurence's cell,

To make confession, and to be absolv'd.

Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done.

Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wicked fiend!

Is it more sin—to wish me thus forsworn,

Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue

Which she hath prais'd him with above compare

So many thousand times?—Go, counsellor!

Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twin—

I 'll to the friar, to know his remedy;

If all else fail, myself have power to die.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and PARIS.

Thursday, sir? the time is very short.
 My father Capulet will have it so;
 And so will he; he will not slack his haste.
 Say, you do not know the lady's mind;
 My course, I like it not.
 Moderately she weeps for Tybalt's death,
 And she have I little talk'd of love;
 And she smiles not in a house of tears.
 My father counts it dangerous,
 And so gives her sorrow so much sway;
 In wisdom, hastes our marriage,
 And in inundation of her tears;
 Which much minded by herself alone,
 Is from her by society;
 I know the reason of this haste.
 Alas! I knew not why it should be slow'd.

[Aside.]

And she comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter JULIET.

Quickly met, my lady, and my wife!
 It may be, sir, when I may be a wife.
 It may be, must be, love, on Thursday next.
 It must be shall be.

That 's a certain text.
 For you to make confession to this father?
 I never that, I should confess to you.
 Not deny to him, that you love me.
 I confess to you, that I love him.
 Will you, I am sure, that you love me,
 Do so, it will be of more price,
 Behind your back, than to your face.
 For soul, thy face is much abus'd with tears.
 The tears have got small victory by that;
 And not enough, before their spite,
 A wrong'st it, more than tears, with that art.
 It is no slander, sir, which is a truth;
 And spake, I spake it to my face.
 Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander'd it.
 Why should I be so, for it is not mine own.—
 Assure, holy father, now;
 Assure me to you at evening mass?
 Assurance serves me, pensive daughter, now:—
 I must entreat the time alone.
 My shield, I should disturb devotion!—
 Wednesday early will I rouse you:
 Come! and keep this holy kiss. [Ex. PARIS at the door! and when thou hast done so,
 With me: Past hope, past care, past help!
 Lie, I already know thy grief;
 And past the compass of my wits:
 I must, and nothing may prorogue it,
 And next be married to this county.
 Say me not, friar, that thou hear'st of this,
 Tell me how I may prevent it:
 I swear, thou canst give no help,
 And shall my resolution wise,
 And my knife I'll help it presently.
 My heart and Romeo's, thou our hands;
 And hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd,
 And seal'd to another deed,
 Soart with treacherous revolt,
 And stabs, this shall slay them both:
 And of thy long-experienc'd time,

Give me some present counsel; or, behold,
 'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife Shall play the umpire; arbitrating that
 Which the commission of thy years and art
 Could to no issue of true honour bring.
 Be not so long to speak; I long to die,
 If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.

Fri. Hold, daughter; I do spy a kind of hope,
 Which craves as desperate an execution
 As that is desperate which we would prevent.
 If, rather than to marry county Paris,
 Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself,
 Then is it likely, thou wilt undertake
 A thing like death to chide away this shame,
 That cop'st with death himself to 'scape from it;
 And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy.

Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,
 From off the battlements of yonder tower;
 Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk
 Where serpents are; chain me with roaring bears;
 Or hide me nightly in a charnel-house,
 O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling bones,
 With reeky shanks, and yellow chapless skulls;
 Or bid me go into a new-made grave,
 And hide me with a dead man in his shroud;
 Things that, to hear them told, have made me tremble
 And I will do it without fear or doubt,
 To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.

Fri. Hold, then; go home, be merry, give consent
 To marry Paris: Wednesday is to-morrow;
 To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
 Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber;
 Take thou this phial, being then in bed,
 And this distilled liquor drink thou off:
 When presently, through all thy veins shall run
 A cold and drowsy humour; for no pulse
 Shall keep his native progress, but surcease.
 No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou liv'st;
 The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
 To pale ashes; thy eyes' windows fall,
 Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;
 Each part, depriv'd of supple government,
 Shall stiff, and stark, and cold, appear like death,
 And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death
 Thou shalt continue two-and-forty hours,
 And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.
 Now when the bridegroom in the morning comes
 To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:
 Then (as the manner of our country is,
 In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier,
 Be borne to burial in thy kindred's grave,
 Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault,
 Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.
 In the mean time, against thou shalt awake,
 Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift;
 And hither shall he come; and he and I
 Will watch thy waking, and that very night
 Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
 And this shall free thee from this present shame;
 If no inconstant toy, nor womanish fear,
 Abate thy valour in the acting it.

Jul. Give me, give me! O tell not me of fear.

Fri. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous
 In this resolve: I'll send a friar with speed
 To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Love, give me strength! and strength shall help afford.

Farewell, dear father!

[Exeunt]

SCENE II.—A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, NURSE, and Servants.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.—

[Exit Servant.]

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

2 Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so?

2 Serv. Marry, sir, 't is an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he, that cannot lick his fingers, goes not with me.

Cap. Go, begone.—

[Exit Servant.]

We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.—

What, is my daughter gone to friar Laurence?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth.

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her: A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Enter JULIET.

Nurse. See, where she comes from shrift with merry look.

Cap. How now, my headstrong? where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the sin Of disobedient opposition

To you, and your behests; and am enjoin'd

By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here,

To beg your pardon:—Pardon, I beseech you!

Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you.

Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of this; I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence's cell; And gave him what becom'd<sup>a</sup> love I might, Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why, I am glad on 't; this is well,—stand up: This is as 't should be.—Let me see the county;

Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.—

Now, afore God, this reverend holy friar,

All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet, To help me sort such needful ornaments

As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow?

La. Cap. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her:—we'll to church to-morrow. [Exit JULIET and NURSE.]

La. Cap. We shall be short in our provision; 'T is now near night.

Cap. Tush! I will stir about, And all things shall be well, I warrant thee, wife;

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her;

I'll not to bed to-night:—let me alone;

I'll play the housewife for this once.—What, ho!—

They are all forth: Well, I will walk myself

To county Paris, to prepare him up

Against to-morrow: my heart is wond'rous light,

Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—Juliet's Chamber.

Enter JULIET and NURSE.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best:—But, gentle nurse,

I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night;

For I have need of many orisons

To move the heavens to smile upon my state,

Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter LADY CAPULET.

La. Cap. What, are you busy, ho? Need you my help?

Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessities

As are behoveful for our state to-morrow:

So please you, let me now be left alone,

And let the nurse this night sit up with you;

<sup>a</sup> Becom'd—becoming.

For, I am sure, you have your hands full all, In this so sudden business.

La. Cap. Good night!

Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need.

[Exit LADY CAPULET and Nurse.]

Jul. Farewell!—God knows, when we shall again.

I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins,

That almost freezes up the heat of life:

I'll call them back again to comfort me;—

Nurse!—What should she do here?

My dismal scene I needs must act alone.—

Come, phial.—

What if this mixture do not work at all?

Shall I be married then to-morrow morning?

No, no;—this shall forbid it:—lie thou there.—

[Laying down a dagger.]

What if it be a poison, which the friar

Subtly hath minister'd to have me dead;

Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,

Because he married me before to Romeo?

I fear, it is, and yet, methinks, it should not,

For he hath still been tried a holy man:

How if, when I am laid into the tomb,

I wake before the time that Romeo

Come to redeem me? there's a fearful point!

Shall I not then be stifled in the vault,

To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes?

And there die strangl'd ere my Romeo comes!

O, if I live, is it not very like,

The horrible conceit of death and night,

Together with the terror of the place,—

As in a vault, an ancient receptacle,

Where, for these many hundred years, the bones

Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd;

Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,

I lie fest'ring in his shroud; where, as they say,

At some hours in the night spirits resort;—

Alack, alack! it is not like, that I,

So early waking,—what with loathsome smells;

And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the earth,

That living mortals, hearing them, run mad;—

O! if I wake, shall I not be distraught,

Environ'd with all these hideous fears?

And madly play with my forefathers' joints?

And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud?

And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone

As with a club, dash out my desperate brains!

O, look! methinks, I see my cousin's ghost

Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body

Upon a rapier's point:—Stay, Tybalt, stay!

Romeo, Romeo, Romeo,—here's a drink—I drink!

[She throws herself on the dagger.]

SCENE IV.—Capulet's Hall.

Enter LADY CAPULET and NURSE.

La. Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch me some nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock-crow'd.

The curfew bell hath rung, 't is three o'clock:—

Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica!

Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, you cot-quean, go,

Get you to bed; 'faith, you'll be sick to-morrow

For this night's watching.

Cap. No, not a whit; What! I have watch'd

All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

La. Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in time:

watch you from such watching now.

[Exeunt LADY CAPULET and NURSE. jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!—Now, fellow,
are?

Servants, with spits, logs, and baskets.

Things for the cook, sir; but I know not
that.

Make haste, make haste. [Exit 1 Serv.]
—Hurry, fetch drier logs;

He will show thee where they are.

I have a head, sir, that will find out logs, trouble Peter for the matter. [Exit.]

Alas, and well said; A merry whoreson! ha, be logger-head.—Good father, 't is day:
I will be here with music straight,

[Music within.
As he would. I hear him near:—
Juliet!—what, ho!—what, nurse, I say!

Enter NURSE.

Juliet, go, and trim her up;
I have a word to say to Paris:—Hie, make haste, for the bridegroom he is come already:
I say. [Exeunt.]

—Juliet's Chamber; JULIET on the Bed.

Enter NURSE.

Mistress!—what, mistress!—Juliet!—fast, I arrant her, she:—

Why, lady!—fie, you slug-a-bed!—
I say!—madam! sweetheart!—why, hide!

What word?—you take your pennyworths now;
I warrant, for the next night, I warrant,

Paris hath set up his rest,
and shall rest but little.—God forgive me,
I am sure! how sound is she asleep!

Will you wake her:—Madam, madam, madam!
I warrant, take you in your bed;

Get you up, in faith.—Will it not be?
'T is so! and in your clothes! and down again!

Will you wake you: Lady! lady! lady!
—Help! help! my lady's dead!—
Alas, that ever I was born!

Juliet, ho!—my lord! my lady!

Enter LADY CAPULET.

What noise is here?
O lamentable day!

What is the matter?
Look, look! O heavy day!

O me, O me!—my child, my only life, is up, or I will die with thee!—
—call help.

Enter CAPULET.

Alas, what shame, bring Juliet forth; her lord is gone.

Juliet's dead, deceas'd, she's dead; alack the day!

Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead,
she's dead.

I'll let me see her:—Out, alas! she's cold;
her breath is settled, and her joints are stiff;

her lips have long been separated:
her eyes like an untimely frost have fallen on the daisies of the field.

O lamentable day!
O woful time!

Alas, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,
and tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and PARIS, with Musicians.

Fri. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return:

O son, the night before thy wedding-day
Hath death lain with thy wife:—There she lies,
Flower as she was, deflowered by him.

Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir;

My daughter he hath wedded! I will die,

And leave him all; life leaving, all is death's.

Par. Have I thought long to see this morning's face,

And doth it give me such a sight as this?

La. Cap. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!

Most miserable hour, that e'er time saw

In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!

But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,

But one thing to rejoice and solace in,

And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight.

Nurse. O woe! O woful, woful, woful day!

Most lamentable day! most woful day,

That ever, ever, I did yet behold!

O day! O day! O day! O hateful day!

Never was seen so black a day as this:

O woful day, O woful day!

Par. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spited, slain!

Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd,

By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!

O love! O life! not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd!

Uncomfortable time! why cam'st thou now

To murder, murder, our solemnity?

O child! O child!—my soul, and not my child!

Dead art thou!—alack! my child is dead!

And, with my child, my joys are buried!

Fri. Peace, ho, for shame! confusion's cure lives not

In these confusions. Heaven and yourself

Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath all,

And all the better is it for the maid:

Your part in her you could not keep from death;

But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.

The most you sought was her promotion;

For 't was your heaven, she should be advanc'd;

And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd,

Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?

O, in this love, you love your child so ill,

That you run mad, seeing that she is well:

She's not well married that lives married long;

But she's best married that dies married young.

Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary

On this fair corse; and, as the custom is,

In all her best array bear her to church:

For though some nature bids us all lament,

Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.

Cap. All things that we ordained festival,

Turn from their office to black funeral:

Our instruments to melancholy bells;

Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast;

Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change;

Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,

And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. Sir, go you in,—and, madam, go with him;—

And go, sir Paris;—every one prepare

To follow this fair corse unto her grave.

The heavens do low'r upon you, for some ill;

Move them no more, by crossing their high will.

[Exeunt CAP., L. CAP., PARIS, and FRIAR

1 Mus. Faith, we may put up our pipes, and be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah, put up, put up,

For, well you know, this is a pitiful case. [Exit NURSE

1 Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended

* Some nature—some impulses of nature—some part of our nature.

Enter PETER.

Pet. Musicians, O, musicians, Heart's ease, heart's ease; O, an you will have me live, play heart's ease.

1 Mus. Why heart's ease?

Pet. O, musicians, because my heart itself plays—My heart is full: O play me some merry dump,<sup>a</sup> to comfort me.

2 Mus. Not a dump we; 't is no time to play now.

Pet. You will not then?

Mus. No.

Pet. I will then give it you soundly.

1 Mus. What will you give us?

Pet. No money, on my faith; but the gleek: I will give you the minstrel.

1 Mus. Then will I give you the serving-creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotchets: I'll re you, I'll fa you;<sup>b</sup> Do you note me?

1 Mus. An you re us, and fa us, you note us.

2 Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit; I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger. Answer me like men:

When griping griefs the heart doth wound,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then music, with her silver sound;

Why, silver-sound? why music with her silver sound?
What say you, Simon Catling?<sup>c</sup>

1 Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Pretty! what say you, Hugh Rebeck?<sup>d</sup>

2 Mus. I say—silver sound, because musicians are called for silver.

Pet. Pretty too! What say you, James Soudy?

3 Mus. Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O, I cry you mercy! you are the singer will say for you. It is—music with her silver sound, because such fellows as you have seldom gold for their wages:—

Then music with her silver sound,
With speedy help doth lend redress.

[Exit, singing.]

1 Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same!

2 Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in to tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner. [Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Mantua. A Street.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering truth of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand:
My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne;
And, all this day, an unaccustom'd spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.
I dreamt, my lady came and found me dead;
(Strange dream! that gives a dead man leave to think,)
And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips,
That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.
Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy!

Enter BALTHASAR.

News from Verona!—How now, Balthasar?
Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?
How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How doth my lady Juliet? That I ask again,
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill.
Her body sleeps in Capels' monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives.
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault,
And presently took post to tell it you:
O pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it even so? then I defy you, stars!—
Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and paper,
And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.

Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have patience.
Your looks are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd:
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do:
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?

Bal. No, my good lord.

Rom. No matter: get thee gone
And hire those horses; I'll be with thee straight.

[Exit BALTHASAR.]

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.

<sup>a</sup>—a tune so called.

<sup>b</sup>you, I'll re you. Re and fa are the syllables, or is to solmization, or sol-fa-ing to the sounds D and F of the scale.

Let's see for means:—O, mischief! thou art
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men!

I do remember an apothecary,—
And hereabouts he dwells,—which late I noted
In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows,
Culling of simples; meagre were his looks,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shap'd fishes; and about his shelves
A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,
Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses,
Were thinly scatter'd to make up a show.
Noting this penury, to myself I said—
And if a man did need a poison now,
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him.
O, this same thought did but forerun my need;
And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house:
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut.—
What, ho! apothecary!

Enter APOTHECARY.

Ap. Who calls so loud?

Rom. Come hither, man.—I see that thou art Hold, there is forty ducats; let me have
A dram of poison; such soon-speeding gear
As will disperse itself through all the veins,
That the life-weary taker may fall dead;
And that the trunk may be discharged of breath
As violently, as hasty powder fir'd
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.

Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua
Is death to any he that utters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare, and full of wretchedness,
And fear'st to die? famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thy eyes,
Contempt and beggary hang upon thy back.
The world is not thy friend, nor the world's law
The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.

poverty, but not my will, consents.
 pray thy poverty, and not thy will.
 this in any liquid thing you will,
 it off; and, if you had the strength men, it would despatch you straight.
 here is thy gold; worse poison to men's souls, murder in this loathsome world,
 poor compounds that thou may'st not sell:
 poison, thou hast sold me none.
 my food, and get thyself in flesh.—
 al, and not poison; go with me grave, for there must I use thee. [Exeunt.]

ENE II.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar JOHN.

ly Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter Friar LAURENCE.

same should be the voice of friar John.— on Mantua: What says Romeo?
 ind be writ, give me his letter.
 ing to find a bare-foot brother out,
 order, to associate me,
 city visiting the sick,
 him,—the searchers of the town,
 hat we both were in a house affection pestilence did reign, doors, and would not let us forth;
 speed to Mantua there was stay'd.
 o bare my letter then to Romeo?
 ould not send it,—here it is again,
 assenger to bring it thee;
 ere they of infection.
 appy fortune! by my brotherhood,
 as not nice,* but full of charge ort; and the neglecting it ch danger: Friar John, go hence;
 rom crow, and bring it straight
 ].
 ther, I'll go and bring it thee. [Exit.]
 r must I to the monument alone;
 three hours will fair Juliet wake.
 drew me much, that Romeo notice of these accidents;
 rite again to Mantua,
 r at my cell till Romeo come.
 cose, clos'd in a dead man's tomb! [Exit.]

IL.—A Church-yard; in it, a Monument belonging to the Capulets.

, and his Page, bearing flowers and a torch.

me thy torch, boy: Hence, and stand aloof;—
 it, for I would not be seen.
 ew-trees lay thee all along,
 e ear close to the hollow ground;
 ot upon the church-yard tread
 (unfirm, with digging up of graves),
 It hear it: whistle then to me,
 if thou hear'st something approach.
 e flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.
 m almost afraid to stand alone
 urch-yard; yet I will adventure. [Retires.]
 t flower, with flowers thy bridal-bed I strew:
 anopy is dust and stones,
 sweet water nightly I will dew,
 hat, with tears distill'd by moans;
 s that I for thee will keep,
 I be, to strew thy grave and weep.

[The Boy whistles.]

s warning, something doth approach.

* Nice—trivial.

What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,
 To cross my obsequies, and true-love's rite?
 What, with a torch!—muffle me, night, a while. [Retires.]

Enter ROMEO and BALTHASAR with a torch, mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock, and the wrenching iron Hold, take this letter; early in the morning
 See thou deliver it to my lord and father.
 Give me the light; Upon thy life I charge thee,
 Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,
 And do not interrupt me in my course.
 Why I descend into this bed of death,
 Is, partly, to behold my lady's face:
 But, chiefly, to take thence from her dead finger
 A precious ring; a ring, that I must use
 In dear employment: therefore hence, be gone:—
 But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
 In what I further shall intend to do,
 By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint,
 And strew this hungry church-yard with thy limbs:
 The time and my intents are savage-wild;
 More fierce, and more inexorable far,
 Than empty tigers, or the roaring sea.

Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship.—Take thou
 that:

Live and be prosperous; and farewell, good fellow.

Bal. For all this same, I'll hide me hereabout;
 His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt. [Retires.]

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,
 Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth,
 Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,
 [Breaking open the door of the monument.]

And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food!

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague,
 That murder'd my love's cousin;—with which grief,
 It is supposed the fair creature died,—
 And here is come to do some villainous shame
 To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.—[Advances]
 Stop thy unhallow'd toil, vile Montague.
 Can vengeance be pursu'd further than death?
 Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee:
 Obey, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must, indeed; and therefore came I hither.
 Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man,
 Fly hence and leave me;—think upon these gone;
 Let them affright thee.—I beseech thee, youth,
 Put not another sin upon my head,
 By urging me to fury:—O, be gone!
 By heaven, I love thee better than myself;
 For I come hither arm'd against myself:
 Stay not, be gone;—live, and hereafter say—
 A madman's mercy bade thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy commiseration,
 And apprehend thee for a felon here.

Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee,
 boy. [They fight.]

Page. O lord! they fight: I will go call the watch.
 [Exit Page.]

Par. O, I am slain! [Falls.]—If thou be merciful, Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies]

Rom. In faith, I will:—Let me peruse this face,— Mercutio's kinsman, noble county Paris:—
 What said my man, when my betossed soul
 Did not attend him as we rode? I think,
 He told me Paris should have married Juliet:
 Said he not so? or did I dream it so?
 Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,
 To think it was so?—O, give me thy hand,
 One writ with me in sour misfortune's book!
 I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave,—
 A grave? O, no; a lantern, slaughter'd youth,
 For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes

This vault a feasting presence full of light.
Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd.

[Laying PARIS in the monument.]

How oft when men are at the point of death,
Have they been merry? which their keepers call
A lightning before death: O, how may I
Call this a lightning?—O, my love! my wife!
Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath,
Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty:
Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheeks,
And death's pale flag is not advanced there.—
Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?
O, what more favour can I do to thee,
Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain,
To sunder his that was thine enemy?
Forgive me, cousin!—Ah, dear Juliet,
Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe That unsubstantial death is amorous;
And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
Thee here in dark to be his paramour?
For fear of that, I still will stay with thee;
And never from this palace of dim night
Depart again; here, here will I remain
With worms that are thy chamber-maids; O, here
Will I set up my everlasting rest;
And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars
From this world-wearied flesh.—Eyes, look your last!
Arms, take your last embrace! and lips, O you
The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
A dateless bargain to engrossing death!—
Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!
Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on
The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!
Here 's to my love!—[Drinks.] O, true apothecary;
Thy drugs are quick.—Thus with a kiss I die. [Dies.]

Enter at the other end of the church-yard, Friar LAURENCE, with a lantern, crow, and spade.

Fri. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to-night
Have my old feet stumbled at graves!—Who 's there?
Bal. Here 's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my friend,
What torch is yond', that vainly lends his light
To grubs and eyeless skulls; as I discern,
It burneth in the Capels' monument.

Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there 's my master,
One that you love.

Fri. Who is it?

Bal. Romeo.

Fri. How long hath he been there?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not, sir;

My master knows not but I am gone hence;
And fearfully did menace me with death,
If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. Stay then, I'll go alone:—Fear comes upon me;
O, much I fear some ill unlucky thing.

Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,
I dreamt my master and another fought,
And that my master slew him.

Fri. Romeo!—[Advances.]

Alack, alack, what blood is this, which stains
The stony entrance of this sepulchre?—
What mean these masterless and gory swords
To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?

[Enters the monument.]

Romeo! O, pale!—Who else? what, Paris too?
And in blood?—Ah, what an unkind hour
Hath this lamentable chance!

[Juliet wakes and stirs.]
Uncomfortable friar! where is my lord?

I do remember well where I should be,
And there I am:—where is my Romeo? [Noise]

Fri. I hear some noise.—Lady, come from
Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep;
A greater Power than we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents; come, come, away!
Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead;
And Paris too; come, I'll dispose of thee
Among a sisterhood of holy nuns:
Stay not to question, for the watch is coming.
Come, go, good Juliet,—[Noise again.]
longer stay.

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not stir
What 's here? a cup, clos'd in my true love's
Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end:—
O churl! drink all; and left no friendly drop
To help me after?—I will kiss thy lips;
Haply, some poison yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a restorative.
Thy lips are warm!

1 Watch. [Within.] Lead, boy:—What

Jul. Yea, noise?—then I 'll be brief.—[Exit]

Warm and new kill'd.

 O me! this sight of death is as a bell,
 To ring up old age to a sepulchre.

Enter MONTAGUE and others.

Montague; for thou art early up,
 And heir now early down.
 My liege, my wife is dead to-night;
 My exile hath stopp'd her breath:
 What woe conspires against my age?
 O, and thou shalt see.
 Thou untaught! what manners is in this,
 To lay thy father to a grave?
 I'll up the mouth of outrage for a while,
 And fear these ambiguities,
 To spring their head, their true descent;
 I'll be general of your woes,
 And even to death: Meantime forbear
 To be slave to patience.—
 O parties of suspicion,
 Thou the greatest, able to do least,
 Delected, as the time and place
 Against me, of this direful murder;
 And, both to impeach and purge
 My guilt and myself excus'd.
 O, say at once what thou dost know in this.
 Be brief, for my short date of breath
 Is as a tedious tale.
 He dead, was husband to that Juliet,
 And she, dead, that Romeo's faithful wife;
 My son and her, my daughter-in-law,
 My son-in-law, whose untimely death
 My new-made bridegroom from this city
 Did not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd.
 O, that siege of grief from her,
 Would have married her perforce
 To me:—Then comes she to me;
 And looks, bid me devise some means
 To live in this second marriage,
 Or else there would she kill herself.
 O, so tutor'd by my art,
 My son; which so took effect
 For it wrought on her Death: meantime I writ to Romeo,
 To hither come as this dire night,
 To take her from her borrow'd grave,
 That the potion's force should cease.
 I bore my letter, friar John,
 An accident; and yesternight
 Deliver'd it back: Then all alone,
 An hour of her waking,
 I took her from her kindred's vault,
 And kept her closely at my cell,
 The dagger was worn at the back.

Till I conveniently could send to Romeo:
 But when I came (some minute ere the time
 Of her awaking), here untimely lay
 The noble Paris, and true Romeo, dead.
 She wakes; and I entreated her come forth,
 And bear this work of heaven with patience.
 But then a noise did scare me from the tomb,
 And she, too desperate, would not go with me,
 But (as it seems) did violence on herself.
 All this I know; and to the marriage
 Her nurse is privy: And, if aught in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
 Be sacrific'd, some hour before the time,
 Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man.—
 Where's Romeo's man? what can he say to this?

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's death;
 And then in post he came from Mantua,
 To this same place, to this same monument.
 This letter he early bid me give his father:
 And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,
 If I departed not, and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter, I will look on it.—
 Where is the county's page, that rais'd the watch?
 Sirrah, what made your master in this place?

Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave,
 And bid me stand aloof, and so I did:
 Anon, comes one with light to ope the tomb;
 And, by and by, my master drew on him;
 And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words:
 Their course of love, the tidings of her death;
 And here he writes—that he did buy a poison
 Of a poor 'pothecary, and therewithal
 Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.
 Where be these enemies? Capulet! Montague!—
 See what a scourge is laid upon your hate,
 That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love!
 And I, for winking at your discords too,
 Have lost a brace of kinsmen:—all are punish'd.

Cap. O, brother Montague, give me thy hand.
 This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
 Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more:
 For I will raise her statue in pure gold;
 That whiles Verona by that name is known,
 There shall no figure at that rate be set,
 As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie:
 Poor sacrifices of our enmity!

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings
 The sun for sorrow will not show his head:
 Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things;
 Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:
 For never was a story of more woe
 Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Exeunt

Enter Ghost.

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that 's dead.

Mar. Thou art a scholar, speak to it, Horatio.<sup>a</sup>

Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio.

Hor. Most like;—it harrows me with fear, and wonder.

Ber. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Question it, Horatio.

Hor. What art thou, that usurp'st this time of night,
Together with that fair and warlike form
In which the majesty of buried Denmark
Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee, speak.

Mar. It is offended.

Ber. See! it stalks away.

Hor. Stay; speak: speak I charge thee, speak.

Mar. 'T is gone, and will not answer. [Exit Ghost.]

Ber. How now, Horatio? you tremble, and look pale:

Is not this something more than fantasy?

What think you on 't?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe,
Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the king?

Hor. As thou art to thyself:

Such was the very armour he had on,
When he the ambitious Norway combated;
So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle,
He smote the sledded Polacks<sup>b</sup> on the ice.
'T is strange.

Mar. Thus, twice before, and just at this dead hour,
With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know
not;

But, in the gross and scope of my opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,

Why this same strict and most observant watch

So nightly toils the subject of the land?

And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,

And foreign mart for implements of war:

Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task

Does not divide the Sunday from the week:

What might be toward<sup>c</sup> that this sweaty haste

Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day;

Who is 't that can inform me?

Hor. That can I;

At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king,

Whose image even but now appear'd to us,

Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,

Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate pride,

Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet

(For so this side of our known world esteem'd him)

Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact,

Well ratified by law and heraldry,

Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands,

Which he stood seiz'd on, to the conqueror:

Against the which, a moiety competent

Was gaged by our king; which had return'd

To the inheritance of Fortinbras,

Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same cov'nant

And carriage of the article design'd,

His fell to Hamlet: Now, sir, young Fortinbras,

<sup>a</sup> Exorcisms were usually performed in Latin—the language of the church-service.

<sup>c</sup> What might be in preparation. To-ward, to-ward, is the Anglo-Saxon participle, equivalent to coming, about to come.

Of unimproved<sup>a</sup> mettle hot and full,

Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there,

Shark'd up a list of landless resolute,

For food and diet, to some enterprize

That hath a stomach in 't: which is no other

(And it doth well appear unto our state,)

But to recover of us, by strong hand,

And terms compulsative, those foresaid lands

So by his father lost: And this, I take it,

Is the main motive of our preparations;

The source of this our watch; and the chief head

Of this post-haste and romage<sup>b</sup> in the land.

Ber. I think it be no other, but even so:

Well may it sort, that this portentous figure

Comes armed through our watch: so like the king

That was, and is, the question of these wars.

Hor. A moth it is to trouble the mind's eye.

In the most high and palmy state of Rome,

A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,

The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead

Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets:

As stars with trains of fire and dews of blood,

Disasters in the sun; and the moist star,<sup>c</sup>

Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands,

Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse.

And even the like precurse of fierce events,

As harbingers preceding still the fates,

And prologue to the omen<sup>d</sup> coming on,

Have heaven and earth together demonstrated

Unto our climatures and countrymen.

Re-enter Ghost.

Eut, soft; behold! lo, where it comes again!

I 'll cross it, though it blast me.—Stay, illusion!

If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,

Speak to me:

If there be any good thing to be done,

That may to thee do ease, and grace to me,

Speak to me:

If thou art privy to thy country's fate,

Which, happily, foreknowing may avoid,

O, speak!

Or, if thou hast uphoarded in thy life

Extorted treasure in the womb of earth,

For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death,

Speak of it:—stay, and speak.—Stop it, Maresius!

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partisan?

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Ber. 'T is here!

Hor. 'T is here!

Mar. 'T is gone!

We do it wrong, being so majestical,

To offer it the show of violence;

For it is, as the air, invulnerable,

And our vain blows malicious mockery.

Ber. It was about to speak, when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing

Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,

The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,

Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat

Awake the god of day; and, at his warning,

Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,

The extravagant and erring spirit hies

To his confine: and of the truth herein

This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.

Some say, that ever 'gainst that season comes

Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,

The bird of dawn singeth all night long:

Laer. Dread my lord,
Your leave and favour to return to France ;

To show my duty in your coronation ;
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again towards France,
And how them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave ? What says Polonius ?

Pol. He hath, my lord, wrung from me my slow leave,
By laboursome petition ; and, at last,
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent :
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes ; time be thine,
And thy best graces spend it at thy will !

But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. A little more than kin, and less than kind.<sup>a</sup>

[Aside.]

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you ?

Ham. Not so, my lord, I am too much i' the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nightly colour off,
And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.

Do not, for ever, with thy veiled lids
Seek for thy noble father in the dust :
Thou know'st, 't is common ; all that lives must die,
Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be,
Why seems it so particular with thee ?

Ham. Seems, madam ! nay, it is ; I know not seems.

'T is not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, moods, shows of grief,
That can denote me truly : These, indeed, seem,
For they are actions that a man might play ;
But I have that within which passeth show ;
These, but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'T is sweet and commendable in your nature,
Hamlet,

To give these mourning duties to your father :
But, you must know, your father lost a father ;
That father lost, lost his ; and the survivor bound
In filial obligation for some term

To do obsequious<sup>b</sup> sorrow : But to persevere
In obstinate condolement, is a course
Of impious stubbornness ; 't is unmanly grief :
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven ;
A heart unfortified, a mind impatient,
An understanding simple and unschool'd :

For what, we know, must be, and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we, in our peevish opposition,
Take it to heart ? Fye ! 't is a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd ; whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first corse, till he that diel to-day,

" This must be so." We pray you, throw to earth
This unprevailing woe ; and think of us
As of a father : for let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our throne,
And, with no less nobility of love,

<sup>a</sup> The King has called him "my cousin Hamlet." He says, in a suppressed tone, "A little more than kin"—a little more than cousin. The King adds, "and my son." Hamlet says, "less than kind ;"—I am little of the same nature with you. Kind is constantly used in the sense of nature by Ben Jonson and other contemporaries of Shakspeare.

<sup>b</sup> Obsequious sorrow—funereal sorrow.—from obsequet.

Than that which dearest father bears on son,
Do I impart towards you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde to our desire :

And, we beseech you, bend you to remain
Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers, Hamlet;
I pray thee, stay with us; go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.

King. Why, 't is a loving and a fair reply;
Be as ourself in Denmark.—Madam, come;
This gentle and unforc'd accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart: in grace whereof,
No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell;
And the king's rouse the heavens shall bruit again,
Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.

[Ex. KING, QUEEN, LORDS, &c., POL., and LAERTES.]

Ham. O, that this too too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew!

Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! O God!
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seems to me all the uses of this world!

Fye on 't! O fye! 't is an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed; things rank, and gross in nature,
Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead!—nay, not so much, not two;
So excellent a king; that was, to this,
Hyperion to a satyr: so loving to my mother,
That he might not betwixt the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on: And yet, within a month,—
Let me not think on 't;—Frailty, thy name is woman!—
A little month; or ere those shoes were old,
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears, why she, even she,—
O heaven! a beast, that wants discourse of reason,<sup>a</sup>
Would have mourn'd longer,—married with mine

uncle,
My father's brother; but no more like my father,
Than I to Hercules: Within a month;
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing of her galled eyes,
She married:—O most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets;
It is not, nor it cannot come to, good;
But break, my heart, for I must hold my tongue!

Enter HORATIO, BERNARDO, and MARCELLUS.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you well:
Horatio,—or I do forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I 'll change that name with you.

And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio?— Marcellus?

Mar. My good lord,

Ham. I am very glad to see you; good even, sir,—
But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not have your enemy say so;
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To make it truster of your own report
Against yourself: I know, you are no truant.
But what is your affair in Elsinore?
We 'll teach you to drink deep, ere you depart.

<sup>a</sup> Discourse of reason is the discussion of reason—the faculty of pursuing a train of thought, or of passing from one thought to another.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student:
I think it was to see my mother's wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift,<sup>a</sup> Horatio! the funeral bawls meats

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.

'Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven

Ere I had ever seen that day, Horatio!—

My father,—Methinks, I see my father.

Hor.

O, where,

My lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once, he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw! who?

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham.

The king my father

Hor. Season your admiration for a while

With an attent ear; till I may deliver,

Upon the witness of these gentlemen,

This marvel to you.

Ham. For heaven's love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen,
Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
In the dead waste and middle of the night,
Been thus encounter'd. A figure like your father,
Arm'd at all points, exactly, cap-à-pé,

Appears before them, and, with solemn march,
Goes slow and stately by them: thrice he walk'd,
By their oppress'd and fear-surpriz'd eyes,

Within his truncheon's length; whilst they, lest they Almost to jelly with the act of fear,
Stand dumb, and speak not to him. This to me

In dreadful secrecy impart they did;

And I with them the third night kept the watch:

Where, as they had deliver'd, both in time,

Form of the thing, each word made true and good,

The apparition comes: I knew your father;

These hands are not more like.

Ham.

But where was this?

Mar. My lord, upon the platform where we watch.

Ham. Did you not speak to it?

Hor.

My lord, I did.

But answer made it none: yet once, methought,

It lifted up its head, and did address

Itself to motion, like as it would speak:

But, even then, the morning cock crew loud;

And at the sound it shrunk in haste away,
And vanish'd from our sight.

Ham.

'T is very strange.

Hor. As I do live, my honour'd lord, 't is true;

And we did think it writ down in our duty,
To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me.

Hold you the watch to-night?

All.

We do, my lord.

Ham. Arm'd, say you?<sup>b</sup>

All.

Arm'd, my lord.

Ham.

From top to toe?

All. My lord, from head to foot.

Ham.

Then saw you not

His face.

Hor. O, yes, my lord; he wore his beaver up.

Ham. What, look'd he frowningly?

Hor.

A countenance

In sorrow than in anger.

<sup>a</sup> Thrift, thrift. It was a frugal arrangement,—a thrifty proceeding.

<sup>b</sup> "Arm'd, say you?" without doubt, is asked with reference to the Ghost, who has been described by Horatio as

"Arm'd at all points exactly, cap-à-pé."

Pale, or red ?
 very pale.
 And fix'd his eyes upon you ?
 constantly.
 I would I had been there.
 could have much amaz'd you.

Very like,
 say'd it long ?
 the one with modern haste might tell a dread.

Longer, longer
 when I saw it.
 His beard was grizly <sup>9</sup> no.
 as, as I have seen it in his life,
 'd.

I will watch to-night ;
 will walk again.

I warrant it will assume my noble father's person, it, though hell itself should gape, sold my peace. I pray you all, hitherto conceal'd this sight,
 be in your silence still ;
 ere else shall hap to-night,
 understanding, but no tongue ;
 your loves. So, fare ye well :
 form, 'twixt eleven and twelve,

Our duty to your honour.
 for love, as mine to you : Farewell.

[Exeunt HOR., MAR., and BEN. spirit in arms ! all is not well ;
 foul play : 'would the night were come !
 still, my soul. Foul deeds will rise, ere earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes.

[Exit.

III.—A Room in Polonius' House.

Enter LAERTES and OPHELIA.

necessaries are embark'd ; farewell :
 the winds give benefit,
 the assistant, do not sleep,
 far from you.

Do you doubt that ?
 Hamlet, and the trifling of his favours, honour, and a toy in blood ;
 the youth of primy nature,
 permanent, sweet, not lasting,
 and suppliance of a minute ;

no more but so ?

Think it no more :
 present, does not grow alone
 balk ; but, as this temple waxes, the vice of the mind and soul that. Perhaps, he loves you now ; all, our caution, doth besmirch <sup>a</sup>
 his will : but, you must fear, weigh'd, his will is not his own ;
 'tis subject to his birth :
 as unvalued persons do,
 self ; for on his choice depends the health of the whole state ;
 must his choice be circumscrib'd and yielding of that body,
 the head : Then if he says, he loves you,
 whom so far to believe it,
 secular sect and force saying deed ; which is no further,
 a voice of Denmark goes withal.
 that loss your honour may sustain, at ; castel, a crafty way to deceive ; besmirch, to

If with too credent ear you list his songs ;
 Or lose your heart ; or your chaste treasure open
 To his unmaster'd importunity.
 Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister ;
 And keep within the rear of your affection,
 Out of the shot and danger of desire.
 The chariest <sup>a</sup> maid is prodigal enough,
 If she unmask her beauty to the moon :
 Virtue itself scapes not calumnious strokes :
 The canker galls the infants of the spring,
 Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd ;
 And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
 Contagious blastments are most imminent.
 Be wary then : best safety lies in fear ;
 Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson keep,
 As watchmen to my heart : But, good my brother,
 Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
 Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven ;
 Whilst, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
 Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
 And recks not his own read.<sup>b</sup>

Laer. O fear me not.
 I stay too long ;—But here my father comes.

Enter POLONIUS.

A double blessing is a double grace ;
 Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes ! aboard, aboard, for shame ;
 The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
 And you are staid for. There, my blessing with you

[Laying his hand on LAERTES' head

And these few precepts in thy memory
 See thou character. Give thy thoughts no tongue,
 Nor any unproportion'd thought his act.
 Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
 The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
 Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel ;
 But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
 Of each new-hatch'd, unfledg'd comrade. Beware
 Of entrance to a quarrel : but, being in,
 Bear 't that the opposed may beware of thee.
 Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice :
 Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.
 Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
 But not express'd in fancy ; rich, not gaudy :
 For the apparel oft proclaims the man ;
 And they in France of the best rank and station
 Are of a most select and generous chief in that.<sup>c</sup>
 Neither a borrower, nor a lender be :
 For loan oft loses both itself and friend ;
 And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
 This above all,—To thine ownself be true ;
 And it must follow, as the night the day,
 Thou canst not then be false to any man.
 Farewell ; my blessing season this in thee !

Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.
Pol. The time invites you ; go, your servants tend.

Laer. Farewell, Ophelia ; and remember well
 What I have said to you.

Oph. 'T is in my memory lock'd,
 And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell. [Exit LAERTES.

Pol. What is 't, Ophelia, he hath said to you ?

Oph. So please you, something touching the lord Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought :
 'T is told me, he hath very oft of late
 Given private time to you : and you yourself

<sup>a</sup> Chariest—most cautious.      <sup>b</sup> Road—counsel doctrine.
<sup>c</sup> Chief, Chef, literally the head, here signifies eminence, superiority. Those of the best rank and station are of a most select and generous superiority in the indication of their dignity by their apparel.

Have of your audience been most free and bounteous :
If it be so, (as so 't is put on me,
And that in way of caution,) I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly,
As it behoves my daughter, and your honour :
What is between you ? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late, made many tenders
Of his affection to me.

Pol. Affection ? puh ! you speak like a green girl,
Unsifted in such perilous circumstance.

Do you believe his tenders, as you call them ?

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I 'll teach you : think yourself a baby ;
That you have ta'en his tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly,
Or, (not to crack the wind of the poor phrase, Roaming it thus,) you 'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importun'd me with love,
In honourable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it ; go to, go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my
lord,

With all the vows of heaven.

Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do know,
When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Gives the tongue vows : these blazes, daughter,
Giving more light than heat,—extinct in both,
Even in their promise, as it is a making,—
You must not take for fire. From this time, daughter,
Be somewhat scanted of your maiden presence ;
Set your entreatments at a higher rate,
Than a command to parley. For lord Hamlet,
Believe so much in him, that he is young ;
And with a larger tether may he walk,
Than may be given you : In few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows ; for they are brokers ;—
Not of the eye which their investments show,
But mere implorators of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious bonds,
The better to beguile. This is for all,—
I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,
Have you so slander any moment's leisure,
As to give words or talk with the lord Hamlet.
Look to 't, I charge you ; come your ways.

Oph. I shall obey, my lord.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Platform.

Enter HAMLET, HORATIO, and MARCELLUS.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly. Is it very cold ?

Hor. It is a nipping and an eager air.

Ham. What hour now ?

Hor. I think, it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No, it is struck.

Hor. Indeed ? I heard it not ; then it draws near the season,

Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

[A flourish of trumpets, and ordnance shot off, within.]

What does this mean, my lord ?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night, and takes his rouse,

Keeps wassels, and the swaggering up-spring reels ;
And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom ?

Ham. Ay, marry, is 't :

And to my mind, though I am native here,
And to the manner born, it is a custom
More honour'd in the breach than the observance.
This heavy-headed revel, east and west,
Makes us traduc'd, and tax'd of other nations :
They clepe us drunkards, and with swinish phrase

Soil our addition ; and, indeed, it takes
From our achievements, though perform'd at height,
The pith and marrow of our attribute.
So, oft it chanceth in particular men,
That for some vicious mole of nature in them,
As, in their birth, (wherein they are not guilty, Since nature cannot choose his origin,)
By their o'ergrowth of some complexion,
Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason ;
Or by some habit, that too much o'er-leavens
The form of plausive manners ; that these men,
Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect ;
Being nature's livery, or fortune's star,
Their virtues else (be they as pure as grace,
As infinite as man may undergo,)
Shall in the general censure take corruption
From that particular fault : The dram of ill
Doth all the noble substance often dout,
To his own scandal.

Enter GHOST.

Hor. Look, my lord, it comes !

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend !
Be thou a spirit of health, or goblin damn'd,
Bring with thee airs from heaven, or blasts from
Be thy intents wicked, or charitable,
Thou com'st in such a questionable shape,
That I will speak to thee ; I 'll call thee, Hamlet,
King, father, royal Dane : O, answer me :
Let me not burst in ignorance ! but tell,
Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearsed in death,
Have burst their cerements ! why the sepulchre,
Wherein we saw thee quietly in-urn'd,
Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws,
To cast thee up again ! What may this mean,
That thou, dead corse, again, in complete steel,
Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon,
Making night hideous ; and we fools of nature,
So horribly to shake our disposition,
With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls ?
Say, why is this ? wherefore ? what should we do ?

Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire
To you alone.

Mar. Look, with what courteous action
It wafts you to a more removed ground :
But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speak ; then will I follow it.

Hor. Do not, my lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the
I do not set my life at a pin's fee ;
And, for my soul, what can it do to that,
Being a thing immortal as itself ?

It waves me forth again ;—I 'll follow it.

Hor. What, if it tempt you toward the flood,
Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff,
That beetles o'er his base into the sea ?
And there assume some other horrible form,
Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason,
And draw you into madness ? think of it :
The very place puts toys of desperation,
Without more motive, into every brain,
That looks so many fathoms to the sea,
And hears it roar beneath.

Ham. It wafts me still :—
Go on, I 'll follow thee.

Mar. You shall not go, my lord.

Ham. Hold off your hands.

Hor. Be rul'd, you shall not go.

Ham. My fate cries
And makes each petty artery in this body
As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.— [Ghost]

call'd;—unhand me, gentlemen;
[Breaking from them.]
 I'll make a ghost of him that lets me:—
 Go on, I'll follow thee.
[Exeunt GHOST and HAMLET.]
 waxes desperate with imagination.
 't is not fit thus to obey him.
 To what issue will this come?
 something is rotten in the state of Denmark.
 heaven will direct it.

Nay, let's follow him. [Exeunt.]

V.—A more remote Part of the Platform.

Re-enter GHOST and HAMLET.

Where wilt thou lead me? speak, I'll go no farther.

Mark me.

I will.

My hour is almost come,
 sulphurous and tormenting flames are up myself.

Alas, poor ghost!
 't is my duty to lend thee serious hearing shall unfold.

Speak, I am bound to hear.
 So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt see.

What?
 I am thy father's spirit;
 a certain term to walk the night;
 a day, confin'd to fast in fires,
 for crimes, done in my days of nature, and purg'd away. But that I am forbid secrets of my prison-house, to unfold, whose lightest word blow up thy soul; freeze thy young blood;
 so eyes, like stars, start from their spheres;
 and combined locks to part,
 no artificial hair to stand an end,
 upon the fretful porcupine;
 no blazon must not be wash and blood:—List, Hamlet, O list!—
 I ever thy dear father love,—
 heaven!

Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder.
 further?
 further most foul, as in the best it is;
 at foul, strange, and unnatural.
 bid me to know it; that I, with wings as fast as fire,
 as, or the thoughts of love,
 to my revenge.

I find thee apt;
 shouldst thou be than the fat weed self in ease on Lethe wharf, as not stir in this. Now Hamlet, hear:
 out, that sleeping in mine orchard, hang me; so the whole ear of Denmark
 ed process of my death
 'd: but know, thou noble youth, that did sting thy father's life,
 his crown.

My prophetic soul! mine uncle!
 y, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,
 craft of his wit, with traitorous gifts,
 wit, and gifts, that have the power
 I won to his shameful lust my most seeming virtuous queen:
 what a falling-off was there!
 case love was of that dignity, hand in hand even with the vow
 in marriage; and to decline

* Let's me—obstructs me.

Upon a wretch, whose natural gifts were poor
 To those of mine!
 But virtue, as it never will be mov'd,
 Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven;
 So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,
 Will sate itself in a celestial bed,
 And prey on garbage.
 But soft! methinks, I scent the morning's air;
 Brief let me be:—Sleeping within mine orchard,
 My custom always in the afternoon,
 Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
 With juice of cursed hebenon in a vial,
 And in the porches of mine ears did pour
 The leperous distilment; whose effect
 Holds such an enmity with blood of man,
 That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through
 The natural gates and alleys of the body;
 And, with a sudden vigour, it doth posset
 And curd, like aigre droppings into milk,
 The thin and wholesome blood: so did it mine;
 And a most instant tetter bak'd about,
 Most Lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust,
 All my smooth body.

Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand,
 Of life, of crown, and queen, at once despatch'd.
 Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
 Unhousel'd, disappointed, unanel'd;
 No reckoning made, but sent to my account
 With all my imperfections on my head:
 O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible!
 If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;
 Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
 A couch for luxury and damned incest.
 But, howsoever thou pursu'st this act,
 Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive
 Against thy mother's ought; leave her to heaven,
 And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
 To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once!
 The glow worm shows the matin to be near,
 And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire:

Adieu, adieu, Hamlet! remember me. [Exit.]
 Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth! What else?

And shall I couple hell?—O fye!—Hold, my heart;
 And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,
 But bear me stiffly up!—Remember thee?
 Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat
 In this distracted globe. Remember thee?
 Yea, from the table of my memory
 I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,
 All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past,
 That youth and observation copied there;
 And thy commandment all alone shall live
 Within the book and volume of my brain,
 Unmix'd with baser matter: yes, yes, by heaven.
 O most pernicious woman!
 O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!
 My tables, my tables,—meet it is I set it down,
 That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain;
 At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmark; [Writing.]
 So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word;
 It is, "Adieu, adieu! remember me."
 I have sworn 't.

Hor. [Within.] My lord, my lord,—

Mar. [Within.] Lord Hamlet,—

Hor. [Within.] Heaven secure him!

Mar. [Within.] So be it!

Hor. [Within.] Illo, ho, ho, my lord!

Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come.

* These words describe the last offices which were performed to the dying. To housel, is to "minister the communion to one who lyeth on his death bed." Disappointed, is, not appointed, not prepared. Unanel'd, is, without the administration of extreme unction, which was called anointing.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Hor. How is't, my noble lord?
 Mar. What news, my lord?
 Hor. O, wonderful!
 Mar. Good my lord, tell it.
 Hor. No.
 Mar. He reveal it.

 Hor. How say you then; would heart of man once think it?
 Mar. You'll be secret.
 Hor. Ay, by heaven, my lord.
 Mar. There's noisè a-rising, swelling in all Denmark.
 Hor. 'Tis an earnest summons.
 Mar. These words in-great, my lord, come from the court.
 Hor. To call you thither.
 Mar. Why, right; you are in the right;
 And so, without more circumstance at all,
 I hold it fit that we shake hands and part;
 For our great business and desire shall point us—
 For every man has business and desire,
 Some great, some small;—and for mine own poor part,
 Look you, I'll go pray.
 Hor. These are but wild and hurling words, my lord.
 Mar. I'm sorry they offend you, heartily;
 Yes, heartily.
 Mar. There's no offence, my lord.
 Hor. Yes, by St. Patrick, but there is, my lord.
 And much offence too, touching this vision here.
 If it be an honest ghost, that let me tell you;
 For your desire to know what is between us,
 Overtakes it as you may. And now, good friends,
 As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers,
 Give me one poor request.
 Hor. What is't, my lord?
 Mar. We will.
 Hor. Never make known what you have seen to-night.
 Mar. My lord, we will not.
 Hor. Nay, but swear't.
 Mar. In faith,
 My lord, not I.
 Hor. Nor I, my lord, in faith.
 Mar. Upon my sword.
 Hor. We have sworn, my lord, already.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Room in Polonius' House.

Enter Polonius and Reynaldo.

Pol. Give him his money, and these notes, Reynaldo.
 Rey. I will, my lord.
 Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,
 Before you visit him, to make inquiry
 Of his behaviour.
 Rey. My lord, I did intend it.
 Pol. Marry, well said: very well said. Look you, sir,
 Inquire me first what Danes* are in Paris;
 And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,
 What company, at what expence; and finding
 Of his companions, and drift of question,
 How they do know my son, come you more nearer
 To his acquaintance, and be used by old writers as the ancient name of Den-

But, my good lord,—

Marry, sir, here 's my drift;

Enter OPHELIA.

ill!—How now, Ophelia? what 's the er?

my lord, I have been so affrighted!
 what, in the name of heaven?
 rd, as I was sewing in my chamber,
 —with his doublet all unbrac'd;
 is head; his stockings foul'd,
 d down-gyved to his ancle;
 t; his knees knocking each other;
 k so piteous in purport,
 en loosed out of hell,
 rors,—he comes before me.
 e thy love?

My lord, I do not know;
 o fear it.

What said he?
 k me by the wrist, and held me hard;

Then goes he to the length of all his arm;
 And, with his other hand thus, o'er his brow
 He falls to such perusal of my face,
 As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so;
 At last,—a little shaking of mine arm,
 And thrice his head thus waving up and down,—
 He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound,
 That it did seem to shatter all his bulk,
 And end his being: That done, he lets me go:
 And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,
 He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;
 For out o' doors he went without their help,
 And, to the last, bended their light on me.

Pol. Go with me; I will go seek the king.

This is the very ecstasy of love;
 Whose violent property foredoes<sup>a</sup> itself,
 And leads the will to desperate undertakings,
 As oft as any passion under heaven,
 That does afflict our natures. I am sorry,—
 What, have you given him any hard words of late?

Oph. No, my good lord; but, as you did comma'd,
 I did repel his letters, and denied
 His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad.

I am sorry that with better heed and judgment,
 I had not quoted<sup>b</sup> him: I fear'd, he did but trifle,
 And meant to wreck thee; but, beshrew my jealousy!
 It seems it is as proper to our age
 To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions,
 As it is common for the younger sort
 To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king:
 This must be known; which, being kept close, might move

More grief to hide than hate to utter love. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz, and Guilden-stern!

Moreover that we much did long to see you,
 The need we have to use you did provoke
 Our hasty sending. Something have you heard
 Of Hamlet's transformation; so I call it,
 Since not the exterior nor the inward man
 Resembles that it was: What it should be,
 More than his father's death, that thus hath put him
 So much from the understanding of himself,
 I cannot deem of: I entreat you both,
 That, being of so young days brought up with him,
 And, since, so neighbour'd to his youth and humour,
 That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court
 Some little time; so by your companies
 To draw him on to pleasures; and to gather,
 So much as from occasions you may glean,
 Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him thus,
 That, open'd, lies within our remedy.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd o'
 you;

And, sure I am, two men there are not living
 To whom he more adheres. If it will please you
 To show us so much gentry and good will,
 As to expend your time with us a while,
 For the supply and profit of our hope,
 Your visitation shall receive such thanks
 As fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties
 Might, by the sovereign power you have of us,
 Put your dread pleasures more into command
 Than to entreaty.

Guil. We both obey;

And here give up ourselves, in the full bent,

<sup>a</sup> Foredoes—destroys, undoes. <sup>b</sup> Quoted—observed, now'd.

To lay our services freely at your feet,
To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz, and gentle Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern, and gentle Rosencrantz:

And I beseech you instantly to visit
My too much changed son. Go, some of you,
And bring the gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Guil. Heavens make our presence, and our practices,
Pleasant and helpful to him!

Queen. Amen!

[Exeunt Ros., GUIL., and some Attendants.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my good lord,
Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.

Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good liege,
I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,
Both to my God, one to my gracious king;
And I do think (or else this brain of mine
Hunts not the trail of policy so sure
As I have us'd to do) that I have found
The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O, speak of that; that I do long to hear.

Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors;
My news shall be the fruit to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in.

[Exit Pol.]

He tells me, my sweet queen, that he hath found
The head and source of all your son's distemper.

Queen. I doubt, it is no other but the main;
His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage.

Re-enter POLONIUS, with VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

King. Well, we shall sift him.—Welcome, good friends!

Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway?

Volt. Most fair return of greetings and desires.

Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His nephew's levies, which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack;
But, better look'd into, he truly found
It was against your highness: Whereat griev'd,—
That so his sickness, age, and impotence,
Was falsely borne in hand,—sends out arrests
On Fortinbras, which he, in brief, obeys;
Receives rebuke from Norway; and, in fine,
Makes vow before his uncle, never more
To give the assay of arms against your majesty.
Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy,
Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee;
And his commission, to employ those soldiers,
So levied as before, against the Polack;
With an entreaty, herein further shown, [Gives a paper.]
That it might please you to give quiet pass
Through your dominions for his enterprise;
On such regards of safety, and allowance,
As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well;

And, at our more consider'd time, we'll read,
Answer, and think upon this business.

Mean time, we thank you for your well-took labour:
Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together:
Most welcome home! [Exeunt VOLT. and CORN.]

Pol. This business is very well ended.

My liege, and madam, to expostulate
What majesty should be, what duty is,
Why day is day, night, night, and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time.
Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit,
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes,

I will be brief: Your noble son is mad:
Mad call I it: for, to define true madness,
What is 't, but to be nothing else but mad
But let that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art.

Pol. Madam, I swear, I use no art at all.
That he is mad, 't is true: 't is true, 't is pity;
And pity 't is, 't is true: a foolish figure;
But farewell it, for I will use no art.
Mad let us grant him then: and now remains,
That we find out the cause of this effect;
Or, rather say, the cause of this defect;
For this effect, defective, comes by cause:
Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.
Perpend.

I have a daughter; have, whilst she is mine;
Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this: Now gather, and surmise.

—"To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautiful Ophelia,"—

That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; beautified is a phrase; but you shall hear.

"These. In her excellent white bosom, these."

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?

Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful.

"Doubt thou, the stars are fire;
Doubt, that the sun doth move;
Doubt truth to be a liar;
But never doubt, I love."

O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers; I have not reckon my groans; but that I love thee best, O most best, lieve it. Adieu. Thine evermore, most dear lady, this machine is to him, that

This, in obedience, hath my daughter showed me;
And more above, hath his solicitings,
As they fell out by time, by means, and place,
All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she Receiv'd his love?

Pol. What do you think of me?

King. As of a man faithful and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might think,

When I had seen this hot love on the wing,
(As I perceiv'd it, I must tell you that,
Before my daughter told me,) what might you,
Or my dear majesty your queen here, think,
If I had play'd the desk, or table-book;
Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb;
Or look'd upon this love with idle sight;
What might you think? no, I went round to work,
And my young mistress thus I did bespeak:
"Lord Hamlet is a prince out of thy star;
This must not be:" and then I precepts gave her,
That she should lock herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;
And he, repulsed, (a short tale to make,)
Fell into a sadness; then into a fast;
Thence to a watch; thence into a weakness;
Thence to a lightness; and, by this declension
Into the madness whereon now he raves,
And all we wait for.

King. Do you think 't is this?

Queen. It may be, very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time, (I'd fain that,)

That I have positively said, "T is so,"
When it prov'd otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise:
[Pointing to his head and showing

Hamlet associates the idea with the daughter and my daughter.—My honourable lord, I will humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal; except my life, my life

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Pol. You go to seek my lord Hamlet; there he is.

Ros. God save you, sir! [To POLONIUS.

[Exit POLONIUS.

Guil. Mine honour'd lord!—

Ros. My most dear lord!

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both?

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happy, in that we are not overhappy;
On fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favour?

Guil. Faith, her privates we.

Ham. In the secret parts of fortune? O, most true;
she is a strumpet. What 's the news?

Ros. None, my lord; but that the world 's grown honest.

Ham. Then is dooms-day near: But your news is not true. Let me question more in particular: What have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?

Guil. Prison, my lord?

Ham. Denmark 's a prison.

Ros. Then is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one; in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons; Denmark being one of the worst.

Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then 't is none to you: for there is nothing either good or bad but thinking makes it so: to me it is a prison.

Ros. Why, then your ambition makes it one; 't is too narrow for your mind.

Ham. O God! I could be bounded in a nut-shell, and count myself a king of infinite space; were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guil. Which dreams, indeed, are ambition; for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggars, bodies; and our monarchs and outstretch'd heroes the beggars' shadows:
Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Ros., Guil. We'll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter: I will not sort you with the rest of my servants; for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks;
but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear, a half-penny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come; deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Why anything. But to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks, which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know, the good king and queen have sent for
you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for, or no?

Ros. What say you?

Ham. Nay, then I have an eye of you; [Aside.—] if you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery of your secrecy to the king and queen. Mould no feather. I have of late, (but, wherefore, I know not,) lost all my mirth, foregone all custom of exercises: and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a steril promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you,—this brave o'erhanging<sup>a</sup>—this majestic roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me, than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me, no, nor woman neither; though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh then, when I said, "Man delights not me?"

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten<sup>b</sup> entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted<sup>c</sup> them on the way; and hither are they coming, to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me: the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target: the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace: the clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickled o' the sere; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for 't.—What players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think, their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

Ros. No, indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace: But there is, sir, an airy of children, little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapped for 't: these are now the fashion; and so berattle the common stages, (so they call them,) that many, wearing rapiers, are afraid of goose quills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What, are they children? who maintains them? how are they escoted?<sup>d</sup> Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players, (as it is like most, if their means are no better,) their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession?

er-said with coagulate gore,
like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus se Priam seeks.

God, my lord, well spoken; with good and discretion.

How he finds him

short at Greeks; his antique sword, his arm, lies where it falls,
to command: Unequal match'd, Priam drives; in rage strikes wide;
a whiff and wind of his fell sword
ed father falls. Then senseless Hium, feel his blow, with flaming top a base; and with a hideous crash see Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his sword, feeling on the milky head Priam, seem'd 't the air to stick and tyrant, Pyrrhus stood;
neutral to his will and matter,

then see, against some storm,
the heavens, the rack stand still,
rads speechless, and the orb below
leath; anon the dread-ful thunder be region: So, after Pyrrhus' pause, agnature sets him new a work;
in the Cyclops' hammers fall
monrs, forg'd for proof stone, more than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword Priam.—

too long.

—heraldry.

—red, in heraldic phrase.

—painted; also a word in heraldry.

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard.—
Prithee, say on:—He's for a jig,<sup>a</sup> or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps:—say on: come to Hecuba.

1 Play. But who, O who, had seen the mobled queen,—

Ham. The mobled<sup>b</sup> queen?

Pol. That's good: mobled queen is good.

1 Play. Run barefoot up and down, threat'ning the ha-
With bison rheum; a clout about that head,
Where late the diadem stood; and, for a robe,
About her lank and all o'er teamed loins,
A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up;
Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd,
'Gainst fortune's state would treason have pronounc'd
But if the gods themselves did see her then,
When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport
In mincing with his sword her husband's limbs,
The instant burst of clamour that she made,
(Unless things mortal move them not at all)
Would have made milch the burning eyes of heaven,
And passion in the gods.

Pol. Look, whether he has not turn'd his colour, and has tears in 's eyes.—Pray you, no more.

Ham. 'T is well; I'll have thee speak out the rest soon.—Good my lord, will you see the players well bestow'd? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstracts, and brief chronicles, of the time:
After your death you were better have a bad epitaph,
than their ill report while you lived.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.

Ham. Odd's bodikin man, better: Use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping! Use them after your own honour and dignity: The less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs. [Ex. POL. with some of the Players.]

Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play tomorrow.—Dost thou hear me, old friend; can you play the murder of Gonzago?

1 Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll have 't to-morrow night. You could,
for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down, and insert in 't? could you not?

1 Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Very well.—Follow that lord; and look you mock him not. [Exit Player.] My good friends, [To Ros. and GUIL.] I'll leave you till night: you are welcome to Elsinore.

Ros. Good my lord! [Exeunt Ros. and GUIL.]

Ham. Ay, so, God be wi' you: Now I am alone.

O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I!

Is it not monstrous, that this player here,

But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,

Could force his soul so to his whole conceit

That from her working, all his visage warm'd,

Tears in his eyes, distraction in 's aspect,

A broken voice, and his whole function suiting

With forms to his conceit? And all for nothing

For Hecuba!

What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba,

That he should weep for her? What would he do,

Had he the motive and the cue for passion,

That I have? He would drown the stage with tears,

And cleave the general ear with horrid speech;

Make mad the guilty, and appal the free;<sup>e</sup>

Confound the ignorant; and amaze, indeed,

The very faculties of eyes and ears.

Yet I,

A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak,

Like John-a-dreams,<sup>d</sup> unpregnant of my cause,

And can say nothing; no, not for a king,

Upon whose property, and most dear life,

A damn'd defeat was made. Am I a coward?

Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across?
Plucks off my beard, and blows it in my face?
Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i' the throat,
As deep as to the lungs? Who does me this?
Ha!

Why, I should take it: for it cannot be,
But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall
To make oppression bitter; or, ere this,
I should have fatted all the region kites
With this slave's offal: Bloody, bawdy villain!
Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless villain!
O vengeance.

What an ass am I! ay, sure, this is most brave;
That I, the son of the dear murdered,
Prompted to my revenge by heavens and hell,
Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,
And fall a cursing, like a very drab,
A scullion!

Fye upon 't! foh! About, my brains! I have been
That guilty creatures, sitting at a play,
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul, that presently
They have proclaim'd their malefactions;
For murther, though it have no tongue, will speak
With most miraculous organ. I'll have these players Play something like the murther of my father,
Before mine uncle: I'll observe his looks;
I'll tent him to the quick; if he but blench,
I know my course. The spirit that I have seen
May be the devil: and the devil hath power
To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and, perhaps,
Out of my weakness, and my melancholy,
(As he is very potent with such spirits,)
Abuses me to damn me: I'll have grounds
More relative than this: The play's the thing,
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king. [Exit]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. And can you, by no drift of circumstance,
Get from him, why he puts on this confusion;
Grating so harshly all his days of quiet
With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?

Ros. He does confess he feels himself distracted;
But from what cause he will by no means speak.

Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be sound'd;
But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof,
When we would bring him on to some confession
Of his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you well?

Ros. Most like a gentleman.

Guil. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Ros. Niggard of question; but, of our demands,
Most free in his reply.

Queen. Did you assay him
To any pastime?

Ros. Madam, it so fell out, that certain players
We o'er-raught on the way: of these we told him;
And there did seem in him a kind of joy
To hear of it: They are about the court;
And, as I think, they have already order
This night to play before him.

Pol. 'T is most true:
And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties,
To hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart; and it doth much content
me

To hear him so inclin'd.
Good gentlemen, give him a further edge,
And drive his purpose on to these delights.

Ros. We shall, my lord. [Exit Ros. and Guil.]

King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too:

For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither;
That he, as 't were by accident, may here
Affront<sup>a</sup> Ophelia.

Her father, and myself (lawful espials),
Will so bestow ourselves, that, seeing, unseen,
We may of their encounter frankly judge;
And gather by him, as he is behav'd,
If 't be the affliction of his love or no,
That thus he suffers for.

Queen. I shall obey you:
And for your part, Ophelia, I do wish,
That your good beauties be the happy cause

<sup>a</sup> Affront—encounter, confront.

Of Hamlet's wildness; so shall I hope your virtues
Will bring him to his wonted way again,
To both your honours.

Oph. Madam, I wish it may. [Exit Queen]

Pol. Ophelia, walk you here:—Gracious, so please
you,

We will bestow ourselves:—Read on this book; [Takes book] That show of such an exercise may colour Your loneliness. We are oft to blame in this,—
'T is too much prov'd, that, with devotion's visage,
And pious action, we do sugar o'er
The devil himself.

King. O, 't is too true!

How smart a lash that speech doth give my conscience
The harlot's cheek, beautied with plast'ring art
Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it,
Than is my deed to my most painted word:
O heavy burden!

Pol. I hear him coming; let 's withdraw, my lord.
[Exit King and Polonius]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the question:
Whether 't is nobler in the mind, to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them?—To die,—to sleep,—
No more; and, by a sleep, to say we end
The heart-ach, and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to,—'t is a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die,—to sleep;—
To sleep! perchance to dream;—ay, there 's the rub:
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause: there 's the respect,
That makes calamity of so long life:
For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumacy,
The pangs of dispriz'd love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin?<sup>a</sup> who would these fardels bear,
To grunt<sup>b</sup> and sweat under a weary life;
But that the dread of something after death,

<sup>a</sup> Bodkin—a small sword. Caesar is spoken of, by old writers as slain by bodkins.

<sup>b</sup> Grunt. So the originals. The players, in their speeches, always give us groans; and, if they had not the words the blank verse before them, they would certainly utter aspire upon us.

ver'd country, from whose bourn returns, puzzles the will;
as rather bear those ills we have,
thens that we know not of?
nce does make cowards of us all;
native hue of resolution er with the pale cast of thought zes of great pith and moment, ard, their currents turn away,
name of action.—Soft you, now!
elia:—Nymph, in thy orisons ns remember'd.

Good my lord,
ur honour for this many a day?
smbly thank you; well, well, well.
lord, I have remembrances of yours, longed long to re-deliver;
ow receive them.

no. I never gave you ought.
honour'd lord, I know right well you did;
em, words of so sweet breath compos'd things more rich: their perfume lost, gain; for to the noble mind,
x poor, when givers prove unkind.
rd.

ha! are you honest?
lord?

you fair?
t means your lordship?
t if you be honest, and fair, your honesty
no discourse to your beauty.
d beauty, my lord, have better commerce
esty?

truly; for the power of beauty will sooner esty from what it is to a bawd, than the ty can translate beauty into his likeness:
time a paradox, but now the time gives id love you once.

ed, my lord, you made me believe so.
ould not have believed me: for virtue ulate our old stock, but we shall relish of a not.

the more deceived thee to a nunnery: Why wouldst thou of sinners? I am myself indifferent et I could accuse me of such things, that my mother had not borne me: I am very eful, ambitious; with more offences at my ave thoughts to put them in, imagination shape, or time to act them in: What llows as I do crawling between heaven
Ve are arrant knaves, all; believe none y ways to a nunnery. Where 's your ene, my lord.

the doors be shut upon him, that he may go to his bed; but in 's own house. Farewell.
lp him, you sweet heavens!
ou dost marry, I 'll give thee this plague
: Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as alt not escape calumny. Get thee to a farewell: Or, if thou wilt needs marry,
; for wise men know well enough what make of them. To a nunnery, go; and Farewell.

venly powers, restore him!
e beard of your paintings too, well enough,
n you one face, and you make yourselves jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nickatures, and make your wantonness your e to, I 'll no more on 't; it hath made me we will have no more marriages: those d already, all but one, shall live; the rest hey are. To a nunnery, go. [Exit HAM.]

Oph. O, what a noble mind is here o'erthrown!
The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue, sword;
The expectancy and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion, and the mould of form,
The observ'd of all observers! quite, quite, down!
And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the honey of his music vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,
Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;
That unmatched form and feature of blown youth,
Blasted with ecstasy: O, woe is me!
To have seen what I have seen, see what I see!

Re-enter KING and POLONIUS.

King. Love! his affections do not that way tend Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little,
Was not like madness. There 's something in his soul,

O'er which his melancholy sits on brood;
And, I do doubt, the hatch, and the disclose,
Will be some danger: Which to prevent,
I have, in quick determination,
Thus set it down: He shall with speed to England,
For the demand of our neglected tribute:
Haply, the seas, and countries different,
With variable objects, shall expel
This something-settled matter in his heart;
Whereon his brains still beating, puts him thus
From fashion of himself. What think you on 't?

Pol. It shall do well; but yet do I believe,
The origin and commencement of this grief
Sprung from neglected love.—How now, Ophelia,
You need not tell us what lord Hamlet said;
We heard it all.—My lord, do as you please;
But, if you hold it fit, after the play,
Let his queen mother all alone entreat him
To show his griefs; let her be round with him;
And I 'll be plac'd, so please you, in the ear
Of all their conference: If she find him not,
To England send him: or confine him, where Your wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so:
Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Hall in the same.

Enter HAMLET, and certain Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue: but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier had spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much—your hand thus: but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) the whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the soul, to see a robustious perwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings; who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb shows and noise: I could have such a fellow whipped for o'er-doing Termagant; it out-herods Herod: pray you, avoid it.

1 Player. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'er-step not the modesty of nature; for anything so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first, and now, was, and is, to hold, as 't were, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time, his form and pressure. Now this, overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskillful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of the which one, must, in your allowance, o'er-weigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be players, that I have seen play, and heard others praise, and that highly, not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of christians, nor the gait of christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted, and bellowed, that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

I Play. I hope, we have reformed that indifferently<sup>a</sup> with us, sir.

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let those that play your clowns, speak no more than is set down for them: for there be of them, that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though, in the mean time, some necessary question of the play be then to be considered: that's villainous; and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready. [Exit Players.]

Enter POLONIUS, ROSECRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

How now, my lord? will the king hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make haste. [Exit Pol.]

Will you too help to hasten them?

Both. We will, my lord.

[Exit ROSECRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]

Ham. What, ho; Horatio?

Enter HORATIO.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man
As e'er my conversation cop'd withal.

Hor. O, my dear lord,—

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter:
For what advancement may I hope from thee,
That no revenue hast but thy good spirits,
To feed and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd?
No, let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp;
And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee,
Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?
Since my dear soul was mistress of my choice,
And could of men distinguish, her election
Hath seal'd thee for herself: for thou hast been
As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing;
A man, that fortune's bullets and rewards
Has ta'en with equal thanks: and bless'd are those,
Whose blood and judgment are so well comingle'd,
That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please: Give me that man
That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,
As I do thee.—Something too much of this.—

There is a play to-night before the king;
One scene of it comes near the circumstance
Which I have told thee of my father's death.
I prithee, when thou seest that act a-foot,
Even with the very comment of my soul
Observe mine uncle: if his occulted guilt
Do not itself unkennel in one speech,
It is a damned ghost that we have seen;
And my imaginations are as foul
As Vulcan's stithe. Give him heedful note:
For I mine eyes will rivet to his face;
And, after, we will both our judgments join
To censure of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord:
If he steal aught, the whilst this play is playing,
And 'scape detecting, I will pay the theft.

Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be idle:
Get you a place.

Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSECRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and other Lords attendant, with his Guard, carrying torches. Danish March. Sound a flourish.

How fares our cousin Hamlet?

<sup>a</sup> Indifferently.—to lastly well.

Ham. Excellent, i' faith; of the cambric eat the air, promise-cramm'd: You cannot so.

King. I have nothing with this answer,
these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine. Now, my lord,— once in the university, you say? [Tr.]

Pol. That I did, my lord; and was a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Caesar: I was Capitol: Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him, to kill calf there.—Be the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your Queen. Come hither, my good Hamlet, a

Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more

Pol. O ho! do you mark that? [Tr.]

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?

[Lying down at Ore]

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap!

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Do you think I meant country me?

Oph. I think nothing, my lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie betwixt legs.

Oph. What is, my lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O God! your only jig-maker. What a man do, but be merry? for, look you, he my mother looks, and my father died with hours.

Oph. Nay, 't is twice two months, my lord

Ham. So long? Nay, then let the devil for I'll have a suit of sables. O heave months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then a great man's memory may outlive his life.
But, by'r-lady, he must build churches if shall he suffer not thinking on, with the whose epitaph is, For, O, for, O, the he forgot.

Hambro's play. The dumb show scene

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly; the embracing him. She kneels, and makes show of him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon him down upon a bank of flowers; she, seeing him him. Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Q finds the King dead, and makes passionate action.
with some two or three mates, comes in again, weeps with her. The dead body is carried away. The the Queen with gifts; she seems loath and unwilling in the end, accepts his love.

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is mitching malleco; mischief.

Oph. Belike, this show imports the argus play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show means?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll show not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught;
the play.

<sup>a</sup> Mitching malleco. To mitch is to cheat;—malleco from the Spanish.

and for our tragedy,
 sleeping to your clemency,
 beg your leaving patiently.
 his a prologue, or the poesy of a ring?
 relief, my lord.
 woman's love.

Enter King and his Queen.

Full thirty times hath Phoebus' cart gone round the wash, and Tellus' orb'd ground;
 seven moons with borrow'd sheen,
 and have times twelve thirties been;
 in hearts, and Hymen did our hands,
 small in most sacred bands.

So many journeys may the sun and moon in count o'er, ere love be done!
 here, you are so sick of late,
 here, and from your former state,
 at you. Yet, though I distrust, out, my lord, it nothing must;
 fear and love holds quantity;
 light, or in extremity,
 by love is, proof hath made you know;
 me is six'd, my fear is so.
 great, the littlest doubts are fear;
 fears grow great, great love grows there.
 Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too;
 sweats my functions leave to do:
 sit live in this fair world behind, lov'd; and haply, one as kind shalt thou—

O, confound the rest!
 rest needs he treason in my breast:
 stand let me be accurst!
 second but who kill'd the first.
 wormwood, wormwood.

The instances<sup>a</sup> that second marriage move, sets of thrift, but none of love;
 I kill my husband dead,
 husband kisses me in bed,
 do believe, you think what now you speak;
 do determine off we break.
 the slave to memory;
 tis, but poor validity;
 like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree;
 when they mellow be.
 tis, that we forget
 true what to ourselves is debt;
 elves in passion we propose,
 indrag, doth the purpose lose.
 of either grief or joy pictures with themselves destroy:
 not revels, grief doth most lament, grieves, on slender accident.
 not for aye; nor 'tis not strange,
 loves should with our fortunes change;
 when left us yet to prove,
 lead fortune, or else fortune love.
 down, you mark, his favourite flies;
 would makes friends of enemies.
 doth love on fortune tend:
 needs shall never lack a friend;
 want a hollow friend doth try,
 ens him his enemy.

To end where I begun,— Fates do so contrary run,
 ces still are overthrown;
 are ours, their ends none of our own;
 I will no second husband wed;
 thoughts, when thy first lord is dead.
 Nor earth to give me food, nor heaven light!
 ease look from me, day, and night!
 burn my trust and hope!
 cheer in prison be my scope!
 e, that blinks the face of joy,
 could have well, and it destroy!
 I hence, pursue me, lasting strife,
 ow, ever I be wife!

He should break it now,— [To OPH.] is deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here a while; re dull, and faint I would beguile
 ay with sleep. [Sleeps.]
 Sleep rock thy brain, ce mischance between us twain! [Exit.]
 am, how like you this play?
 e lady protests too much, methinks.

Enter Lucianus. comes—solicitations, inducements.
 her's cheer—anchoret's face.

Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.
King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence in't the world.

King. What do you call the play?

Ham. The mouse-trap. Marry, how? Tropically.<sup>a</sup>
 This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna:
 Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista: you shall see anon; 't is a knavish piece of work: But what of that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not: Let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

Enter Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

Oph. You are a good chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.<sup>b</sup>

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning, to take off my edge.

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you must take husbands.—Begin, mur-derer; leave thy damnable faces, and begin.
 Come;—

—The croaking raven

Doth bellow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;

Confederate season, else no creature seeing:
 Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,
 With Hecate's ban thrice blasted, thrice infected,
 Thy natural magic and dire property,
 On wholesome life usurp immediately.

[Pours the poison in his ears.]

Ham. He poisons him in the garden for his estate.
 His name's Gonzago; the story is extant, and writ in choice Italian: You shall see anon, how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king rises.

Ham. What! frighted with false fire!

Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light:—away!

All. Lights, lights, lights!

[Exit all but HAM. and HOR.]

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep,

The hart ungalled play:

For some must watch, while some must sleep;

So runs the world away.—

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers, (if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me,) with two Provincial roses on my razed shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry of players, sir?

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, ay.

For thou dost know, O Damon dear,

This realm dismantled was

Of Jove himself; and now reigns here

A very, very Paiocke.<sup>d</sup>

Hor. You might have rhymed.

Ham. O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning,—

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha!—Come, some music; come, the recorders.—

For if the king like not the comedy,

Why, then, belike, he likes it not, perdy.

<sup>a</sup> Tropically—figuratively.

<sup>b</sup> In puppet-shows, which were called motions, an interpreter explained the action to the audience.

<sup>c</sup> Razed—shaved.

<sup>d</sup> Paiocke. It is said that paiocke means the Italian latacco,
 "a piece of money of about three farthings value."

my lowest note to the top of my compass: and if such music excellent voice, in this little organ cannot you make it. Why, do you think that water to be played on than a pipe? Call me wit if you will, though you can fret me, you may upset me.

Enter POLONIUS.

Good morn'ng, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you presently.

Ham. Do you see that cloud, that's almost in like a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Mercurius, it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is like a whale.

Ham. Or like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my mother by and by.
They find me to the top of my bent.—I will come and by.

Pol. I will say so. [Exit]

Ham. By and by is easily said.—Leave me, [Exit]

[Enter Ros., Guil., Ham.]
T is now the very witching time of night;
When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes
Congenial to this world: Now could I drink hot
And do such bitter business as the day
Would quake to look on. Soft; now to my mother.
O heart, lose not thy nature; let not ever
The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom:
Let me be cruel, not unnatural:
I will speak daggers to her, but use none.
My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites:
How in my words soever she be absent,
To give them seals—never, my soul, consent.

SCENE III.—A Room in the same.

Enter KING, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. I like him not; nor stands it safe with
To let his madness range. Therefore, prepare
I your commission will forthwith despatch,
And he to England shall along with you:
The terms of our estate may not endure
Hazard so dangerous, as doth hourly grow
Out of his lunacies.

Guil. We will ourselves provide:
Most holy and religious fear it is,
To keep those many many bodies safe,
That live and feed upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound,
With all the strength and armour of the mind,
To keep itself from 'noyance; but much more
That spirit, upon whose spirit depend and rest
The lives of many. The cease of majesty
Dies not alone; but, like a gulf, doth draw
What's near it with it: it is a massy wheel,
Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,
To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things
Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls,
Each small annexment, petty consequence,
Attends the boist'rous ruin. Never alone
Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy war.
For we will fetters put upon this fear,
Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros., Guil. We will haste us. [Ex. Ros., Guil.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's Behind the arras I'll convey myself,
To overhear her conference. I'll not sleep,
Till I am furnished with the truth,
Whose slings I have so long did swag.

[Exit]

Enter POLONIUS.

cess; I'll warrant, she'll tax him home,
aid, and wisely was it said,
t some more audience than a mother, akes them partial, should o'erhear vantage. Fare you well, my liege:
you ere you go to bed,
what I know.

Thanks, dear my lord. [Exit Poi.] is rank, it smells to heaven;
nal eldest curse upon 't,
rther!—Pray can I not,
tion be as sharp as will;
ilt defeats my strong intent;
n to double business bound,
e where I shall first begin,
et. What if this cursed hand an itself with brother's blood?
i enough in the sweet heavens,
e as snow? Whereto serves mercy,
the visage of offence?
prayer, but this two-fold force,— d, ere we come to fall, ing down? Then I'll look up;
t. But, O, what form of prayer ern? Forgive me my foul murther!—
; since I am still possess'd for which I did the murther, e own ambition, and my queen.
don'd, and retain the offence?
l currents of this world,
l hand may shove by justice;
n, the wicked prize itself
w: But 't is not so above:
King, there the action lies re; and we ourselves compell'd,
h and forehead of our faults, ence. What then? what rests?
tance can: What can it not?
when one can not repent?
e! O bosom, black as death!
at struggling to be free,
'd! Help, angels, make assay!
knees! and, heart, with strings of steel,
s of the new-born babe:
ll!

[Retires, and kneels.]
Enter HAMLET.

might I do it, pat, now he is praying lo 't:—and so he goes to heaven:
veng'd? That would be scann'd:
my father; and, for that,
to this same villain send nd salary, not revenge.

her grossly, full of bread;
ines broad blown, as fresh as May;
adit stands, who knows, save heaven?
umstance and course of thought,
b him: And am I then reveng'd,
the purging of his soul,
and season'd for his passage?

d know thou a more horrid hent:
nk, asleep, or in his rage;
mous pleasure of his bed;
aring; or about some act
ish of salvation in 't:
that his heels may kick at heaven;
ul may be as damn'd, and black,
it goes. My mother stays:
t prolongs thy sickly days. [Exit.]

e King rises and advances.
oris fly up, my thoughts remain below:
thoughts, never to heaven go. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Another Room in the same.

Enter QUEEN and POLONIUS.

Pol. He will come straight. Look, you lay home to
him:
Tell him, his pranks have been too broad to bear
with;

And that your grace hath screen'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll silence me e'en here.
Pray you, be round with him.

Ham. [Within.] Mother! mother! mother!

Queen. I'll warrant you;

Fear me not:—withdraw, I hear him coming.

[POLONIUS hides himself.]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now, mother; what's the matter?

Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.

Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go, you question with an idle tongue.

Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet?

Ham. What's the matter now?

Queen. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No, by the rood, not so:

You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife;

But would you were not so! You are my mother.

Queen. Nay, then I'll set those to you that can speak.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not budge;

You go not, till I set you up a glass

Where you may see the inmost part of you.

Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder
me?

Help, help, ho!

Pol. [Behind.] What, ho! help! help! help!

Ham. How now! a rat? [Draws.]

Dead, for a ducat, dead.

[HAMLET makes a pass through the arras.]

Pol. [Behind.] O I am slain. [Falls, and dies.]

Queen. O me, what hast thou done?

Ham. Nay, I know not:

Is it the king?

[Lifts up the arras, and draws forth POLONIUS.]

Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this!

Ham. A bloody deed;—almost as bad, good mother,
As kill a king, and marry with his brother.

Queen. As kill a king!

Ham. Ay, lady, 't was my word.—

Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell! [To Poi.]

I took thee for thy betters; take thy fortune:

Thou find'st, to be too busy is some danger.—

Leave wringing of your hands: Peace, sit you down,

And let me wring your heart: for so I shall,

If it be made of penetrable stuff;

If damned custom have not braz'd it so,

That it is proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tongue

In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an act,
That blurs the grace and blush of modesty
Calls virtue, hypocrite; takes off the rose
From the fair forehead of an innocent love,
And sets a blister there; makes marriage vows
As false as dicers' oaths: O, such a deed
As from the body of contraction plucks
The very soul; and sweet religion makes
A rhapsody of words: Heaven's face doth glow;
Yea, this solidity* and compound mass,
With tristful visage, as against the doom,
Is thought-sick at the act.

* This solidity—this earth.

Queen. Ah me, what act,
That roars so loud, and thunders in the index?
Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this;
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
See what a grace was seated on his brow:
Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself;
An eye like Mars, to threaten or command;
A station<sup>a</sup> like the herald Mercury,
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;
A combination, and a form, indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man:
This was your husband,—look you now, what follows:
Here is your husband; like a mildew'd ear,
Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes?
Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
And batten on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?
You cannot call it love: for, at your age,
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgment: And what judgment
Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, you have,
Else, could you not have motion: But sure, that sense
Is apoplex'd: for madness would not err;
Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd,
But it reserv'd some quantity of choice,
To serve in such a difference. What devil was 't,
That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind?<sup>b</sup>
Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,
Or but a sickly part of one true sense
Could not so mope.
O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,
If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,
And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame,
When the compulsive ardour gives the charge;
Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
And reason panders will.

Queen. O Hamlet, speak no more:
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;
And there I see such black and grained spots,
As will not leave their tinct.

Ham. Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed;
Stew'd in corruption; honeying, and making love
Over the nasty sty;—

Queen. O, speak to me no more;
These words, like daggers, enter in mine ears;
No more, sweet Hamlet.

Ham. A murderer, and a villain;
A slave, that is not twentieth part the tythe
Of your precedent lord:—a vice of kings;<sup>c</sup>
A cutpurse of the empire and the rule;
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,
And put it in his pocket!

Queen. No more.

Enter GHOST.

Ham. A king
Of shreds and patches:—
Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,
You heavenly guards!—What would you, gracious figure?

Queen. Alas! he's mad.

Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide,
That, laps'd in time and passion, lets go by
The important acting of your dread command?
O, say.

Ghost. Do not forget: This visitation
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
But, look! amazement on thy mother sits:

O, step between her and her fighting soul;
Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works:
Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you,

Queen. Alas, how is 't with you?

That you do bend your eye on vacancy,
And with the incorporal air do hold discourse:
Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep,
And as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,
Your bedded hair, like life in excrements,<sup>a</sup>
Starts up, and stands on end. O gentle Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you

Ham. On him! on him!—Look you, glares!

His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching

Whom I will trust, as I will adders fang'd,—
They bear the mandate ; they must sweep my way
And marshal me to knavery : Let it work,

For 't is the sport, to have the engineer

But I will delve one yard below their mines,

And blow them at the moon : O, 't is most sweet,

When in one line two crafts directly meet.

This man shall set me packing.

I 'll lug the guts into the neighbour room :—

Mother, good night.—Indeed, this counsellor

Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,

Who was in life a foolish prating knave.

Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you :

Good night, mother. [Exeunt severally ; HAM, dragging in the body of POLONIUS.]

[Exeunt Ros. and GUIL.]

Come, Gertrude, we 'll call up our wisest friends ;

And let them know, both what we mean to do,

And what 's untimely done : so, haply, slander,

Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,

As level as the cannon to his blank,

Transports his poison'd shot, may miss our name,

And hit the woundless air. O come away !

My soul is full of discord, and dismay. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another Room in the same.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. —Safely stowed,—

Ros. &c. within. Hamlet ! lord Hamlet !

Ham. What noise ? who calls on Hamlet ? O, here they come.

Enter ROSENCHANTZ and GULDENSTERN.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body ?

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 't is kin.

Ros. Tell us where 't is ; that we may take it thence,
And bear it to the chapel.

Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what ?

Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of<sup>b</sup> a sponge !—what replication should be made by the son of a king ?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord ?

Ham. Ay, sir ; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end : He keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw ; first mouthed, to be last swallowed : When he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again.

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it : A knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.

Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—

Guil. A thing, my lord?

Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after.* [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Room in the same.

Enter KING, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body. How dangerous is it that this man goes loose; Yet must not we put the strong law on him: He 's lov'd of the distracted multitude, Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes; And, where 't is so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd, But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even, This sudden sending him away must seem Deliberate pause: Diseases, desperate grown, By desperate appliance are reliev'd,

Enter ROSENCRANTZ.

Or not at all.—How now? what hath befallen?

Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord, We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he?

Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before us.

Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter HAMLET and GUILDENSTERN.

King. Now, Hamlet, where 's Polonius?

Ham. At supper.

King. At supper? Where?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten: a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else, to fat us; and we fat ourselves for maggots: Your fat king, and your lean beggar, is but variable service; two dishes, but to one table; that 's the end.

King. Alas, alas!

Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king; and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this?

Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven, send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. Go seek him there. [To some Attendants.]

Ham. He will stay till you come. [Ex. Attendants.]

King. Hamlet, this deed of thine, for thine especial safety,

Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve For that which thou hast done, must send thee hence With fiery quickness: Therefore, prepare thyself; The bark is ready, and the wind at help, The associates tend, and everything is bent For England.

Ham. For England?

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub, that sees him.—But, come; for England!—Farewell, dear mother.

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother: Father and mother is man and wife; man and wife is one flesh; and so, my mother. Come, for England. [Exit.]

 know not what we may be. God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray you, let us have no words of this; but when they ask you what it means, say you this:

To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day
 All in the morning betime,
 And I a maid at your window,
 To be your Valentine:

Then up he rose, and donn'd his clothes,
 And dapp'd<sup>b</sup> the chamber-door;
 Let in the maid, that out a maid
 Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia!

Oph. Indeed, la, without an oath, I'll make an end on 't:

By Gis, and by Saint Charity,
 Alack, and ye for shame!
 Young men will do 't, if they come to t;
 By cock, they are to blame.

Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
 You promis'd me to wed:
 So would I ha' done, by yonder sun,
 An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long has she been this?

Oph. I hope, all will be well. We must be patient;
 but I cannot choose but weep, to think they should lay him i' the cold ground: My brother shall know of it, and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies; good night, good night. [Exit.

King. Follow her close; give her good watch, I pray
 you. [Exit HORATIO.

O! this is the poison of deep grief; it springs
 All from her father's death: O Gertrude, Gertrude,
 When sorrows come, they come not single spies,
 But in battalions! First, her father slain;
 Next, your son gone; and he most violent author
 Of his own just remove; The people muddied,
 Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers,
 For good Polonius' death; and we have done but greenly,<sup>c</sup>

In hugger-mugger to inter him: Poor Ophelia,
 Divided from herself, and her fair judgment;
 Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts.
 Last, and as much containing as all these,
 Her brother is in secret come from France;
 Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds,
 And wants not buzzers to infect his ear<sup>d</sup>
 With pestilent speeches of his father's death;
 Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd,
 Will nothing stick our persons to arraign
 In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this,
 Like to a murdering-piece,<sup>d</sup> in many places
 Gives me superfluous death. [A noise within.

Queen. Alack! what noise is this?

Enter a Gentleman.

King. Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door:

What is the matter?

Gent. Save yourself, my lord;
 The ocean, overpeering of his list,
 Eats not the flats with more impitious<sup>e</sup> haste,
 Than young Laertes, in a riotous head,
 O'erbears your officers. The rabble call him, lord;
 And as the world were now but to begin,
 Antiquity forgot, custom not known,
 The ratifiers and props of every word,
 They cry, "Choose we; Laertes shall be king!"

<sup>a</sup> God 'ield you—God requite you.

<sup>c</sup> Greenly—unwisely: like novices.

<sup>d</sup> Murdering piece—a cannon was so called.

Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,
"Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!"

Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry!
O, this is counter, you false Danish dogs.

King. The doors are broke. [Noise within.]

Enter LAERTES, armed; Danes following.

Laer. Where is this king?—Sir, stand you all without.

Dan. No, let 's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave.

Dan. We will, we will.

[They retire without the door.]
Laer. I thank you:—keep the door.—O thou vile king,
Give me my father.

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood that 's calm, proclaims me
bastard;

Cries, cuckold, to my father; brands the harlot
Even here, between the chaste unsmirched brow
Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes,
That thy rebellion looks so giant-like?
Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person;
There 's such divinity doth hedge a king,
That treason can but peep to what it would,
Acts little of his will. Tell me, Laertes,
Why thou art thus incensed;—Let him go, Gertrude;—
Speak, man.

Laer. Where is my father?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead? I 'll not be juggled with:
To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil!
Conscience, and grace, to the profoundest pit!
I dare damnation: To this point I stand,—
That both the worlds I give to negligence,
Let come what comes; only I 'll be revenged
Most throughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you?

Laer. My will, not all the world:

And, for my means, I 'll husband them so well,
They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes,
If you desire to know the certainty
Of your dear father's death, is 't writ in your revenge,
That, sweepstake, you will draw both friend and foe,
Winner and loser?

Laer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them then?

Laer. To his good friends thus wide I 'll ope my arms;

And, like the kind life-rend'ring pelican,
Repast them with my blood.

King. Why, now you speak
Like a good child, and a true gentleman.
That I am guiltless of your father's death,
And am most sensibly in grief for it,
It shall as level to your judgment pierce,
As day does to your eye.

Danes. [Within.] Let her come in.

Laer. How now! what noise is that?

Enter OPHELIA, fantastically dressed with straws and flowers.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears, seven times salt,
Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!—
By heaven, thy madness shall be paid by weight, Till our scale turns the beam. O rose of May!
Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia!—
O heavens! is 't possible, a young maid's wits
Should be as mortal as an old man's life?

God bless you, sir.

God bless thee too.

How shall, sir, an't please him. There's a gentleman, sir; it comes from the ambassadors that are sent to England; if your name be Horatio, as I know it is.

*[Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, it will seem some means to the king; they have letters for these two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike aspect, and of some chace: Finding ourselves too slow of sail, and of a dangerous nature, we have boarded them:
they got clear of our ship: so I alone became the subject of their search. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy; what they did; I am to do a good turn for them. Give the letters I have sent: and repair thou with haste as thou wouldst fly death. I have words in my ear, will make thee dumb; yet are they much to the purpose of the matter. These good fellows will tell thee I am. Rosenkrantz and Guildenstern hold their peace; of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell.]*

He that thou knowest thine, Hamlet.
Give you way for these your letters;
the speedier, that you may direct me whom you brought them. [Exit.]

VII.—Another Room in the same.

Enter KING and LAERTES.

How must your conscience my acquittance requite? Put me in your heart for friend;
in your ear, and with a knowing ear,
how hath your noble father slain,
his uncle, your life.

It well appears:—But tell me, how did he succeed not against these feats,
so capital in nature,
that defty, wisdom, all things else,
were stirred up.

O, for two special reasons;
one you, perhaps, seem much unsnew'd, and the other they are strong. The queen, his mother, loves him by his looks; and for myself,
I have my plague, be it either which,
to die, my motive to my life and soul,
for my father moves not but in his sphere,
and she by her. The other motive, which count I might not go,
is that the general gender bear him:
let all his faults in their affection,
be sprung that turneth wood to stone,
and eyes to graces; so that my arrows,
loosed in so loud a wind,
should pierce to my bow again,
and I had aim'd them.

So have I a noble father lost;
a brother unlearn'd how to die;
a kingdom given to a savage;
a sister married to a brute;
a father on mount of all the age that first did give the world;
and my revenge will come.
I'll not let your sleeps for that: you must not think of it. I'll not let you be made of stuff so flat and dull, that let our beard be shook with danger, and say that we are pastime. You shortly shall hear more:
I'll not let your father, and we love ourselves;
I'll not let your eyes, will teach you to imagine,— but news?

Enter a Messenger.

Letters, my lord, from Hamlet:
his majesty; this to the queen.
O Hamlet! Who brought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say: I saw them not.
They were given to me by Claudio, he receiv'd them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them:—Leave us.

[Exit Messenger.]

[Reads.] High and mighty, you shall know I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes: when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasions of my sudden and more strange return.
Hamlet.

What should this mean? Are all the rest come back?
Or is it some abuse, or no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. "Naked,"

And, in a postscript here, he says, "alone:"

Can you advise me?

Laer. I am lost in it, my lord. But let him come

It warms the very sickness in my heart,

That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,

Thus diddest thou.

King. If it be so, Laertes,

As how should it be so? how otherwise?

Will you be rul'd by me?

Laer. If so you'll not o'er-rule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd,—

As checking at his voyage, and that he means

No more to undertake it,—I will work him

To an exploit, now ripe in my device,

Under the which he shall not choose but fall;

And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe,

But even his mother shall uncharge the practice,

And call it, accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be rul'd:

The rather, if you could devise it so,

That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.

You have been talk'd of since your travel much.

And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality

Wherein, they say, you shine: your sum of parts

Did not together pluck such envy from him,

As did that one; and that, in my regard,

Of the unworthiest siege.

Laer. What part is that, my lord?

King. A very riband in the cap of youth,

Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes

The light and careless livery that it wears,

Than settled age his sables, and his weeds,

Importing health and graveness.—Some two months

hence,

Here was a gentleman of Normandy,—

I have seen myself, and serv'd against the French,

And they ran well on horseback: but this gallant

Had witchcraft in't; he grew into his seat;

And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,

As he had been incorp'd and demi-natur'd

With the brave beast: so far he pass'd my thought,

That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,

Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman, was't?

King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life, Lamound.

King. The very same.

Laer. I know him well: he is the brooch, indeed,

And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you;

And gave you such a masterly report,

For art and exercise in your defence,

And for your rapier most especially,

That he cried out, 't would be a sight indeed,

If one could match you: the scrimers* of their nation,

He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye,

If you oppos'd them: Sir, this report of his

Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy,

That he could nothing do, but wish and beg

* Scrimers—fencers; from estrimer.

Your sudden coming o'er, to play with him.

Now, out of this,—

Laer. Why out of this, my lord?

King. Laertes, was your father dear to you?

Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,

A face without a heart?

Laer. Why ask you this?

King. Not that I think you did not love your father;

But that I know love is begun by time;

And that I see, in passages of proof,

Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.

There lives within the very flame of love

A kind of wick, or snuff, that will abate it;

And nothing is at a like goodness still;

For goodness, growing to a plurisy,<sup>a</sup>

Dies in his own too-much: That we would do,

We should do when we would; for this would changes,

And hath abatements and delays as many,

As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;

And then this should is like a spendthrift sigh,

That hurts by easing. But, to the quick o' the ulcer:

Hamlet comes back: what would you undertake,

To show yourself your father's son in deed

More than in words?

Laer. To cut his throat i' the church.

King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctuarize;

Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes,

Will you do this, keep close within your chamber?

Hamlet, return'd, shall know you are come home:

We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,

And set a double varnish on the fame

The Frenchman gave you; bring you, in fine, together,

And wager on your heads: he, being remiss,<sup>b</sup>

Most generous, and free from all contriving,

Will not peruse<sup>c</sup> the foils; so that, with ease

Or with a little shuffling, you may choose

A sword unbated,<sup>d</sup> and, in a pass of practice,

Require him for your father.

Laer. I will do 't: I will do 't:

And, for that purpose, I'll anoint my sword.

I bought an unction of a mountebank,

So mortal, that but dip a knife in it,

Where it draws blood, no cataplasm so rare,

Collected from all simples that have virtue

Under the moon, can save the thing from death,

That is but scratch'd withal: I'll touch my point

With this contagion; that, if I gall him slightly,

It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this;

Weigh, what convenience, both of time and means,

May fit us to our shape: if this should fail,

And that our drift look through our bad performan

'T were better not assay'd; therefore this project

Should have a back, or second, that might hold,

If this should blast in proof. Soft;—let me see:

We'll make a solemn wager on your commings,<sup>e</sup>

I ha' 't.

When in your motion you are hot and dry,

(As make your bouts more violent to that end,)

And that he calls for drink, I'll have prepar'd his

A chalice for the nonce; whereon but sipping,

If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,

Our purpose may hold there.

Enter QUEEN.

How now, sweet queen?

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,

So fast they follow:—Your sister's drown'd, Laer

Laer. Drown'd!—O, where?

Queen. There is a willow grows aslant a brook,

That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream;

There, with fantastic garlands did she come,

Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples,

That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,

But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call the;

There, on the pendant boughs her coronet weeds

Clam'ring to hang, an envious sliver broke;

When down the weedy trophies and herself,

Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide

And, mermaid-like, a while they bore her up;

Which time, she chanted snatches of old tunes;

As one incapable of her own distress,

Or like a creature native and indued

Unto that element: but long it could not be,

Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,

Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay

To muddy death.

Laer. Alas then, is she drown'd?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,

And therefore I forbid my tears: But yet

It is our trick; nature her custom holds,

Let shame say what it will: when these are gone,

The woman will be out.—Adieu, my lord!

I have a speech of fire that fain would blaze,

But that this folly douts it.

King. Let's follow, Gertrude;

How much I had to do to calm his rage!

Now fear I this will give it start again;

Therefore let's follow. [E]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Church-Yard.

Enter Two Clowns, with spades, &c.

1 Clo. Is she to be buried in christian burial, that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

2 Clo. I tell thee, she is; and therefore make her grave straight: the crowner hath sate on her, and finds it a christian burial.

1 Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

2 Clo. Why, 't is found so.

1 Clo. It must be se offendendo; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: If I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act: and an act hath three branches; it is,

<sup>a</sup> Plurisy was constantly used in the sense of fulness, abundance by the poets.

Straight—straightways—forthwith.

to act, to do, and to perform: argal, she drowned self wittingly.

2 Clo. Nay, but hear you, Goodman delver.

1 Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the sabb; here stands the man; good: If the man go to water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, goes; mark you that? but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself: argal, he is not guilty of his own death, shortens not his own.

2 Clo. But is this law?

1 Clo. Ay, marry is 't; crowner's-quest law.

2 Clo. Will you ha' the truth on 't? If she had been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out of christian burial.

1 Clo. Why, there thou say'st: And the pity, that great folk should have countenance in the world to drown or hang themselves, more than

Come, my spade. There is no ancient gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers; dam's profession.

He a gentleman?

As the first that ever bore arms.

He had none.

Art a heathen? How dost thou understand? The scripture says, Adam digged; without arms? I'll put another question; answerest me not to the purpose, confess

Is he, that builds stronger than either shipwright, or the carpenter?

Gallows-maker; for that frame outlives a king.

Thy wit well, in good faith; the gallows; how does it well? it does well to those who thou dost ill to say, the gallows is built in the church; argal, the gallows may

To 't again; come.

Builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright?

Tell me that, and unyoke.<sup>b</sup> Now I can tell.

I cannot tell.

Hamlet and Horatio at a distance.

Send thy brains no more about it; for your duty mends his pace with beating: and when he asks this question next, say a grave-digger that he makes last till doomsday. Yaughan; fetch me a stoup of liquor.

[Exit 2 Clown.]

1 Clown digs, and sings.

When I did love, did love,
I thought it was very sweet,
But, O, the time, for, ah, my behove,
I thought, there was nothing meet.

This fellow no feeling of his business,
Grave-making!

His hatch made it in him a property of Even so; the hand of little employment

Or sense.

He, with his stealing steps,
I caught me in his ditch,
And shipped me intill the land,
I had never been such. [Throws up a skull.]

My skull had a tongue in it, and could sing
This knave jowls it to the ground, as if it Were bone, that did the first murder! In The case of a politician, which this ass o'er-t could circumvent God, might it not?
Tis, my lord.

A courtier; which could say, "Good-lord! How dost thou, good lord?" This lord Such-a-one, that praised my lord me, when he meant to beg it; might it

My lord.

Even so; and now my lady Worm's;
Knocked about the mazzard with a sexton's Fine revolution, if we had the trick to See bones cost no more the breeding, but Gats with them? mine aches to think

Axe, and a spade, a spade,
—and a shrouding sheet:
T of clay for to be made
Such a guest is meet. [Throws up a skull.]

Even—fellow-christian, equal christian.
Finish your work; unyoke your team.

Ham. There's another! Why might not that be the scull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddits<sup>a</sup> now, his quillies,<sup>b</sup> his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? Why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the sconce with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Humph! This fellow might be in 's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries: Is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box; and must the inheritor himself have no more? ha!

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calves'-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep, and calves, that seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow:—Whose grave's this, sir?

1 Cl. Mine, sir.—

O, a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is meet.

Ham. I think it be thine, indeed; for thou liest in 't.

1 Cl. You lie out on 't, sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part, I do not lie in 't, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in 't, to be in 't, and say it is thine: 't is for the dead, not for the quick; therefore thou liest.

1 Cl. 'T is a quick lie, sir; 't will away again, from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

1 Cl. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman then?

1 Cl. For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in 't?

1 Cl. One that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card,<sup>c</sup> or equivocation will undo us. By the lord, Horatio, these three years I have taken note of it; the age is grown so picked,<sup>d</sup> that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe.—How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

1 Cl. Of all the days i' the year, I came to 't that day that our last king Hamlet o'ercame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

1 Cl. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that: It was the very day that young Hamlet was born: he that was mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry, why was he sent into England?

1 Cl. Why, because he was mad: he shall recover his wits there; or, if he do not, it's no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

1 Cl. 'T will not be seen in him; there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

1 Cl. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

1 Cl. Faith, e'en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

1 Cl. Why, here in Denmark. I have been sexton here, man and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i' the earth ere he rot?

1 Clo. Faith, if he be not rotten before he die, (as we have many pocky corsers now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying in,) he will last you some eight year, or nine year: a tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?

1 Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade, that he will keep out water a great while; and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here 's a scull now: this scull has lain in the earth three-and-twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

1 Clo. A whoreson mad fellow's it was; Whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

1 Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! a poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same scull, sir; this same scull, sir, was Yorick's scull, the king's jester.

Ham. This?

1 Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Let me see. Alas poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now how abhorred my imagination is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own jeering? quite chap-fallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that.—Prithee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What 's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think Alexander looked o' this fashion i' the earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? puh! [Throws down the scull.]

Hor. E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. 'T were to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it. As thus: Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam: And why of that loam, whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

Imperial Cæsar, dead, and turn'd to clay,

Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:

O, that that earth, which kept the world in awe,

Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw!

But soft! but soft! aside:—Here comes the king.

Enter Priests, &c. in procession; the corpse of OPHELIA, LAERTES and Mourners following; KING, QUEEN, their Trains, &c.

The queen, the courtiers: Who is that they follow?

And with such maimed rites! This doth betoken,

The corse they follow did with desperate hand

Fordo its own life. 'T was of some estate:

Couch we a while, and mark. [Retiring with Hor.]

Laer. What ceremony else?

Ham. This is Laertes,

A very noble youth: Mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

1 Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd

As we have warranties: Her death was doubtful;

And, but that great command o'ersways the order,<sup>a</sup>

She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd

Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers,<sup>b</sup>

Shards,* flints, and pebbles, should be thrown on her: Yet here she is allowed her virgin rites, Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home Of bell and burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

1 Priest. No more be done.

We should profane the service of the dead,

To sing sage requiem, and such rest to her,

As to peace-parted souls.

Laer. Lay her i' the earth;

And from her fair and unpolluted flesh

May violets spring! I tell thee, churlish priest,

A minist'ring angel shall my sister be,

When thou liest howling.

Ham. What, the fair Ophelia!

Queen. Sweets to the sweet: Farewell!

[Scattering flowers]

I hop'd thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's wife;

I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid,

And not t' have strew'd thy grave.

Laer. O, treble woe

Fall ten times treble on that cursed head,

Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense

Deprived thee of!—Hold off the earth a while,

Till I have caught her once more in mine arms:

[Leaps into the grave]

Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead;

Till of this flat a mountain you have made,

To o'er-top old Pelion, or the skyish head

Of blue Olympus.

Ham. [Advancing.] What is he, whose grief

Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow

Conjures the wand'ring stars, and makes them stand

Like wonder-wounded bearers? this is I,

Hamlet the Dane. [Leaps into the grave]

Laer. The devil take thy soul!

[Grappling with]

Ham. Thou pray'st not well.

I prithee, take thy fingers from my throat;

Sir, though I am not splenetic and rash,

Yet have I something in me dangerous,

Which let thy wiseness fear: Away thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen. Hamlet, Hamlet!

Gentlemen. Good my lord, be quiet.

[The Attendants part them, and they

out of the grave.]

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this plain

Until my eyelids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son! what theme?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia; forty thousand brothers

Could not, with all their quantity of love,

Make up my sum.—What wilt thou do for her?

King. O, he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. Come, show me what thou 'lt do:

Woul't weep? woul't fight? woul't fast? woul't thysell?

Woul't drink up Esil? eat a crocodile?

I 'll do 't.—Dost thou come here to whine?

To outface me with leaping in her grave?

Be buried quick<sup>b</sup> with her, and so will I;

And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw

Millions of acres on us; till our ground,

Singeing his pate against the burning zone,

Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou 'lt mouth,

I 'll rant as well as thou.

Queen. This is mere madness.

And thus a while the fit will work on him;

Anon, as patient as the female dove,

When that her golden couplets are disclos'd,

<sup>a</sup> Shards—a shard is a thing shaw'd—divided. Shards

therefore, fragments of ware—rubbish.

<sup>b</sup> Quick—alive.

will sit drooping.

Hear you, sir;
 reason that you use me thus?
 ever: But it is no matter;
 himself do what he may,
 mew, and dog will have his day. [Exit.
 ay you, good Horatio, wait upon him.—

[Exit HORATIO.
 our patience in our last night's speech;

[To LAERTES.
 e matter to the present push.— le, set some watch over your son.—
 all have a living monument:
 ariet shortly shall we see;
 patience our proceeding be. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO.

much for this, sir: now let me see the
 #;
 nber all the circumstance?
 mber it, my lord?
 in my heart there was a kind of fighting, ot let me sleep: methought, I lay se mutines<sup>a</sup> in the bilboes.<sup>b</sup> Rashly, e rashness for it.—Let us know,
 ion sometimes serves us well,
 ir plots do pall; and that should teach us,
 inity that shapes our ends,
 em how we will.

That is most certain.
 from my cabin,
 scarf'd about me, in the dark ad out them: had my desire;
 packet; and, in fine, withdrew,
 room again: making so bold, etting manners, to unseal ommission; where I found, Horatio, cry, an exact command,
 many several sorts of reason,
 mark's health, and England's too,
 eh bugs and goblins in my life,
 upervise, no leisure bated,
 y the grinding of the axe,
 lld be struck off.

Is 't possible?
 e 's the commission; read it at more leisure.
 hear me how I did proceed?
 beseech you.
 ng thus benetted round with villains,
 make a prologue to my brains,
 un the play: I sat me down;
 e commission; wrote it fair:
 ld it, as our statist's do, e write fair, and labour'd much t that learning; but, sir, now man's service: Wilt thou know what I wrote?

Ay, good my lord.
 earnest conjuration from the king,—
 was his faithful tributary;
 sen them as the palm should flourish;
 old still her wheaten garland wear,
 comma 'tween their amities;
 sch like as's of great charge,— dew and know of these contents, stement further, more, or less,
 e beavers put to sudden death,
 time<sup>c</sup> allow'd.

How was this seal'd?

—mutineers.
 a bar of iron with fetters attached to it.
 time—time of shrif, or confession.

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordinaie;
 I had my father's signet in my purse,
 Which was the model of that Danish seal:
 Folded the writ up in form of the other;
 Subscrib'd it; gave 't the impression; plac'd it safely,
 The changeling never known: Now, the next day
 Was our sea-fight: and what to this was sequent
 Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to 't.
 Ham. Why, man, they did make love to this employment;

They are not near my conscience; their defeat
 Does by their own insinuation grow:
 'T is dangerous, when the baser nature comes Between the pass and fell incensed points
 Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a king is this!
 Ham. Does it not, think thee, stand me now upon?
 He that bath kill'd my king, and whor'd my mother;
 Popp'd in between the election and my hopes;
 Thrown out his angle for my proper life,
 And with such cozenage; is 't not perfect conscience,
 To quit him with this arm? and is 't not to be damn'd,
 To let this canker of our nature come
 In further evil?

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England,
 What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short: the interim is mine;
 And a man's life 's no more than to say, one.
 But I am very sorry, good Horatio,
 That to Laertes I forgot myself;
 For by the image of my cause, I see
 The portraiture of his: I 'll count his favours:
 But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me
 Into a towering passion.

Hor. Peace; who comes here?

Enter OSRIC.

Os. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.
 Ham. I humbly thank you, sir.—Dost know this water-fly?

Hor. No, my good lord.
 Ham. Thy state is the more gracious; for 't is a vice to know him: He hath much land, and fertile; let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess: 'T is a chough; but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.

Os. Sweet lord, if your friendship<sup>a</sup> were at leisure,
 I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

Ham. I will receive it with all diligence of spirit:
 Put your bonnet to his right use; 't is for the head.

Os. I thank your lordship, 't is very hot.
 Ham. No, believe me, 't is very cold; the wind is northerly.

Os. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.
 Ham. Methinks it is very sultry and hot, for my complexion.

Os. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry,—as 't were,—I cannot tell how.—But, my lord, his majesty bade me signify to you, that he has laid a great wager on your head: Sir, this is the matter.

Ham. I beseech you, remember—[HAMLET moves him to put on his hat.

Os. Nay, in good faith; for mine ease, in good faith. Sir, here is newly come to court, Laertes: believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society, and great showing: Indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see.

Ham. Sir, his defilement suffers no perdition in you;—though, I know, to divide him inventorially, would dizzy the arithmetic of memory; and yet but

raw neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and, who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more.

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Osr. Sir?

Hor. Is't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes?

Hor. His purse is empty already; all his golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know, you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would, you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me.—Well, sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is at his weapon.

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but, to know a man well, were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for this weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his meed he's unfollowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons: but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath waged with him six Barbary horses: against the which he has imposed, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, or so: Three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew you must be edified by the margent ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more german to the matter, if we could carry cannon by our sides: I would it might be hangers till then. But, on: Six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal conceited carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish: Why is this imposed, as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between you and him, he shall not exceed you three hits; he hath laid on twelve for nine; and that would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How, if I answer no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall. If it please his majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me: let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him, if I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame, and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I re-deliver you e'en so?

Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Laer. Why, as a woodcock to mine own springs, Osric;

I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen?

King. She swoons to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my dear

Hamlet!—

The drink, the drink;—I am poison'd! [Dies.]

Ham. O villainy!—How? Let the door be lock'd:

Treachery! seek it out. [Laertes falls.]

Laer. It is here, Hamlet: Hamlet, thou art slain:

No medicine in the world can do thee good,

In thee there is not half an hour of life!

The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,

Unbated, and envenom'd: the foul practice

Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I lie,

Never to rise again: Thy mother's poison'd;

I can no more; the king, the king's to blame.

Ham. The point

Envenom'd too!—Then, venom, to thy work.

[Stabs the King.]

Os. & Lords. Treason! treason!

King. O, yet defend me, friends, I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murd'rous, damned

Dane,

Drink off this potion:—Is thy union here?

Follow my mother. [King dies.]

Laer. He is justly served;

It is a poison temper'd by himself.

Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:

Mine and my father's death come not upon thee,

Nor thine on me! [Dies.]

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.

I am dead, Horatio:—Wretched queen, adieu!

You that look pale and tremble at this chance,

That are but mutes or audience to this act,

Had I but time, (as this fell sergeant, death,

Is strict in his arrest,) O, I could tell you,—

But let it be:—Horatio, I am dead;

Thou liv'st; report me and my cause aright

To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it.

I am more an antique Roman than a Dane,

Here 's yet some liquor left.

Ham. As thou 'rt a man,

Give me the cup; let go; by heaven I'll have it.

O, good Horatio, what a wounded name,

Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!

If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,

Absent thee from felicity awhile,

And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,

To tell my story. [March afar off, and shot within.]

What warlike noise is this?

Os. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,

To the ambassadors of England gives

This warlike volley.

Ham. O, I die, Horatio;

The potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit;

I cannot live to hear the news from England;

But I do prophesy the election lights

On Fortinbras; he has my dying voice;

So tell him, with the occurrents, more and less,

Which have solicited.—The rest is silence. [Dies.]

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart. Good night, sweet

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

'THE Tragedie of Cymbeline' was first printed in the folio collection of 1623. The play is very carefully divided into acts and scenes—an arrangement which is sometimes wanting in other plays of this edition. Printed as 'Cymbeline' must have been from a manuscript, the text, although sometimes difficult, presents few examples of absolute error.

In 'Cymbeline,' we are thrown back into the half-fabulous history of our own country, and see all objects under the dim light of uncertain events and manners. We have civilisation contending with semi-barbarism; the gorgeous worship of the Pagan world subduing to itself the more simple worship of the Druidical times; kings and courtiers surrounded with the splendour of "barbaric pearl and gold;" and, even in those days of simplicity, a wilder and a simpler life, amidst the fastnesses of mountains, and the solitude of caves—the hunters' life, who "have seen nothing," but who yet, in their natural piety, know "how to adore the heavens." If these attributes of the drama had been less absorbing, we perhaps might have more readily seen the real course of the dramatic action. We venture to express our opinion, that one predominant idea does exist.

The dialogue of the "two Gentlemen" in the opening scene makes us perfectly acquainted with the relations in which Posthumus and Imogen stand to each other, and to those around them. "She 's wedded, her husband banish'd." We have next the character of the banished husband, and of the unworthy suitor who is the cause of his banishment; as well as the story of the king's two lost sons. This is essentially the foundation of the past and future of the action. Brief indeed is this scene, but it well prepares us for the parting of Posthumus and Imogen. The course of their affections is turned awry by the wills of others. The angry king at once proclaims himself to us as one not cruel, but weak; he has before been described as "touch'd at very heart." It is only in the intensity of her affection for Posthumus that Imogen opposes her own will to the impatient violence of her father, and the more crafty decision of her step-mother. But she is surrounded with a third evil,—

"A father cruel, and a step-dame false,
A foolish suitor to a wedded lady."

Worse, however, even than these, her honour is to be assailed, her character vilified, by a subtle stranger; who, perhaps more in sport than in malice, has resolved to win a paltry wager by the sacrifice of her happiness and that of her husband. What has she to oppose to all this complication of violence and cunning? Her perfect purity—her entire simplicity—her freedom from everything that is selfish—the strength only of her affections. The scene between Iachimo and Imogen is a contest of innocence with guile, most profoundly affecting, in spite of the few coarsenesses that were perhaps unavoidable, and which were not considered offensive in Shakspeare's day.

This is the First Act; and, if we mistake not the object of Shakspeare, these opening scenes exhibit one of the most confiding and gentle of human beings, assailed on every side by a determination of purpose, the shape of violence, wickedness, or folly, again under ordinary circumstances, innocence imposed to be an insufficient shield. But the lessness of Imogen is her protection. In the Second Scene of the Second Act, the perfect Imogen, as interpreted by Shakspeare, has what would have been a most dangerous shield, the hands of another poet, into one of the most delicacy.—The immediate danger is passed; is a new danger approaching. The will of her husband, deceived into madness, is to be at evils which she has already received from her selfishness. Posthumus, intending to destroy "Take notice that I am in Cambria, at Milford what your own love will out of this advise you She does follow her own love;—she has no strength but the strength of her affections; that strengthen her hardy and fearless of consequences. It duty, as well as the one pleasure, of her existence is that affection required? Pisanio places it when they have reached the deepest solitude mountains, that letter by which he is come take away her life. One passing thought of one faint reproach of her husband,—and she the fate which is prepared for her.—But her innocence have already subdued the will of servant of her husband. He comforts her, but sauntily leaves her in the wilderness. The spirits wills are still around her:—

"My noble mistress,

Here is a box, I had it from the queen

Perhaps there is nothing in Shakspeare more deftly managed,—more touching in its romance,—more essentially true to nature,—than the scenes between her and her unknown brothers. The gentleness, the "grief and patience," of the helpless Imogen, producing at once the deepest reverence and admiration in the bold and daring mountaineers, still carry the character of Imogen under the same aspect "the bold and daring mountaineers, still carry the character of Imogen under the same aspect bird is dead;" she was sick, and we almost the words of the dirge are true.—But she and she has still to endure the last and most evil—her husband, in her apprehension, lies before her. She has no wrongs to think of—"I my lord," is all, in connexion with Posthumus, escapes amidst her tears. The beauty and gentleness which saved her from Iachimo,—which commended her to the Roman general,—which won the wild hunters,—commends her to the Roman general—she is at once protected from her holy duties still to perform.—It is the unselfish affection of Imogen which makes us pity Posthumus even while we blame him for the rash and revengeful will. But in his deep repentance we do not than pity him. We see only another victim of craft and selfishness.—In the prison scene he is again united with hers.—The contest we see is over between the selfish and the unselfish, the simple, the proud and the meek, the gentle.

ACT I.

—Britain. *The Garden behind Cymbeline's Palace.Enter Two Gentlemen.*You do not meet a man but frowns: our sods

by the heavens, than our courtiers

does the king.<sup>a</sup>

But what 's the matter?

His daughter, and the heir of his kingdom, somto his wife's sole son, (a widow, married,) hath refer'd herself to a most worthy gentleman: She 's wedded;
I banish'd, she imprison'd: all sorrow; though, I think, the king at very heart.

None but the king?

He that hath lost her, too: so is the queen,
squir'd the match: But not a courtier, by wear their faces to the bent of a looks, hath a heart that is not thing they scowl at.

And why so?

He that hath miss'd the princess is a thing of bad report: and he that hath her, if married her,—alack, good man!—used by Shakspere for natural disposition. The passage then is—You do not meet a man but frowns do not more obey the heavens than our sods seem as the king seems.And therefore banish'd,) is a creature such As to seek through the regions of the earth
For one his like, there would be something failing
In him that should compare. I do not think
So fair an outward, and such stuff within,
Endows a man but he.2 Gent. You speak him far.*1 Gent. I do extend<sup>b</sup> him, sir, within himself,
Crush him together, rather than unfold
His measure duly.2 Gent. What 's his name, and birth?1 Gent. I cannot delve him to the root: His father
Was call'd Sicilius, who did join his honour,
Against the Romans, with Cassibelan;
But had his titles by Tenantius, whom
He serv'd with glory and admir'd success:
So gain'd the sur-addition, Leonatus:
And had, besides this gentleman in question,
Two other sons, who, in the wars o' the time,
Died with their swords in hand; for which, their father
(Then old and fond of issue) took such sorrow
That he quit being; and his gentle lady,
Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas'd
As he was born. The king, he takes the babe
To his protection; calls him Posthumus Leonatus, Breeds him, and makes him of his bed-chamber:<sup>a</sup> You carry your praise far.<sup>b</sup> The Gentleman says—I do extend him—appreciate his good qualities—but only within the real limits of what they are instead of unfolding his measure duly, I crush him together—compress his excellence.

Puts to him all the learnings that his time
 Could make him the receiver of; which he took,
 As we do air, fast as 't was ministered,
 And in 's spring became a harvest: Liv'd in court,
 (Which rare it is to do,) most prais'd, most lov'd:
 A sample to the youngest; to th' more mature
 A glass that feated them; and to the graver,
 A child that guided dotards: to his mistress—
 For whom he now is banish'd,—her own price
 Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue;
 By her election may be truly read
 What kind of man he is.

2 Gent. I honour him
 Even out of your report. But, 'pray you, tell me,
 Is she sole child to the king?

1 Gent. His only child.
 He had two sons, (if this be worth your bearing,
 Mark it,) the eldest of them at three years old,
 I the swathing clothes the other, from their nursery
 Were stolen; and to this hour no guess in knowledge
 Which way they went.

2 Gent. How long is this ago?

1 Gent. Some twenty years.

2 Gent. That a king's children should be so convey'd!
 So slackly guarded! And the search so slow,
 That could not trace them!

1 Gent. Howsoe'er 't is strange,
 Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
 Yet is it true, sir.

2 Gent. I do well believe you.

1 Gent. We must forbear: Here comes the gentleman,
 The queen, and princess. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter the QUEEN, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

Queen. No, be assur'd, you shall not find me, daughter,
 After the slander of most step-mothers,
 Evil-ey'd unto you: you are my prisoner, but
 Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys
 That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,
 So soon as I can win the offended king,
 I will be known your advocate: marry, yet
 The fire of rage is in him; and 't were good,
 You lean'd unto his sentence, with what patience
 Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness,
 I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril:—
 I 'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
 The pangs of barr'd affections; though the king
 Hath charg'd you should not speak together.

[Exit QUEEN.
 Imo. O dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant
 Can tickle where she wounds!—My dearest husband,
 I something fear my father's wrath; but nothing (Always reserv'd my holy duty,) what
 His rage can do on me: You must be gone;
 And I shall here abide the hourly shot
 Of angry eyes; not comforted to live,
 But that there is this jewel in the world,
 That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress!
 O, lady, weep no more; lest I give cause
 To be suspected of more tenderness
 Than doth become a man! I will remain

2 Lord. She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her. [Aside.

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber: 'Would there had been some hurt done!

2 Lord. I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt. [Aside.

Clo. You'll go with us?

1 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

2 Lord. Well, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores o the haven,

And question'dst every sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 't were a paper lost,
As offer'd mercy is. What was the last
That he spake to thee?

Pis. It was, "His queen, his queen!"

Imo. Then wav'd his handkerchief?

Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen! happier therein than I!

And that was all?

Pis. No, madam; for so long

As he could make me with his eye or ear

Distinguish him from others, he did keep

The deck, with glove or hat or handkerchief

Still waving, as the fits and stirs of his mind

Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,

How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou shouldst have made him

As little as a crow, or less, ere left

To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings; crack'd them, but

To look upon him; till the diminution

Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle:

Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from

The smallness of a gnat to air; and then

Have turn'd mine eye, and wept.—But, good Pisanio,

When shall we hear from him?

Pis. Be assur'd, madam,

With his next vantage.*

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had

Most pretty things to say. ere I could tell him

How I would think on him, at certain hours,

Such thoughts, and such; or I could make him swear

The shes of Italy should not betray

Mine interest and his honour; or have charg'd him,

At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,

To encounter me with orisons, for then

I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss, which I had set

Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,

And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north,

Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The queen, madam,

Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them despatch'd.—

I will attend the queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall. [Exeunt.

* Vantage—opportunity.

SCENE V.—Rome. An Apartment in Philario's House.Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, and a Frenchman.

Iach. Believe it, sir: I have seen him in Britain: he was then of a crescent note; expected to prove so worthy as since he hath been allowed the name of: but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration; though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished, than now he is, with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, (wherein he must be weighed rather by her value than his own,) words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And then his banishment—

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce, under her colours, are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without less quality. But how comes it he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life:—

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Here comes the Briton: Let him be so entertained amongst you, as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of his quality.—I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman, whom I commend to you as a noble friend of mine: How worthy he is I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness: I was glad I did atone<sup>a</sup> my countryman and you; it had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance<sup>b</sup> of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller: rather shunned to go even with what I heard, than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences: but, upon my mended judgment, (if I offend not to say it is mended,) my quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords; and by such two that would, by all likelihood, have confounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think: 't was a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses: This gentleman at that time vouching (and upon warrant of bloody affirmation) his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant-qualified, and less attemptable, than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living; or this gentleman's opinion, by this, worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her 'fore ours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing; though I profess myself adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair, and as good, (a kind of hard comparison,) had been something too fair, and too good for any lady in Britany. If she went before, I have seen, as that diamond of yours outshines have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled; but I have not seen the most precious diamond nor you the lady.

Post. I praised her as I rated her: so do I rate you.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is she's outprized by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be given, if there were wealth enough for the purchase, for the merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title you; but know strange fowl light upon neighbour's. Your ring may be stolen too: so, your brace of able estimations, the one is but frail, and casual; a cunning thief, or a that-way-accourtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomcourtier to convince<sup>c</sup> the honour of my mistress the holding or the loss of that, you term her; nothing doubt you have store of thieves; nothing I fear not my ring.

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation get ground of your fair mistress: make her even to the yielding; had I admittance and a friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare, thereupon, pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring; which, in my opinion, o'ervalues the thing: But I make my wager rather against her confidence than her reputation: and, to bar your own in too, I durst attempt it against any lady in Italy.

Post. You are a great deal abused in too; persuasion; and I doubt not you sustain what you say of by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse: Though your attempt, it deserve more,—a punishment too.

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this: it came down; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my estate, and my honour's, on the approbation of what I have said.

Post. What lady would you choose to see?

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy you hold so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats, that, commend me to the court where she is, with no more advantage than the opposite second conference, and I will bring from thence the honour of hers which you imagine so reserved.

Post. I will wage against your gold, gold ring I hold dear as my finger; 't is part of it.

Iach. You are a friend, and therein the more you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, the more you preserve it from tainting: But, I see your religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your country, for a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches; if I undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Who has the note of them?

I, madam.

[Exeunt Ladies.

For, have you brought those drugs?

Your highness, ay : here they are,

[Presenting a small box.

By your grace, (without offence—

Does me ask,) wherefore you have

These most poisonous compounds,

Others of a languishing death ;

And, deadly?

I wonder, doctor,

Such a question : Have I not been

Hast thou not learn'd me how

Esses? distil? preserve? yea, so,

Being himself doth woo me oft

As? Having thus far proceeded,

Alas! 't me devilish,) is 't not meet

My judgment in

As? I will try the forces

Of pounds on such creatures as

Are with the hanging, (but none human,)

Of them, and apply

Their act ; and by them gather

Their effects.

Your highness

Practice but make hard your heart :

By these effects will be

And infectious.

O, content thee.

Enter PISANIO.

Thou rascal ; upon him [Aside.

By his master,

My son.—How now, Pisanio?

My service for this time is ended ;

My duty.

[Conclusion—experiments.

Cor. I do suspect you, madam ;

But you shall do no harm. [Aside.

Queen. Hark thee, a word.— [To PIS.

Cor. [Aside.] I do not like her. She doth think she has

Strange lingering poisons : I do know her spirit,

And will not trust one of her malice with

A drug of such damn'd nature : Those she has

Will stupify and dull the sense awhile :

Which first, perchance, she 'll prove on cats and dogs ;

Then afterward up higher ; but there is

No danger in what show of death it makes,

More than the locking up the spirits a time,

To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd

With a most false effect ; and I the truer

So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor,

Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think in time

She will not quench ; and let instructions enter

Where folly now possesses? Do thou work :

When thou shalt bring me word she loves my son,

I 'll tell thee, on the instant, thou art then

As great as is thy master : greater ; for

His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name

Is at last gasp : Return he cannot, nor Continue where he is : to shift his being

Is to exchange one misery with another

And every day that comes, comes to decay

A day's work in him : What shalt thou expect,

To be depend on a thing that leans,—

Who cannot be new built, nor has no friends,

[The QUEEN drops a box : PIS. takes it up.

So much as but to prop him?—Thou tak'st up

Thou know'st not what ; but take it for thy labour :

It is a thing I made, which hath the king

Five times redeem'd from death : I do not know

What is more cordial :—Nay, I prithee, take it ;

It is an earnest of a further good

That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how

The case stands with her ; do 't, as from thyself.

Think what a chance thou changest on ; but think

Thou hast thy mistress still,—to boot, my son,

Who shall take notice of thee : I 'll move the king

To any shape of thy preferment, such

As thou 'lt desire ; and then myself, I chiefly,

That set thee on to this desert, am bound

To load thy merit richly. Call my women :

Think on my words. [Exit PIS.]—A sly and constant knave ;

Not to be shak'd : the agent for his master ;

And the remembrancer of her, to hold

The bar : I fast to her lord.—I have given him that,

Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her

Of liegers for her sweet ; and which she, after,

Except she bend her humour, shall be assur'd

Re-enter PISANIO and Ladies.

To taste of too.—So, so ;—well done, well done :

The violets, cowslips, and the primroses,

Bear to my closet :—Fare thee well, Pisanio ;

Think on my words. [Exit QUEEN and Ladies.

Pis. And shall do :

But when to my good lord I prove untrue,

I 'll choke myself : there 's all I 'll do for you. [Exit.

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the Palace

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false ;

A foolish suitor to a wedded lady,

That hath her husband banish'd ;—O, that husband !

My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated
Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stolen,
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious: Blessed be those,
How mean soe'er, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons<sup>a</sup> comfort.—Who may this be? Fye!

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome
Comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. Change you, madam?
The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your highness dearly. [Presents a letter.]

Imo. Thanks, good sir:
You are kindly welcome.

Iach. All of her that is out of door, most rich! [Aside.]
If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone the Arabian bird; and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight;
Rather, directly fly.

Imo. [Reads.] "He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely th'd. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust"— "LEONATUS."

So far I read aloud:
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully.
You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
Have words to bid you; and shall find it so
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.—
What! are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes
To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop
Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery orbs above, and the twinn'd stones
Upon the number'd beach?<sup>c</sup> and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul?

Imo. What makes your admiration?
Iach. It cannot be i' the eye; for apes and monkeys,
'Twixt two such shes, would chatter this way and Contemn with mows the other: Nor i' the judgment;
For idiots, in this case of favour, would
Be wisely definite: Nor i' the appetite;
Sluttery, to such neat excellence oppos'd,
Should make desire vomit emptiness,
Not so allur'd to feed.

Imo. What is the matter, trow?
Iach. The cloyed will.
(That satiate yet unsatisfied desire,
That tub both fill'd and running,) ravening first
The lamb, longs after for the garbage.

Imo. What, dear sir,
Thus raps<sup>e</sup> you? Are you well?

Iach. Thanks, madam; well:—'Beseech you, sir, desire [To PISANIO.]
My man's abode where I did leave him: he Is strange and peevish.

Pis. I was going, sir,
To give him welcome. [Exit PISANIO.]

Imo. Continues well my lord? His health, 'beseech
you?

<sup>a</sup> Seasons is a verb. The men have their honest, homely wills (opposed to the desire that's glorious)—and that circumstance gives a relish to comfort.

<sup>b</sup> Trust. Imogen breaks off in reading the letter of Leonatus.
That which is addressed to her in the tenderness of affection is not "read aloud." Unmindful of this, the passage has been altered into "Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your truest Leonatus." The signature is separated from the word which has been changed to truest, by the passage which Imogen glances at in thankful silence.

<sup>c</sup> The stones of the beach are each so like the other that the epithet twinn'd is appropriate.

That he enchants societies unto him:
Half all men's hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends.
Iach. He sits 'mongst men, like a descended god:
He hath a kind of honour sets him off,
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd
To try your taking, a false report which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment
In the election of a sir so rare,
Which you know, cannot err: The love I bear him
Made me to fan you thus; but the gods made you.
Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon.

Imo. All's well, sir: Take my power i' the court for yours.

Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot
To entreat your grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord; myself, and other noble friends,
Are partners in the business.

Imo. Pray, what is 't?
Iach. Some dozen Romans of us, and your lord,
(The best feather of our wing,) have mingled sums,
To buy a present for the emperor;
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France: 'T is plate, of rare device; and jewels,
Of rich and exquisite form; their values great;
And I am something curious, being strange,
To have them in safe stowage. May it please you
To take them in protection?

Imo. Willingly;
And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bed-chamber.

Iach. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night.
I must aboard to-morrow.

Imo. O, no, no.
Iach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my word,
By length'ning my return. From Gallia
I cross'd the seas on purpose, and on promise
To see your grace.

Imo. I thank you for your pains;
But not away to-morrow!

Iach. O, I must, madam:
Therefore, I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do 't to-night.
I have outstood my time; which is material
To the tender of our present.

Imo. I will write.
Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept,
And truly yielded you: You are very welcome. [Exeunt

ACT II.

—Court before Cymbeline's Palace.
Enter CLOTEN and Two Lords.

Were ever man had such luck! when I upon an up-cast to be hit away! I had d on 't: And then a whoreson jackanapes up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine d might not spend them at my pleasure.
at got he by that? You have broke his bowl.

His wit had been like him that broke it,
an all out. [Aside.
A gentleman is disposed to swear, it is deers-by to curtail his oaths: Ha?

2 Lord. No, my lord; nor [Aside.] crop the ears of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog!—I give him satisfaction?
'Would he had been one of my rank!

2 Lord. To have smelt like a fool. [Aside.

Clo. I am not vexed more at any thing in the earth.
—A pox on 't! I had rather not be so noble as I am.
They dare not fight with me, because of the queen: my mother: every jack-slave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

2 Lord. You are cock and capon too; and you crow cock, with your comb on. [Aside.

Clo. Sayest thou?

1 Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion* that you give offence to.

Clo. No, I know that: but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clo. Why, so I say.

1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger that's come to court to-night?

Clo. A stranger! and I not know on't!

2 Lord. He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not. [Aside.]

1 Lord. There's an Italian come; and, 't is thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Clo. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

1 Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in't?

1 Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

2 Lord. You are a fool granted; therefore your issues, being foolish, do not derogate. [Aside.]

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian: What I have lost to-day at bowls I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

2 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

[Exeunt CLOTEN and first Lord.]

That such a crafty devil as is his mother
Should yield the world this ass! a woman, that Bears all down with her brain; and this her son Cannot take two from twenty for his heart,
And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess,
Thou divine Imogen, what thou endur'st!
Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd;
A mother hourly coining plots; a wooer,
More hateful than the foul expulsion is
Of thy dear husband. From that horrid act
Of the divorce he'd make, the heavens hold firm
The walls of thy dear honour; keep unshak'd
That temple, thy fair mind; that thou may'st stand,
To enjoy thy banish'd lord, and this great land! [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Bed-Chamber; in one part of it a Trunk.

IMOGEN reading in her bed; a Lady attending.

Imo. Who's there? my woman Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then: mine eyes are weak;

Fold down the leaf where I have left: To bed:

Take not away the taper, leave it burning;

And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock,

I prithee, call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly.

[Exit Lady.]

To your protection I commend me, gods!

From fairies, and the tempters of the night,

Guard me, beseech ye! [Sleeps. LACH., from the trunk.]

Lach. The crickets sing, and man's o'er-labour'd sense

Repairs itself by rest: Our Tarquin thus

Did softly press the rushes, ere he waken'd

The chastity he wounded.—Cytherea,

How bravely thou becom'st thy bed! fresh lily!

And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!

But kiss; one kiss!—Rubies unparagon'd,

How dearly they do't.—'T is her breathing that

Perfumes the chamber thus: The flame o' the taper

Bows toward her; and would under-peep her lids,

To see the enclosed lights, now canopied

Under these windows, white and azure, lac'd

With blue of heaven's own tinct.—But my design.

* Companion is used here, and in other passages of Shakspeare, in the same sense as fellow is at present.

To note the chamber, I will write all down.

Such and such pictures:—There the window

The adornment of her bed:—The arras, figure

Why, such, and such:—And the contents o'

Al, but some natural notes about her body

Above ten thousand meager moveables

Would testify, to enrich mine inventory

O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her

And be her sense but as a monument,

Thus in a chapel lying!—Come off, come off

[Taking off her

As slippery, as the Gordian knot was hand!

'T is mine; and this will witness outwardly,

As strongly as the conscience does within,

To the madding of her lord. On her left lies

A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drop

I' the bottom of a cowslip. Here's a youth

Stronger than ever law could make: this eye

Will force him think I have juck'd the lock,

The treasure of her honour. No more.—To

Why should I write this down, that's riveted

Screw'd to my memory? She hath been read

The tale of Tereus; here the leaf's turn'd to Where Philomel gave up;—I have enough:

To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it

Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that d

May bare the raven's eye! I lodge in fear

Though this a heavenly angel, bell is here.

SCENE III.—Without the Palace, under Apartments.

Enter CLOTEN and Lords.

1 Lord. Your lordship is the most patient the most coldest that ever turned up ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to lose

1 Lord. But not every man patient after temper of your lordship. You are most best when you win.

Clo. Winning will put any man into one could get this foolish Imogen, I should have It's almost morning, is't not?

1 Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come:
vised to give her music o' mornings; they penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune. If you can penetrate her fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too:
do, let her remain; but I'll never give o'er very excellent good-conceited thing; after sweet air, with admirable rich words to it,— her consider.

SONG

Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings.

And Phoebus' gins arise,

His steeds to water at those springs

On chalic'd flowers that lies;

And winking Mary-buds begin to ope their gold

With everything that pretty is.—My lady sweet

Arise, arise.

So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will come

* M. Mason would read "the arras figures," but subsequently describes, not only the figures of the arras, but the particular quality—

"Tapestry of silk and silver; the story of the Proud Cleopatra," &c.

† To bare the raven's eye, is to open the raven's eye, or one of the earliest-waking and the quickest-sensing.

‡ Hammer changed this to his—a pretty word, but in the folio. We print the lines as they are printed; by which, in all probability, a different sense was indicated—a more rapid movement.

etter: if it do not, it is a voice in her ears, hairs and calves-guts, nor the voice of unds to boot, can never amend. [Ex. Musicians.]

Enter CYMBELINE and QUEEN.

Here comes the king, glad I was up so late; for that's the reason early. He cannot choose but take this ser-done, fatherly. Good morrow to your ma-my gracious mother.

Send you here the door of our stern daughter?
t forth?

ve assailed her with musics, but she vouch-

e exile of her minion is too new;
t yet forgot him: some more time
he print of his remembrance out,

You are most bound to the king,
by no vantages that may o his daughter. Frame yourself

s of the season, make denials r services: so seem, as if spir'd to do those duties which o her, that you in all obey her,
ormand to your dismissal tends,
you are senseless.

Senseless? not so.

Enter a Messenger.

like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome;
aius Lucius.

A worthy fellow,
mes on angry purpose now;
o fault of his: We must receive him
y the honour of his sender;
y himself, his goodness forespent on us, tend our notice. Our dear son, ave given good morning to your mistress, queen and us; we shall have need ou towards this Roman.—Come, our queen.

[Exeunt Cym., Queen, Lords, and Mess.
e be up, I'll speak with her; if not,
till and dream.—By your leave, ho!—

[Knocks.]

women are about her. What

[Knocks.]

Enter a Lady.

ho's there that knocks?

A gentleman.

No more?

and a gentlewoman's son.

That's more

e! my good name? or to report of you
I think is good?—The princess—ere used as a verb. See Note in 'The Comedy of

- 2c. 2.

Enter IMOGEN.

Clo. Good-morrow, fairest: sister, your sweet hand.

Imo. Good-morrow, sir: You lay out too much pains
For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give
Is telling you that I am poor of thanks,
And scarce can spare them.

Clo. Still, I swear I love you

Imo. If you but said so 't were as deep with me:
If you swear still, your recompence is still
That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield, being silent
I would not speak. I pray you, spare me: i' faith,
I shall unfold equal discourtesy
To your best kindness; one of your great knowing
Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clo. To leave you in your madness, 't were my sin
I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clo. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do:

If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad;
That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners,
By being so verbal:<sup>a</sup> and learn now, for all,
That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce,
By the very truth of it, I care not for you;
And am so near the lack of charity,
(To accuse myself,) I hate you; which I had rather
You felt, than make 't my boast.

Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For

The contract you pretend with that base wretch,

(One bred of alms, and foster'd with cold dishes,

With scraps o' the court,) it is no contract, none:

And though it be allow'd in meaner parties,

(Yet who than he more mean?) to knit their souls

(On whom there is no more dependency

But brats and beggary) in self-figur'd knot,

Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by

The consequence o' the crown; and must not soil

The precious note of it with a base slave,

A hilding for a livery, a squire's cloth,

A pantler, not so eminent.

Imo. Profane fellow!

Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more

But what thou art besides, thou wert too base

To be his groom: thou wert dignified enough,

Even to the point of envy, if 't were made

Comparative for your virtues, to be styl'd

The under-hangman of his kingdom; and hated

For being preferr'd so well.

Clo. The south-fog rot him!

Imo. He never can meet more mischance than come

To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment,

That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer,

In my respect, than all the hairs above thee,

Were they all made such men.—How now, Pisanio?

Enter PISANIO.

Clo. His garment? Now, the devil—

Imo. To Dorothy my woman lie thee presently:—

Clo. His garment?

Imo. I am sprighted with a fool;

Frighted, and anger'd worse:—Go, bid my woman

Search for a jewel, that too casually

Hath left mine arm; it was thy master's: 'shrew me,

If I would lose it for a revenue

Of any king's in Europe. I do think

I saw 't this morning: confident I am

Last night 't was on mine arm; I kiss'd it:

<sup>a</sup> So verbal. Imogen has been parrying her strange admirer; but she now resolves to speak plainly—to be verbal—and thus to forget a lady's manners.

I hope it be not gone, to tell my lord
That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'T will not be lost.

Imo. I hope so; go and search. [Exit Pis.]

Clo. You have abus'd me:—
His meanest garment?

Imo. Ay; I said so, sir.
If you will make 't an action call witness to 't.

Clo. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too:
She's my good lady;* and will conceive, I hope,
But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,

To the worst of discontent. [Exit.]

Clo. I'll be reveng'd:—
His meanest garment?—Well. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Rome. An Apartment in Philario's House.

Enter POSTHUMUS and PHILARIO.

Post. Fear it not, sir; I would I were so sure
To win the king, as I am bold her honour
Will remain hers.

Phi. What means do you make to him?
Post. Not any; but abide the change of time;

Quake in the present winter's state, and wish
That warmer days would come: In these sear'd hopes,
I barely gratify your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.

Phi. Your very goodness, and your company,
O'erpays all I can do. By this, your king
Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucius
Will do his commission thoroughly: And, I think,
He'll grant the tribute, send the arrearsages,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,
(Statist though I am none, nor like to be,)
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions, now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more order'd, than when Julius Caesar
Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at: Their discipline
(Now mingled with their courages) will make known
To their approvers, they are people such
That mend upon the world.

Enter IACHIMO.

Phi. See! Iachimo!

Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land:
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, sir.
Post. I hope the briefness of your answer made
The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady
Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.

Post. And therewithal the best: or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you.

Post. Their tenour good, I trust.

Iach. 'T is very like.

Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court,
When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet.
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is 't not Too dull for your good wearing?

* She's my good lady. This phrase is used ironically. To "stand my good lord," is—to be my good friend.

Iach. If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.

I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness, which Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by.
Iach. Not a

Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant: Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question further: but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.

Post. If you can make 't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand,
And ring, is yours: If not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour gains, or loses,
Your sword, or mine; or masterless leaves both
To who shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances
Being so near the truth as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe: whose strength
I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,
You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find
You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Iach. First, her bed-chamber.
(Where, I confess, I slept not; but profess,
Had that was well worth watching,) it was hang'd
With tapestry of silk and silver; the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats, or pride: A piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship, and value; which I wonder'd,
Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life on 't was—

Post. This is true;
And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.

Post. So they must,
Or do your honour injury.

Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece
Chaste Dian, bathing: never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves: the cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her,
Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing
Which you might from relation likewise reap;
Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iach. The roof o' the chamber
With golden cherubins is fretted: Her androm
(I had forgot them) were two winking Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands.

Post. This is her honour's
Let it be granted you have seen all this, (and pro
Be given to your remembrance,) the description
Of what is in her chamber nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

Iach. Then, if you can [Pulling out the jewel]
Be pale, I beg but leave to air this jewel: See—
And now 't is up again: It must be married
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

Post. Jere!

behold it : Is it that her ?

Sir, (I thank her,) that :
in her arm ; I see her yet ;
did outsell her gift,
it too : She gave it me, and said

May be she pluck'd it off,

He writes so to you ? doth she ?
No, no ; 't is true. Here, take this too ;
[Gives the ring.]

to mine eye,
in 't :—Let there be no honour of duty ; truth, where semblance ; love, of other man : The vows of women be he to where they are made, their virtues ; which is nothing :—
false !

Have patience, sir,
I'll give it again ; 't is not yet won :
I'll give her the ring she lost it ; or,
if she be of her women, being corrupted,
I'll give it to her ?

Very true ;
I'll give it to her :—Back my ring ;—
I'll give her the corporal sign about her,
I'll give it to her ; for this was stolen.
I'll give it to her, I had it from her arm.
I'll give it to her, he swears ; by Jupiter he swears.
I'll give it to her, keep the ring—'t is true, I am sure I'll give it to her : her attendants are I'll give it to her, honourable :—They induc'd to steal it !
I'll give it to her, I'll give it to her !—No, he hath enjoy'd her :
I'll give it to her, of her incontinency
I'll give it to her, bought the name of whore thus dearly.
I'll give it to her, and all the fiends of hell
I'll give it to her, between you !

Sir, be patient !
I'll give it to her, enough to be believ'd
I'll give it to her, well of—

Never talk on 't ;
I'll give it to her, led by him.

If you seek
I'll give it to her, ring, under her breast
I'll give it to her, (ing) lies a mole, right proud
I'll give it to her, late lodging : By my life,
I'll give it to her, I gave me present hunger
I'll give it to her, sigh full. You do remember I'll give it to her, er ?

Ay, and it doth confirm
I'll give it to her, big as hell can hold,
I'll give it to her, re but it.

Will you hear more ?

Post. Spare your arithmetic : never count the turus,
I'll give it to her, Once, and a million !

Iach. I 'll be sworn,—

Post. No swearing.

If you will swear you have not done 't, you lie
I'll give it to her, And I will kill thee, if thou dost deuy
I'll give it to her, Thou hast made me cuckold.

Iach. I 'll deny nothing.

Post. O, that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal !
I'll give it to her, I will go there, and do 't ; i' the court ; before

Her father :—I 'll do something— [Exit.]

Phi. Quite besides

The government of patience !—You have won :
I'll give it to her, Let 's follow him, and pervert* the present wrath
I'll give it to her, He hath against himself.

Iach. With all my heart. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The same. Another Room in the same.

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women
I'll give it to her, Must be half-workers ? We are all bastards ;
I'll give it to her, And that most venerable man, which I I'll give it to her, Did call my father, was I know not where I'll give it to her, When I was stamp'd ; some coiner with his tools
I'll give it to her, Made me a counterfeit : Yet my mother seem'd
I'll give it to her, The Dian of that time ; so doth my wife
I'll give it to her, The nonpareil of this.—O vengeance, vengeance !
I'll give it to her, Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd, I'll give it to her, And pray'd me, oft, forbearance : did it with I'll give it to her, A pudency so rosy, the sweet view on 't
I'll give it to her, Might well have warm'd old Saturn ; that I thought her
I'll give it to her, As chaste as unsunn'd snow :—O, all the devils !—
I'll give it to her, This yellow Iachimo, in an hour,—was 't not ?— I'll give it to her, Or less,—at first : Perchance he spoke not ; but,
I'll give it to her, Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one,
I'll give it to her, Cry'd, oh ! and mounted : found no opposition
I'll give it to her, But what he look'd for should oppose, and she I'll give it to her, Should from encounter guard. Could I find out I'll give it to her, The woman's part in me ! For there 's no motion
I'll give it to her, That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
I'll give it to her, It is the woman's part : Be it lying, note it,
I'll give it to her, The woman's ; flattering, hers ; deceiving, hers ;
I'll give it to her, Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers ; revenges, hers ;
I'll give it to her, Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,
I'll give it to her, Nice longings, slanders, namability,
I'll give it to her, All faults that may be nam'd, nay, that hell knows,
I'll give it to her, Why, hers, in part or all ; but rather, all :
I'll give it to her, For ev'n to vice I'll give it to her, They are not constant, but are changing still I'll give it to her, One vice but of a minute old, for one I'll give it to her, Not half so old as that. I 'll write against them,
I'll give it to her, Detest them, curse them :—Yet 't is greater skill I'll give it to her, In a true hate, to pray they have their will :
I'll give it to her, The very devils cannot plague them better. [Exit.]

ACT III.

Britain. A Room of State in Cym-beline's Palace.

QUEEN, CLOTEN, and Lords, at another, CAIUS LUCIUS and At-

What would Augustus Cæsar with us ?
I'll give it to her, Ilius Cæsar (whose remembrance yet
I'll give it to her, us ; and will to ears and tongues
I'll give it to her, aring ever) was in this Britain,
I'll give it to her, Cassibelan, thine uncle,
I'll give it to her, ur's praises, no whit less I'll give it to her, deserving it,) for him.
I'll give it to her, us, granted Rome a tribute,

Yearly three thousand pounds ; which by thee lately
I'll give it to her, Is left untender'd.

Queen. And, to kill the marvel,
I'll give it to her, Shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Cæsars,
I'll give it to her, Ere such another Julius. Britain is I'll give it to her, A world by itself ; and we will nothing pay
I'll give it to her, For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity,
I'll give it to her, Which then they had to take from us, to resume
I'll give it to her, We have again.—Remember, sir, my liege, I'll give it to her, The kings your ancestors ; together with I'll give it to her, The natural bravery of your isle, which stands * Pervert—for avert.

As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in
 With rocks unscalable, and roaring waters,
 With sands that will not bear your enemies' boats,
 But suck them up to the top-mast. A kind of conquest
 Cæsar made here; but made not here his brag
 Of came, and saw, and overcame: with shame
 (The first that ever touch'd him) he was carried
 From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping (Poor ignorant baubles!) on our terrible seas,
 Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd
 As easily 'gainst our rocks: For joy whereof,
 The fam'd Cassibelan, who was once at point
 (O, giglot<sup>a</sup> fortune!) to master Cæsar's sword,
 Made Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright,
 And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid: Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more such Cæsars: other of them may have crooked noses; but to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end.

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan: I do not say I am one; but I have a band.—Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Cæsar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,
 Till the injurious Romans did extort
 This tribute from us, we were free: Cæsar's ambition, (Which swell'd so much that it did almost stretch
 The sides o' the world,) against all colour, here
 Did put the yoke upon us; which to shake off
 Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
 Ourselves to be. We do say then to Cæsar,
 Our ancestor was that Mulmutius, which Ordain'd our laws; (whose use the sword of Cæsar
 Hath too much mangled; whose repair and franchise
 Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry;) Mulmutius made our laws,

Who was the first of Britain which did put His brows within a golden crown, and call'd Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
 That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar (Cæsar that hath more kings his servants than Thyself domestic officers) thine enemy:
 Receive it from me, then:—War, and confusion,
 In Cæsar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee: look
 For fury not to be resisted:—Thus defied,
 I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius.
 Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him; of him I gather'd honour:
 Which he to seek of me again, perforce,
 Behoves me keep at utterance.<sup>b</sup> I am perfect<sup>c</sup>
 That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for Their liberties, are now in arms: a precedent
 Which not to read would show the Britons cold:
 So Cæsar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.

Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day, or two, or longer: If you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle: if you beat us out of it, it is yours; if you fall in the adventure, our crows shall fare the better for you; and there's an end.

<sup>a</sup> Giglot. The term may be explained by its application to Joan of Arc, in the First Part of 'Henry VI.'—

"Young Talbot was not born
 To be the pillage of a giglot wench."

<sup>b</sup> Utterance. To fight at utterance is to fight without quarter —to the death; the French—Combat à outrance.

<sup>c</sup> Perfect—assured.

Luc. So, sir
Cym. I know

—Wales. A mountainous Country, with a Cave.

BERIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.
This day not to keep house, with such a low as ours! Stoop, boys: This gate is low to adore the heavens; and bows you to a holy office: The gates of monarchs are high that giants may jet through with impious turbans on, without to the sun.—Hail, thou fair heaven, and rock, yet use thee not so hardly as we do.

Hail, heaven!

Hail, heaven!
For our mountain sport: Up to yon hill,
I'll tread these flats. Consider,
we perceive me like a crow,
which lessens and sets off;
then revolve what tales I have told you of princes, of the tricks in war:
not service, so being done,
I'll show'd: To apprehend thus,
fit from all things we see:
our comfort, shall we find more safe in a safer hold than wing'd eagle. O, this life attending for a check;
nothing for a bribe;
rustling in unpaid-for silk:
the cap of him that makes him fine,
is not worth a croak uncras'd: no life to ours.
Your proof you speak: we, poor unfledg'd, are hid from view o' the nest; nor know not our home. Haply, this life is best,
the best; sweeter to you, farther known; well corresponding to our age: but unto us it is a pain; travelling abed;
a debtor, that not dares be seen.

What should we speak of,
did as you? when we shall hear the wind beat dark December, how,
in this cave, shall we discourse ourselves away? We have seen nothing:
we are subtle as the fox, for prey;
we are the wolf, for what we eat:
we chase what flies; our cage is here, as doth the prison'd bird, and we are not at large.

Bel.

How you speak:
Did you but know the city's usurie,
And felt them knowingly: the art o' the court,
As hard to leave, as keep; whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery that
The fear's as bad as falling: the toil of the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I' the name of fame and honour: which dies i' the search;
And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph
As record of fair act; nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,
Must court'sy at the censure:—O, boys, this story
The world may read in me: My body's mark'd
With Roman swords; and my report was once
First with the best of note: Cymbeline lov'd me;
And when a soldier was the theme my name
Was not far off: Then was I as a tree
Whose boughs did bend with fruit: but, in one night,
A storm, or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,
And left me bare to weather.

Gui.

Uncertain favour!
Bel. My fault being nothing (as I have told you oft)
But that two villains, whose false oaths prevail'd
Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline
I was confederate with the Romans: so,
Follow'd my banishment; and, this twenty years,
This rock and these demesnes have been my world:
Where I have liv'd at honest freedom; paid
More pious debts to heaven, than in all
The fore-end of my time.—But, up to the mountains;
This is not hunters' language:—He that strikes
The venison first shall be the lord o' the feast;
To him the other two shall minister;
And we will fear no poison, which attends
In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys.

[Exit Gui. and Arv.]

How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature!
These boys know little they are sons to the king;
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think they are mine: and, though train'd up thus meanly

I' the cave, wherein they bow, their thoughts do lit
The roofs of palaces; and nature prompts them,
In simple and low things, to prance it much Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,—
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, whom
The king his father call'd Guiderius,—Jove!
When on my three-foot stool I sit, and tell
The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out Into my story: say,—“Thus mine enemy fell;
And thus I set my foot on his neck”—even then
The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats,
Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture
That acts my words. The younger brother, Cadwal, (Once Arviragus,) in as like a figure
Strikes life into my speech, and shows much more
His own conceiving. Hark! the game is rous'd!—
O Cymbeline! heaven, and my conscience, knows
Thou didst unjustly banish me: whereon,
At three, and two years old, I stole these babes;
Thinking to bar thee of succession, as Thou rest'st me of my lands. Euriphile,
Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,
And every day do honour to her grave:
Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,
They take for natural father. The game is up. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Near Milford-Haven.

Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse, the place
Was near at hand:—Ne'er long'd my mother so

To see me first, as I have now :—Pisanio! Man!
Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh
From the inward of thee? One, but painted thus,
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication: Put thyself
Into a 'haviour of less fear, ere wildness
Vanquish my staid senses. What's the matter?
Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with A look untender? If it be summer news,
Smile to 't before: if winterly, thou need'st
But keep that countenance still.—My husband's hand!
That drug-damn'd Italy hath out-crafted him,
And he's at some hard point.—Speak, man: thy tongue
May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you read;
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain'd of fortune.

Imo. [Reads.] "Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed: the testimonies wherof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises: but from proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part, thou, Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life: I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven: she hath my letter for the purpose: Where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pander to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal."

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword? the paper
Hath cut her throat already.—No, 't is slander,— Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue
Outvenoms all the worms of Nile; whose breath
Rides on the posting winds, and doth belie
All corners of the world,—kings, queens, and states,
Maids, matrons,—nay, the secrets of the grave
This viperous slander enters.—What cheer, madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What is it to be false?
To lie in watch there, and to think on him?
To weep 'twixt clock and clock? if sleep charge nature,
To break it with a fearful dream of him,
And cry myself awake? that's false to his bed?
Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady!
Imo. I false? Thy conscience witness:—Iachimo, Thou didst accuse him of incontinency;
Thou then look'dst like a villain; now, methinks,
Thy favour's good enough.—Some jay of Italy,
Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd him:
Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion;
And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls,
I must be ripp'd:—to pieces with me!—O,
Men's vows are women's traitors! All good seeming,
By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought
Put on for villainy; not born where 't grows,
But worn, a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.
Imo. True honest men being heard, like false Æneas,
Were, in his time, thought false: and Sinon's weeping
Did scandal many a holy tear; took pity
From most true wretchedness: So, thou, Posthumus,
Wilt lay the heaven on all proper men;
Goodly, and gallant, shall be false and perjur'd,
From thy great fail.—Come, fellow, be thou honest:
Do thou thy master's bidding: When thou see'st him
A little witness my obedience: Look!
I draw the sword myself: take it; and hit
The innocent mansion of my love, my heart:
Fear not; 't is empty of all things but grief:
Thy master is not there; who was, indeed,
The riches of it: Do his bidding; strike.
Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause,
But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument
Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No servant of thy master's: Against self-slaugh
There is a prohibition so divine
That cravens my weak hand. Come, bend
heart;
Something 's afore 't;—Soft, soft; we'll no die
Obedient as the scabbard.—What is here?
The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus,
All turn'd to heresy! Away, away,
Corrupters of my faith! you shall no more
Be stomachers to my heart! Thus may poor fools Believe false teachers: Though those that tray'd

Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.
And thou, Posthumus, that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness: and I grieve myself,
To think when thou shalt be disedg'd by her.
That now thou tir'st on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me.—Prithee, despise
The lamb entreats the butcher: Where 's thy Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady,
Since I receiv'd command to do this business,
I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do 't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eye-balls blind first.
Imo. Wherefore
Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many miles, with a pretence? this place I
Mine action, and thine own? our horses' lasses
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,
For my being absent; whereunto I never Purpose return? Why hast thou gone so far
To be unbent when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time
To lose so bad employment: in the which I have consider'd of a course. Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak
I have heard I am a strumpet; and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.

Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Most like;
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither:
But if I were as wise as honest, then My purpose would prove well. It cannot be
But that my master is abus'd:
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtesan.

Pis. No, on my life
I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody sign of it; for 't is commanded
I should do so: You shall be mis'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? Where bids? How
Or in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?

Pis. If you'll back to the court,
Imo. No court, no father; nor no more will SCENE V.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, LUCIUS, and Lords.

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal sir.
 My emperor hath wrote; I must from hence;
 And am right sorry that I must report ye
 My master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, sir,
 Will not endure his yoke; and for ourself
 To show less sovereignty than they, must needs
 Appear unkinglike.

Luc. So, sir, I desire of you
 A conduct over land, to Milford-Haven.—
 Madam, all joy befall your grace, and you!

Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office;
 The due of honour in no point omit.
 So, farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord.
Clo. Receive it friendly: but from this time forth
 I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event
 Is yet to name the winner: Fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords,
 Till he have cross'd the Severn.—Happiness!

[Exeunt LUCIUS and LORDS.]

Queen. He goes hence frowning: but it honours us
 That we have given him cause.

Clo. 'T is all the better;
 Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor
 How it goes here. It fits us therefore, ripely,
 Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness:
 The powers that he already hath in Gallia
 Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves
 His war for Britain.

Queen. 'T is not sleepy business;
 But must be look'd to speedily, and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen,
 Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd
 Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
 The duty of the day: She looks us like
 A thing more made of malice than of duty:
 We have noted it.—Call her before us; for
 We have been too slight in sufferance.

[Exit an Attendant.]

Queen. Royal sir,
 Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd
 Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord,
 'T is time must do. Beseech your majesty,
 Forbear sharp speeches to her: She's a lady
 So tender of rebukes, that words are strokes,
 And strokes death to her.

Re-enter an Attendant.

Cym. Where is she, sir? How Can her contempt be answer'd?

Atten. Please you, sir,
 Her chambers are all lock'd; and there's no answer
 That will be given to the loud'st of noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her,
 She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close;
 Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
 She should that duty leave unpaid to you,
 Which daily she was bound to proffer: thus
 She wish'd me to make known; but our great court
 Made me to blame in memory.

Cym. Her door's lock'd?
 Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that which I fear Prove false!

[Exit]

Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.

Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant, I have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after.— [Exit Clo.]
Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus!—
He hath a drug of mine: I pray, his absence Proceed by swallowing that; for he believes It is a thing most precious. But for her, Where is she gone? Haply, despair hath seiz'd her; Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown To her desir'd Posthumus: Gone she is To death, or to dishonour; and my end Can make good use of either: She being down, I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter CLOTEN.

How now, my son?

Clo. 'Tis certain she is fled: Go in, and cheer the king; he rages; none Dare come about him.

Queen. All the better: May This night forestall him of the coming day!

[Exit Queen.]

Clo. I love, and hate her: for she's fair and royal; And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite Than lady, ladies, woman; from every one The best she hath, and she, of all compounded, Outselling them all: I love her therefore. But, Disclaiming me, and throwing favours on The low Posthumus, slanders so her judgment, That what's else rare is chok'd; and, in that point, I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed, To be reveng'd upon her. For, when fools

Enter PISANIO.

Pis. O, good my lord!

Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter, I will not ask again. Close villain, I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus? From whose so many weights of baseness cannot A dram of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas, my lord, How can she be with him? When was she miss'd? He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer; No further halting: satisfy me home What is become of her?

Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!

Clo. All-worthy villain! Discover where thy mistress is, at once, At the next word,—No more of worthy lord,— Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then, sir, This paper is the history of my knowledge Touching her flight. [Presenting a letter.]

Clo. Let's see 't:—I will pursue her Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. Or this, or perish.* She's far enough: and what he learns by this, May prove his travel, not her danger. [Aside.]

Clo. Humph! I'll write to my lord she's dead. O Imogen, Safe mayst thou wander, safe return again! [Aside.]

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Imo. 'Mongst friends!
If brothers?—Would it had been so, that they Had been my father's sons, then had my prize
Been less; and so more equal ballasting
To thee, Posthumus. [Aside.]

Bel. He wrings at some distress.

Gui. 'Would I could free 't!

Arv. Or I; whate'er it be,
What pain it cost, what danger! Gods!

Bel. Hark, boys. [Whispering.]

Imo. Great men,
That had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves, and had the virtue Which their own conscience seal'd them (laying by That nothing gift of differing multitudes),<sup>a</sup>
Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me, gods!
I 'd change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus false.

Bel. It shall be so.

Boys, we 'll go dress our hunt.—Fair youth, come in:
Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have supp'd,
We 'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,
So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gri. Pray, draw near.

Arv. The night to the owl, and morn to the lark, less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, sir.

Arv. I pray, draw near. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Rome.

Enter Two Senators and Tribunes.

1 Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ:
That since the common men are now in action
'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians,
And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against
The fallen-off Britons, that we do incite
The gentry to this business. He creates Lucius pro-consul: and to you the tribunes,
For this immediate levy, he commands
His absolute commission. Long live Cæsar!

Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?

2 Sen. Ay.

Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

1 Sen. With those legions
Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy
Must be supplyant: The words of your commission
Will tie you to the numbers, and the time
Of their despatch.

Tri. We will discharge our duty. [Exeunt.]

<sup>a</sup> Differing multitudes. In the Second Part of 'Henry IV.
we have—

"The still discordant, wavering multitude;" and the word differing is most probably used here in the same sense.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—The Forest, near the Cave.

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly. How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too? the rather (saving reverence of the word) for 't is said, a woman's fitness comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself, (for it is not vain-glory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber,) I mean, the lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions: yet this imperseverant* thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off; thy mistress enforced; thy garments cut to pieces before thy face: and all this done, spurn her home to her father: who may, haply, be a little angry for my so rough usage: but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe: Out, sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me.

[Exit.]SCENE II.—Before the Cave.

Enter, from the Cave, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN.

Bel. You are not well: [To IMOGEN.] remain here in the cave;

We'll come to you after hunting.

Arv. Brother, stay here: [To IMOGEN.] Are we not brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be; But clay and clay differs in dignity, Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Gui. Go you to hunting: I'll abide with him.

Imo. So sick I am not;—yet I am not well: But not so citizen a wanton, as To seem to die, ere sick: So please you, leave me; Stick to your journal course; the breach of custom Is breach of all. I am ill; but your being by me Cannot amend me: Society is no comfort To one not sociable: I am not very sick, Since I can reason of it. Pray you, trust me here: I'll rob none but myself; and let me die, Stealing so poorly.

Gui. I love thee; I have spoke it: How much the quantity, the weight as much, As I do love my father.

Bel. What? how? how?

Arv. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me In my good brother's fault: I know not why I love this youth; and I have heard you say, Love's reason's without reason; the bier at door, And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say, "My father, not this youth."

Bel. O noble strain! [Aside.] O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness! Cowards father cowards, and base things sire base: Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and grace. Not their father; yet who this should be miracle itself, lov'd before me.—
A ninth hour of the morn.

Enter Arv. The in is a prefix to perseverant; in the y as impassioned.

Arv. Brother, farewell.

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arv. You health.—So please you,

Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures. Go what lies I have heard!

Our courtiers say all 's savage, but at court:

Experience, O, thou disprov'st report!

The imperious seas breed monsters; for the dish,

Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.

I am sick still; heart-sick:—Pisanio,

I'll now taste of thy drug.

Gui. I could not stir him:

He said he was gentle, but unfortunate;

Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest.

Arv. Thus did he answer me: yet said, he might know more.

Bel. To the field, to the field:—

We'll leave you for this time; go in and rest.

Arv. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick.

For you must be our housewife.

Imo. Well, or ill,

I am bound to you.

Bel. And shalt be ever. [Exit Arv.]

This youth, how'er distress'd he appears, hath had Good ancestors.

Arv. How angel-like he sings!

Gui. But his neat cookery! He cut our characters;

And sauc'd our broths, as Jumo had been sick And he her dieter.

Arv. Nobly he yokes A smiling with a sigh: as if the sigh Was that it was, for not being such a smile; The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly From so divine a temple, to commix With winds that sailors rail at.

Gui. I do note That grief and patience, rooted in him both, Mingle their spurs* together.

Arv. Grow, patience! And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine His perishing root with the increasing vine!

Bel. It is great morning. Come, away.—Who's that?

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I cannot find those runagates: that villain Hath mock'd me:—I am faint.

Bel. Those runagates! Means he not us? I partly know him; 't is Cloten, the son o' the queen. I fear some ambuscado I saw him not these many years, and yet I know 't is he:—We are held as outlaws.—How?

Gui. He is but one: You and my brother are. What companies are near: pray you, away; Let me alone with him. [Exit Bel.]

Clo. Soft! What are you That fly me thus? some villain mountaineer! I have heard of such.—What slave art thou?

Gui. More slavish did I ne'er than answering

"A slave" without a knock.

Clo. Thou art a robber.

A law-breaker, a villain: Yield thee, thief.

Gui. To who? to thee? What art thou? Have An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?

Thy words, I grant, are bigger: for I wear an * Spurs. Pope calls this an old word for the spur of a horse. We cannot find any authority for his assertion. The word is a post placed in the ground to still the horse's feet.

my mouth. Say, what thou art, yield to thee?

Thou villain base,
of thy my clothes?

No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
my father; he made those clothes,
I wear, make thee.

Thou precious varlet,
is them not.

Hence, then, and thank gave them thee. Thou art some fool;
beat thee.

Thou injurious thief,
name, and tremble.

What's thy name?
thou villain.

Thou double villain, be thy name,
I'll be at it; were 't toad, or adder, spider,
I'll be sooner.

To thy further fear, ere confusion, thou shalt know
queen.

I'm sorry for 't; not seeming by birth.

Art not afraid?
that I reverence those I fear; the wise fear, not fear them.

Die the death:
I'll slay thee with my proper hand,
so that even now fled hence,
I'll set of Lud's town set your heads:
mountaineer. [Exeunt, fighting.]

Enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

My company's abroad.
in the world: You did mistake him, sure,
I could not tell: Long is it since I saw him, nothing blurr'd those lines of favour
I wore; the snatches in his voice, speaking, were as his: I am absolute Cloten.

In this place we left them:
they make good time with him,
so fell.

Being scarce made up,
I saw he had not apprehension of us, for defect of judgment,
I was so of fear: But see, thy brother.

Enter GUIDERIUS, with CLOTEN'S head.

Cloten was a fool; an empty purse,— no money in 't: not Hercules could sock'd out his brains, for he had none:
I'll do this, the fool had borne I'll do his.

What hast thou done?
perfect, what: cut off one Cloten's head,
I'll send, after his own report;
I'll be a traitor, mountaineer; and swore,
I'll take with my single hand he'd take us in,
I'll send, where (thank the gods!) they grow,
in Lud's town.

We are all undone.
I'll be worthy father, what have we to lose,
I'll be sure to take, our lives? The law
I'll be: Then why should we be tender of our own piece of flesh threat us;
I'll be executioner, all himself,
I'll be in the law? What company
I'll be broad?

No single soul
I'll be on, but in all safe reason
I'll be some attendants. Though his humour
I'll be For, in the sense of become.

Was nothing but mutation,—ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse,—not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have ray'd,
To bring him here alone: Although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head: the which he hearing,
(As it is like him,) might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet is 't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then on good ground we fear,
If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.

Arr. Let ordinance
Come as the gods foresay it: howsoe'er,
My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.

Gui. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have taken
His head from him: I'll throw 't into the creek
Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I reckon. [Exit.]

Bel. I fear, 't will be reveng'd:
'Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done 't! though valour Becomes thee well enough.

Arr. 'Would I had done 't,
So the revenge alone pursued me!—Polydore,
I love thee brotherly; but envy much
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would revenges,
That possible strength might meet, would seek us through
And put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, 't is done:—
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I prithee, to our rock;
You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Arr. Poor sick Fidele!
I'll willingly to him: To gain his colour,
I'd let a parish of such Clotens blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.]

Bel. O thou goddess,
Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou blazon'st:
In these two princely boys! They are as gentle
As zephyrs, blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head: and yet as rough,
Their royal blood enshaf'd, as the rind'st wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine
And make him stoop to the vale. 'T is wonder
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd; honour untaught;
Civility not seen from other: valour,
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange
What Cloten's being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS.

Gui. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother; his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn music.]

Bel. My ingenious instrument!
Hark, Polydore, it sounds! But what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark!

Gui. Is he at home?
Bel. He went hence even now.

Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear mother

It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter shoot, he dartsed on thee! Thou, tho' that irregular<sup>a</sup> devil, Cloten, cut off my lord.—To write and read is treacherous!—Damn'd Pisanio his forged letters,—damn'd Pisanio—the bravest vessel of the world

ain't-top!—O, Posthumus! alas, head? where's that? Ah me! where's that?
tho' he kill'd thee at the heart,
head on.—How should this be? Pisanio?
Cloten: malice and lucre in them is woe here. O, 't is pregnant, pregnant! gave me, which, he said, was precious to me, have I not found it the senses? That confirms it home:
Cloten's deed, and Cloten's: O!—
O my pale cheek with thy blood, horrider may seem to those to find us: O, my lord, my lord!

As a Captain, and other Officers, and a Soothsayer.

Cloten, the legions garrison'd in Gallia, Hilford-Haven, with your ships:
in readiness.

But what from Rome?
The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners, of Italy; most willing spirits in noble service: and they come in quest of bold Iachimo, or—

When expect you them?
The next benefit o' the wind.

This forwardness of the fair. Command, our present numbers bid the captains look to 't.—Now, sir, as dream'd, of late, of this war's purpose?
at night the very gods show'd me a vision: say'd, for their intelligence.) Thus:— ward, the Roman eagle, wing'd fly south to this part of the west, d in the subbeams: which portends as abuse my divination)
Roman host.

Dream often so,
as.—Soft, ho! what trunk is here up? The ruin speaks that sometime by building.—How! a page!
sleeping on him? But dead, rather:
tho' abhor to make his bed next, or sleep upon the dead.—
boy's face.

He is alive, my lord.
I then instruct us of this body.—Young thy fortunes; for, it seems to be demanded: Who is this thy bloody pillow? Or who was he, more than noble nature did,

that good picture? What 's thy interest seek? How came it? Who is it?
is?

I am nothing: or if not,
were better. This was my master of Briton, and a good,
mountaineers lies slain:—Alas!
more such masters: I may wander accident, cry out for service,
I good, serve truly, never other master.

Lack, good youth!

Irregular—disorderly. The word is only found

Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining, than Thy master in bleeding; Say his name, good friend

Imo. Richard du Champ. If I do lie, and do
No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope They'll pardon it. [Aside.] Say you, sir?

Luc. Thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same.
Thy name well fits thy faith; thy faith thy name.
Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say
Thou shalt be so well master'd; but, be sure,
No less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner
Than thine own worth prefer thee. Go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, an't please the gods,

I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pickaxes can dig: and when With wild wood-leaves and weeds I have strew'd his grave,

And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep, and sigh;
And, leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth;
And rather father thee than master thee.—

My friends,
The boy hath taught us manly duties: Let us
Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partisans
A grave: Come; arm him.—Boy, he is preferr'd
By thee to us; and he shall be interr'd
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes:
Some falls are means the happier to arise. [Exeunt

SCENE III.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, Lords, and PISANIO.

Cym. Again; and bring me word how 't is with her.
A fever with the absence of her son;
A madness, of which her life 's in danger:—Heavens,
How deeply you at once do touch me! Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone; my queen
Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful wars point at me; her son gone,
So needful for this present: It strikes me, past
The hope of comfort.—But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly set it at your will: But for my mistress,
I nothing know where she remains, why gone,
Nor when she purposes return. 'Beseech your highness,
Hold me your loyal servant.

Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing he was here:
I dare be bound he 's true, and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally.
For Cloten,—

There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time is troublesome;
We'll slip you for a season; but our jealousy. [To Pis.]
Does yet depend.<sup>b</sup>

Lord. So please your majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast; with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent.

Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and queen!
I am amaz'd with matter.

<sup>a</sup> Arm him—take him in your arms.

<sup>b</sup> Does yet depend—is yet depending, as we say of an action at law.

I Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of: come more, for more you're ready;
The want is, but to put those powers in motion
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you: Let's withdraw;
And meet the time, as it seeks us. We fear not What can from Italy annoy us; but We grieve at chances here.—Away. [Exeunt.]

Pis. I heard no letter<sup>a</sup> from my master since
I wrote him Imogen was slain: 'T is strange:
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings: Neither know I
What is betid to Cloten; but remain
Perplex'd in all. The heavens still must work:
Wherein I am false I am honest; not true to be true.
These present wars shall find I love my country,
Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall in them.
All other doubts by time let them be clear'd:
Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Before the Cave.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.
Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it
From action and adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us? this way, the Romans
Must or for Britons slay us; or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,
We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.
To the king's party there's no going: newness
Of Cloten's death (we being not known, not muster'd Among the bands) may drive us to a render Where we have liv'd; and so extort from us that
Which we have done, whose answer would be death Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt
In such a time nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes
And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our notes,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. O, I am known
Of many in the army: many years,
Though Cloten then but young, you see, not
From my remembrance. And, besides, the king
Hath not deserv'd my service, nor your loves;
Who find in my exile the want of breeding,
The certainty of this hard life; aye hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd,
But to be still hot summer's tanlings, and
The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gui. Then be so,
Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army:
I and my brother are not known; yourself
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd.

Arv. By this sun that shines,
I'll thither: What thing is it, that I never Did see man die? scarce ever look'd on blood.
But that of coward hares, hot goats, and vipers Never bestrid a horse, save one, that had A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel
Nor iron on his heel? I am asham'd
To look upon the holy sun, to have
The benefit of his bless'd beams, remaining
So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens, I'll go
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave.
I'll take the better care; but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me, by
The hands of Romans!

Arv. So say I; Amen.
Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you
So slight a valuation, should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you
If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie:
Lead, lead.—The time seems long: their ble scorn,
Till it fly out and show them princes born.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Field between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter POSTHUMUS, with a bloody handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee; for I wish'd
Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones,
If each of you should take this course, how many Must murder wives much better than themselves,
For wrying<sup>b</sup> but a little!—O, Pisanio!
Every good servant does not all commands;
No bond, but to do just ones. Gods! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never Had liv'd to put on<sup>c</sup> this: so had you saved
The noble Imogen to repent; and struck
Me, wretch, more worth your vengeance: But, alack,
You snatch some hence for little faults; that's love,

<sup>a</sup> Malone suggests that by letter is not meant an epistle; but that the phrase is equivalent to I heard no syllable.

<sup>b</sup> Wrying. The use of wry as a verb is uncommon. We have a passage in Sidney's Arcadia which is at once an example and an explanation:—"That from the right line of virtue are wry'd to these crooked shifts."

<sup>c</sup> To put on—to instigate.

To have them fall no more: you some permit
To second ills with ills, each elder worse,
And make them dread it, to the doers' thrills.
But Imogen is your own: Do your best wills,
And make me bless'd to obey!—I am brought
Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom: 'T is enough
That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress. Peace
I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good!
Hear patiently my purpose; I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight Against the part I come with; so I'll die
For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life
Is, every breath, a death: and thus, unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril

<sup>a</sup> "The last deed is certainly not the oldest," says son. That is, perhaps, prosaically true; but as the goes on in the commission of ill is older when he is last ill than when he committed the first, we do not to Shakspeare, as Malone says, "inadvertently consider evil deed as the elder." The confusion, if there be a text may be reconciled by Bacon's notion, that what is old world is really the young world; and so a man's his youngest son.

dedicate. Let me make men know in me, than my habits show.
The strength o' the Leonati in me!
In guise o' the world, I will begin less without, and more within. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter door LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and the Roman of the British army at another. LEONA-FIEMUS following, like a poor soldier, back over, and go out. Then enter again in IACHIMO and POSTHUMUS: he vanquisheth
IACHIMO, and then leaves him.<sup>a</sup>

Heaviness and guilt within my bosom of manhood: I have belied a lady, of this country, and the air on't enfeebles me. Or, could this carl,<sup>b</sup> of nature's, have subdued me, sion? Knighthoods and honours, borne ine, are titles but of scorn.
entry, Britain, go before he exceeds our lords, the odds scarce are men, and you are gods. [Exit.]

Enter IACHIMO; the Britons fly; CYMBELINE is in enter, to his rescue, BELARIUS, GUIDE-ARVIRAGUS.
I, stand! We have the advantage of the sind;
guarded; nothing routs us but
of our fears.

Stand, stand, and fight!

POSTHUMUS, and seconds the Britons: They CYMBELINE, and exeunt. Then, enter
IACHIMO, and IMOGEN.

My boy, from the troops, and save thyself:
ill friends, and the disorder 's such hood-wink'd.

'T is their fresh supplies.
a day turn'd strangely: Or betimes
ree, or fly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter POSTHUMUS and a British Lord.
'st thou from where they made the stand?
I did;
it seems, come from the fliers.

I did.
blame be to you, sir; for all was lost, heavens fought: The king himself desolate, the army broken, backs of Britons seen, all flying silt lane; the enemy full-hearted, anguish with slaughtering, having work
d than tools to do't, struck down y, some slightly touch'd, some falling gh fear; that the strait pass was damm'd em, hurt behind, and cowards living engthen'd shame.

Where was this lane?
e by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with
advantage to an ancient soldier,— s, I warrant; who deserv'd observed throughout this act that the stage-direction is full, and that the action of the drama at this scene is entirely what was called a dumb show preceding Shakespeare was full of such examples uniformly rejected the practice, except in We have followed in the stage-directions the which has been departed from by the modern

So long a breeding as his white beard came to.
In doing this for his country;—athwart the lane,
He, with two striplings, (lads more like to run
The country base,<sup>a</sup> than to commit such slaughter;
With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame,)
Made good the passage; cried to those that fled,
"Our Britain's hearts die flying, not our men:
To darkness fleet, souls that fly backwards! Stand;
Or we are Romans, and will give you that Like beasts, which you shun beastly; and may save,
But to look back in frown: stand, stand."—These three,
Three thousand confident, in act as many,
(For three performers are the file when all
The rest do nothing,) with this word, "stand, stand,"
Accommodated by the place, more charming
With their own nobleness, (which could have turn'd
A distaff to a lance,) gilded pale looks, Part shame, part spirit renew'd; that some, turn'd coward

But by example (O, a sin in war, Damn'd in the first beginners!) 'gan to look
The way that they did, and to grin like lions Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began
A stop i' the chaser, a retire; anon,
A rout, confusion thick: Forthwith, they fly
Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles; slaves,
The strides they victors made: And now our cowards (Like fragments in hard voyages) became
The life o' the need, having found the back-door open
Of the unguarded hearts: Heavens, how they wound!
Some slain before; some dying; some their friends
O'er-borne i' the former wave; ten, chas'd by one,
Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty:
Those that would die or ere resist are grown
The mortal bugs<sup>b</sup> o' the field.

Lord. This was strange chance:
A narrow lane! an old man, and two boys!

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: You are made
Rather to wonder at the things you hear,
Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon't,
And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:
"Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,
Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane."

Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.
Post. 'Lack, to what end!

Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend:
For if he'll do, as he is made to do,
I know he'll quickly fly my friendship too.
You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell; you are angry. [Exit.]

Post. Still going?—This is a lord! O noble misery
To be i' the field, and ask what news of me!
To-day, how many would have given their honours
To have sav'd their carcasses? took heel to do't,
And yet died too? I, in mine own woe charm'd,
Could not find death where I did hear him groan;
Nor feel him where he struck: Being an ugly monster,
'T is strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,
Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we
That draw his knives i' the war.—Well, I will find
him:

For being now a favourer to the Briton,
No more a Briton, I have resum'd again
The part I came in: Fight I will no more,
But yield me to the veriest hind that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer be Britons must take; For me, my ransom 's death:
On either side I come to spend my breath;
Which neither here I'll keep, nor bear again,
But end it by some means for Imogen.

<sup>b</sup> Bugs—terrors.

Enter two Captains, and Soldiers.

1 Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd! Lucius is taken:
T is thought the old man and his sons were angels.

2 Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,
That gave the affront* with them.

1 Cap. So 't is reported:
But none of them can be found.—Stand! who is there?

Post. A Roman;
Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds
Had answer'd him.

2 Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!
A leg of Rome shall not return to tell What crows have peck'd them here: He brags his service

As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVI-RAGUS, PISANIO, and ROMAN Captives. The Captains present POSTHUMUS to CYMBELINE, who delivers him over to a Gaoler.

SCENE IV.—A Prison.

Enter POSTHUMUS, and two Gaolers.

1 Gaol. You shall not now be stolen, you have locks upon you;
So, graze, as you find pasture.

2 Gaol. Ay, or a stomach. [Exeunt Gaolers.]

Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art a way,
I think, to liberty: Yet am I better Than one that 's sick o' the gout: since he had rather Groan so in perpetuity, than be cur'd
By the sure physician, death, who is the key
To unbar these locks. My conscience! thou art fetter'd More than my shanks and wrists: You good gods, give
me

The penitent instrument, to pick that bolt,
Then, free for ever! Is 't enough I am sorry?
So children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?
I cannot do it better than in gyves,
Desir'd, more than constrain'd: to satisfy,
If of my freedom 't is the main part, take
No stricter render of me, than my all.

I know you are more clement than vile men,
Who of their broken debtors take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement: that 's not my desire:
For Imogen's dear life take mine; and though
'T is not so dear, yet 't is a life; you coin'd it:
'Tween man and man, they weigh not every stamp;
Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake:
You rather mine, being yours: And so, great powers,
If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!
I 'll speak to thee in silence. [He sleeps.]

Solemn Music. Enter, as in an apparition, SICILIUS LEONATUS, father to POSTHUMUS, an old man, attired like a warrior; leading in his hand an ancient matron, his wife, and mother to POSTHUMUS, with music before them. Then, after other music, follow the Two young Leonati, brothers to POSTHUMUS, with wounds, as they died in the wars. They circle POSTHUMUS round, as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show
Thy spite on mortal flies;
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.
Hath my poor boy done aught but well,
Whose face I never saw?
I died, whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending Nature's law.
Whose father then (as men report, Thou orphans' father art,)
u shouldst have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.

* Affront—encounter.

Moth. Lucius lent not me her aid.
But took me in my throes;
That from me was Posthumus ripp'd,
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity!

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserv'd the praise o' the world
As great Sicilius' heir.

1 Bro. When once he was mature for
In Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel:
Or fruitful object be
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was
To be exil'd, and thrown From Leonati's seat, and cast
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the geck and scorn
O' the other's villainy?

2 Bro. For this, from stiller seats we
Our parents and us twain,
That, striking in our country's cause,
Fell bravely, and were slain;
Our fealty, and Tenuantius' right,
With honour to maintain.

1 Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus
To Cymbeline perform'd:
Then Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd
The graces for his merits due;
Being all to dolours turn'd?

Sici. Thy crystal window open; look
No longer exercise,
Upon a valiant race, thy harsh
And potent injuries.

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is gone
Take off his miseries—

Sici. Peep through thy marble man
Or we poor ghosts will cry
To the shining synod of the rest,
Against thy deity.

2 Bro. Help, Jupiter; or we appeal
And from thy justice fly—

JUPITER descends in thunder and lightning, and he throws a thunder-bolt. The Ghosts fall.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of rage
Offend our hearing: hush!—How dare Accuse the thunderer, whose bolts you are Sky-planted, batters all rebellious coasts Poor shadows of Elysium, hence: and Upon your never-withering banks of
Be not with mortal accidents oppress:

No care of yours it is; you know, 'tis
Whom best I love I cross: to make myself
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content
Your low-lid son our goalhead will spill
His comforts thrive, his trials well are Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and Our temple was he married.—Rise, and
He shall be lord of lady Imogen.

And happier much by his affection made
This tablet lay upon his breast; wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth unfold
And so, away: no farther with your din Express impatience, lest you stir my Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline

Sici. He came in thunder; his celestial Was sulphurous to smell: the holy eagle
Stoop'd, as to foot us: his assermons is More sweet than our bless'd fields: his re Prunes the immortal wing, and cleaves his
As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jove!
Sici. The marble pavement closes, he is His radiant roof:—Away I send, to be heard
Let us with care perform his great behest.

Post. [Waking.] Sleep, thou hast lost and begot
A father to me: and then last created ad two brothers; But—O scorn!— went hence so soon as they were born. awake. Poor wretches that depend favour dream as I have done; and nothing. But, alas, I swerve:

not to flout, neither deserve, steep'd in favours; so am I,
is golden chance, and know not why.
haunt this ground? A book? O rare one!
our fangled<sup>a</sup> world, a garment that it covers: let thy effects be most unlike our courtiers, romise.

as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown,
g. find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air;
a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which,
17 years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old itly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, mate, and flourish in peace and plenty.

ream; or else such stuff as madmen brain not: either both, or nothing:
speaking, or a speaking such not untie. Be what it is, my life is like it, which out for sympathy.

Enter Gaoler.

ve, sir, are you ready for death?
r-roasted rather: ready long ago.
aging is the word, sir; if you be ready for well cooked.

if I prove a good repast to the spectators
the shot.

navy reckoning for you, sir: But the com-ra bills; which are often the sadness of e procuring of mirth; you come in faint seat, depart reeling with too much drink;

u have paid too much, and sorry that you such; purse and brain both empty; the vial for being too light, the purse too light, of heaviness: O! of this contradiction you quit.—O, the charity of a penny cord! it sands in a trice: you have no true debtor ut it; of what's past, is, and to come, the
Your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters;

indeed, do I, fellow.
or death has eyes in 's head then; I have so pictured: you must either be directed take upon them to know; or take upon which I am sure you do not know; for, s-inquiry on your own peril, and how you your journey's end, I think you 'll never

I thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to se way I am going, but such as wink, and hem.

at an infinite mock is this, that a man be best use of eyes to see the way of blind-size hanging 's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

ck off his manacles; bring your prisoner bring'st good news;—I am called to be be free.

This word is very rarely used without the epithet means an innovation.

Gaol. I 'll be hanged then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler; no bolts for the dead. [Exeunt Post. and Mess.]

Gaol. Unless a man would marry a gallows, and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone.* Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman: and there be some of them too that die against their wills: so should I, if I were one.
I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good;
O, there were desolation of gaolers and gallowses! I speak against my present profit; but my wish hath a preferment in 't. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Cymbeline's Tent.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made

Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart,
That the poor soldier that so richly fought,
Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast
Stepp'd before targes of proof, cannot be found:
He shall be happy that can find him, if
Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw

Such noble fury in so poor a thing;
Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought
But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him?

Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living,
But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am

The heir of his reward; which I will add
To you the liver, heart, and brain of Britain,

[To BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.]

By whom I grant she lives:—'T is now the time
To ask of whence you are:—report it.

Bel. Sir,

In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen:
Further to boast were neither true nor modest,
Unless I add we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees:

Arise, my knights o' the battle; I create you Companions to our person, and will fit you
With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS and Ladies.

There's business in these faces:—Why so sadly
Greet you our victory? you look like Romans,
And not o' the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king!

To sour your happiness, I must report
The queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worse than a physician

Would this report become? But I consider,
By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death
Will seize the doctor too.—How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life,
Which, being cruel to the world, concluded
Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd
I will report, so please you: These her women
Can trip me, if I err; who, with wet cheeks,
Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Prithee, say.

Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you; only Affected greatness got by you, not you:
Married your royalty, was wife to your place;
Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this:

And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love * Prone—forward.

With such integrity, she did confess
Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life,
But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend!
Who is 't can read a woman?—Is there more?

Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess she had

For you a mortal mineral; which, being took,
Should by the minute feed on life, and, ling'ring,
By inches waste you: In which time she purpos'd,
By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'ercome you with her show: yes, and in time,
When she had fitted you with her craft, to work
Her son into the adoption of the crown:
But, failing of her end by his strange absence, Grew shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes; repented
The evils she hatch'd were not effected: so,
Despairing, died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women?

Lady. We did, so please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes

Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart,
That thought her like her seeming: it had been vicious
To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter!
That it was folly in me, thou mayst say,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!

Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, the Soothsayer, and other Roman prisoners, guarded; POSTHUMUS behind, and IMOGEN.

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute; that
The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss
Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made suit
That their good souls may be appeas'd with slaughter
Of you their captives, which ourself have granted:
So, think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war: the day
Was yours by accident; had it gone with us,
We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd
Our prisoners with the sword. But since the gods
Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ransom, let it come: sufficeth
A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer:
Augustus lives to think on 't: and so much
For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat: my boy, a Briton born,
Let him be ransom'd: never master had
A page so kind, so duteous, diligent,
So tender over his occasions, true,
So feat, so nurse-like: let his virtue join
With my request, which, I'll make bold, your highness
Cannot deny; he hath done no Briton harm,
Though he have serv'd a Roman: save him, sir,
And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him:
His favour is familiar to me.
Boy, thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
And art mine own.—I know not why, nor wherefore,
To say live, boy: ne'er thank thy master; live:
And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty and thy state, I'll give it;
Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner,
The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness.

Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad;
And yet I know thou wilt.

Imo. No, no: a lack,
There's other work in hand; I see a thing
Bitter to me as death; your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me.

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me

 Thou gav'st me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!

 The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
 That box I gave you was not thought by me
 A precious thing; I had it from the queen.
Cym. New matter still?
Imo. It poison'd me.
Cor. O gods!—
 I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
 Which must approve thee honest: if Pisanio
 Have, said she, given his mistress that confection
 Which I gave him for cordial, she is serv'd
 As I would serve a rat.
Cym. What 's this, Cornelius?
Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importun'd me
 To temper poisons for her; still pretending
 The satisfaction of her knowledge only
 In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs
 Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose
 Was of more danger, did compound for her
 A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease
 The present power of life; but, in short time,
 All offices of nature should again
 Do their due functions.—Have you ta'en of it?
Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.
Bel. My boys,
 There was our error.
Gui. This is sure, Fidele.
Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you?
 Think that you are upon a rock, and now
 Throw me again. [Embracing him.

 Wilt thou not speak to me?
Imo. Your blessing, sir. [Kneeling.
Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;
 You had a motive for it. [To Gui. and Arv.
Cym. My tears, that fall,
 Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,
 Thy mother 's dead.
Imo. I am sorry for 't, my lord.
Cym. O, she was naught; and long of her it was
 That we meet here so strangely: But her son
 Is gone, we know not how, nor where.
Pis. My lord,
 Now fear is from me, I 'll speak troth. Lord Cloten,
 Upon my lady's missing, came to me
 With his sword drawn; foam'd at the mouth, and swore
 If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
 It was my instant death: By accident,
 I had a feigned letter of my master's
 Then in my pocket; which directed him
 To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
 Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
 Which he infore'd from me, away he posts
 With unchaste purpose, and with oath to violate
 My lady's honour: what became of him,
 I further know not.
Gui. Let me end the story:
 I slew him there.

Cym. Marry, the gods forefend!
I would not thy good deeds should from my lips
Pluck a hard sentence: prithee, valiant youth,
Deny't again.

Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a prince.

Gui. A most incivil one: The wrongs he did me
Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke me
With language that would make me spurn the sea,
If it could so roar to me: I cut off's head;
And am right glad he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee.
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our law: Thou art dead.

Imo. That headless man
I thought had been my lord.

Cym. Bind the offender,
And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, sir king;
This man is better than the man he slew,
As well descended as thyself; and hath
More of thee merited, than a band of Clotens
Had ever scar for.—Let his arms alone; [To the guard.]
They were not born for bondage.

Cym. Why, old soldier,
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,
By tasting of our wrath? How of descent
As good as we?

Arv. In that he spake too far.

Cym. And thou shalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three:
But I will prove, that two of us are as good
As I have given out him.—My sons, I must,
For mine own part, unfold a dangerous speech,
Though, haply, well for you.

Arv. Your danger's ours.

Gui. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it then.—
By leave;—Thou hadst, great king, a subject who Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him? he is A banish'd traitor.

Bel. He it is that hath Assum'd this age:<sup>a</sup> indeed, a banish'd man;
I know not how a traitor.

Cym. Take him hence;
The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot:
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have receiv'd it.

Cym. Nursing of my sons?

Bel. I am too blunt and saucy: Here's my knee
Ere I arise I will prefer my sons;
Then, spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
These two young gentlemen, that call me father,
And think they are my sons, are none of mine;
They are the issue of your loins, my liege,
And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How! my issue?

Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan, Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd:
Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment
Itself, and all my treason: that I suffer'd
Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes
(For such and so they are) these twenty years
Have I train'd up: those arts they have, as I Could put into them; my breeding was, sir, as Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile,
Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children
Upon my banishment: I mov'd her to't;
Having receiv'd the punishment before,

<sup>a</sup> As us'd this age—put on these appearances of age.

For that which I did then: Benten for loyalty
Excited me to treason: Their dear loss,
The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shap'd
Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir,
Here are your sons again; and I must lose
Two of the sweetest companions in the world:
The benediction of these covering heavens
Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy
To inlay heaven with stars.

Cym. Thou weep'st, and speekest
The service, that you three have done, is more
Unlike than this thou tell'st: I lost my children:
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.

Bel. Be pleas'd awhile.—
This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius:
This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus,
Your younger princely son; he, sir, was happ'd
In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand
Of his queen mother, which, for more protection,
I can with ease produce.

Cym. Guiderius had Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star;
It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he;
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp:
It was wise Nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.

Cym. O, what am I
A mother to the birth of three? No'er mother Rejoic'd deliverance more:—Bless'd may you be
That, after this strange starting from your obs,
You may reign in them now!—O Imogen,
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo. No, my lord;
I have got two worlds by't.—O my gentle brother,
Have we thus met? O never say hereafter
But I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother.
When I was but your sister; I you brothers
When you were so indeed.

Cym. Did you e'er meet?

Arv. Ay, my good lord.
Gui. And at first meeting
Continued so, until we thought he died.

Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd.
Cym. O rare man!

When shall I hear all through? This fierce attack Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in.—Where, how liv'd
And when came you to serve our Roman captive?
How parted with your brothers? how first met?
Why fled you from the court? and whither?
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demand'd.
And all the other by-dependencies,
From chance to chance; but nor the time, nor place
Will serve our long intergatories. See,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen;
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye
On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting
Each object with a joy; the counterchange
Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.
Thou art my brother: So we'll hold thee ever.

Imo. You are my father too; and did relieve me
To see this gracious season.

Cym. All o'erjoy'd,
Save these in bonds; let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. My good master,
I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!

Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.

Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee: and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth: who, by Belarius stolen,
For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd,
To the majestic cedar join'd; whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well,
My peace we will begin:—And, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Cæsar,
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen:
Whom heavens, in justice, (both on her, and hers,)
Have laid most heavy hand.<sup>a</sup>

Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do tune
The harmony of this peace. The vision
Which I made known to Lucius, ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd: For the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun
So vanish'd: which foreshow'd our princely eagle,
The imperial Cæsar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods;
And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils
From our bless'd altars! Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward: Let
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together: so through Lud's town march:
And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts.
Set on there:—Never was a war did cease,
Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace.

sion occurs in 'Othello'—

"What conjurations and what mighty magic I won his daughter [with]."

the date of 1622. We have, however, no doubt, that the copy of 'Othello' in the folio was printed from a manuscript copy, without reference to the quarto. The folio edition is regularly divided into acts and scenes; the quarto edition has not a single indication of any subdivision in the acts, and omits the division between Acts II. and III. The folio edition contains 163 lines which are not found in the quarto, and these some of the most striking in the play: the number of lines found in the quarto which are not in the folio do not amount to 10. The quarto, then, has not the merit of being the fuller copy. Believing the folio to be the more genuine copy, our text, for the most part, follows that authority.

When Shakspeare first became acquainted with the 'Moor of Venice' of Giraldi Cinthio (whether in the original Italian, or the French translation, or in one of the little story-books that familiarized the people with the romance and the poetry of the south), he saw in that novel the scaffolding of 'Othello.' There was formerly in Venice a valiant Moor, says the story. It came to pass that a virtuous lady of wonderful beauty, named Desdemona, became enamoured of his great qualities and noble virtues. The Moor loved her in return, and they were married in spite of the opposition of the lady's friends. It happened too (says the story), that the senate of Venice appointed the Moor to the command of Cyprus, and that his lady determined to accompany him thither. Amongst the officers who attended upon the General was an ensign, of the most agreeable person, but of the most depraved nature. The wife of this man was the friend of Desdemona, and they spent much of their time together. The wicked ensign became violently enamoured of Desdemona; but she, whose thoughts were wholly engrossed by the Moor, was utterly regardless of the ensign's attentions. His love then became terrible hate, and he resolved to accuse Desdemona to her husband of would see plainer," said the ensign. The writer continues to display the perfidy of the ensign against Desdemona. He states the chief which the Moor had given her, the agency of his own child. He contrives to murder the captain of Cyprus, after his credulous husband listen to a conversation which gives a false colour and direction; and the Moor and the guilty officer destroy Desdemona under circumstances of great brutality, which, however, concealed, and the Moor is left as his accomplice.

Mr. Dunlop, in his 'History of Fiction,' points out the material differences between the novel and the tragedy. He adds, "In all these important particulars he has deviated from it with impunity. The characters of Iago, Desdemona, and Othello, taken from Cinthio with scarcely a change, are raised to a higher level. The obscure hints and various artifices which raise suspicion in the Moor are the same in the novel and the drama." M. Guizot, with his usual acuteness, has seen somewhat further than most critics. "There was wanting in the narrative a poetical genius which furnished the characters, created the individuals—which imposed a figure and a character—which made us believe and listen to their words—which penetrated their sentiments:—that which summons events to arise, to be completed:—that creative breath which over the past, calls it again into being a present and imperishable life:—that which Shakspeare alone possessed, and which, in a forgotten novel, he has made 'Othello'

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter RODERIGO and IAGO.

Ever tell me, I take it much unkindly
Iago, who hast had my purse
If things were thine, shouldst know of this.
But you'll not hear me. If ever I did dream
On better matter, abhor me.
You told'st me, thou didst hold him in thy hate.
O, beware my slave, if you do not. Three great ones of the city,
In suit to make me his lieutenant,
Close on him: and, by the faith of man,
I may prove his price, I am worth no worse a place:
To bring his own pride and purposes
Into a bombast circumstance,
Aff'd with epithets of war,
To get some mediators. For, certes, says he,
I have chosen my officer.*
As he?
A great arithmetician,
One Iago, a Florentine,
Most damn'd in a fair wife,
That set a squadron in the field,

See is circumlocution. Iago does not mean to say Iago made a long rigmorole speech to the three great mediators and consulted them by telling them he had chosen his officer; but, in the spirit of calumny, he said that, having chosen his officer before the others made to him for Iago, he suppressed the fact;
Iago consulted them with a bombast cir-

Wherein the tongued consuls can propose
As masterly as he: mere prattle, without practice,
Is all his soldiership. But he, sir, had the election:
And I,—of whom his eyes had seen the proof
At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on other grounds
Christen'd and heathen,—must be be-lee'd and calm'd*
By debtor and creditor: this counter-caster,
He, in good time, must his lieutenant be,
And I,—bless the mark! his Moor-ship's ancient.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hang-
man.

Iago. Why, there's no remedy, 't is the curse of service;

Preferment goes by letter and affection,
And not by old gradation, where each second Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be judge yourself, Whether I in any just term am affi'd
To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him then.

Iago. O sir, content you;

I follow him to serve my turn upon him:
We cannot all be masters, nor all masters
Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark
Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave,
That, doting on his own obsequious bondage,
Wears out his time, much like his master's ass,
For nought but provender; and when he's old Cashed out;

* Be-lee'd and calm'd. Iago uses terms of navigation to express that Cassio had out-sailed him.

Whip me such honest knaves : Others there are
Who, trimm'd in forms and visages of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves ;
And, throwing but shows of service on their lords,
Do well thrive by them, and, when they have lin'd their coats,

Do themselves homage : these fellows have some soul ;
And such a one do I profess myself. For, sir,
It is as sure as you are Roderigo,
Were I the Moor I would not be Iago.
In following him I follow but myself ;
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty,
But seeming so, for my peculiar end :
For when my outward action doth demonstrate
The native act and figure of my heart
In complement extern,<sup>a</sup> 't is not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For daws to peck at : I am not what I am.

Rod. What a fall Fortune does the Thick-lips owe,
If he can carry 't thus !

Iago. Call up her father,
Rouse him : make after him, poison his delight,
Proclaim him in the streets ; incense her kinsmen,
And though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies : though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such chances of vexation on 't,
As it may lose some colour.

Rod. Here is her father's house ; I 'll call aloud.
Iago. Do ; with like timorous accent, and dire yell,
As when (by night and negligence) the fire
Is spied in populous cities.

Rod. What, ho ! Brabantio ! signior Brabantio, ho !
Iago. Awake ; what, ho ! Brabantio ! thieves !
thieves !

Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags !
Thieves ! thieves !

BRABANTIO, above.

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons ?
What is the matter there ?

Rod. Signior, is all your family within ?

Iago. Are your doors lock'd ?

Bra. Why, wherefore ask you this ?
Iago. Sir, you are robb'd ; for shame<sup>b</sup> put on your gown ;

Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul
Even now, now, very now, an old black ram
Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise ;
Awake the snorting citizens with the bell,
Or else the devil will make a grandsire of you :
Arise, I say.

Bra. What, have you lost your wits ?

Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice ?

Bra. Not I ; what are you ?

Rod. My name is Roderigo.

Bra. The worse welcome :

I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doors :
In honest plainness thou hast heard me say
My daughter is not for thee ; and now, in madness,
(Being full of supper and distemp'ring draughts,)
Upon malicious knavery, dost thou come
To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, sir, sir,—

Bra. But thou must needs be sure,

My spirit and my place have in their power
To make this bitter to thee.

<sup>a</sup> In complement extern. Johnson interprets this—"In that which I do only for an outward show of civility." Surely this interpretation, by adopting the secondary meaning of complement (compliment), destroys Iago's bold avowal, which is, that when his actions exhibit the real intentions and motives of his heart, in outward completeness, he might as well wear it upon his sleeve.

<sup>b</sup> For shame. This is not used as a reproach, but means—for decency put on your gown.

Rod. Patience, good sir

Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing Venice ;

My house is not a grange.<sup>a</sup>

Rod. Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you.

Iago. Sir, you are one of those that will God, if the devil bid you. Because we come service, and you think we are ruffians, you'll daughter covered with a Barbary horse ; you your nephews<sup>b</sup> neigh to you : you'll have cousins, and gennets for Germans.

Bra. What profane wretch art thou ?

Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell daughter and the Moor are making the beast backs.

Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are a senator

Bra. This thou shalt answer. I know thee

Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But
you,

If 't be your pleasure and most wise consent,
(As partly I find it is,) that your fair daughter
At this odd-even and dull watch o' the night
Transported with no worse nor better guard,
But with a knave of common hire, a gondolier,
To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor :

If this be known to you, and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy wrong
But if you know not this, my manners tell me
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe That, from the sense of all civility,

I thus would play and trifle with your reverence
Your daughter,—if you have not given her
I say again, hath made a gross revolt ;
Tying her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes,
In an extravagant<sup>c</sup> and wheeling stranger,
Of here and every where : Straight satisfy you
If she be in her chamber, or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state
For thus deluding you.

Bra. Strike on the tinder, I

Give me a taper ; call up all my people :
This accident is not unlike my dream ;
Belief of it oppresses me already :

Light, I say ! light ! [Exit Iago]

Iago. Farewell ; for I must leave you :
It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my place
To be produc'd (as, if I stay, I shall)

Against the Moor ; For, I do know, the state
(However this may gall him with some chide)
Cannot with safety cast him. For he's embellish'd
With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars,
(Which even now stand in act,) that for this Another of his fathom they have none

To lead their business : in which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell-pains,
Yet, for necessity of present life,
I must show out a flag and sign of love,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall see
him,

Lead to the Sagittary<sup>d</sup> the raised search ;
And there will I be with him. So, farewell.

Enter, below, BRABANTIO, and Servants with

Bra. It is too true an evil : gone she is,

<sup>a</sup> Grange. Strictly speaking, the farm house of a lord. But it is used by the old writers as a separate dwelling.

<sup>b</sup> Nephews. The word was formerly used in a general sense, or any lineal descendant.

to to me of my despised time at bitterness. Now, Roderigo, thou see her?—O, unhappy girl!—
our, say'st thou?—Who would be a father?—
thou know 't was she?—O, she deceives me at!—What said she to you?—Get more pers;
y kindred.—Are they married, think you?
ly, I think they are.
heaven!—How got she out?—O treason of e blood!—
hence trust not your daughters' minds to see them act.—Are there not charms he property of youth and maidhood as'd? Have you not read, Roderigo, ch thing?

Yes, sir; I have indeed.
I'll up my brother.—O, would you had had er!—
ay, some another.—Do you know
may apprehend her and the Moor?
think I can discover him, if you please ay you, lead on. At every house I'll call;

mand at most;—Get weapons, ho!
ome special officers of night.—

ACT II.—The same. Another Street.

OTHELLO, IAGO, and Attendants with torches.
ough in the trade of war I have slain men,
old it very stuff* o' the conscience, entriv'd murder: I lack iniquity to do me service: Nine or ten times ght to have yerk'd him here under the ribs.
is better as it is.

Nay, but he prated,
such scurvy and provoking terms
er honour,
the little godliness I have,
hard forbear him. But, I pray you, sir, st married? Be assur'd of this,
agnifico is much belov'd,
in his effect, a voice potential,
as the duke's: he will divorce you;
as you what restraint and grievance with all his might to enforce it on) him cable.

Let him do his spite:
s, which I have done the signiory, matter, material. The stuff of the conscience is the ace of the conscience.

A siège royal was a throne, an elevated seat.
unbanneted. Theobald says, to speak unbanneted is to the cap off, which is directly opposed to the poet's Mr. Fuseli suggested an ingenious explanation, that the cap or bonnet constituted an important distinc-e demerits of Othello might speak for themselves extrinsic honours. Demerit's is used in the sense erces being synonymous in Latin.
e explains unhoused—free from domestic cares. It as that Othello simply uses unhoused for unmarried.
to the Loos or head of the house—the unmarried is banneted—the unhoused.

Enter CASSIO, at a distance, and certain Officers with torches.

Iago. Those are the raised father and his friends:
You were best go in.

Oth. Not I: I must be found;
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul,
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?

Iago. By Janus, I think no.
Oth. The servants of the duke; and my lieutenant.
The goodness of the night upon you, friends!

What is the news?
Cas. The duke does greet you, general;
And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance,
Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine:
It is a business of some heat. The galleys
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers
This very night, at one another's heels;
And many of the consuls,<sup>a</sup> rais'd and met,
Are at the duke's already: You have been hotly call'd
for;

When, being not at your lodging to be found,
The senate hath sent about three several quests,
To search you out.

Oth. 'T is well I am found by you.

I will but spend a word here in the house,
And go with you. [Exit.]

Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?

Iago. 'Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land carack;<sup>b</sup>
If it prove lawful prize he 's made for ever.

Cas. I do not understand.

Iago. He 's married.

Cas. To who?

Re-enter OTHELLO.

Iago. MARRY, to—Come, captain, will you go?

Oth. Have with you.

Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you.

Enter BRABANTIO, RODERIGO, and Officers with torches.

Iago. It is Brabantio:—general, be advis'd;
He comes to bad intent.

Oth. Hola! stand there!

Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.

Bra. Down with him, thief!
[They draw on both sides.]

Iago. You, Roderigo! Come, sir, I am for you.

Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.

Good signior, you shall more command with years
Than with your weapons.

Bra. O thou foul thief, where hast thou stow'd my daughter?

Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her:

For I'll refer me to all things of sense,

(If she in chains of magic were not bound,)

Whether a maid so tender, fair, and happy,

So opposite to marriage, that she shunn'd

The wealthy curled dearling<sup>e</sup> of our nation,

Would ever have, to incur a general mock,

Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom

Of such a thing as thou,—to fear,<sup>d</sup> not to delight.

Judge me the world, if 't is not gross in sense,

That thou hast practis'd on her with foul charms;

Abus'd her delicate youth with drugs, or minerals,

That weaken motion:—I'll have it disputed on;

<sup>a</sup> Consuls. In the first scene we have "the tongued consuls"; doubtless the senators are meant in both passages.

<sup>d</sup> To fear. Brabantio calls Othello a thing to terrify, not to delight.

'T is probable, and palpable to thinking.
I therefore apprehend and do attach thee,
For an abuser of the world, a practiser
Of arts inhibited and out of warrant :
Lay hold upon him ; if he do resist,
Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands,
Both you of my inclining, and the rest :
Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it Without a prompter.—Where will you that I go
To answer this your charge ?

Bra. To prison : till fit time
Of law, and course of direct session,
Call thee to answer.

Oth. What if I do obey ?
How may the duke be therewith satisfied ;
Whose messengers are here about my side,
Upon some present business of the state,
To bring me to him ?

Off. 'T is true, most worthy signior,
The duke 's in council ; and your noble self,
I am sure is sent for.

Bra. How ! the duke in council ?
In this time of the night ?—Bring him away :
Mine 's not an idle cause : the duke himself,
Or any of my brothers of the state,
Cannot but feel this wrong as 't were their own :
For if such actions may have passage free,
Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be. [Ex.]

SCENE III.—The same. A Council Chamber.

The Duke, and Senators, sitting ; Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news,
That gives them credit.

1 Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd ;
My letters say, a hundred and seven galleys.

Duke. And mine, a hundred forty.
2 Sen. And mine, two hundred :
But though they jump not on a just account,
(As in these cases where the aim reports,<sup>a</sup>
'T is oft with difference,) yet do they all confirm
A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment :
I do not so secure me in the error,
But the main article I do approve
In fearful sense.

Sailor. [Within.] What ho ! what ho ! what ho !

Enter Sailor.

Off. A messenger from the galleys.

Duke. Now ? the business ?

Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes ;
So was I bid report here to the state,
By signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change ?

1 Sen. This cannot be,
By no assay of reason ; 't is a pageant,
To keep us in false gaze : When we consider
The importancy of Cyprus to the Turk ;
And let ourselves again but understand
That, as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it,
For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
But altogether lacks the abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in : if we make thought of this,
We must not think the Turk is so unskillful,
To leave that latest which concerns him first,
Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain,
To wake and wage a danger profitless.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he 's not for Rhodes.

Off. Here is more news.

The aim reports. Aim is used in the sense of conjecture.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious, Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes
Have there injointed them with an after fleet.

1 Sen. Ay, so I thought ;—How many, as you say ?
Mess. Of thirty sail : and now they do reverse
Their backward course, bearing with frank aspect
Their purposes towards Cyprus. Signior Montano
Your trusty and most valiant servitor,
With his free duty, recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'T is certain then for Cyprus.
Marcus Luccicos,<sup>a</sup> is not he in town ?

1 Sen. He 's now in Florence.
Duke. Write from us to him, post—post despatch.

1 Sen. Here comes Brabantio, and the valiant

Enter BRABANTIO, OTHELLO, IAGO, RODRIGO, Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight come Against the general enemy Ottoman.
I did not see you ; welcome, gentle signior. [To Othello.] We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.

Bra. So did I yours : Good your grace, pardon
Neither my place, nor ought I heard of business, Hath rais'd me from my bed ; nor doth the care

Take hold on me ; for my particular grief
Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature,
That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows,
And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what 's the matter ?

Bra. My daughter ! O, my daughter !

Sen. Dead ?

Bra. Ay,
She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted
By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks
For nature so preposterously to err,
Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,
Sans witchcraft could not—

Duke. Whoe'er he be, that in this foul project
Hath thus beguil'd your daughter of herself,
And you of her, the bloody book of law
You shall yourself read in the bitter letter,
After your own sense ; yea, though our justice
Stood in your action.

Bra. Humbly I thank your grace
Here is the man, this Moor ; whom now, it seems
Your special mandate, for the state affairs,
Hath hither brought.

All. We are very sorry for 't.

Duke. What, in your own part, can you say to
[To Othello]

Bra. Nothing, but this is so.

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors,
My very noble and approv'd good masters,—
That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,
It is most true ; true, I have married her ;
The very head and front of my offending
Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech,
And little bless'd with the soft phrase of peace ;
For since these arms of mine had seven years' pain,
Till now some nine moons wasted,<sup>b</sup> they have <sup>a</sup> Marcus Luccicos. Both the folio and the quarto give the proper name thus. Capell charged it to Marcus by saying that such a termination as Luccicos is unknown to Italian. But who is the duke inquiring after? Was not a Greek soldier of Cyprus—an Esquidino—one who by his local knowledge was enabled to give him information necessary that the Greek should bear an Italian name? does not the termination in our better convey the notion? we believe the poet to have had?

<sup>b</sup> He had been unemployed during nine moons.

action in the tented field ;
 this great world can I speak,
 remains to feats of broils and battle ;
 little shall I grace my cause,
 or myself : Yet, by your gracious patience,
 I unvarnish'd tale deliver the course of love : what drugs, what charms, magic, and what mighty magic, exceeding I am charg'd withal,)
 together.

A maiden never bold ;
 still and quiet, that her motion would self : And she, in spite of nature, country, credit, every thing,
 was with what she fear'd to look on ?
 not maim'd, and most imperfect, confess, perfection so could err rules of nature ; and must be driven practices of cunning hell, could be. I therefore vouch again,
 the mixtures powerful o'er the blood,
 a dram conjur'd to this effect,
 upon her.

To vouch this is no proof ;
 a wider and more overt test,
 in habits, and poor likelihoods seeming, do prefer against him.
 O, Othello, speak :
 indirect and forced courses
 poison this young maid's affections ?
 by request, and such fair question as affordeth ?

I do beseech you,
 lady to the Sagittary,
 speak of me before her father :
 I am foul in her report,
 in office, I do hold of you,
 I am away, but let your sentence run my life.

Fetch Desdemona hither.
 I will conduct them : you best know the cause. [Exeunt IAGO and Attendants.]
 I come, as truly as to heaven
 the vices of my blood, your grave ears I'll present to drive in this fair lady's love, as mine.

O, Othello,
 my father lov'd me ; oft invited me ;
 he told me the story of my life,
 a year ; the battles, sieges, fortune,
 he pass'd.
 I might, even from my boyish days,
 in a moment that he bade me tell it.
 I was like most disastrous chances ;
 accidents by flood and field ;
 which 'scapes I' the imminent deadly breach ;
 I was by the insolent foe made a slave ; of my redemption thence, he saved me. In my traveller's history,<sup>a</sup> of adventures vast and deserts idle,<sup>b</sup> of rocks, and hills whose heads touch
 heaven,
 (not to speak,) such was my process ;—
 of cannibals that each other eat, of men whose heads were cut off their shoulders. These things to hear Desdemona seriously incline ;
 but how house affairs would draw her thence ;
 and as she could with haste despatch,
 I came again, and with a greedy ear

Antony. Othello modestly, and somewhat joyfully, wonderful relations, a traveller's history.
 a, barren.

I devour up my discourse : Which I observing,
 Took once a pliant hour ; and found good means
 To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart,
 That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
 Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
 But not intently : I did consent ;
 And often did beguile her of her tears,
 When I did speak of some distressful stroke
 That my youth suffer'd. My story being done,
 She gave me for my pains a world of sighs :
 She swore,—In faith, 't was strange, 't was passing strange ;

'T was pitiful, 't was wondrous pitiful :
 She wish'd she had not heard it ; yet she wish'd
 That heaven had made her such a man : she thank'd
 me ;

And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
 I should but teach him how to tell my story,
 And that would woo her. Upon this hint I spake :
 She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd ;
 And I lov'd her that she did pity them.
 This only is the witchcraft I have us'd ;
 Here comes the lady, let her witness it.

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and Attendants.

Duke. I think this tale would win my daughter too.
 Good Brabantio,
 Take up this mangled matter at the best :
 Men do their broken weapons rather use,
 Than their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you, hear her speak ;
 If she confess that she was half the wooer,
 Destruction on my head if my bad blame
 Light on the man !—Come hither, gentle mistress ;
 Do you perceive in all this noble company
 Where most you owe obedience ?

Des. My noble father,
 I do perceive here a divided duty :
 To you, I am bound for life and education ;
 My life and education both do learn me
 How to respect you ; you are the lord of duty ;—
 I am hitherto your daughter : But here 's my husband ;
 And so much duty as my mother show'd
 To you, preferring you before her father,
 So much I challenge that I may profess
 Due to the Moor, my lord.

Bra. God be with you !—I have done :—
 Please it your grace, on to the state affairs ;
 I had rather to adopt a child than get it.
 Come hither, Moor :
 I here do give thee that with all my heart
 Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart
 I would keep from thee.—For your sake, jewel,
 I am glad at soul I have no other child ;
 For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
 To hang clogs on them.—I have done, my lord.

Duke. Let me speak like yourself ; and lay a sentence,
 Which, as a guise, or step, may help these lovers.
 When remedies are past, the griefs are ended,
 By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.
 To mourn a mischief that is past and gone
 Is the next way to draw new mischief on.
 What cannot be preserv'd when fortune takes,
 Patience her injury a mockery makes.
 The robb'd that smiles steals something from the thief ;
 He robs himself that spends a bootless grief.

Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile ;
 We lose it not so long as we can smile.
 He bears the sentence well that nothing bears
 But the free comfort which from thence he bears :
 But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow
 That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.
 These sentences, to sugar, or to gall,
 Being strong on both sides, are equivocal ;

Due reverence of place, and exhibition;
With such accommodation, and besort,
As levels with her breeding.

Duke. Why; at her father's.

Bra. I will not have it so.

Oth. Nor I.

Des. I would not there reside,
To put my father in impatient thoughts,
By being in his eye. Most gracious duke,
To my unfolding lend your prosperous ear;
And let me find a charter in your voice
To assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona?

Des. That I love the Moor to live with him,
My downright violence and storm of fortunes
May trumpet to the world: my heart's subdued
Even to the very quality of my lord:
I saw Othello's visage in his mind;
And to his honours and his valiant parts
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
The rights for why I love him are bereft me,
And I a heavy interim shall support
By his dear absence: Let me go with him.

Oth. Let her have your voice.
Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not,
To please the palate of my appetite;
Nor to comply with heat the young affects,
In my defunct and proper satisfaction;<sup>b</sup>
But to be free and bounteous to her mind:
And heaven defend your good souls that you think
I will your serious and great business scant,
When she is with me: No, when light-wing'd toys
Of feather'd Cupid seel with wanton dulness
My speculative and offic'd instrument,
That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skillet of my helm,
And all indign and base adversities
Make head against my estimation.

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay or going; the affair cries haste,
And speed must answer it.

Sen. You must away to-night.

To spend with thee: we must

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Sea-port Town in Cyprus.

Enter MONTANO and Two Gentlemen.

What from the cape can you discern at sea ?
 Nothing at all : it is a high-wrought flood ;
 'twixt the heaven and the main,
 Still.
 'Tis thinks, the wind hath spoke aloud at land ;
 In ne'er shook our battlements :
 'Tis as if we had seen 'twixt the sea,
 A fork, when mountains melt on them,
 A mortise ?<sup>b</sup> what shall we hear of this ?
 A segregation of the Turkish fleet :
 They stand upon the foaming shore,
 The billow seems to pelt the clouds ;
 The surf is like a bank'd surge, with high and monstrous mane,<sup>c</sup>
 That beats at water on the burning bear,
 And spurns the guards of the ever-fixed pole :
 Like molestation view
 A safe flood.

If that the Turkish fleet is used in the same sense as extragant, in a previous is the folio this word is spelt maise ; in the quarto with the spelling of main in the third line of this scene. But we have ventured to reject this conjecture, and for the first time to print the word as it is " high and monstrous mane." We use the aptly, for the main sea, the great sea, as Shakspeare the passage "twixt the heaven and the main." he ocean. Substitute that word, and what can we passage before us?—"The wind-shak'd surge, with strong ocean." But adopt the word mane, and it that we have as fine an image as any in Shakspeare.

 of monstrous mane we have a picture which was used by the noble passage in Job : "Hast thou strength? Hast thou clothed his neck with horse of Job is the war-horse, "who swalloweth with fierceness and rage;" and when Shakspeare himself his mane wildly streaming, "when the

Be not enselter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd ;
 It is impossible to bear it out.

Enter a Third Gentleman.

3 Gent. News, lads ! our wars are done :
 The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks,
 That their designment halts : A noble ship of Venice
 Hath seen a grievous wrack<sup>a</sup> and sufferance
 On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How ! is this true ?

3 Gent. The ship is here put in,

A Veronessa : Michael Cassio,
 Lieutenant to the warlike Moor, Othello,
 Is come on shore : the Moor himself's at sea,
 And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on 't ; 't is a worthy governor.

3 Gent. But this same Cassio,—though he speak of comfort,

Touching the Turkish loss,—yet he looks sadly,
 And prays the Moor be safe ; for they were parted
 With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. Pray heaven he be :

For I have serv'd him, and the man commands
 Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side,—ho !
 As well to see the vessel that 's come in
 As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello ;
 Even till we make the main, and the aerial blue,
 An indistinct regard.

3 Gent. Come, let's do so.

For every minute is expectancy
 Of more arrivancy.

Enter CASSIO.

Cas. Thanks, you the valiant of the warlike isle,
 That so approve the Moor ! O, let the heavens
 Give him defence against the elements,
 For I have lost him on a dangerous sea !

<sup>a</sup> Wrack. Mr. Hunter has with great propriety suggested the restoration of the old word wreck to Shakspeare's text, instead of wreck. He observes that we still use the familiar phrase "wreck and ruin."

Mon. Is he well shipp'd?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot
Of very expert and approv'd allowance;
Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death,
Stand in bold cure.

[Within.] A sail, a sail, a sail!

Enter another Gentleman.

Cas. What noise?

4 Gent. The town is empty; on the brow o' the sea
Stand ranks of people, and they cry—a sail.

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor.

2 Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy:
[Guns heard.]

Our friends, at least.

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 't is that is arriv'd.

2 Gent. I shall.

Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general wiv'd?

Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achiev'd a maid
That paragons description and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
And in the essential vesture of creation
Does tire the ingener.*—How now? who has put in?

Re-enter Second Gentleman.

2 Gent. 'T is one Iago, ancient to the general.

Cas. He has had most favourable and happy speed:
Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,
The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,
Traitors ensteep'd to enclog the guiltless keel,
As having sense of beauty do omit
Their mortal<sup>b</sup> natures, letting go safely by The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?

Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's captain,
Left in the conduct of the bold Iago;
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,
A se'nnight's speed.—Great Jove, Othello guard,
And swell his sail with thine own powerful breath;
That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,
Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,
And bring all Cyprus comfort!—O, behold,

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, IAGO, RODERIGO, and Attendants.

The riches of the ship is<sup>c</sup> come on shore!
You men of Cyprus, let her have your knees:
Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand,
Enwheel thee round!

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio
What tidings can you tell me of my lord?

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aught
But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O, but I fear—How lost you company?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies
Parted our fellowship: But hark! a sail.

[Cry within. A sail! a sail! Then guns heard.]

2 Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel;
This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the news.—[Exit Gentleman.]
Good ancient, you are welcome;—Welcome, mistress:— [To EMILIA.]

* The text presents no difficulty when we understand the word ingener. The word engine is so called "because not made without great effort (ingenuis) of genius, of ingenuity, of contrivance." The ingener, then, is the contriver by ingenuity—the designer—and here applied to a poet is almost literally the Greek Ποιητής—maker. Daniell uses the word ingeniate in the sense of to contrive; Ben Jonson, ingine for understanding.

"And for that riches where is in deserving."

Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,
That I extend my manners; 't is my breeding
That gives me this bold show of courtesy. [

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of
As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You'd have enough.

Des. Alas, she has no speech

Iago. In faith, too much;

I find it still when I have list to sleep:

Marry, before your ladyship, I grant
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.

Bells in your parlours; wild cats in your Saints in your injuries; devils being officers
Players in your huswifery; and huswives

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk
You rise to play, and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No.

Des. What wouldst write of me if I praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to
For I am nothing if not critical.

Des. Come on, assay:—There's one harbour?

Iago. Ay, madam.

Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile
The thing I am, by seeming otherwise.

Come, how wouldst thou praise me?

Iago. I am about it; but, indeed, my

Iago. If she be black, and thereto have She'll find a white that shall her blackness

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How, if fair and foolish?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was For even her folly help'd her to an heir.

laugh i' the alehouse. What miserable pranks for her that's foul and foolish?

Iago. There's none so foul, and foolish
But does foul pranks which fair and wise him, Emilia, though he be thy husband, say you, Cassio? is he not a most proper counsellor?

He speaks home, madam; you may relish him older than in the scholar.

[Aside.] He takes her by the palm: Ay, well; with as little a web as this will I ensnare you as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I see in thine own courtship. You say true; and if such tricks as these strip you out of entry, it had been better you had not kissed fingers so oft, which now again you are most dear to the sir in. Very good! well kissed, and artless! 't is so, indeed. Yet again your lips? would, they were clyster-pipes for [Trumpet.] The Moor, I know his trumpet, truly so.

He meets him, and receives him. Where he comes!

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

My fair warrior!

My dear Othello! I never wonder great as my content, ere before me. O my soul's joy! A tempest come such calms, do blow till they have waken'd death! abounding bark climb hills of seas, high; and duck again as low in heaven! If it were now to die, to be most happy; for, I fear, your content so absolute, your comfort like to this unknown fate.

The heavens forbid loves and comforts should increase, days do grow!

Amen to that, sweet powers!—I wish enough of this content, ere; it is too much of joy; and this, the greatest discords be

Hearts shall make! [Kissing her.]

O, you are well tun'd now! down the pegs that make this music, I am.

Come; let us to the castle.—Our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd. My old acquaintance of this isle? shall be well desir'd in Cyprus, great love amongst them. O my sweet, of fashion, and I dote on comforts.—I prithee, good Iago, my, and disembark my coffers: he master to the citadel; I, one, and his worthiness give much respect.—Come, Desdemona, will meet at Cyprus.

[Exit Oth., Des., and Attend.]
You meet me presently at the harbour. If thou be'st valiant, (as they say, base love have then a nobility in their natures native to them,) list me. The lieutenant is used for paying courtesies, as in "Richard II. — and his courtship to the common people."

warrior applied to a lady is somewhat startling. act Desdemona says of herself, "Unhandsome am." Stevens says that it was a term of endearment derive from the old French poets, and that he sometimes, frequently calls the ladies guerriers, (avoid thinking that Othello playfully salutes his wife, in compliment to her resolution not to — "be left behind, math of peace, and he go to the war."

to-night watches on the court of guard:—First, I must tell thee this—Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him! why, 't is not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger—thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor, but for bragging and telling her fantastical lies: To love him still for prating, let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be, again to inflame it and to give satiety a fresh appetite, loveliness in favour; sympathy in years, manners, and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in: Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted, (as it is a most pregnant and unforced position,) who stands so eminent in the degree of this fortune as Cassio does;—a knave very voluble; no further conscionable than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? why, none; why, none: A slipper and subtle knave; a finder of occasions; that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself: A devilish knave! besides, the knave is handsome, young; and hath all those requisites in him that folly and green minds look after: A pestilent complete knave; and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she is full of most bless'd condition.

Iago. Bless'd fig's end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes: if she had been bless'd, she would never have loved the Moor: Bless'd pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips that their breaths embraced together. Villainous thoughts, Roderigo! When these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion: Pish!—But, sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; for the command, I'll lay 't upon you: Cassio knows you not;—I'll not be far from you: Do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline, or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he's rash, and very sudden in choler; and, haply, may strike at you: Provoke him that he may; for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny; whose qualification shall come into no true taste again, but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires, by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if you can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel. I must fetch his necessaries ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu. [Exit.]

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it; That she loves him, 't is apt, and of great credit: The Moor—howbeit that I endure him not,—Is of a constant, loving, noble nature; And, I dare think, he'll prove to Desdemona A most dear husband. Now I do love her too; Not out of absolute lust, (though, peradventure,

I stand accountant for as great a sin,
 But partly led to diet my revenge,
 For that I do suspect the lusty Moor
 Hath leap'd into my seat: the thought whereof
 Doth, like a poisonous mineral, gnaw my inwards;
 And nothing can or shall content my soul,
 Till I am even'd with him, wife for wife;
 Or, failing so, yet that I put the Moor
 At least into a jealousy so strong
 That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do,—
 If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trace<sup>a</sup>
 For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,
 I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip;
 Abuse him to the Moor in the right garb,—
 For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too;
 Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me,
 For making him egregiously an ass,
 And practising upon his peace and quiet
 Even to madness. 'T is here, but yet confus'd;
 Knavery's plain face is never seen till us'd. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter a Herald, with a proclamation; People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere<sup>b</sup> perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph: some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptial: So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open; and there is full liberty of feasting, from this present hour of five till the bell have told eleven. Bless the isle of Cyprus, and our noble general, Othello! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to-night: Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop, Not to out-sport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do; But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye Will I look to 't.

Oth. Iago is most honest. Michael, good night: To-morrow, with your earliest, Let me have speech with you.—Come, my dear love, The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue; [To Des.] That profit's yet to come 'tween me and you.— Good night. [Exeunt OTH., DES., and Attend.]

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Welcome, Iago: We must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 't is not yet ten o' th' clock: Our general cast us thus early for the love of his Desdemona, whom let us not therefore blame: he hath not yet made wanton the night with her; and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And I'll warrant her, full of game.

Cas. Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley to provocation.

Cas. An inviting eye; and yet methinks right modest.

Iago. And when she speaks is it not an alarm to love?

Cas. She is, indeed, perfection.

<sup>a</sup> The noun trash, and the verb trace, are used with perfect propriety. The trash is the thing traced, put in traces—confin'd—as an untrained worthless dog is held, and hence the present meaning of trash.

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! tenant, I have a stoop of wine: and here brace of Cyprus gallants, that would fain sure to the health of black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago; I have unhappy brains for drinking: I could wish they would invent some other custom of eating and drinking.

Iago. O, they are our friends; but a drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, was craftily qualified too,—and, behold, this it makes here: I am unfortunate in love, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 't is a night of revels and desire it.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door; I pray you call.

Cas. I'll do 't; but it dislikes me.

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon you, with that which he hath drunk to-night, he'll be as full of quarrel and offence, as my young mistress' dog. Now, my mistress says,

Whom love has turn'd almost the wrong;
 To Desdemona hath to-night carous'd
 Potations pottle deep; and he's to watch
 Three else of Cyprus,—noble swelling spirits
 That hold their honours in a wary distance:
 The very elements of this warlike isle,—
 Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups,
 And they watch too. Now, amongst this flock,
 Stand I, that am myself almost as drunk
 As they; and yet am counsel'd to watch.

Am I to put our Cassio in some action That may offend the isle:—But here they come. If consequence do but approve my dream, My boat sails freely, both with wind and main.

Re-enter CASSIO, with him MONTANO, and Attendants.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, they have given us wine already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho!

And let me the canakin clink, clink,
 And let me the canakin clink;
 A soldier's a man; O man's life's but a span;
 Why then let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys! [Exit.]

Cas. 'Fore heaven, an excellent song.

Iago. I learned it in England, where they are most potent in potting: your Dane, your Frenchman, your swag-bellied Hollander,—Drink nothing to your English.

Cas. Is your Englishman so exquisite in drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you, with facility dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow you; he gives your Hollander a vomit, ere the can be filled.

Cas. To the health of our general.

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice.

Iago. O sweet England!

King Stephen was a worthy peer,
 His breeches cost him but a crown;
 He held them sixpence all too dear,
 With that he call'd the tailor leech.

He was a wight of high renown,
 And thou art but of low degree;
 'T is pride that pulls the country down;
 And take thy mind about thee here.

Some wine, ho!

Cas. Why this is a more exquisite song than the other.

you hear it again?
or I hold him to be unworthy of his place
e things.—Well,—Heaven 's above all; souls must be saved, and there be souls red.

True, good lieutenant.
me own part,—no offence to the general,
of quality,—I hope to be saved.
so do I too, lieutenant.
but by your leave, not before me; the

The town will rise: Fie, fie, lieutenant! hold;
You 'll be asham'd for ever.

Enter OTHELLO, and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?
Mon. I bleed still; I am hurt to the death.—He dies—
Oth. Hold, for your lives.
Iago. Hold, ho! Lieutenant,—sir Montano,—gentlemen,—

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
Hold! the general speaks to you; hold, for shame!
Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence ariseth this?
Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do that
Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites?
For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl:
He that stirs next to carve for his own rage,
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.
Silence that dreadful bell, it frights the isle
From her propriety.—What is the matter, masters?—
Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,
Speak, who began this? on thy love I charge thee.

Iago. I do not know:—friends all but now, even now,
In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom
Devesting them for bed: and then, but now,
(As if some planet had unwitting men,)
Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast
In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds;
And 'would in action glorious I had lost
Those legs that brought me to a part of it!

Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot?
Cas. I pray you, pardon me, I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont to be civil,
The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great
In mouths of wisest censure: What 's the matter
That you unlace your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion, for the name
Of a night-brawler? give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger;
Your officer, Iago, can inform you—While I spare speech, which something now offend
me,—

Of all that I do know: nor know I ought
By me that 's said or done amiss this night;
Unless self-charity be sometimes a vice,
And to defend ourselves it be a sin
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safer guides to rule;
And passion, having my best judgment collied,<sup>a</sup>
Assays to lead the way: If I once stir,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know
How this foul rout began, who set it on;
And he that is approv'd in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,
Shall loose me.—What! in a town of war,
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court and guard of safety!
'T is monstrous.—Iago, who began 't?

Mon. If partially affin'd, or leagu'd in office,
Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near:
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth,
Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;
Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
Shall nothing wrong him.—This it is, general.
Montano and myself being in speech,

<sup>a</sup> Collied—blackened—discoloured.

There comes a fellow crying out for help;
 And Cassio following him with determin'd sword,
 To execute upon him: Sir, this gentleman
 Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause;
 Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
 Lest, by his clamour, (as it so fell out,
 The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot Outran my purpose; and I return'd then rather
 For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
 And Cassio high in oath; which, till to-night,
 I ne'er might say before: When I came back,
 (For this was brief,) I found them close together,
 At blow, and thrust; even as again they were
 When you yourself did part them.
 More of this matter cannot I report:—
 But men are men: the best sometimes forget:—
 Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,—
 As men in rage strike those that wish them best,— Yet surely Cassio, I believe, receiv'd
 From him that fled some strange indignity,
 Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago,
 Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
 Making it light to Cassio:—Cassio, I love thee;
 But never more be officer of mine.

Enter DESDEMONA, attended.

Look, if my gentle love be not rais'd up;—
 I'll make thee an example.

Des. What is the matter, dear?

Oth. All's well, sweeting.
 Come away to bed. Sir, for your hurts,
 Myself will be your surgeon: Lead him off.

[To MON., who is led off.]

Iago, look with care about the town;
 And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.
 Come, Desdemona; 't is the soldiers' life
 To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife.

[Exeunt all but IAGO and CAS.]

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?

Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O, I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial.—My reputation,
 Iago, my reputation.

Iago. As I am an honest man I had thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more sense* in that than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving: You have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man!
 there are ways to recover the general again: You are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offence-less dog to affright an imperious lion: sue to him again, and he is yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised, than to deceive so good a commander with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk? and speak parrot? and squabble? swagger? swear? and discourse fustian with one's own shadow?—O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil!

Iago. What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is 't possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore.—O that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, pleasance, revel, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

* Sense. The sense of a wound is its sensibility.

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough came you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleased the devil drunkenness to place to the devil wrath: one unperfectness another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moralist time, the place, and the condition of this comedy
 I could heartily wish this had not befallen;
 it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again tell me I am a drunkard! Had I as many Hydras, such an answer would stop them all.
 a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently O strange!—Every inordinate cup is unblest ingredient is a devil.

Iago. Come, come, good wine is a good creature, if it be well used; exclaim no more.
 And, good lieutenant, I think you think I love

Cas. I have well approved it, sir.—I drunk against any lay worth naming, this crack of

Cas. You advise me well!

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and, betimes in the I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undo me: I am desperate of my fortunes if they die

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lie
 I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago.

Iago. And what's he then that says I villain?

When this advice is free, I give, and honest,
 Probable* to thinking, and indeed the course
 To win the Moor again? For 't is most easy
 The inclining Desdemona to subdue
 In any honest suit; she's fram'd as fruitful
 As the free elements. And then for her
 To win the Moor,—were't to renounce his life
 All seals and symbols of redeemed sin,—
 His soul is so enfeather'd to her love,
 That she may make, unmake, do what she list
 Even as her appetite shall play the god
 With his weak function. How am I then a
 To counsel Cassio to this parallel course,
 Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!
 When devils will the blackest sins put on,
 They do suggest at first with heavenly shows,
 As I do now: For whiles this honest fool
 Plies Desdemona to repair his fortune,
 And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor,
 I'll pour this pestilence into his ear,—
 That she repeals him for her body's lust;
 And by how much she strives to do him good,
 She shall undo her credit with the Moor.
 So will I turn her virtue into pitch;
 And out of her own goodness make the net,
 That shall enmesh them all.—How now, Rod.

Enter RODERIGO.

Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My

 Nay, get thee gone. [Exit ROD.] Two things are to be done,—
 My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress,
 I'll set her on ;
 Myself, the while, to draw the Moor apart,
 And bring him jump when he may Cassio find Soliciting his wife :—Ay, that's the way ;
 Dull not device by coldness and delay. [Exit.]

Enter EMILIA.

nd morrow, good lieutenant : I am sorry pleasure ; but all will sure be well.
 and his wife are talking of it,

And she speaks for you stoutly : The Moor replies,
 That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus,
 And great affinity ; and that, in wholesome wisdom,
 He might not but refuse you : but he protests he loves you ;
 And needs no other suitor, but his likings,
 To take the saf'st occasion by the front,
 To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you,—
 If you think fit, or that it may be done,—
 Give me advantage of some brief discourse
 With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you, come in ;
 I will bestow you where you shall have time
 To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot ;
 And, by him, do my duties to the senate :
 That done, I will be walking on the works,—
 Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do 't.

Oth. This fortification, gentlemen, shall we see 't?
Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—Before the Castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and EMILIA.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do
 All my abilities in thy behalf.

Emil. Good madam, do ; I warrant it grieves my husband,

As if the cause were his.

Des. O, that's an honest fellow.—Do not doubt, Cassio,

But I will have my lord and you again
 As friendly as you were.

Cas. Bounteous madam,
 Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio,
 He's never any thing but your true servant.

Des. I know 't,—I thank you : You do love my
 lord :

You have known him long ; and be you well assur'd
 He shall in strangeness stand no farther off
 Than in a politic distance.

Cas. Ay, but, lady,
 That policy may either last so long,
 Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet,
 Or breed itself so out of circumstance,
 That I, being absent, and my place supplied,
 My general will forget my love and service.

Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia here,
I give thee warrant of thy place: assure thee,
If I do vow a friendship I'll perform it
To the last article: my lord shall never rest;
I'll watch him tame,* and talk him out of patience;
His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift;
I'll intermingle every thing he does
With Cassio's suit: Therefore be merry, Cassio,
For thy solicitor shall rather die
Than give thy cause away.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO at a distance.

Emil. Madam, here comes
My lord.
Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.
Des. Why, stay,
And hear me speak.
Cas. Madam, not now; I am very ill at ease,
Unfit for mine own purposes.
Des. Well; do your discretion. [Exit Cassio.]
Iago. Ha! I like not that.
Oth. What dost thou say?
Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if—I know not what.
Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?
Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think it,
That he would steal away so guilty-like,
Seeing your coming.
Oth. I do believe 't was he.
Des. How now, my lord?
I have been talking with a suitor here,
A man that languishes in your displeasure.
Oth. Who is 't you mean?
Des. Why, your lieutenant Cassio. Good my lord,
If I have any grace, or power to move you,
His present reconciliation take;
For, if he be not one that truly loves you,
That errs in ignorance and not in cunning,
I have no judgment in an honest face:
I prithee call him back.
Oth. Went he hence now?
Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled,
That he hath left part of his grief with me,
To suffer with him. Good love, call him back.
Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.
Des. But shall 't be shortly?
Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.
Des. Shall 't be to-night at supper?
Oth. No, not to-night.
Des. To-morrow dinner then?
Oth. I shall not dine at home;
I meet the captains at the citadel.
Des. Why then, to-morrow night; on Tuesday morn;
On Tuesday noon, or night; on Wednesday morn;—
I prithee name the time; but let it not Exceed three days: in faith he 's penitent;
And yet his trespass, in our common reason,
(Save that, they say, the wars must make example
Out of their best,) is not almost a fault
To incur a private check: When shall he come?
Tell me, Othello. I wonder in my soul,
What you would ask me that I should deny,
Or stand so mammering<sup>c</sup> on. What! Michael Cassio,
That came a wooing with you; and so many a time,
When I have spoke of you disparagingly,
Hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do
To bring him in! Trust me, I could do much,—

* Hawks were tamed by being kept from sleep.

<sup>b</sup> Sweet Desdemona. In five passages of this play, in the folio edition, Desdemona is called Desdemona. The abbreviation was not a capricious one, nor was it introduced merely for the sake of rhythm. It is clearly used as an epithet of familiar tenderness.

<sup>c</sup> Mammering. The quarto, muttering. The word, having the meaning of suspense—doubt, is constantly used by our old writers.

Oth. Prithee, no more: let him come wh
I will deny thee nothing.

Des. Why, this is not a 'T is as I should entreat you wear your giv
Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you
Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit
To your own person: Nay, when I have a
Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,
It shall be full of poize and difficult weight
And fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee;
Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,
To leave me but a little to myself.

Des. Shall I deny you? no: Farewell,
Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I'll co
straight.

Des. Emilia, come:—Be as your fancies Whate'er you be, I am obedient. [Exit, w

But I do love thee! and when I love thee
Chaos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. What dost thou

I dare be sworn I think that he is honest.

Oth. I think so too.

<sup>a</sup> Wretch. The playhouse copies, in their old phraseology, give us wretch instead of wretch. It perly explains wretch as expressing "the utmost amiableness, joined with an idea, which perhaps all includes, of feebleness, softness, and want of power."

<sup>b</sup> Delations. We have adopted Johnson's delation mic. Todd, in his edition of 'Johnson's Dictionary,' sufflicate may be traced to the low Latin exsufflare, sufflato, an ancient form of exorcising, and figuratively abhorrence or contempt. Exsufflicate may thus improbable.

Matching thy inference. 'T is not to make me jealous
To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances;
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous:
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me: No, Iago;
I'll see before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but this,—
Away at once with love, or jealousy.

Iago. I am glad of this; for now I shall have reason
To show the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound,
Receive it from me:—I speak not yet of proof.
Look to your wife; observe her well with Cassio;
Wear your eyes thus,—not jealous, nor secure;
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-bounty, be abus'd; look to 't:
I know our country disposition well;
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience
Is not to leave undone, but keep unknown.

Oth. Dost thou say so?

Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you;
And when she seem'd to shake and fear your looks,
She lov'd them most.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why, go to, then;
She that so young could give out such a seeming,
To seal her father's eyes up, close as oak,
He thought 't was witchcraft:—But I am much to blame;

I humbly do beseech you of your pardon,
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever

Iago. I see, this hath a little dash'd your spirits.

Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.

Iago. Trust me, I fear it has.

I hope you will consider what is spoke
Comes from my love:—But I do see you are mov'd.
I am to pray you not to strain my speech
To grosser issues, nor to larger reach
Than to suspicion.

Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech should fall into such vile success<sup>a</sup>
Which my thoughts aim'd not. Cassio's my worthy friend:—

My lord, I see you are mov'd:—

Oth. No, not much mov'd:—
I do not think but Desdemona's honest.

Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so!

Oth. And yet, how nature erring from itself,—

Iago. Ay, there's the point:—As,—to be bold with
you,—

Not to affect many proposed matches
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree;
Whereto, we see, in all things nature tends;
Foh! one may smell in such a will most rank,
Foul disproportions, thoughts unnatural,—
But, pardon me; I do not in position
Distinctly speak of her: though I may fear,
Her will, recoiling to her better judgment,
May fall to match you with her country forms,
And, happily, repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell!

If more thou dost perceive let me know more;

Set on thy wife to observe: Leave me, Iago.

Iago. My lord, I take my leave. [Going.

Oth. Why did I marry?—This honest creature, doubtless,

Sees and knows more, much more, than he unfolds.

Iago. My lord, I would I might entreat your honour

<sup>a</sup> Success—excession—consequence.

To scan this thing no farther; leave it to time:
Although 't is fit that Cassio have his place,
(For, sure, he fills it up with great ability.)
Yet, if you please to hold him off awhile,
You shall by that perceive him and his means:
Note, if your lady strain his entertainment
With any strong or vehement importunity;
Much will be seen in that. In the mean time,
Let me be thought too busy in my fears,
(As worthy cause I have to fear I am.)
And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.

Oth. Fear not my government.

Iago. I once more take my leave.

Oth. This fellow 's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit,
Of human dealings: If I do prove her haggard,
Though that her jesses were my dear heart-strings,
I 'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind,
To prey at fortune.<sup>a</sup> Haply, for I am black;
And have not those soft parts of conversation
That chamberers have: Or, for I am declin'd
Into the vale of years;—yet that 's not much:—
She 's gone; I am abus'd; and my relief
Must be to loathe her. O curse of marriage,
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love,
For other's uses. Yet 't is the plague of great ones;
Prerogativ'd are they less than the base;
'T is destiny unshunnable, like death;
Even then this forked plague is fated to us,
When we do quicken. Look, where she comes.

Enter DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

If she be false, O, then heaven mocks itself!
I 'll not believe 't.

Des. How now, my dear Othello?
Your dinner, and the generous islanders
By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am to blame.

Des. Why do you speak so faintly?
Are you not well?

Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.

Des. Why, that 's with watching; 't will away again:
Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.

Oth. Your napkin<sup>b</sup> is too little;

[He puts the handkerchief from him, and it drops.
Let it alone. Come, I 'll go in with you.

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

[Exit OTH. and DES.

Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin;
This was her first remembrance from the Moor:
My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me steal it: but she so loves the token,
(For he conjur'd her she should ever keep it,)
That she reserves it evermore about her,
To kiss, and talk to. I 'll have the work ta'en out,<sup>c</sup>
And give 't Iago; what he will do with it,
Heaven knows, not I:
I nothing, but to please his fantasy.

Enter IAGO.

Iago. How now! what do you here alone?

<sup>a</sup> The images in this sentence are derived from falconry. Some doubts exist whether the haggard was an unreclaimed hawk: but there is no doubt that the old adjective haggard means wild. The jesses are the footstraps of a hawk.

<sup>c</sup> Emilia does not propose to obliterate the work, but to copy the work, and to restore the original to Desdemona. Iago's abrupt address frightens her from her purpose. That ta'en out means copied, we find in the subsequent scene, when Cassio says to Bianca, take me this work out. . . . I 'd have it copied.

Emil. Do not you chide; I have a thing

Iago. A thing for me?—it is a common

Emil. Ha!

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

Emil. O, is that all? What will you now

For that same handkerchief?

Iago. What handkerchief?

Emil. What handkerchief?

Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona
That which so often you did bid me steal.

Iago. Hast stolen it from her?

Emil. No; but she let it drop by negligence
And, to the advantage, I being here, took it.
Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench; give it me

Emil. What will you do with 't, that you so earnest

To have me filch it?

Iago. Why, what 's that to

Emil. If it be not for some purpose of use
Give 't me again: Poor lady! she 'll run
When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not acknown on 't: I have use
Go, leave me.

I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it: Trifles, light as air,
Are to the jealous confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ. This may do some
The Moor already changes with my poison:
Dangerous conceits are, in their natures, po
Which, at the first, are scarce found to dust
But, with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the mines of sulphur.—I did say Look, where he comes! Not poppy, nor Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'dst yesterday.

Enter OTHELLO.

Oth. Ha! ha! he

Iago. Why, how now, general? no more

Oth. Avaunt! be gone! thou hast set rack:—

I swear, 't is better to be much abus'd,
Than but to know 't a little.

Iago. How now, my

Oth. What sense had I in her stolen hood
I saw 't not, thought it not, it harm'd not me
I slept the next night well, fed well, was free
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips:
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stole
Let him not know 't, and he 's not robb'd a

Iago. I am sorry to hear this.

Oth. I had been happy, if the general call Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known: O now, for ever,
Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content!
Farewell the plumed troops, and the big wars
That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trump,
The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
The royal banner; and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious wars,
And O you mortal engines, whose rude throats
The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,
Farewell! Othello's occupation 's gone!

Iago. Is 't possible, my lord?

Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love

<sup>a</sup> I did say so. These words are simply used in the sense—I said so—I was right.

<sup>b</sup> Mandragera. The mandrake was used by the powerful opium.

Give me the ocular proof;
 [Taking him by the throat.
 O, mine eternal soul,
 I better have been born a dog
 Than wak'd with this.]

Is 't come to this?
 I see 't; or, at the least, so prove it,
 That I may bear no hinge, nor loop,
 In this: or woe upon thy life!
 O, blest lord,—
 Thou dost slander her, and torture me;
 Never yet didst thou abandon all remorse;
 On horrors accumulate:
 O, heaven weep, all earth amaz'd,
 At this: thou dost damnation add,
 To this.

O grace! O heaven forgive me!
 I have you a soul, or sense?—
 O, take mine office.—O wretched fool,
 I make thine honesty a vice,—
 O, world! Take note, take note, O world,
 That honest is not safe.
 O, this profit; and, from hence,
 O, mind, with love breeds such offence.
 O, say:—Thou shouldst be honest,
 O, and be wise; for honesty 's a fool,
 O, that works for.

By the world,
 O, be honest, and think she is not;
 O, thou art just, and think thou art not;
 O, proof: My name, that was as fresh
 As the new-born babe, is now begrim'd and black
 As hell,—If there be cords or knives,
 Or suffocating streams,
 O, I would I were satisfied!
 O, if you are eaten up with passion:
 O, that I put it to you.
 O, satisfied?

Would you nay, and I will.
 O, say: But how? how satisfied, my lord?
 O, supervision grossly gape on?
 O, 'd!

Death and damnation! O!
 O, a tedious difficulty, I think,
 O, that prospect: Damn them then,
 O, yes do see them bolster,
 O, own! What then? how then?
 O, y? Where 's satisfaction?
 O, you should see this,
 O, time as goats, as hot as monkeys,
 O, as in pride, and fools as gross
 O, as made drunk. But yet, I say,
 O, and strong circumstances,
 O, directly to the door of truth,
 O, satisfaction, you might have 't.

quarto, defend.
 O, I can that loves to carry his honesty so far that it
 O, what Iago means when he calls himself a fool.
 O, (all modern editions, except Rowe's, this has O, her name. There is probably not a more
 O, of the meaning of the poet amongst the thou-
 O, for which his editors are answerable. It
 O, is the key to Othello's character. It is his intense
 O, that makes his wife's supposed fault so terrific
 O, that Desdemona's name is begrimed and black,
 O, and is degraded. This one thought, here for-O, gotten, pervades all the rest of the play; and O, and how the poison operates upon Othello's
 O, his prepared fully to believe him when he O, said I did in hate, but all in honour."

O, his own name is now tarnished drives him at O, y. He has said, "I'll have some proof;" but O, so ideas of dishonour comes across his sensitive O, into uncontrolled fury:—

—"If there be cords, or knives,
 O, or fire, or suffocating streams,
 O, I would I were satisfied."

Oth. Give me a living reason she 's disloyal.

Iago. I do not like the office:
 But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far,
 Prick'd to 't by foolish honesty and love,
 I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately;
 And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
 I could not sleep.
 There are a kind of men so loose of soul,
 That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs;
 One of this kind is Cassio:
 In sleep I heard him say,—Sweet Desdemona,
 Let us be wary, let us hide our loves!
 And then, sir, would he gripe and wring my hand,
 Cry,—O sweet creature! then kiss me hard,
 As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots,
 That grew upon my lips; lay his leg o'er my thigh,
 And sigh, and kiss; and then cry,—Cursed fate
 That gave thee to the Moor!

Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!
Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.

Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion;
 'T is a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.

Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs,
 That do demonstrate thinly.

Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces.
Iago. Nay, but be wise; yet we see nothing done;

She may be honest yet. Tell me but this,—
 Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief,
 Spotted with strawberries, in your wife's hand?

Oth. I gave her such a one; 't was my first gift.
Iago. I know not that: but such a handkerchief,
 (I am sure it was your wife's,) did I to-day
 See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth. If it be that,—
Iago. If it be that or any, if 't was hers,
 It speaks against her, with the other proofs.

Oth. O, that the slave had forty thousand lives;
 One is too poor, too weak for my revenge!
 Now do I see 't is true.—Look here, Iago;
 All my fond love thus I do blow to heaven:
 'T is gone.—

Arise, black vengeance, from the hollow hell!
 Yield up, O love, thy crown, and hearted throne,
 To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy fraught,
 For 't is of aspicks' tongues!

Iago. Yet, be content.
Oth. O, blood, blood, blood!

Iago. Patience, I say; your mind may change.
Oth. Never, Iago. 'Like to the Pontick sea,

Whose icy current and compulsive course
 Ne'er keeps retiring ebb, but keeps due on
 To the Propontick and the Hellespont:
 Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,
 Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,
 Till that a capable and wide revenge
 Swallow them up.—Now, by yond' marble heaven,
 In the due reverence of a sacred vow
 I here engage my words. [Kneels.]

Iago. Do not rise yet.— [Kneels.]
 Witness, you ever-burning lights above!
 You elements that clip us round about!
 Witness, that here Iago doth give up
 The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
 To wrong'd Othello's service! let him command,
 And to obey shall be in me remorse,
 What bloody business ever!

* A gentleman who writes to us as "a sailor," begs us to notice this passage as exhibiting a proof of the poet's knowledge "of the continual flow of the tide through the Gut of Gibraltar."

† It is quite clear that Othello interrupts the conclusion of Iago's speech. At the moment when he has said that obedience to Othello shall stand in the place of remorse (mercy)—"What bloody business ever" (Othello may command), Othello, jumping at his meaning, at once sets him upon the murder of Cassio.

Oth. I greet thy love,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bounteous,
And will upon the instant put thee to 't:
Within these three days let me hear thee say
That Cassio's not alive.

Iago. My friend is dead; 't is done, at your request:
But let her live.

Oth. Damn her, lewd minx! O, damn her!
Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw,
To furnish me with some swift means of death
For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.

Iago. I am your own for ever. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—The same.

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where lieutenant Cassio lies?

Clo. I dare not say he lies any where.

Des. Why, man?

Clo. He is a soldier; and for me to say a soldier lies is stabbing.

Des. Go to 'L. Where lodges he?

Clo. To tell you where he lodges is to tell you where I lie.

Des. Can any thing be made of this?

Clo. I know not where he lodges; and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here, or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat.

Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report?

Clo. I will catechize the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither; tell him, I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope all will be well.

Clo. To do this is within the compass of man's wit;
and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit.]

Des. Where should I lose the handkerchief, Emilia?

Emil. I know not, madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse
Full of cruzadoes. And, but my noble Moor
Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness
As jealous creatures are, it were enough
To put him to ill thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous?

Des. Who, he? I think the sun, where he was born,
Drew all such humours from him.

Emil. Look where he comes.

Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio
Be call'd to him.—How is 't with you, my lord?

Enter OTHELLO.

Oth. Well, my good lady;—[Aside.] O, hardness, to dissemble!

How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand: This hand is moist, my lady.

Des. It yet has felt no age, nor known no sorrow.

Oth. This argues fruitfulness, and liberal heart;
Hot, hot, and moist: This hand of yours requires
A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer,
Much castigation, exercise devout;
For here 's a young and sweating devil here,
That commonly rebels. 'T is a good hand,
A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so;

For 't was that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand: The hearts of old gave hands:
But our new heraldry is—hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.

Oth. What promise, chuck?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sorry rheum o'flow'd me,
I'll me thy handkerchief.

Des. Here, my lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it.

Oth. Not?

Des. No, indeed, my lord.

Oth. That

That handkerchief

Did an Egyptian to my mother give;
She was a charmer, and could almost see
The thoughts of people: she told her, when
'T would make her amiable, and subdue
Entirely to her love; but if she lost it,
Or made a gift of it, my father's eye
Should hold her loathly, and his spirits
After new fancies: She, dying, gave it me,
And bid me, when my fate would have
To give it her. I did so: and take heed
Make it a darling like your precious eye
To lose 't or give 't away, were such perils
As nothing else could match.

Des. Is 't possible

Oth. 'T is true: There 's magic in 't
A sibyl, that had number'd in the world
The sun to course two hundred compass
In her prophetic fury sew'd the work:
The worms were hallow'd that did breed
And it was dy'd in mummy, which the Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed; is

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to Des. Then 'would to heaven that I had

Oth. Ha! wherefore?

Des. Why do you speak so startingly?

Oth. Is 't lost? is 't gone? speak, is 't

Des. Bless us!

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost: But what and if 't

Oth. How?

Des. I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch 't, let me

Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not

This is a trick, to put me from my suit;

Pray you, let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me the handkerchief: my

Des. Come, come;

You'll never meet a more sufficient man

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. I pray, talk

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. A man that

Hath founded his good fortunes on your Shar'd dangers with you;—

Oth. The handker-

Des. In sooth, you are to blame.

Oth. Away! [E]

Emil. Is not this man jealous?

Des. I ne'er saw this before.

Sure, there 's some wonder in this handker-

I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'T is not a year or two shows us:

They are all but stomachs, and we all but

They eat us hungerly, and when they are

They belch us. Look you! Cassio, and Enter IAGO and CASSIO.

Iago. There is no other way; 't is she
And, lo, the happiness! go, and importune

Des. How now, good Cassio! what 's the

you?

Cas. Madam, my former suit: I do beseech

That, by your virtuous means, I may again

Exist, and be a member of his love,

Whom I, with all the office of my heart,

Extremely honour; I would not be delay'd

he of such mortal kind, service past, nor present sorrows, merit in futurity
as into his love again,
so must be my benefit;
the me in a forc'd content,
self up in some other course,
I'ma.

Alas! thrice-gentle Cassio,
it is not now in tune;
it my lord; nor should I know him,
your, as in humour, alter'd.
every spirit sanctified,
ken for you all my best,
thin the blank of his displeasure, speech! You must awhile be patient:
so I will; and more I will,
self I dare: let that suffice you.
My lord angry?

He went hence but now,
y, in strange unquietness.
he be angry? I have seen the cannon, blown his ranks into the air;
devil, from his very arm
in brother:—And can he be angry?
moment, then: I will go meet him;
er in 't indeed, if he be angry.
hee, do so.—Something, sure, of state,
[Exit IAGO.]

Venice; or some unhatch'd practice
strable here in Cyprus to him,
I his clear spirit: and, in such cases,
I wrangle with inferior things, ones are their object. 'Tis even so;
nger ache, and it induces lthful members ev'n to a sense
y, we must think men are not gods;
look for such observancy
dal.—Beshrew me much, Emilia, dsome warrior as I am)
s unkindness with my soul;
ed I had suborn'd the witness,
lected falsely.

My heaven it be state matters, as you think;
option, nor no jealous toy,
on.

the day! I never gave him cause.
jealous souls will not be answer'd so;
ever jealous for the cause,
or they're jealous: It is a monster,
self, born on itself.

Des. Heaven keep the monster from Othello's mind!

Emil. Lady, amen.

Des. I will go seek him.—Cassio, walk hereabout:
If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit,
And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.

[Exeunt DESDEMONA and EMILIA.]

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!

Cas. What make you from home?
How is it with you, my most fair Bianca?
Indeed, sweet love, I was coming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your lodging, Cassio.
What! keep a week away? seven days and nights?
Eight score eight hours? and lovers' absent hours,
More tedious than the dial eight score times?
O weary reckoning!

Cas. Pardon me, Bianca;
I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd;
But I shall, in a more continuat<sup>a</sup> time,
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca, [Giving her DESDEMONA's handkerchief.]

Take me this work out.

Bian. O, Cassio, whence came this?
This is some token from a newer friend.
To the felt absence now I feel a cause.
Is 't come to this? Well, well.

Cas. Go to, woman!
Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth,
From whence you have them. You are jealous now
That this is from some mistress, some remembrance:
No, in good troth, Bianca.

Bian. Why, whose is it?
Cas. I know not, neither: I found it in my chamber
I like the work well: ere it be demanded,
(As like enough it will,) I'd have it copied:
Take it, and do 't; and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you! wherefore?

Cas. I do attend here on the general;
And think it no addition, nor my wish,
To have him see me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you?

Cas. Not that I love you not.

Bian. But that you do not love me
I pray you bring me on the way a little;
And say, if I shall see you soon at night.

Cas. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring you,
For I attend here; but I'll see you soon.

Bian. 'Tis very good: I must be circumstanc'd.

[Exeunt]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Before the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

you think so?

Think so, Iago?

What,

vate?

An unauthoriz'd kiss?
be naked with her friend in bed,
ore, not meaning any harm?
d in bed, Iago, and not mean harm?
against the devil:
an virtuously, and yet do so,
if virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven.
ry do nothing, 't is a venial slip:
my wife a handkerchief,—

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why then 't is hers, my lord; and, being hers,
She may, I think, bestow 't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too

May she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that 's not seen;

They have it very oft that have it not:

But, for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot

it:—

Thou said'st,—O, it comes o'er my memory,

As doth the raven o'er the infectious house,

Boding to all,—he had my handkerchief.

Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That 's not so good, now.

<sup>a</sup> Continuata time is time uninterrupted.

Iago. What, if I had said I had seen him do you wrong?

Or heard him say, (as knaves be such abroad,
Who, having by their own importunate suit,
Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,
Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose
But they must blab,)—

Oth. Hath he said anything?

Iago. He hath, my lord; but he you well assur'd,
No more than he'll unswear.

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago. Why, that he did,—I know not what he did.

Oth. What? what?

Iago. Lie—

Oth. With her?

Iago. With her?—on her?—what you will.

Oth. Lie with her! lie on her!—We say, lie on her,
when they belie her: Lie with her! that's fulsome,— Handkerchief,—confessions,—handkerchief.—To confess, and be hanged for his labour.—First, to be hanged, and then to confess:—I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion, without some instruction. It is not words that shake me thus:— Pish!—Noses, ears, and lips:—Is't possible?—Confess!
—Handkerchief!—O devil! [Falls, in a trance.]

Iago. Work on,

My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught;
And many worthy and chaste dames, even thus,
All guiltless meet reproach.—What, ho! my lord!

Enter CASSIO.

My lord, I say! Othello!—How now, Cassio?

Cas. What is the matter?

Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy;

This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear:

The lethargy must have his quiet course:
If not, he foams at mouth; and, by and by,
Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs:
Do you withdraw yourself a little while,
He will recover straight: when he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you.—

[Exit CASSIO.]

How is it, general? have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you? no, by heaven:

'Would you would bear your fortune like a man.

Oth. A horned man's a monster, and a beast.

Iago. There's many a beast then in a populous city,

And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good sir, be a man;

Think, every bearded fellow that's but yok'd
May draw with you: there's millions now alive
That nightly lie in those unproper beds,
Which they dare swear peculiar; your case is better.
O, 't is the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock,
To lip a wanton in a secure couch,
And to suppose her chaste! No, let me know;
And, knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.

Oth. O, thou art wise; 't is certain.

Iago. Stand you awhile apart;

Confine yourself but in a patient list.<sup>b</sup>

Whilst you were here, o'erwhelmed with your grief,

(A passion most unsuited such a man,)

Cassio came hither: I shifted him away,

And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy;

Bade him anon return, and here speak with me;

<sup>a</sup> The stage direction of the folio is, falls in a trance. We have altered the punctuation to express, what no doubt was meant, that Othello actually falls. The direction of the first quarto is, he falls down. Iago's statement to Cassio, my lord fallen into an epilepsy, is not meant for a falsehood.

<sup>b</sup>—bound, barrier.

The which he promis'd. Do but encave
And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notes
That dwell in every region of his face;
For I will make him tell the tale anew,—
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and
He hath, and is again to cope your wife
I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, yet
Or I shall say, you are all in all in spleen
And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, I
I will be found most cunning in my plot
But (dost thou hear?) most bloody.

Iago. Thy
But yet keep time in all. Will you will

[Othello]

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
A housewife, that by selling her desires
Buys herself bread and clothes: it is a creature
That dotes on Cassio,—as 't is the strumpet
To beguile many, and be beguil'd by one
He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain
From the excess of laughter:—Here he comes

Re-enter CASSIO.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad;
And his unbookish jealousy must construe
Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light looks Quite in the wrong.—How do you now,

Cas. The worse, that you give me the Whose want even kills me.

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you
Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's dower,<sup>a</sup> [5]
How quickly should you speed?

Cas. Alas, my

Oth. Look, how he laughs already!

Iago. I never knew woman love man.

Cas. Alas, poor rogue! I think indeed

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. Now he is

To tell it o'er: Go to; well said, well said

Iago. She gives it out, that you shall

Do you intend it?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Do you triumph, Roman? do you

Cas. I marry!—what? a customer!
some charity to my wit; do not think it some. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. So, so, so, so: They laugh that

Iago. Why, the cry goes, that you may

Cas. Prithee, say true.

Iago. I am a very villain else.

Oth. Have you scored me? Well.

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving; persuaded I will marry her, out of her flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me; now he begins

Cas. She was here even now; she has place. I was, the other day, talking out with certain Venetians; and thither come and falls me thus about my neck;—

Oth. Crying, O dear Cassio! as if we imports it.

Cas. So hangs, and lolls, and weeps shakes and pulls me: ha, ha, ha!—

Oth. Now he tells how she plucked chamber: O, I see that nose of yours, but I shall throw it to.

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

Iago. Before me! look, where she comes <sup>a</sup> Dower, in the sense of gift.

Enter BIANCA.

ch another fitchew! marry, a per-at do you mean by this haunting of devil and his dam haunt you! What that same handkerchief you gave me is a fine fool to take it. I must take a likely piece of work that you should chamber, and know not who left it ne mix's token, and I must take out —give it your hobby horse: where-

I'll take out no work on't.

, my sweet Bianca? how now, how n, that should be my handkerchief!

[Aside.
I come to supper to-night, you may; if ay no more.

[Exit CASSIO.

Will I murder him, Iago?

perceive how he laughed at his vice?

Do you see the handkerchief?

Is mine?

By this hand: and to see how he prizes it, your wife! she gave it him, and he whore.

Have him nine years a killing:—A virgin woman! a sweet woman!

You must forget that.

Ever rot, and perish, and be damned to-all not live: No, my heart is turned to and it burts my hand. O, the world creature: she might lie by an empemand him tasks.

It's not your way.

Truly! I do but say what she is:—So needle!—An admirable musician! O, savageness out of a bear!—Of so high and invention!

Is worse for all this.

And sand, a thousand times:—And then,
dition!

Gentle.

It's certain: But yet the pity of it,
be pity of it, Iago!

Be so fond over her iniquity, give her far, if it touch not you it comes near up her into messes:—Cuckold me!

But in her.

Be officer!

Be ruler.

Some poison, Iago; this night:—I'll with her, lest her body and beauty un-again:—this night, Iago.

With poison: strangle her in her bed,
bath contaminated.

God: the justice of it pleases; very Cassio,—let me be his undertaker:

ore by midnight. [A trumpet within.
t good.—What trumpet is that same?

It, something from Venice.

It, comes from the duke;

With him.

Enter LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.

Lod. 'Save you, worthy general!

Oth. With all my heart, sir.

Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you.

[Gives him a packet.

Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures.

[Opens the packet and reads.

Des. And what 's the news, good cousin Lodovico?

Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior;

Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you: how does lieutenant Cassio?

Iago. Lives, sir.

Des. Cousin, there 's fallen between him and my lord
An unkind breach: but you shall make all well.

Oth. Are you sure of that?

Des. My lord?

Oth. This fail you not to do, as you will— [Reads.

Lod. He did not call: he 's busy in the paper.

Is there division 'twixt my lord and Cassio?

Des. A most unhappy one; I would do much

To atone them, for the love I bear to Cassio.

Oth. Fire and brimstone!

Des. My lord?

Oth. Are you wise?

Des. What, is he angry?

Lod. 'May be, the letter mov'd him,

For, as I think, they do command him home,

Deputing Cassio in his government.

Des. Trust me, I am glad on't.

Oth. Indeed?

Des. My lord?

Oth. I am glad to see you mad.

Des. Why, sweet Othello?

Oth. Devil! [Striking her.

Des. I have not deserv'd this.

Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,

Though I should swear I saw 't: 'T is very much;

Make her amends, she weeps.

Oth. O devil, devil!

If that the earth could teem with woman's tears,

Each drop she falls * would prove a crocodile:—

Out of my sight!

Des. I will not stay to offend you. [Going.

Lod. Truly, an obedient lady:—

I do beseech your lordship, call her back.

Oth. Mistress—

Des. My lord?

Oth. What would you with her, sir?

Lod. Who, I, my lord?

Oth. Ay; you did wish that I would make her turn;

Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on,

And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep;

And she 's obedient, as you say,—obedient,—

Very obedient:—Proceed you in your tears.—

Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted passion!

I am commanded home:—Get you away;

I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey the mandate,

And will return to Venice:—Hence, avaunt!

[Exit Des.

Cassio shall have my place. And, sir, to-night,

I do entreat that we may sup together.

You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus.—Goats and monkeys!

[Exit.

Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate

Call all-in-all sufficient?—Is this the nature

Whom passion could not shake? whose solid virtue

The shot of accident, nor dart of chance,

Could neither graze, nor pierce?

Iago. He is much chang'd.

Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?

Iago. He is that he is; I may not breathe my censure.

* Falls, used as a verb active.

What he might be,—if, what he might, he is not,—
I would to heaven, he were.

Lod. What, strike his wife!

Iago. Faith, that was not so well; Yet 'would I knew

That stroke would prove the worst.

Lod. Is it his use?

Or did the letters work upon his blood,

And new-create his fault?

Iago. Alas, alas!

It is not honesty in me, to speak

What I have seen and known. You shall observe him;

And his own courses will denote him so,

That I may save my speech: Do but go after,

And mark how he continues.

Lod. I am sorry that I am deceiv'd in him. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO and EMILIA.

Oth. You have seen nothing then?

Emil. Nor ever heard; nor ever did suspect.

Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she together.

Emil. But then I saw no harm; and then I heard
Each syllable that breath made up between them.

Oth. What, did they never whisper?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. Nor send you out o' the way?

Emil. Never.

Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. That 's strange.

Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,
Lay down my soul at stake: if you think other,

Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom.

If any wretch have put this in your head,

Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse!

For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true,

There 's no man happy; the purest of their wives

Is foul as slander.

Oth. Bid her come hither:—go.— [Exit EMIL.]

She says enough;—yet she 's a simple bawd

That cannot say as much. This is a subtle whore,

A closet-lock-and-key of villainous secrets:

And yet she 'll kneel, and pray; I have seen her do 't.

Re-enter EMILIA, with DESDEMONA.

Des. My lord, what is your will?

Oth. Pray you, chuck, come hither.

Des. What is your pleasure?

Oth. Let me see your eyes;

Look in my face.

Des. What horrible fancy 's this?

Oth. Some of your function, mistress; [To EMIL.]

Leave procreants alone, and shut the door;

Cough, or cry hem, if any body come:

Your mystery, your mystery;—nay, despatch.

[Exit EMIL.]

Des. Upon my knee what doth your speech import?

I understand a fury in your words,

But not the words.

Oth. Why, what art thou?

Des. Your wife, my lord; your true and loyal wife.

Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;

Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves

Should fear to seize thee: therefore be double-damn'd,

Swear—thou art honest.

Des. Heaven doth truly know it.

Oth. Heaven truly knows that thou art false as hell.

Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? How am I false?

Why, with my lord, madam.
 is thy lord?

He that is yours, sweet lady.
 none: Do not talk to me, Emilia;
 nor answer have I none,

 to chiding.

What is the matter, lady?
 Iago, my lord hath so bewhor'd her,
 despite and heavy terms upon her,
 she cannot bear it.
 that name, Iago?

What name, fair lady?
 as she said my lord did say I was,

 laid such terms upon his callet,
 did he so?
 do know; I am sure I am none such.
 do weep, do not weep; Alas the day!
 she forsook so many noble matches,
 for her country, and her friends,
 whose? would it not make one weep?
 my wretched fortune.

Beshrew him for 't!
 a trick upon him?

Nay, heaven doth know.
 I be hang'd, if some eternal villain,
 an insinuating rogue,
 cozening slave, to get some office,
 would this slander; I will be hang'd else

 a serious knave, some scurvy fellow:— such companions thou'dst unfold;
 cry honest hand a whip,
 scalds naked through the world,
 east to the west!

Speak within door.
 upon them! some such squire he was our wit the seamy side without,
 to suspect me with the Moor.
 are a fool; go to.

Alas, Iago,
 do to win my lord again?
 do to him; for, by this light of heaven,
 I lost him. Here I kneel;
 did trespass 'gainst his love,
 worse of thought, or actual deed;
 yes, mine ears, or any sense,

Delighted them in any other form;
 Or that I do not yet, and ever did,
 And ever will,—though he do shake me off
 To beggarly divorcement,—love him dearly,
 Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;
 And his unkindness may defeat my life,
 But never taint my love. I cannot say, whore;
 It does abhor me, now I speak the word;
 To do the act that might the addition earn,
 Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you, be content; 't is but his humour;
 The business of the state does him offence,
 And he does chide with you.

Des. If 't were no other!
Iago. It is but so, I warrant. [Trumpets]
 Hark, how these instruments summon to supper!
 The messengers of Venice stay the meat.
 Go in, and weep not: all things shall be well.

[Exeunt DESDEMONA and EMILIA.]

Enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo?

Rod. I do not find that thou deal'st justly with me.

Iago. What in the contrary?

Rod. Every day thou dafts me with some device, Iago; and rather, as it seems to me now, keep'st from me all conveniency, than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it:
 Nor am I yet persuaded to put up in peace what already
 I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Rod. I have heard too much; and your words and performances are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me, to deliver to Desdemona, would half have corrupted a votarist: You have told me she hath received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance: but I find none.

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 't is not very well. Nay, I think, it is scurvy; and begin to find myself fobbed in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you, 't is not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona: If she will return me my jewels I will give over my suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and said nothing but what I protest intend-ment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee; and even, from this instant, do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo: Thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appeared.

Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appeared; and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean, purpose, courage, and valour,—this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice, to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? why then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no; he goes into Mauritania, and taketh away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean removing him?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me to do?

Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit, and a right. He sups to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him;—he knows not yet of his honourable fortune: if you will watch his going thence, (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one,) you may take him at your pleasure; I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further

Oth. O, pardon me; 't will do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir?

O, Desdemona,—

Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant; I will be returned forthwith: dismiss your attendant there; look it be done.

Des. I will, my lord.

[Exeunt OTH., LOD., and Attendants.

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says he will return incontinent; and hath commanded me to go to bed, and bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good Emilia, Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu; We must not now displease him.

Emil. Ay, would you had never seen him!

Des. So would not I; my love doth so approve him,

That even his stubbornness, his checks, his frowns,— Prithee, unpun me,—have grace and favour in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All's one:—Good father! how foolish are our minds!—

If I do die before thee, prithee, shroud me In one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid call'd Barbara; She was in love; and he she lov'd prov'd mad, And did forsake her: she had a song of "willow," An old thing 't was, but it express'd her fortune, And she died singing it: That song, to-night, Will not go from my mind; I have much to do, But to go hang my head all at one side, And sing it, like poor Barbara. Prithee, despatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?

Des. No, unpun me here.— This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. He speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice would have walk'd barefoot to Palestine, for a touch of his nether lip.

I.

Des. The poor soul sat singing by a sycamore

Sing all a green willow;

Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee

Sing willow, willow, willow;

The fresh streams ran by her, and marmur'd

Sing willow, &c.

Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the Lay by these:

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Prithee, hie thee: he'll come anon.—

Sing all a green willow must be my

II.

Let nobody blame him, his scorn I approve.

Nay, that's not next.—Hark! who is 't?

Emil. It's the wind.

Des. I call'd my love, false love; but what

Sing willow, &c.

If I court mo women you'll couch with me

So, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes

Doth that bode weeping?

Emil. 'T is neither here

Des. I have heard it said so.—O, the men!—

Dost thou in conscience think,—tell me,

That there be women do abuse their husbands

In such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for

Emil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heaven!

Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly

I might do 't as well i' the dark.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for

Emil. The world's a huge thing: 'T for a small vice.

Des. In troth, I think thou wouldst not

Emil. In troth, I think I should; and I had done. Marry, I would not do such joint-ring; nor for measures of lawn; nor petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibit

all the whole world.—Why, who would husband a cuckold, to make him a mortal venture purgatory for 't.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong and, having the world for your labour, 't

your own world, and you might quickly

Des. I do not think there is any such

Emil. Yes, a dozen; and as many to would store the world they play'd for.

But, I do think it is their husbands' fault

If wives do fall: Say, that they slack the

And pour our treasures into foreign laps;

Or else break out in peevish jealousies,

Throwing restraint upon us; or, say, they

Or scant our former having in despite;

Why, we have galls; and, though we have Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands

Their wives have sense like them: they see

And have their palates both for sweet and

As husbands have. What is it that they

When they change us for others? Is it

I think it is: And doth affection breed

I think it doth: Is 't frailty that thus

It is so too: And have not we affections?

Desires for sport? and frailty, as men have?

Then, let them use us well: else, let them

The ills we do their ills instruct us so.

Des. Good night, good night: Heaven

send,

Not to pick bad from bad; but, by bad,

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Street.

Enter IAGO and RODRIGO.

Stand behind this bulk; straight will he
me:
ood rapier bare, and put it home;
rk; fear nothing; I'll be at thy elbow;
, or it mars us; think on that,
st firm thy resolution.
near at hand; I may miscarry in 't.
re, at thy hand; be bold, and take thy
and. [Retires to a little distance.] ave no great devotion to the deed;
hath given me satisfying reasons:—
man gone:—forth, my sword; he dies.

[Goes to his stand.] ave rubb'd this young quat* almost to the use,
es angry. Now whether he kill Cassio, im, or each do kill the other,
makes my gain: Live Roderigo, e to a restitution large
d jewels, that I bobb'd from him, Desdemona;
be; if Cassio do remain,
lly beauty in his life me ugly; and, besides, the Moor me to him; there stand I in much peril.
t die:—But so, I hear him coming.

Enter CASSIO.

now his gait, 't is he:—Villain, thou diest.
es from his post, and makes a pass at CAS.
at thrust had been mine enemy indeed,
y coat<sup>b</sup> is better than thou know'st;
e proof of thine. [Draws, and wounds ROD.]
I am slain! [IAGO rushes from his post, cuts CAS. behind in the leg, and exit.
n maim'd for ever:—Help, ho! murder!
urther! [Falls.]

Enter OTHELLO, at a distance.

voice of Cassio:—Iago keeps his word.
villain that I am!

'T is even so.
elp! ho! light! a surgeon!
s be:—O brave Iago, honest, and just,
sch noble sense of thy friend's wrong!
st me:—Minion, your dear lies dead, noblest fate hies:—Strumpet, I come:
heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted;
st-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted.
[Exit.]

RODRIGO and GRATIANO, at a distance.

st, ho! no watch? no passage? murder!
urther!
s some mischance; the voice is very direful.
elp!

Hark!

O wretched villain!
e or three groan:—'t is heavy night:<sup>d</sup>
nson explains, that a quat, in the midland counties, ich by rubbing is made to smart, or is rubbed to as the buff jerkin.

does not merely say that there are two or three e man, but that two or three men groan; and he may be counterfeits." 'T is heavy night, is, 't is

These may be counterfeits; let 's think 't unsafe
To come into the cry without more help.

Rod. Nobody come? then shall I bleed to death.

Enter IAGO.

Lod. Hark!

Gra. Here 's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago. Who 's there? whose noise is this that cries on murder?

Lod. We do not know.

Iago. Do you not hear a cry?

Cas. Here, here; for heaven's sake, help me.

Iago. What 's the matter?

Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Lod. The same, indeed; a very valiant fellow.

Iago. What are you here that cry so grievously?

Cas. Iago? O, I am spoil'd, undone by villains!

Give me some help.

Iago. O me, lieutenant! what villains have done
this?

Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout,
And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains!—

What are you there? come in, and give some help.

[To LOD. and GRA.]

Rod. O, help me here!

Cas. That 's one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave! O villain!

[IAGO stabs ROD.]

Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog!— [Dies.]

Iago. Kill men i' the dark!—Where be these bloody thieves?—

How silent is this town! Ho! murder! murder!

What may you be? are you of good or evil?

Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico?

Lod. He, sir.

Iago. I cry you mercy; Here 's Cassio hurt by villains.

Gra. Cassio?

Iago. How is 't, brother?

Cas. My leg is cut in two.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!—

Light, gentlemen; I'll bind it with my shirt

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is 't that cry'd?

Iago. Who is 't that cry'd?

Bian. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio! O
Cassio! Cassio! Cassio!

Iago. O notable strumpet!—Cassio, may you suspect
Who they should be that have thus mangled you?

Cas. No.

Gra. I am sorry to find you thus: I have been to seek you.

Iago. Lend me a garter: So.—O, for a chair,
To bear him easily hence!

Bian. Alas, he faints:—O Cassio! Cassio! Cassio!

Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash
To be a party in this injury.—

Patience awhile, good Cassio.—Come, come;

Lend me a light.—Know we this face, or no?

Alas! my friend, and my dear countryman,

Roderigo? no:—Yes, sure; yes; 't is Roderigo.

Gra. What, of Venice?

Iago. Even he, sir; did you know him?

Gra. Know him? ay.

Iago. Signior Gratiano! I cry your gentle pardon;

2 X

These bloody accidents must excuse my manners,
That so neglected you.

Gra. I am glad to see you.

Jago. How do you, Cassio?—O, a chair, a chair!

Gra. Roderigo!

Jago. He, he, 't is he:—O, that's well said;—the chair:— [A chair brought in.

Some good man bear him carefully from hence;
I'll fetch the general's surgeon.—For you, mistress,

[To BIANCA.

Save you your labour.—He that lies slain here, Cassio,
Was my dear friend: What malice was between you?

Cas. None in the world; nor do I know the man.

Jago. [To BIANCA.] What, look you pale?—O bear him o' the air.—

[CASSIO and ROD. are borne off.

Stay you, good gentlemen.—Look you pale, mistress?

Do you perceive the ghastness of her eye?—

Nay, if you stare we shall hear more anon:—

Behold her well: I pray you look upon her;

Do you see, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness will speak,

Though tongues were out of use.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. Alas, what is the matter? what is the matter,
husband?

Jago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark,

By Roderigo, and fellows that are 'scap'd;

He's almost slain, and Roderigo quite dead.

Emil. Alas, good gentleman! alas, good Cassio!

Jago. This is the fruits of whoring.—Prithee, Emilia,

Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night:—

What, do you shake at that?

Bian. He supp'd at my house; but I therefore shake
not.

Jago. O, did he so? I charge you, go with me.

Emil. O, fie upon thee, strumpet!

Bian. I am no strumpet; but of life as honest

As you that thus abuse me.

Emil. As I? fie upon thee!

Jago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor Cassio dress'd:—

Come, mistress, you must tell us another tale.—

Emilia, run you to the citadel,

And tell my lord and lady what hath happ'd.—

Will you go on afore? This is the night, [Aside.

That either makes me or fordoes me quite. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber: DESDEMONA in bed asleep. A light burning.

Enter OTHELLO.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,—

Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!—

It is the cause.—Yet I'll not shed her blood;

Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow

And smooth as monumental alabaster.

[Takes off his sword.

Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.

Put out the light, and then—Put out the light!

* We have pointed this controverted passage according to a suggestion of Warburton. It is usually printed as it is found in the original copies:—

"Put out the light, and then put out the light."

Warburton's explanation of his reading is as follows:—"The meaning is, I will put out the light, and then proceed to the execution of my purpose. But, the expression of putting out the light bringing to mind the effects of the extinction of the light of life, he breaks short, and questions himself about the effects of this metaphorical extinction, introduced by a repetition of his first words, as much as to say,—But hold, let me first weigh the reflections which this expression so naturally excites." The reading of the folio in a subsequent line "but once put out thy light," strengthens, we think, this interpretation of Warburton's.

If I quench thee, thou flaming minister!

I can again thy former light restore,

Should I repent me:—but once put out

Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature

I know not where is that Promethean heat

That can thy light relume. When I have rose,

I cannot give it vital growth again,

It needs must wither:—I'll smell thee as

O balmy breath, that doth almost persuade

Justice to break her sword!—One more, and

Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kiss

And love thee after:—One more, and this

So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep

But they are cruel tears: This sorrow's hatch'd

It strikes where it doth love.—She wakes.

Des. Who's there? Othello?

Oth. Ay, Desdemona.

Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?

Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?

Des.

Oth. If you bethink yourself of any creature

Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace,

Solicit for it straight.

Des. Alack, my lord, what may you mean?

Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will

I would not kill thy unprepared spirit;

No.—Heavens forbid.—I would not kill

Des. Talk you of killing?

Oth. Ay, I do.

Des.

Have mercy on me!

Oth. Amen, with all my heart.

Des. If you say so, I hope you will not

Oth. Humph!

Des. And yet I fear you; for you are

When your eyes roll so: Why I should fear

Since guiltiness I know not; but yet, I feel

Oth. Think on thy sins.

Des. They are loves.

Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest.

Des. That death's unnatural that kills

Alas, why gnaw you so your nether lip?

Some bloody passion shakes your very frame

These are portents; but yet I hope, I hope

They do not point on me.

Oth. Peace, and be still.

Des. I will so: What's the matter?

Oth. That handkerchief, which I so loved

thee,

Thou gav'st to Cassio.

Des. No, by my life and soul,

Send for the man and ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul,

Take heed of perjury; thou'rt on thy death

Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Yes, presently.

Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin;

For to deny each article with oath

Cannot remove, nor choke the strong conceit

That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.

Des. O, heaven have mercy on me!

Oth. I say,

Des. And have you mercy too!—I never

Offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio,

But with such general warranty of heaven

As I might love: I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief

O perjur'd woman! thou dost shame thy bed

And mak'st me call what I intend to do

A murder, which I thought a sacrifice:

I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it thus:

in :- Send for him hither;
a truth.

He hath confess'd.
My lord?
hath us'd thee.

How? unlawfully?

I will not say so.

No, his mouth is stopp'd;
I ta'en order for 't.
The doctor interprets,—What, is he dead?
His hairs been lives, my great revenge on them all.

He is betray'd, and I undone.

Impet! weep'st thou for him to my me, my lord, but kill me not.

rumpet!

to-morrow, let me live to-night.
you strive.—

But half an hour.

Being done,

But while I say one prayer.

[He smothers her.
My lord! my lord! what ho! my
my lord!

is this? — Not dead! not yet quite am yet merciful;

thee linger in thy pain.—

What ho, my lord! my lord!

Who's there?

O, good my lord, I would speak a
with you.

is Emilia;—by and by:—She's dead.
ees to speak of Cassio's death;

th. Ha! no more moving?

Shall she come in? Were 't good?
again:—No.—What's best to do?

e'll sure speak to my wife:

fe! what wife?—I have no wife:

O heavy hour!

d be now a huge eclipse

, and that the affrighted globe

ration.

I do beseech you that I may speak
a,

got thee: O, come in, Emilia:—

—Let me the curtains draw.—

What's the matter with thee now?

[Unlocks the door.

Enter EMILIA.

ood lord, yonder 's foul murders done.
ow?

But now, my lord!

very error of the moon;

earer earth than she was wont,

mad.

my lord, hath kill'd a young Venetian, done are not addressed to Desdemona, but ing in Othello's mind. The conflict between ined honour is over; he looks upon the act se when he has lifted his murderous hand it is done. For the mere completion of the then the mercy, "there is no pause."

age direction at this place in the original et probable that the poet intended Othello ona, according to the practice of the mo-vious resolution, "I'll not shed her blood," agony and terror of the moment, when he quite dead.

Oth. Roderigo kill'd!

And Cassio kill'd!

Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.

Oth. Not Cassio kill'd? Then murder 's out of tune,
And sweet revenge grows harsh.

Des. O falsely, falsely murder'd!

Emil. Alas; what cry is that?

Oth. That! what?

Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady's voice:—

Help! help, ho! help!—O lady, speak again!

Sweet Desdemona! O, sweet mistress, speak!

Des. A guiltless death I die.

Emil.

O, who hath done

This deed?

Des. Nobody; I myself; farewell:

Commend me to my kind lord. O, farewell. [Dies.

Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?

Emil. Alas, who knows?

Oth. You heard her say herself, it was not I.

Emil. She said so: I must needs report the truth.

Oth. She's, like a liar, gone to burning hell;

'T was I that kill'd her.

Emil.

O, the more angel she,

And you the blacker devil!

Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore.

Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil.

Oth. She was false as water.

Emil.

Thou art rash as fire, to say

That she was false; O, she was heavenly true!

Oth. Cassio did top her: ask thy husband else.

O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell,

But that I did proceed upon just grounds

To this extremity: Thy husband knew it all.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Thy husband.

Emil. That she was false to wedlock?

Oth.

Ay, with Cassio.

Had she been true,

If heaven would make me such another world

Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,

I'd not have sold her for it.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Ay, 't was he that told me on her first;

An honest man he is, and hates the slime

That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil.

My husband?

Oth. What needs this iteration, woman? I say thy husband.

Emil. O mistress, villainy hath made mocks with love!—

My husband say that she was false?

Oth.

He, woman;

I say, thy husband: Dost understand the word?

My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul

Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart;

She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha!

Emil.

Do thy worst;

This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven,

Than thou wast worthy her.

Oth.

Peace, you were the best.

Emil. Thou hast not half that power to do me harm,

As I have to be hurt. O gull! O dolt!

As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,—

I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee known,

Though I lost twenty lives:—Help! help! ho! help!

The Moor hath kill'd my mistress. Murder! murder!

Enter MONTANO, GRATIANO, and IAGO.

Mon. What is the matter!—How now, general?

Emil. O, are you come, Iago? you have done well,

That men must lay their murders on your neck.

Gra. What is the matter?

Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a man :
He says, thou toldst him that his wife was false :
I know thou didst not, thou 'rt not such a villain :
Speak, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought ; and told no more Than what he found himself was apt and true.

Emil. But did you ever tell him she was false ?

Iago. I did.

Emil. You told a lie ; an odious, damned lie ;
Upon my soul, a lie ; a wicked lie :

She false with Cassio !—Did you say with Cassio ?

Iago. With Cassio, mistress : Go to, charm your tongue.

Emil. I will not charm my tongue ; I am bound to
speak ;

My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed.

All. O heavens forbend !

Emil. And your reports have set the murder on.

Oth. Nay, stare not, masters ; it is true indeed.

Gra. 'T is a strange truth.

Mon. O monstrous act !

Emil. Villainy, villainy, villainy !—
I think upon 't,—I think,—I smell 't—O villainy !—
I thought so then ;—I 'll kill myself for grief.—
O villainy, villainy !

Iago. What, are you mad ? I charge you, get you home.

Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak ;
'T is proper I obey him, but not now :

Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.

Oth. Oh ! Oh ! Oh !

Emil. Nay, lay thee down, and roar :
For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent,
That e'er did lift up eye.

Oth. O, she was foul !—
I scarce did know you, uncle : there lies your niece,
Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd :
I know this act shows horrible and grim.

Gra. Poor Desdemona ! I am glad thy father's dead ;
Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief
Shore his old thread in twain : did he live now,
This sight would make him do a desperate turn,
Yea, curse his better angel from his side,
And fall to reprobance.

Oth. 'T is pitiful ; but yet Iago knows,
That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
A thousand times committed ; Cassio confess'd it :
And she did gratify his amorous works
With that recognizance and pledge of love
Which I first gave her ; I saw it in his hand ;
It was a handkerchief, an antique token
My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven ! O heavenly powers !

Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'T will out, 't will out !—I hold my peace,
sir ? no ;

No, I will speak as liberal as the north ;<sup>a</sup>
Let heaven, and men, and devils, let them all,
All, all, cry shame against me, yet I 'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home.

Emil. I will not. [IAGO offers to stab his wife.]

Gra. Fie !

Your sword upon a woman ?

Emil. O thou dull Moor ! that handkerchief thou speak'st of

I found by fortune, and did give my husband
For often with a solemn earnestness,
(More than, indeed, belong'd to such a trifle,
He begg'd of me to steal it.

Iago. Villainous whore !

Emil. She give it Cassio ! no, alas, I found it,
and did give 't my husband.

Filth, thou liest.

<sup>a</sup> Ice-brook's temper. The practice of the Spaniards of using the sword in the sense of unrestrained—uncorroborated.

Emil. By heaven, I do not ; I do not, you O murderous coxcomb ! what should such
Do with so good a wife ?

[IAGO stabs EMIL, &c.]

Oth. Are there no atoms

But what serve for the thunder ?—Precious

Gra. The woman falls ; sure he has kill'd

Emil. Ay, ay : O, lay me by my mistress

Gra. He 's gone, but his wife 's kill'd.

Mon. 'T is a notorious villain. Take pon,

Which I have here recover'd from the Moor,
Come, guard the door without : let him in
But kill him rather ; I 'll after that same
For 't is a damned slave.

Oth. I am not valiant
But every pony whipster gets my sword ;
But why should honour outlive honesty ?
Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy song bode, la
Hark, canst thou hear me ? I will play it
And die in music ;—“ Willow, willow, we Moor, she was chaste ; she lov'd thee, cruel
So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true
So speaking as I think, alas, I die.

Oth. I have another weapon in this chest
It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper
O, here it is :—Uncle, I must come forth

Gra. If thou attempt it, it will cost thee Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must

Oth. Look in upon me then, and speak
Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Gra. What is the matter ?

Oth. Behold ! I ha
A better never did itself sustain

Upon a soldier's thigh : I have seen the deed
That with this little arm, and this good sword,
I have made my way through more impediments
Than twenty times your stop :—But, O !
Who can control his fate ? 't is not so now
Be not afraid though you do see me weep
Here is my journey's end, here is my butt
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.

Do you go back dismay'd ? 't is a lost
Man but a rash against Othello's breast,
And he retires ;—Where should Othello go
Now, how dost thou look now ? O ill-starred Pale as thy smock ! when we shall meet
This look of thine will hurl my soul from
And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold,
Even like thy chastity.—

O cursed, cursed slave !—Whip me, ye devils,
From the possession of this heavenly sight !
Blow me about in winds ! roast me in sun
Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire !
O Desdemona ! dead Desdemona ! dead.

Enter LODOVICO, MONTANO, CASSIO, &c. chair, and Officers, with IAGO, &c.

Lod. Where is this rash and unreasoning
man ?

Oth. That 's he that was Othello ; here

Lod. Where is that viper ? bring the villain

Oth. I look down towards his festering fable ;

If that thou be'st a devil I cannot kill thee.
[Exit Othello.]

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir ; but
Oth. I am not sorry neither ; I 'd have
For, in my sense, 't is happiness to die.

<sup>a</sup> Ice-brook's temper. The practice of the Spaniards their swords by plunging them, when hot from the waters of an icy coldness, is noticed by Martial and in Othello, that was once so good, practice of a cursed slave,

said to thee?

Why, anything:
murderer, if you will;
did in hate, but all in honour.
wretch hath part confess'd his villainy:
he consent in Cassio's death?

general, I never gave you cause.
believe it, and I ask your pardon,
pray, demand that demi-devil,
thus enar'd my soul and body?
and me nothing: what you know, you

Most heathenish and most gross!
here's another discontented paper,

O thou pernicious caitiff!—
O, Cassio, by that handkerchief

I found it in my chamber;
if confess'd, but even now,
dropp'd it, for a special purpose,
fit to his desire.

O fool! fool! fool!

And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,—
If there be any cunning cruelty,
That can torment him much, and hold him long,
It shall be his: You shall close prisoner rest,
Till that the nature of your fault be known
To the Venetian state:—Come, bring away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two, before you go.
I have done the state some service, and they know 't;
No more of that:—I pray you, in your letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice: then must you speak
Of one that lov'd not wisely, but too well;
Of one, not easily jealous, but, being wrought,
Perplex'd in the extreme; of one, whose hand,
Like the base Indian,<sup>a</sup> threw a pearl away,
Richer than all his tribe; of one, whose subdu'd eyes,
Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinable gum: Set you down this:
And say, besides,—that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk
Beat a Venetian, and traduc'd the state,
I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him—thus. [Stabs himself.

Lod. O bloody period!

Gra. All that is spoke is marr'd.

Oth. I kiss'd thee, ere I kill'd thee;—No way but
this,

Killing myself to die upon a kiss. [Dies.

Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon;
For he was great of heart.

Lod. O Spartan dog!
More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea!
Look on the tragic loading of this bed; [To IAGO.
This is thy work: the object poisons sight;—
Let it be hid.—Gratiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
For they succeed on you.—To you, lord governor,
Remains the censure of this hellish villain;
The time, the place, the torture,—O enforce it!
Myself will straight aboard; and, to the state,
This heavy act with heavy heart relate. [Exeunt.

<sup>a</sup> Indian. Boswell, in a very sensible note, shows that tribe meant in Shakspeare's day kindred; that base is used in the sense of ignorant; and, what is very important, that two poets after Shakspeare have described the Indians as casting away jewels of which they knew not the value. The ordinary reading is "Judean."

The text of the folio, in the dramatic respect, differs considerably from that of the quartos. Large passages which are found in the quartos are omitted in the folio: there are, indeed, some lines found in the folio which are not in the quartos, amounting to about fifty. These are scattered passages, not very remarkable when detached, but for the most part essential to the progress of the action or to the development of character. On the other hand the lines found in the quartos which are not in the folio amount to as many as two hundred and twenty-five; and they comprise one entire scene and one or two of the most striking connected passages in the drama. It would be easy to account for these omissions, by the assumption that in the folio edition the original play was cut down by the editors; for 'Lear,' without the omissions, is perhaps the longest of Shakspeare's plays, with the exception of 'Hamlet.' But this theory would require us to assume, also, that the additions to the folio were made by the editors. These comprise several such minute touches as none but the hand of the master could have superadded.

The story of 'Lear' belongs to the popular literature of Europe. It is a pretty episode in the fabulous chronicles of Britain; and whether invented by the monkish historians, or transplanted into our annals from some foreign source, is not very material. In the 'Gesta Romanorum,' the same story is told of Theodosius, "a wise emperor in the city of Rome."

Shelley, in his eloquent 'Defence of Poetry,' published in his 'Posthumous Essays,' &c., has stated the grounds for his belief that the 'Lear' of Shakspeare may sustain a comparison with the master-pieces of the Greek tragedy. "The modern practice of blending comedy with tragedy, though liable to great abuse in point of practice, is undoubtedly an extension of the dramatic circle; but the comedy should be as in 'King Lear,' universal, ideal, and sublime. It is, perhaps, the intermediety of Euripides; and, in the least, describes such works of Shakspeare as obscure chaos, composed of murder and heroism and meanness."

In certain schools of criticism, it is said that 'Lear' "may be judged to be a specimen of the dramatic art exilis would be treated as a mere vision; and should still be reminded that Shakspeare and irregular genius," producing that he could not help it. In France, the feeble echoes of the contest between the romantic and the classic schools.

Poor Nabum Tate did not unfitly when he said of 'Lear,' "It is a heap and unpolished, yet so dazzling in its soon perceived I had seized a treasure."

There is only one mode in which as the 'Lear' of Shakspeare can be studied, and by reverential reflection produced the miserable parody of 'Lear' a few years had banished the 'Lear' from the stage, was, as far as regards the highest efforts of intellect, a prescriptive and therefore empty age. Tate was not Shakspeare was not read. We have, in degree, to a better judgment, because we judge more humbly. We have learned the highest works of the highest masters of the pedantic principle of considering a play to the extent in which he is an imitator but by endeavouring to comprehend the modern and the ancient each within the circle of Shakspeare and the Antigone many points of similarity; but that a different system of art. It is for only to carry their several systems

SCENE.—BRITAIN.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—King Lear's Palace.

KENT, GLOSTER, and EDMUND.

Edm. Might the king had more affected the duke than Cornwall.

Kent. Always seem so to us: but now, in the kingdom, it appears not which of the was most; for qualities are so weigh'd,
 * in neither can make choice of either's

Edm. Is this your son, my lord?

Kent. Feeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I blush'd to acknowledge him, that now I t.

Edm. I cannot conceive you.

Kent. His young fellow's mother could: where e round-womb'd; and had indeed, sir, a dle, ere she had a husband for her bed.
 a fault?

Edm. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it
 t.

Kent. I have a son, sir, by order of law, some an this, who yet is no dearer in my accept of this knave came somewhat saucily to me he was sent for, yet was his mother exact scrutiny.

Edm. In the same way Hotspur calls his third share a s these cases it is used for an assigned proporfair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged.—Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again:—The king is coming. [Trumpets sound within.]

Enter LEAR, CORNWALL, ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, CORDELIA, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the lords of France and Burgundy, Gloster.

Glo. I shall, my liege. [Exeunt GLO. and EDM.]

Lear. Meantime we shall express our darker purpose.
 Give me the map there.—Know, that we have divided,
 In three, our kingdom: and 't is our fast intent
 To shake all cares and business from our age;
 Conferring them on younger strengths, while we Unburthen'd crawl toward death.—Our son of Cornwall,
 And you, our no less loving son of Albany,
 We have this hour a constant will to publish
 Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife
 May be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy,

Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love,
Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn,
And here are to be answer'd.—Tell me, my daughters,
(Since now we will divest us, both of rule,
Interest of territory, cares of state,
Which of you, shall we say, doth love us most?
That we our largest bounty may extend
Where nature doth with merit challenge.—Goneril,
Our eldest born, speak first.

Gon. Sir, I love you more than word can wield the matter,
Dearer than eye-sight, space, and liberty;
Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare;
No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, honour:
As much as child e'er lov'd, or father found.
A love that makes breath poor, and speech unable;
Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Cor. What shall Cordelia speak? Love, and be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,

With shadowy forests, and with champains rich'd,
With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads,
We make thee lady: To thine and Albany's issues
Be this perpetual.—What says our second daughter,
Our dearest Regan, wife of Cornwall?

Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister,
And prize me at her worth. In my true heart
I find she names my very deed of love;
Only she comes too short,—that I profess
Myself an enemy to all other joys,
Which the most precious square of sense possesses;
And find, I am alone felicitate
In your dear highness' love.

Cor. Then poor Cordelia! [Aside.]
And yet not so; since, I am sure, my love's
More ponderous than my tongue.

Lear. To thee, and thine, hereditary ever,
Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom;
No less in space, validity,<sup>a</sup> and pleasure,
Than that conferr'd on Goneril.—Now, our joy,
Although our last and least;<sup>b</sup> to whose young love
The vines of France and milk of Burgundy
Strive to be interest'd;<sup>c</sup> what can you say, to draw A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak.

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. Nothing?

Cor. Nothing.

Lear. Nothing will come of nothing: speak again.

Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
My heart into my mouth; I love your majesty
According to my bond; no more, nor less.

Lear. How, how, Cordelia? mend your speech a little,
Lest you may mar your fortunes.

Cor. Good my lord,
You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me: I Return those duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, love you, and most honour you.
Why have my sisters husbands, if they say
They love you, all? Haply, when I shall wed,
That lord whose hand must take my plight shall carry
Half my love with him, half my care, and duty:
Sure, I shall never marry like my sisters,
To love my father all.

Lear. But goes thy heart with this?

Cor. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. So young, and so untender?

<sup>b</sup> We give the text as it stands in the folio, by which we lose the words which have passed into a household phrase, "Although the last not least." But in truth the modern text is not to be found in any edition of Shakspeare.

<sup>c</sup> Interest'd. This verb, from the French intéresser, is used by Ben Jonson and Massinger.

Cor. So young, my lord, and true.

Lear. Let it be so:—Thy truth then be thy
For, by the sacred radiance of the sun;
The mysteries of Hecate and the night;
By all the operation of the orbs,
From whom we do exist, and cease to be;
Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me
Hold thee, from this, for ever. The barbarous
Or he that makes his generation wassers
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd,
As thou, my sometime daughter.

Kent. Good my lord,

Lear. Peace, Kent!

Come not between the dragon and his wrath
I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest
On her kind nursery.—Hence, and avoid me

A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue
 That I am glad I have not, though not to have it Hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou
 Hadst not been born than not t' have pleas'd me better.

France. Is it but this? a tardiness in nature,
 Which often leaves the history unspoke
 That it intends to do?—My lord of Burgundy,
 What say you to the lady? Love 's not love,
 When it is mingled with regards* that stand
 Aloof from the entire point. Will you have her?
 She is herself a dowry.

Bur. Royal king,
 Give but that portion which yourself propos'd,
 And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
 Duchess of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing: I have sworn; I am firm.
Bur. I am sorry, then, you have so lost a father
 That you must lose a husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy!
 Since that respects of fortune are his love,
 I shall not be his wife.

France. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich, being poor;

Most choice, forsaken; and most lov'd, despis'd!
 Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon:
 Be it lawful, I take up what 's cast away.
 Gods, gods! 't is strange, that from their cold'st neglect
 My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.—
 Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance,
 Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France:
 Not all the dukes of wat'rish Burgundy
 Can buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me.—
 Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind:
 Thou lovest here, a better where<sup>b</sup> to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France: let her be thine, for we Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see
 That face of hers again:—Therefore be gone,
 Without our grace, our love, our benison.
 Come, noble Burgundy. [Flourish. Exeunt LEAR,
BUR., CORN., ALB., GLO., and Attendants.

France. Bid farewell to your sisters.

Cor. The jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes
 Cordelia leaves you: I know you what you are;
 And, like a sister, am most loath to call
 Your faults as they are nam'd. Love well our father:
 To your professed bosoms I commit him:
 But yet, alas! stood I within his grace,
 I would prefer him to a better place.
 So farewell to you both.

Reg. Prescribe not us our duties.

Gon. Let your study
 Be, to content your lord; who hath receiv'd you
 At fortune's alms. You have obedience scanted,
 And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

Cor. Time shall unfold what plighted cunning hides:
 Who covers faults at last with shame derides.
 Well may you prosper!

France. Come, my fair Cordelia.

[Exeunt FRANCE and CORDELIA.
Gon. Sister, it is not little I have to say, of what most nearly appertains to us both. I think our father will hence to-night.

Reg. That 's most certain, and with you; next month
 with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is; the observation we have made of it hath been little: he always loved our sister most; and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off appears too grossly.

Reg. 'T is the infirmity of his age: yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

but rash: then must we look from his age to receive not alone the imperfections of long-engrafted condition, but, therewithal, the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let us sit together: if our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think of it.

Gon. We must do something, and i' the heat. [Ex.]

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Earl of Gloster's Castle.

Enter EDMUND, with a letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law My services are bound: Wherefore should I Stand in the plague of custom; and permit The curiosity<sup>a</sup> of nations to deprive me, For that I am some twelve or fourteen moonshines Lag of a brother? Why bastard? Wherefore base? When my dimensions are as well compact, My mind as generous, and my shape as true, As honest madam's issue? Edm. So please your lordship, none.

[Putting up the letter.]

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glo. What paper were you reading?

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glo. No? what needeth then that terrible despatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let 's see: Come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.

Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me: it is a letter from my brother, that I have not all o'erread: and for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your o'erlooking.

Glo. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.

Stew. Ay, madam.

Gon. By day and night he wrongs me;* every hour
He flashes into one gross crime or other,
That sets us all at odds: I'll not endure it:
His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us
On every trifle:—When he returns from hunting
I will not speak with him; say, I am sick:—
If you come slack of former services
You shall do well; the fault of it I'll answer.

Stew. He's coming, madam; I hear him.

[Horns within.

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please,
You and your fellows; I'd have it come to question:
If he distaste it, let him to my sister,
Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one,
Not to be over-ruled. Idle old man,
That still would manage those authorities
That he hath given away!—Now, by my life,
Old fools are babes again; and must be us'd
With checks, as flatteries,—when they are seen abus'd.
Remember what I have said.

Stew. Well, madam.

Gon. And let his knights have colder looks among you; what grows of it no matter; advise your fellows so: I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall that I may speak:—I'll write straight to my sister, to hold my course:—Prepare for dinner. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Hall in the same.

Enter KENT, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow,
That can my speech diffuse, my good intent
May carry through itself to that full issue
For which I raz'd my likeness.—Now, banish'd Kent,
If thou canst serve where thou dost stand condemn'd,
So may it come thy master, whom thou lov'st,
Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter LEAR, Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner; go, get it ready. [Exit an Attendant.] How now, what art thou?

Kent. A man, sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou
with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem; to serve him truly that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise and says little;
to fear judgment; to fight when I cannot choose; and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.

Lear. If thou be'st as poor for a subject as he's for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Who wouldst thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No, sir; but you have that in your countenance which I would fain call master.

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly; that which ordinary men are fit for I am quallified in: and the best of me is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for sing-

Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me; if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet.—Dinner, ho, dinner.—Where's my knave? my fool? Go you, and call my fool hither.

Enter Steward.

You, you, sirrah, where's my daughter?

Stew. So please you,— [Exit.

Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clotpoll back.—Where's my fool, ho?—I think the world's asleep.—How now? where's that mongrel?

Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me when I called him?

Knight. Sir, he answer'd me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not!

Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgment, your highness is not entertained with that ceremonious affection as you were wont; there's a great abatement of kindness appears, as well in the general dependants, as in the duke himself also, and your daughter.

Lear. Ha! say'st thou so?

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken: for my duty cannot be silent when I think your highness wronged.

Lear. Thou but remember'st me of mine own conception: I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity, than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness: I will look further into't.—But where's my fool? I have not seen him this two days.

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well.—Go you, and tell my daughter I would speak with her.—Go you, call hither my fool.—

Re-enter Steward.

O, you sir, you, come you hither, sir: Who am I, sir?

Stew. My lady's father.

Lear. My lady's father! my lord's knave: you whore-son dog! you slave! you cur!

Stew. I am none of these, my lord: I beseech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal? [Striking him.

Stew. I'll not be stricken, my lord.

Kent. Nor tripped neither; you base foot-ball player. [Tripping up his heels.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou serv'st me, and I'll love thee.

Kent. Come, sir, arise, away; I'll teach you differences; away, away: If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry: but away: go to; Have you wisdom? so. [Pushes the Steward out.

Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee: there's earnest of thy service. [Giving KENT money.

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him, too;—Here's my coxcomb. [Giving KENT his cap.

Lear. How now, my pretty knave? how dost thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.

For taking one's part that's out of favour: Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly: There, take my coxcomb: Why, this fellow has banish'd two of his daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will; if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomb.—How now,

My lord, sir, this your all-licens'd fool,
 our insolent retinue

is come to quarrel; breaking forth into-to-be-endured riots. Sir,
 I have by making this well known unto you,
 a safe redress; but now grow fearful,
 lest too late have spoke and done,
 I direct this course, and put it on your honour; which, if you should, the fault

 I tender of a wholesome weal,
 I am working do you that offence,

 You are our daughter?

Would you would make use of your good looks, and show you are fraught; and put away these notions, which of late transport you are not rightly are.

Not an ass know when the cart draws the wheel, Jug! I love thee.

Any here know me? This is not Lear:
 What art thou? speak thus? Where are his eyes?

How does he weaken, his discernings are gone! Ha! waking? 't is not so.

Can you tell me who I am?—
 I am your shadow.—

How should I learn that; for by the marks of sovereignty, and reason, I should be false perceiv'd—

But they will make an obedient father.
 My name, fair gentlewoman?

My admiration, sir, is much o' the savour of your new pranks. I do beseech you to direct my purposes aright:

 I am, and reverend, should be wise:

I keep a hundred knights and squires;
 I am, so debosh'd, and bold,

I am, court, infected with their manners,
 I am, riotous inn: epicurism and lust

like a tavern or a brothel,
 I am, palace. The shame itself doth speak of me: Be then desir'd to take the thing she begs,

to quantify your train;
 I am, under, that shall still depend,

To be such men as may besort your age,
 Which know themselves and you.

Lear. Darkness and devils!—
 Saddle my horses; call my train together.—

Degenerate bastard! I 'll not trouble thee;
 Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You strike my people; and your disorder'd rabble

Make servants of their betters.

Enter ALBANY.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents,—O, sir, are you come?

Is it your will? [To ALB.] Speak, sir.—Prepare my horses.

Ingratitude! thou marble-hearted fiend,
 More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a child,
 Than the sea-monster!

Alb. Pray, sir, be patient.

Lear. Detested kite! thou liest: [To GON.]
 My train are men of choice and rarest parts,

That all particulars of duty know:

And in the most exact regard support
 The worship of their name.—O most small fault,

How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show!

Which, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of nature

From the fix'd place; drew from my heart all love,

And added to the gail. O Lear, Lear, Lear!

Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in,

And thy dear judgment out!—Go, go my people. [Striking his head.]

Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant

Of what hath mov'd you.

Lear. It may be so, my lord,—

Hear, nature, hear; dear goddess, hear!

Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend

To make this creature fruitful!

Into her womb convey sterility!

Dry up in her the organs of increase;

And from her derogate body never spring

A babe to honour her! If she must teem,

Create her child of spleen; that it may live,

And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her!

Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth;

With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks;

Turn all her mother's pains and benefits,

To laughter and contempt; that she may feel

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is

To have a thankless child.—Away, away! [Exit.]

Alb. Now, gods, that we adore, whereof comes this?

Gon. Never afflict yourself to know more of it;

But let his disposition have that scope

As dotage gives it.

Re-enter LEAR.

Lear. What, fifty of my followers at a clap!

Within a fortnight?

Alb. What 's the matter, sir?

Lear. I 'll tell thee;—Life and death! I am asham'd

That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus:

That these hot tears, which break from me perforce,
 Should make thee worth them.—Blasts and fogs upon thee!

The untented woundings of a father's curse

Pierce every sense about thee! Old fond eyes,

Bewep this cause again I 'll pluck ye out;

And cast you, with the waters that you lose,

To temper clay.—Ha! Let it be so:—

I have another daughter,

Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable;

When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails

She 'll flay thy wolfish visage. Thou shalt find

That I 'll resume the shape which thou dost think

I have cast off for ever.

[Exeunt LEAR, KENT, and Attendants.]

Gon. Do you mark that?

Alb. I cannot be so partial, Goneril,

To the great love I bear you,—

Gon. Pray you content.—What, Oswald, ho!

You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master.

[To the Fool.]

Fool. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear, tarry; take the fool with thee.

A fox when one has caught her,

And such a daughter,

Should sure to the slaughter,

If my cap would buy a halter;

So the fool follows after.

[Exit.]

Gon. This man hath had good counsel:—A hundred knights!

'T is politic, and safe, to let him keep

At point a hundred knights! Yes, that on every dream,

Each buz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,

He may enguard his dotage with their powers,

And hold our lives in mercy.—Oswald, I say!—

Alb. Well, you may fear too far.

Gon. Safer than trust too far.

Let me still take away the harms I fear,

Not fear still to be taken. I know his heart:

What he hath utter'd I have writ my sister;

If she sustain him and his hundred knights,

When I have show'd the unfitness—How now,

Oswald?

Enter Steward.

What, have you writ that letter to my sister?

Stew. Ay, madam.

Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse:

Inform her full of my particular fear;

And thereto add such reasons of your own,

As may compact it more. Get you gone;

And hasten your return. [Exit Stew.] No, no, my lord,

This milky gentleness, and course of yours,

Though I condemn it not, yet, under pardon,

You are much more attack'd for want of wisdom,

Than prais'd for harmful mildness.

Alb. How far your eyes may pierce I cannot tell:

Striving to better, oft we mar what 's well.

Gon. Nay, then,—

Alb. Well, well; the event.

[Exeunt.]

Corn. How now, my noble friend? since I came hither

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short
Which can pursue the offender. How dost, my lord?

Reg. What, did my father's godson seek your life!

Glo. O, lady, lady, shame would have it hid!

Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous knights
That tended upon my father?

Glo. I know not, madam: 't is too bad, too bad.—

Edm. Yes, madam, he was of that consort.

Reg. No marvel then though he were ill affected;

'T is they have put him on the old man's death,
To have th' expense and waste of his revenues.

I have this present evening from my sister
Been well inform'd of them; and with such cautions,
That if they come to sojourn at my house

Your needful counsel to our businesses,

Which craves the instant use.

Glo. I serve you, madam:

Your graces are right welcome. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Before Gloster's Castle.

Enter KENT and Steward, severally.

Stew. Good dawning to thee, friend: Art of this house?

Kent. Ay.

Stew. Where may we set our horses?

Kent. I' the mire.

Stew. Prithee, if thou lov'at me, tell me.

Kent. I love thee not.

Stew. Why, then I care not for thee.

Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Stew. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not.

<sup>a</sup> Bewray—reveal.

Kent Fellow, I know thee.

Stew. What dost thou know me for?

Kent. A knave; a rascal; an eater of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy worsted-stocking knave; a lily-liver'd, action-taking, whoreson, glass-gazing, superserviceable, finical rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave; one that wouldst be a bawd, in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pander, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch: one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou deny'st the least syllable of thy addition.<sup>a</sup>

Stew. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one that is neither known of thee, nor knows thee.

Kent. What a brazen-faced varlet art thou, to deny thou know'st me? Is it two days since I tripp'd up thy heels, and beat thee, before the king? Draw, you rogue: for, though it be night, yet the moon shines; I'll make a sop o' the moonshine of you, you whoreson cullionly barber-monger. Draw. [Drawing his sword.]

Stew. Away; I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw, you rascal: you come with letters against the king, and take vanity the puppet's part, against the royalty of her father: Draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks:—draw, you rascal: come your ways.

Stew. Help, ho! murder! help!

Kent. Strike, you slave; stand, rogue; stand, you neat slave; strike. [Beating him.]

Stew. Help, ho! murder! murder!

Enter EDMUND, CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOSTER, and Servants.

Edm. How now! What's the matter? Part.

Kent. With you, goodman boy, if you please; come, I'll flesh you; come on, young master.

Glo. Weapons! arms! What's the matter here?

Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives; He dies that strikes again: What is the matter?

Reg. The messengers from our sister and the king.

Corn. What is your difference? speak.

Stew. I am scarce in breath, my lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have so bestir'd your valour. You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee; a tailor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make a man?

Kent. A tailor, sir, a stone-cutter, or a painter, could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours at the trade.

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Stew. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have spar'd,

At suit of his grey beard,—

Kent. Thou whoreson zed! thou unnecessary letter!—My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him.—Spare my grey beard, you wagtail?

Corn. Peace, sirrah!

You beastly knave, know you no reverence?

Kent. Yes, sir; but anger hath a privilege.

Corn. Why art thou angry?

Kent. That such a slave as this should wear a sword,

Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these, Like rats, oft bite the holy cords atwain

Which are too intrinsic<sup>b</sup> t' unloose: smooth every passion

That in the natures of their lords rebels;

Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods;

<sup>a</sup> The description of an individual in a legal document is called his addition.

With every gale and vary of their masters, Knowing nought, like dogs, but following.— A plague upon your epileptic visage!

Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool!

Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain,

I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot.

Corn. What, art thou mad, old fellow!

Glo. How fell you out?

Say that.

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy, Than I and such a knave.

Corn. Why dost thou call him knave? What's fault?

Kent. His countenance likes me not.

Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, or his, hers.

Kent. Sir, 't is my occupation to be plain; I have seen better faces in my time, Than stands on any shoulder that I see Before me at this instant.

Corn. This is some fellow, Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect A saucy roughness; and constrains the garb Quite from his nature: He cannot flatter, he!— An honest mind and plain,—he must speak truth: An they will take it, so; if not, he's plain. These kind of knaves I know, which in this plain Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends, Than twenty silly ducking observants, That stretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good faith, in sincere verity, Under the allowance of your great aspect, Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire On flickering Phœbus' front,—

Corn. What mean'st by this?

Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you esteem so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer; that beguiled you, in a plain accent, was plain language, which, for my part, I will not be, though I should your displeasure to entreat me to it.

Corn. What was the offence you gave him?

Stew. I never gave him any.

It pleas'd the king his master, very late, To strike at me, upon his misconstruction; When he, compact,<sup>c</sup> and flattering his displeasure, Tripp'd me behind: being down, insulted, rail'd, And put upon him such a deal of man, That worthy'd him, got praises of the king For him attempting who was self-subdu'd; And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit, Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of these rogues and rascals But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks!

You stubborn ancient knave, you reverent leech! We'll teach you—

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn:

Call not your stocks for me: I serve the king;

On whose employment I was sent to you:

You shall do small respects, show too bold malice

Against the grace and person of my master,

Stocking his messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks!

As I have life and honour, there shall he sit till noon.

Reg. Till noon! till night, my lord; and all night too.

Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's I should not use me so.

<sup>b</sup> Halcyon beak. The halcyon is the kingfisher; it was a popular opinion that the bird, if kept up, would by the turning of its beak the point from which the wind

SCENE IV.—Before Gloster's Castle.

Enter LEAR, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'T is strange, that they should so depart from home,
And not send back my messenger.

Gent. As I learn'd,
The night before there was no purpose in them
Of this remove.

Kent. Hail to thee, noble master!

Lear. Ha!
Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?

Kent. No, my lord.

Fool. Ha, ha; he wears cruel garters! Horses are tied by the heads; dogs and bears by the neck; monkeys by the loins; and men by the legs: when a man is over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.*

Lear. What's he that hath so much thy place mistook
To set thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she,
Your son and daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No, I say.

Kent. I say, yea.

Lear. No, no; they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have.

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.

Lear. They durst not do 't;

They could not, would not do 't; 't is worse than
murder,

To do upon respect such violent outrage:
Resolve me, with all modest haste, which way
Thou mightst deserve, or they impose, this usage,
Coming from us.

Kent. My lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness' letters to them,
Ere I was risen from the place that show'd
My duty kneeling, came there a reeking post,
Stew'd in his haste, half breathless, panting forth
From Goneril his mistress, salutations;
Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission,
Which presently they read: on those contents
They summon'd up their meiny,<sup>b</sup> straight took horse;
Commanded me to follow, and attend
The leisure of their answer; gave me cold looks:
And meeting here the other messenger,
Whose welcome, I perceiv'd, had poison'd mine,
(Being the very fellow which of late Display'd so saucily against your highness,)
Having more man than wit about me, drew;<sup>c</sup>
He rais'd the house with loud and coward cries:
Your son and daughter found this trespass worth
The shame which here it suffers.

Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild geese fly that way.

Fathers that wear rags do make their children blind;
But fathers that bear bags shall see their children kind.
Fortune, that arrant whore, ne'er turns the key to the poor.—

But, for all this, thou shalt have as many dolours<sup>d</sup> for thy daughters, as thou canst tell in a year.

Lear. O, how this mother swells up toward my heart!
Hysterica passio!—down, thou climbing sorrow,
Thy element's below!—where is this daughter?

* Nether-stocks—stockings.

<sup>d</sup> Dolours. There is a quibble here between dolours and dollars.

Kent. With the earl, sir, here within.

Lear. Follow me not: Stay here. Exit.

Gent. Made you no more offence but what you speak of?

Kent. None.

How chance the king comes with so small a number?

Fool. An thou hadst been set i' the stocks for that question, thou hadst well deserved it.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labouring in the winter. All that follow their noses are led by their eyes, but blind men; and there's not a nose among twenty but can smell him that's stinking. Let us try both, when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following; but the great one that goes up will let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again: I would have none but slaves follow it, since a fool gives it.

That, sir, which serves and seeks for gain,

And follows but for form,

Will pack, when it begins to rain,

And leave thee in the storm.

But I will tarry; the fool will stay,

And let the wise man fly:

The knave turns fool that runs away;

The fool no knave, perdy.

Kent. Where learn'd you this, fool?

Fool. Not i' the stocks, fool.

Re-enter LEAR, with GLOSTER.

Lear. Deny to speak with me? They are sick? they are weary?

They have travell'd all the night? Mere fetches;

The images of revolt and flying off!

Fetch me a better answer.

Glo. My dear lord, You know the fiery quality of the duke; How unremovable and fix'd he is In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!—

Fiery? what quality? why, Gloster, Gloster,

I'd speak with the duke of Cornwall and his wife.

Glo. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so.

Lear. Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me, man?

Glo. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall; the dear father

Would with his daughter speak, commands, tends, service:

Are they inform'd of this?—My breath and blood!—

Fiery! the fiery duke!—Tell the hot duke, that—

No, but not yet:—may be, he is not well:

Infirmity doth still neglect all office,

Whereto our health is bound; we are not ourselves,

When nature, being oppress'd, commands the mind

To suffer with the body: I'll forbear;

And am fallen out with my more headier will,

In my corrupted blood. But I 'll not chide thee;
Let shame come when it will, I do not call it:
I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove:
Mend, when thou canst; be better, at thy leisure:
I can be patient; I can stay with Regan,
I, and my hundred knights.

Reg. Not altogether so;

I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided
For your fit welcome: Give ear, sir, to my sister;
For those that mingle reason with your passion,
Must be content to think you old, and so—
But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken?

Reg. I dare avouch it, sir: What, fifty followers?
Is it not well? What should you need of more?
Yea, or so many? sith that both charge and danger
Speak 'gainst so great a number? How, in one house,
Should many people, under two commands,
Hold amity? 'T is hard; almost impossible.

Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance

From those that she calls servants, or from mine?

Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chanc'd to slack you,

We could control them: If you will come to me,
(For now I spy a danger,) I entreat you
To bring but five-and-twenty; to no more
Will I give place, or notice.

Lear. I gave you all—

Reg. And in good time you gave it.

Lear. Made you my guardians, my depositaries;
But kept a reservation to be follow'd
With such a number: What, must I come to you
With five-and-twenty, Regan? said you so?

Reg. And speak 't again, my lord; no more with me.

Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look wellfavour'd!

When others are more wicked, not being the worst Stands in some rank of praise:—I 'll go with thee;

[To GONERIL.

Thy fifty yet doth double five-and-twenty,
And thou art twice her love.

Gon. Hear me, my lord;

What need you five-and-twenty, ten, or five,
To follow in a house, where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?

Reg. What need one?

Lear. O, reason not the need: our basest beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous:
Allow not nature more than nature needs,
Man's life is cheap as beast's: thou art a lady;
If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,
Which scarcely keeps thee warm.—But, for true need,—
You heavens, give me that patience, patience I need!
You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age; wretched in both!
If it be you that stir these daughters' hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much
To bear it tamely; touch me with noble anger!
And let not women's weapons, water-drops,
Stain my man's cheeks!—No, you unnatural hags,
I will have such revenges on you both,
That all the world shall—I will do such things—
What they are yet I know not; but they shall be
The terrors of the earth. You think I 'll weep;
No, I 'll not weep:—
I have full cause of weeping; but this heart
Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws,<sup>a</sup>
Or ere I 'll weep:—O, fool, I shall go mad!

[Exit LEAR, GONERIL, REGAN, and FOOL.

<sup>a</sup> Flaw. Douce conjectures that flaw might signify a fragment in Shakspeare's time, as well as a crack.

Corn. Let us withdraw, 't will be a storm.

And must needs taste his folly.

But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purpos'd.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Heath.

A storm is heard, with thunder and lightning.

Enter KENT and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who 's there, besides foul weather?

Gent. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.

Kent. I know you. Where 's the king?

Gent. Contending with the fretful elements;
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main,<sup>b</sup>
Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of:
Strives in his little world of man to out-scorn
The to-and-fro conflicting wind and rain.
This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch,
The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?

Gent. None but the fool; who labours to out-jest
His heart-strook injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you;
And dare, upon the warrant of my note,<sup>c</sup>
Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,
Although as yet the face of it be cover'd
With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall;
Who have (as who have not, that their great stars Thron'd and set high?) servants, who seem no less;
Which are to France the spies and speculations
Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen,
Either in snuffs<sup>d</sup> and packings<sup>e</sup> of the dukes;
Or the hard rein which both of them have borne
Against the old kind king; or something deeper,
Whereof, perchance, these are but furnishings;
But, true it is, from France there comes a power
Into this scatter'd kingdom; who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret feet
In some of our best ports, and are at point
To show their open banner.—Now to you:
If on my credit you dare build so far
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find
Some that will thank you, making just report
Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.
I am a gentleman of blood and breeding;
And, from some knowledge and assurance, offer
This office to you.

<sup>a</sup> Hath put himself. The personal pronoun he is understood.

<sup>e</sup> packings—intrigues.

Gent. I will talk further with you.

Kent. No, d

For confirmation that I am much more
Than my out wall, open this purse, and tal
What it contains: If you shall see Cordel
(As fear not but you shall,) show her this
And she will tell you who that fellow is That yet you do not know. Fye on this
I will go seek the king.

Gent. Give me your hand: Have you say?

Kent. Few words, but to effect more the
That, when we have found the king, (in wh
That way: I 'll this:) he that first lights
Holla the other. [Exit

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Storm continues.

Enter LEAR and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your blow!

You cataracts and hurricanoes, spout
Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown
You sulphurous and thought-executing fire
Vaunt couriers of oak-cleaving thunder-bolt
Singe my white head! And thou, all-shak
Strike flat the thick rotundity o' the world
Crack nature's moulds, all germs<sup>a</sup> spill
That make ingrateful man!

Fool. O nuncle, court holy-water in a SCENE III.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter GLOSTER and EDMUND.

Glo. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing: When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, or any way sustain him.

Edm. Most savage and unnatural!

Glo. Go to; say you nothing: There is division between the dukes; and a worse matter than that: I have received a letter this night;—'t is dangerous to be spoken;—I have lock'd the letter in my closer: these injuries the king now bears will be revenged home; there is part of a power already footed: we must incline to the king. I will look him, and privily relieve him: go you, and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived: If he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king my old master must be relieved. There is strange things toward, Edmund; pray you, be careful. [Exit.

Edm. This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the duke Instantly know; and of that letter too:—
This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me
That which my father loses; no less than all:
The younger rises, when the old doth fall. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Part of the Heath, with a Hovel.

Enter LEAR, KENT, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord,
enter:
The tyranny of the open night 's too rough
For nature to endure. [Storm still.

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Wilt break my heart?

Kent. I 'd rather break mine own: Good my lord,
enter.

Lear. Thou think'st 't is much, that this contentious storm
Invades us to the skin: so 't is to thee;
But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou 'dst shun a bear,
But if thy flight lay toward the roaring sea,
Thou 'dst meet the bear i' the mouth. When the mind 's free

The body 's delicate: the tempest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else,
Save what beats there.—Ffilial ingratitude!
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand,
For lifting food to 't?—But I will punish home:—
No, I will weep no more.—In such a night
To shut me out!—Pour on: I will endure:—
In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!—
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave all,— O, that way madness lies; let me shun that;
No more of that,—

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Prithce, go in thyself; seek thine own ease;
This tempest will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more.—But I 'll go in:
In, boy; go first.—[To the Fool.] You houseless poverty,—

Nay, get thee in. I 'll pray, and then I 'll sleep.— [Fool goes in.

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads, and unfed sides,
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you
From seasons such as these? O, I have ta'en

Too little care of this! Take physic, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel;
That thou mayst shake the superflux to them,
And show the heavens more just.

Edg. [Within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half!
Poor Tom! [The Fool runs out from the house.]

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit.
Help me, help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand.—Who's there?

Fool. A spirit, a spirit; he says his name's poor Tom.

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there in the straw?
Come forth.

Enter EDGAR, disguised as a madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!—
Through the sharp hawthorn blow the winds.—
Humph! go to thy bed and warm thee.

Lear. Didst thou give all to thy daughters?
And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives any thing to Poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ford and whirlpool, o'er bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inched bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor:—Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold.—O, do de, do de, do de.—Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking!<sup>a</sup> Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes: There could I have him now,—and there,—and there again, and there. [Storm continues.]

Lear. Have his daughters brought him to this pass?—
Couldst thou save nothing? Wouldst thou give them all?

Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed.

Lear. Now, all the plagues that in the pendulous air
Hang fated o'er men's faults, light on thy daughters!

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued nature
To such a lowness, but his unkind daughters.—
Is it the fashion that discarded fathers
Should have thus little mercy on their flesh?
Judicious punishment! 't was this flesh begot
Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on pillicock-hill;—
Halloo, halloo, loo, loo!
Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' the foul fiend: Obey thy parents;
keep thy word's justice; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array: Tom's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving man,<sup>b</sup> proud in heart and mind; that curled my hair, wore gloves in my cap, served the lust of my mistress's heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: one, that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it: Wine loved I dearly; dice dearly; and in woman out-paramoured the Turk: False of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes, nor the rustling of silks, betray thy poor heart to woman: Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy per from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend.—

<sup>b</sup> A serving man. This is not a menial, but a servant in the sense in which it is used in the 'Two Gentlemen of Verona':—

"Too low a mistress for so high a servant."

Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind, sum, mun, nonny, dolphin my boy, boy, S him trot by. [Storm still.]

Lear. Thou wert better in a grave, than with thy uncovered body this extremity of the man no more than this? Consider him well: 'Tis the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep the cat no perfume:—Ha! here's three of us ticated!—Thou art the thing itself: unaccustomed man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked as thou art.—Off, off, you lendings:—Come; here.— [Tearing off his clothes.]

Fool. Prithee, nuncle, be contented; 't is a night to swim in.—Now a little fire in a wild like an old lecher's heart,—a small spark, all of his body cold.—Look, here comes a walking

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet: at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he has a great web and the pin,<sup>b</sup> squints the eye, and makes the lip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the pure of earth.

Switthold footed thrice the old;<sup>c</sup>

Kent. How fares your grace?

Enter GLOSTER, with a torch.

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is 't you seek?

Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend cow-dung for sallets; swallows the old rat, ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the slaw who is whipped from tything to tything, and punished, and imprisoned; who hath had the his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, pon to wear:

But mice, and rats, and such small deer,
Have been Tom's food for seven long years.
Beware my follower:—Peace, Smolkin; part fiend!

Glo. What, hath your grace no better company?
Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman. Mudo he's call'd, and Mahu.

Glo. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown
That it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glo. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer
To obey in all your daughters' hard commands.
Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you,
Yet have I ventur'd to come seek you out,
And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

<sup>a</sup> Sesey. The quartos read cessa. It is probably word as cessa, which is used by Christopher Sly in the of the Shrew. The whole of this passage is probably be unintelligible.

Kent. All the power of his wits has given way to his impatience:—The gods reward your kindness!

[Exit GLOSTER]

Enter LEAR, EDGAR, and Fool.*

Edg. Frateretto calls me; and tells me, Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Prithee, nuncle, tell me, whether a madman be a gentleman, or a yeoman?

Lear. A king, a king!

Fool. No; he's a yeoman, that has a gentleman to his son; for he's a mad yeoman that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits
 Come bisping in upon them:—

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath.

Lear. It shall be done, I will arraign them straight:—
 Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer;—

[To EDGAR.]

Thou sapient sir, sit here. [To the Fool.—Now, ye she foxes!—

Edg. Look where she stands and glares!—

Wantonest thou eyes at trial, madam?

Come o'er the bourn, Bessy, to me:—

Fool. Her boat hath a leak,

And she must not speak

Why she dares not come over to thee.

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hopdance cries in Tom's belly for two white herrings. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz'd:
 Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?

Lear. I'll see their trial first:—Bring in the evidence.—
 Thou robed man of justice, take thy place;— [To EDG.
 And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity, [To the Fool.
 Bench by his side:—You are of the commission,

Sit you too. [To KENT.]

Edg. Let us deal justly.

Sleepest or wakest thou jolly shepherd?

Thy sheep be in the corn;

And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,

Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Pur! the cat is grey.

Lear. Arraign her first; 't is Generil. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress. Is your name Generil?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.

Lear. And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim

What store her heart is made of.—Stop her there!

Arms, arms, sword, fire!—Corruption in the place!

False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape?

Edg. Bless thy five wits!

Kent. O pity!—Sir, where is the patience now,

That you so oft have boasted to retain?

Edg. My tears begin to take his part so much,

They'll mar my counterfeiting. [Aside.]

Lear. The little dogs and all,

Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me.

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them:—Avaunt, you curs!

Be thy mouth or black or white,

Tooth that poisons if it bite;

* We print the direction for the entrances of the characters as in the folio. In the modern editions they are all brought in when the scene opens.

Mastiff, grey-hound, mongrel grim,
Hound or spaniel, brach<sup>a</sup> or lym;<sup>b</sup>
Or bobtail tike,<sup>c</sup> or trundle-tail;
Tom will make him weep and wail:
For, with throwing thus my head,
Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.

No de, de de. Sese. Come, march to wakes and fairs, and market-towns:—Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.

Lear. Then let them anatomize Regan; see what breeds about her heart: Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts?—You, sir, I entertain for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments: you will say they are Persian; but let them be changed. [To EDGAR.]

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here, and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains: So, so: We'll go to supper i' the morning.

Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.

Re-enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Come hither, friend: Where is the king my master?

Kent. Here, sir; but trouble him not, his wits are gone.

Glo. Good friend, I prithee take him in thy arms;
I have o'erheard a plot of death upon him:
There is a litter ready; lay him in 't,
And drive toward Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet
Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master;
If thou shouldst dally half an hour, his life,
With thine, and all that offer to defend him,
Stand in assured loss: Take up, take up;
And follow me, that will to some provision
Give thee quit conduct.

Kent. Oppressed nature sleeps:—
This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken senses,
Which, if convenience will not allow,
Stand in hard cure.—Come, help to bear thy master;
Thou must not stay behind. [To the Fool.]

Glo. Come, come away.

[Exit KENT, GLOSTER, and the Fool, bearing off
the KING.]

Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes,
We scarcely think our miseries our foes.
Who alone suffers, suffers most i' the mind;
Leaving free things, and happy shows, behind:
But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erskip
When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.
How light and portable my pain seems now,
When that, which makes me bend, makes the king bow;
He childed, as I father'd!—Tom away:
Mark the high noises: and thyself bewray,
When false opinion, whose wrong thoughts defile thee,
In thy just proof, repeals, and reconciles thee.
What will hap more to-night, safe scape the king!
Lurk, lurk. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GONERIL, EDMUND, and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my lord your nusband; show him this letter:—the army of France is landed:—Seek out the traitor Gloster. [Exit some of the Servants.]

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure.—Edmund, keep you our sister company; the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for ligent. Farewell, dear sister;—farewell, Gloster.

Enter Steward.

How now? Where's the king?

Stew. My lord of Gloster hath convey'd
Some five or six-and-thirty of his knights,
Hot questrists after him, met him at gate
Who, with some other of the lord's dependants Are gone with him toward Dover; where
To have well-armed friends.

Corn. Get horses for

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

[Exit GONERIL.]

Corn. Edmund, farewell.—Go, see
Gloster,

Pinion him like a thief, bring him before me. [Exit.]

Though well we may not pass upon his life
Without the form of justice, yet our power Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which May blame, but not control. Who's the traitor?

Re-enter Servants, with GLOSTER.

Reg. Ingrateful fox! 't is he.

Corn. Bind fast his corky arms.

Glo. What mean your graces?—Go and consider

You are my guests: do me no foul play,

Corn. Bind him, I say. [Servants.]

Reg. Hard, hard:—O

Glo. Unmerciful lady as you are, I'm Corn. To this chair bind him:—Will you find— [REGAN enters.]

Glo. By the kind gods, 't is most ignorant to pluck me by the beard.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor!

Glo. Na

These hairs, which thou dost ravish from me, will quicken, and accuse thee: I am yet
With robbers' hands, my hospitable favours You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you from France?

Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know your confederacy have traitors

Late footed in the kingdom?

Reg. To whose hands have you sent the letters?

Speak.

Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down
Which came from one that's of a neutral
And not from one oppos'd.

Corn. Cunning.

Reg. And

Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?

Glo. To Dover.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover? Was't thou in peril—

Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer.

Glo. I am tied to the stake, and I must hold.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Glo. Because I would not see thy cruel
Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce
In his anointed flesh stick boarish fangs.
The sea, with such a storm as his bare head
In hell-black night endur'd, would have
And quench'd the stelled fires: yet, poor soul,
He hop'd the heavens to rain.
If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that storm

How now, you dog?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature,
 To quit this horrid act.

Reg. Out, treacherous villain!
 Thou call'st on him that hates thee: it was he
 That made the overture of thy treasons to us;
 Who is too good to pity thee.

Glo. O my follies!
 Then Edgar was abus'd.—
 Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him!

Reg. Go, thrust him out at gates, and let him smell
 His way to Dover.—How 'st, my lord? How look
 you?

Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt:—Follow me, lady.—
 Turn out that eyeless villain;—throw this slave
 Upon the dunghill.—Regan, I bleed apace:
 Untimely comes this hurt: Give me your arm.

[*Exit CORNWALL, led by REGAN;—Servants unbind
 GLOSTER, and lead him out.*]

1 Serv. I'll never care what wickedness I do,
 If this man come to good.

2 Serv. If she live long,
 And, in the end, meet the old course of death,
 Women will all turn monsters.

1 Serv. Let's follow the old earl, and get the Bedlam
 To lead him where he would; his roguish madness
 Allows itself to anything.

2 Serv. Go thou; I'll fetch some flax, and whites of eggs,
 To apply to his bleeding face. Now, heaven help him! [Exeunt severally.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—An open country.

Enter EDGAR.

better thus, and known to be contemn'd, stemn'd and flatter'd. To be worst,
 at most dejected thing of fortune, s'esperance, lives not in fear:
 ble change is from the best;
 urns to laughter. Welcome, then, antial air that I embrace!
 hat thou hast blown unto the worst to thy blasts.—But who comes here?

Enter GLOSTER, led by an Old Man.

orly led? World, world, O world!
 strange mutations make us hate thee,
 at yield to age.
 O my good lord, I have been your tenant,
 er's tenant, these fourscore years.
 get thee away; good friend, be gone;
 can do me no good at all, y hurt.

You cannot see your way.
 e no way, and therefore want no eyes;
 hen I saw: Full oft 't is seen cure us; * and our mere defects omodities. O, dear son Edgar, y abused father's wrath!
 ive to see thee in my touch,
 l eyes again!

How now? Who's there?
 e.] O gods! who is 't can say, "I am at worst?"
 an e'er I was.

scene st. We believe that means is here used non sense of resources, powers, capacities. The we possess, are our securities, and further, our ve advantages.

Old Man. 'T is poor mad Tom.

Edg. [Aside.] And worse I may be yet: The worst is not

So long as we can say, "This is the worst."

Old Man. Fellow, where goest?

Glo. Is it a beggar-man?

Old Man. Madman and beggar too.

Glo. He has some reason, else he could not beg.

I' the last night's storm I such a fellow saw,
 Which made me think a man a worm; my son
 Came then into my mind: and yet my mind
 Was then scarce friends with him: I have heard more since:

As flies to wanton boys are we to the gods;
 They kill us for their sport.

Edg. How should this be?

Bad is the trade that must play fool to sorrow,
 Ang'ring itself and others. [Aside.]—Bless thee,
 master!

Glo. Is that the naked fellow?

Old Man. Ay, my lord.

Glo. Get thee away: If, for my sake,
 Thou wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain,
 I' the way toward Dover, do it for ancient love;
 And bring some covering for this naked soul,
 Which I'll entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, sir, he's mad.

Glo. 'T is the times' plague, when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure;
 Above the rest, be gone.

Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parel that I have,
 Come on 't what will. [Exit.]

Glo. Sirrah, naked fellow.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.—I cannot daub it further
 [Aside.]

Glo. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. [Aside.] And yet I must.—Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover?

Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and footpath. Poor Tom hath been scared out of his good wits: Bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once; of lust, as Obidicut; Hobbididence, prince of dumbness; Mahu, of stealing; Modo, of murder; Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing; who since possesses chamber-maids and waiting-women. So, bless thee, master!

Glo. Here, take this purse, you whom the heaven's plagues

Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched, Makes thee the happier:—Heavens, deal so still! Let the superfluous and lust-dieted man, That slaves your ordinance, that will not see Because he does not feel, feel your power quickly; So distribution should undo excess, And each man have enough.—Dost thou know Dover?

Edg. Ay, master.

Glo. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head Looks fearfully in the confined deep: Bring me but to the very brim of it, And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear With something rich about me: from that place I shall no leading need.

Edg. Give me thy arm. Poor Tom shall lead thee. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Before the Duke of Albany's Palace.

Enter GONERIL and EDMUND; Steward meeting them.

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel, our mild husband

Not met us on the way:—Now, where's your master?

Stew. Madam, within; but never man so chang'd: I told him of the army that was landed; He smil'd at it: I told him, you were coming; His answer was, "The worse:" of Gloucester's treachery, And of the loyal service of his son, When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot; And told me, I had turn'd the wrong side out:—What most he should dislike seems pleasant to him; What like, offensive.

Gon. Then shall you go no further. [To EDMUND. It is the cowish terror of his bred, That dares not undertake: he'll not feel wrongs, Which tie him to an answer: Our wishes, on the way, May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother; Hasten his musters, and conduct his powers: I must change names at home, and give the distaff Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to hear, If you dare venture in your own behalf, A mistress's command. Wear this; spare speech;

[Giving a favour.] Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak, Would stretch thy spirits up into the air;—Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloucester! [Exit EDMUND.] O, the difference of man and man! To thee a woman's services are due; My fool usurps my body.

Stew. Madam, here comes my lord. [Exit Stew.]

Enter ALBANY.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.

Alb. O Goneril! You are not worth the dust which the rude wind Blows in your face.—I fear your disposition: That nature, which contemns its origin, Should not be border'd certain in itself;

She that herself will sliver and disbranch From her material sap, perforce must wither, And come to deadly use.

Gon. No more; the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem Filth's savour but themselves. What have you Tigress, not daughters, what have you perform'd A father, and a gracious aged man, Whose reverence even the head-logg'd bear lick,

Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you Could my good brother suffer you to do it? A man, a prince, by him so benefited?

If that the heavens do not their visible spirits Send quickly down to tame these vile offences 'T will come:

Humanity must perforce prey on itself, Like monsters of the deep.

Gon. Milk-liver'd man!

That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know'st Fools do those villains pity, who are punish'd Ere they have done their mischief. Where's the France spreads his banners in our noiseless land With plumed helm thy slayer begins threats. Whilst thou, a moral fool, sitt'st still, and cry'st "Alack! why does he so?"

Alb. See thyself, devil! Proper deformity seems not in the fiend So horrid as in woman.

Gon. O vain fool!

Alb. Thou chang'd and self-cover'd thing, Be-monster not thy feature. Were it my fit To let these hands obey my blood, They are apt enough to dislocate and tear Thy flesh and bones:—How'er thou art a fiend A woman's shape doth shield thee.

Gon. Marry, your manhood now!—

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news?

Mess. O, my good lord, the duke of Cornwall Slain by his servant, going to put out The other eye of Gloucester.

Alb. Gloucester's eyes!

Mess. A servant that he bred, thril'd with Oppos'd against the act, bending his sword To his great master; who, threat'ning enrag'd, Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him: But not without that harmful stroke which hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you are You justicers, that these our nether crimes So speedily can venge!—but, O, poor Gloucester! Lost he his other eye?

Mess. Both, both, my lord.— This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer: 'T is from your sister.

Gon. [Aside.] One way I like this well; But being widow, and my Gloucester with her, May all the building in my fancy pluck Upon my hateful life: Another way, The news is not so tart.—I'll read, and answer.

Alb. Where was his son, when they did take

Mess. Come with my lady hither.

Alb. He is not

Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?

Mess. Ay, my good lord; 't was he inform'd

him;

And quit the house on purpose, that their passions

Might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloucester, I live

for the love thou show'st the king,
 Ope thine eyes.—Come hither, friend;
 I know more thou know'st. [Exeunt.]

III.—The French Camp, near Dover.

Enter KENT and a Gentleman.

Why the king of France is so suddenly gone from the reason?
 Nothing he left imperfect in the state, which might have been thought of; which imports to us so much fear and danger, that his personal presence was most required, and necessary.

How hath he left behind him general?
 The Mareschal of France, Monsieur Le Far.
 Did your letters pierce the queen to any degree of grief?
 Yes, sir, she took them, read them in my presence;

And then an ample tear trill'd down her cheek; it seem'd she was a queen in passion; who, most rebel-like,
 Had kiss'd her king o'er her.

O, then it mov'd her.
 She fell to a rage; patience and sorrow strove within her to express her goodliest. You have seen her rain at once: her smiles and tears were in her cheek: Those happy smilets, that on her ripe lip, seem'd not to know sorrow, were in her eyes; which parted thence, like diamonds dropp'd.—In brief, sorrow rarify'd most belov'd, if all come it.

Made she no verbal question?
 Yes, once, or twice, she heav'd the name of her father.
 And with it, as if it press'd her heart;
 Her sisters!—shame of ladies! sisters!
 O sisters! What? if the storm? if the night?
 To be believ'd!—There she shook her head from her heavenly eyes,
 Her cheeks moisten'd:—then away she started with a grief alone.

It is the stars,
 They govern us, govern our conditions;
 Our mate and mate could not beget our issues. You spoke not with her since?
 No, since.

Well, sir: The poor distress'd Lear is it?
 Yes, sir.
 Yes, in his better tune, remembers how to come about, and by no means to see his daughter.

Why, good sir?
 The sovereign shame so elbows him: his own unkindness,
 That he has from his benediction, turn'd her into a casualty, gave her dear rights to his started daughters,—these things sting him so venomously, that burning shame has almost kill'd him from Cordelia.

Alack, poor gentleman!
 Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard of?

Yes, sir; they are afoot.
 Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master, Lear, who will attend him: some dear cause will be his treatment wrap me up awhile;
 I am known a right, you shall not grieve me in this acquaintance. I pray you, go on. [Exeunt.]

* Dear cause—important business.

SCENE IV.—The same. A Tent.

Enter CORDELIA, Physician, and Soldiers.

Cor. Alack, 't is he; why he was met even now
 As mad as the vex'd sea: singing aloud;
 Crown'd with rank fumiter, and furrow weeds,
 With barlocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers,
 Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
 In our sustaining corn.—A century send forth;
 Search every acre in the high-grown field,
 And bring him to our eye. What can man's wisdom

In the restoring his bereaved sense?
 He that helps him, take all my outward worth.
 Phy. There is means, madam:
 Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
 The which he lacks; that to provoke in him,
 Are many simples operative, whose power
 Will close the eye of anguish. [Exit an Officer]

Cor. All bless'd secrets,
 All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth,
 Spring with my tears! be aidant, and mediate,
 In the good man's distress!—Seek, seek for him;
 Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life
 That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. News, madam:
 The British powers are marching hitherward.
 Cor. 'T is known before; our preparation stands
 In expectation of them.—O dear father,
 It is thy business that I go about;
 Therefore great France
 My mourning, and important tears, hath pitied.
 No blown ambition doth our arms incite,
 But love, dear love, and our aged father's right:
 Soon may I hear and see him! [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Room in Gloucester's Castle.

Enter REGAN and Steward.

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth?
 Stew. Ay, madam.
 Reg. Himself
 In person there?
 Stew. Madam, with much ado:
 Your sister is the better soldier.
 Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home?
 Stew. No, madam.
 Reg. What might import my sister's letter to him?
 Stew. I know not, lady.
 Reg. Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.

It was great ignorance, Gloucester's eyes being out,
 To let him live; where he arrives he moves
 All hearts against us; Edmund, I think, is gone,
 In pity of his misery, to despatch
 His nighted life; moreover, to decry
 The strength o' the enemy.

Stew. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.

Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow; stay with us;
 The ways are dangerous.

Stew. I may not, madam;
 My lady charg'd my duty in this business.

Reg. Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you

Transport her purposes by words? Belike,
 Something—I know not what:—I'll love thee much,
 Let me unseal the letter.

Stew. Madam, I had rather—
 Reg. I know your lady does not love her husband;
 I am sure of that: and, at her late being here,
 She gave strange mihiads, and most speaking looks
 To noble Edmund: I know you are of her bosom.

Stevo. I, madam?

Reg. I speak in understanding; you are, I know it: Therefore, I do advise you, take this note: My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd; And more convenient is he for my hand, Than for your lady's:—You may gather more. If you do find him, pray you, give him this; And when your mistress hears thus much from you, I pray, desire her call her wisdom to her. So fare you well. If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor, Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.

Stevo. 'Would I could meet him, madam! I would show
What party I do follow.

Reg. Fare thee well. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The country near Dover.

Enter GLOSTER, and EDGAR dressed like a peasant.

Glo. When shall we come to the top of that same hill?

Edg. You do climb up it now: look how we labour.

Glo. Methinks, the ground is even.

Edg. Horrible steep:
Hark, do you hear the sea?

Glo. No, truly.

Edg. Why, then your other senses grow imperfect
By your eyes' anguish.

Glo. So may it be, indeed:
Methinks thy voice is alter'd; and thou speak'st
In better phrase, and matter, than thou didst.

Edg. You are much deceiv'd; in nothing am I chang'd,

But in my garments.

Glo. Methinks, you are better spoken.

Edg. Come on, sir; here 's the place!—stand still.—
How fearful

And dizzy 't is, to cast one's eyes so low!
The crows, and choughs, that wing the midway air,
Show scarce so gross as beetles: Half way down
Hangs one that gathers samphire; dreadful trade!
Methinks he seems no bigger than his head:
The fishermen, that walk upon the beach,
Appear like mice: and yon' tall anchoring bark,
Diminish'd to her cock; * her cock, a buoy
Almost too small for sight: the murmuring surge,
That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes,
Cannot be heard so high:—I 'll look no more;
Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
Topple down headlong.

Glo. Set me where you stand.

Edg. Give me your hand: you are now within a foot

Of the extreme verge: for all beneath the moon
Would I not leap upright.

Glo. Let go my hand.
Here, friend, is another purse; in it, a jewel
Well worth a poor man's taking: Fairies, and gods, Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off;
Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.

Edg. Now fare you well, good sir. [Seems to go.]

Glo. With all my heart.

Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his despair,
Is done to cure it.

Glo. O you mighty gods!
This world I do renounce; and, in your sights,
Shake patiently my great affliction off:
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrel with your great opposess wills,
My snuff, and loathed part of nature, should

Glo. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur? There thou mightst behold the great image of authority: a dog's obeyed in office.—

Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand!
Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back;
Thou hotly lust'st to use her in that kind
For which thou whipp'st her. The usurer hangs the cozener.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin with gold,
And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks;
Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw doth pierce it.
None does offend, none, I say, none; I'll able 'em:
Take that of me, my friend, who have the power
To seal the accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes;
And, like a scurvy politician, seem
To see the things thou dost not.—Now, now, now, now;
Pull off my boots:—harder, harder; so.

Edg. O, matter and impertinency mix'd!
Reason in madness!

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.
I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloucester;
Thou must be patient; we came crying hither.
Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the air,
We wawl, and cry:—I will preach to thee; mark.

Glo. Alack, alack the day!

Lear. When we are born, we cry, that we are come
To this great stage of fools;—This a good block!—<sup>a</sup>
It were a delicate stratagem, to shoe
A troop of horse with felt: I'll put it in proof;
And when I have stolen upon these sons-in-law,
Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.<sup>b</sup>

Enter a Gentleman, with Attendants.

Gent. O, here he is; lay hand upon him.—Sir,
Your most dear daughter—

Lear. No rescue? What, a prisoner? I am even
The natural fool of fortune.—Use me well;
You shall have ransom. Let me have surgeons,
I am cut to the brains.

Gent. You shall have anything.

Lear. No seconds? all myself?
Why, this would make a man, a man of salt,
To use his eyes for garden water-pots,
Ay, and for laying autumn's dust.

Gent. Good sir,—

Lear. I will die bravely, like a smug bridegroom;
What?

I will be jovial; come, come; I am a king,
My masters, know you that?

Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey you.

Lear. Then there 's life in 't. Come, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa.

[Exit running; Attendants follow.]

Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch;
Past speaking of in a king!—Thou hast a daughter,
Who redeems nature from the general curse
Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir.

Gent. Sir, speed you: What 's your will

Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?

Gent. Most sure, and vulgar: every one hears that,
Which can distinguish sound.

Edg. But, by your favour,
How near 's the other army?

<sup>a</sup> This a good block! Steevens conjectures that, when Lear says, "I will preach to thee," and begins his sermon, "When we are born, we cry," he takes his hat in his hand, and, turning it round, dislikes the fashion or shape of it, which was then called the block. He then starts off, by association with the tax, to the delicate stratagem of shoeing a troop of horse with felt.
<sup>b</sup> Kill was the ancient word of onset in the English army.

Gent. Near, and on speedy foot; the main descry Stands on the hourly thought.

Edg. I thank you, sir; that's all.

Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is here,
Her army is mov'd on.

Edg. I thank you, sir. [Exit Gent.]

Glo. You ever gentle gods, take my breath from me;
Let not my worse spirit tempt me again
To die before you please!

Edg. Well pray you, father.

Glo. Now, good sir, what are you?

Edg. A most poor man, made tame to fortune's blows;

Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows,
Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand,
I'll lead you to some bidding.

Glo. Hearty thanks:
The bounty and the benison of heaven
To boot, and boot!

Enter Steward.

Stew. A proclaim'd prize! Most happy!
That eyeless head of thine was first fram'd flesh
To raise my fortunes.—Thou old unhappy traitor,
Briefly thyself remember:—The sword is out
That must destroy thee.

Glo. Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough to it. [EDGAR opposes.]

Stew. Wherefore, bold peasant, Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor? Hence;
Lest that infection of his fortune take
Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

Edg. Ch'll not let go, zir, without vurther 'casion.

Stew. Let go, slave, or thou diest.

Edg. Good gentleman, go your gait, and let poor volk pass. And ch'ud ha' been zwagger'd out of my life, 't would not ha' been so long as 't is by a vortnight.
Nay, come not near th' old man; keep out, che vor ye, or ise try whether your costard or my ballow* be the harder: Ch'll be plain with you.

Stew. Out, dunghill!

Edg. Ch'll pick your teeth, zir: Come; no matter vor your foins. [They fight; and EDG. knocks him down.]

Stew. Slave, thou hast slain me:—Villain, take my purse;

If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body;
And give the letters, which thou find'st about me,
To Edmund earl of Gloster; seek him out
Upon the English party:—O, untimely death. [Dies.]

Edg. I know thee well: A serviceable villain;
As duteous to the vices of thy mistress,
As badness would desire.

Glo. What, is he dead?

Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you.—
Let's see these pockets: the letters that he speaks of,
May be my friends.—He is dead; I am only sorry
He had no other death's-man.—Let us see:—
Leave, gentle wax; and, manners, blame us not:
To know our enemies' minds, we'd rip their hearts;
Their papers, is more lawful.

[Reads.] "Let our reciprocal vows be remembered. You have many opportunities to cut him off: if you will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offered. There is nothing done, if he return the conqueror; then am I the prisoner, and his bed my gaol; from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your labour."

"Your (wife, so I would say) affectionate servant,
"GONERIL."

O undistinguish'd space of woman's will!—
A plot upon her virtuous husband's life;
And the exchange, my brother!—Here, in the sands,
Thee I'll rake up, the post unsanctified

* Ballow. Grose, in his 'Provincial Glossary,' gives ballow as a north-country word for pole. Edgar is speaking the Somerse dialect.

Of murderous lechers; and, in the mature time,
With this ungracious paper strike the sight
Of the death-tractis'd duke: For him 't is well,
That of thy death and business I can tell.

[Exit EDGAR, dragging out the Glo. The king is mad: How stiff is my vein
That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling
Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract:
So should my thoughts be sever'd from my grief,
And woes, by wrong imaginations lose
The knowledge of themselves.

Re-enter EDGAR.

Edg. Give me your hand
Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum.
Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend.

SCENE VII.—A Tent in the French Camp, on a Bed, asleep; Physician, Gentlemen, attending.

Enter CORDELIA and KENT.

Cor. O thou good Kent, how shall I live
To match thy goodness? My life will be less
And every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is a great
All my reports go with the modest truth;
Nor more, nor clipp'd, but so.

Cor. Be better suited.
These weeds are memories of those worse hours
I prithee put them off.

Kent. Pardon, dear madam:
Yet to be known shortens my made intent:
My boon I make it that you know me not,
Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be it so, my good lord. How King? [To the P.]

Phys. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods,
Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
The untun'd and jarring senses, O, wind up,
Of this child-changed father!

Phys. So please your
That we may wake the king? he hath slept long.

Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and I'll the sway of your own will. Is he array'd?

Gent. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of sleep
We put fresh garments on him.

Phys. Be by, good madam, when we do
him;
I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well.
Phys. Please you, draw near.—Loudly
there.

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration hang Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms, that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear
Cor. Had you not been their father, these who Had challeng'd pity of them. Was this a time
To be oppos'd against the jarring winds?
To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder
In the most terrible and nimble stroke Of quick, cross-lightning? to watch (poor per
With this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog,
Though he had bit me, should have stood that Against my fire. And wast thou fair, poor fi
To hovel thee with swine, and rogues forlorn,
In short and musty straw? Alack, alack!
'T is wonder, that thy life and wits at once
Had not concluded all.—He wakes; speak to Phys. Madam, do you; 't is fittest.

* Suited—clothed.

does my royal lord? How fares your sister?

do me wrong, to take me out o' the state:—
I am in bliss; but I am bound of fire, that mine own tears molten lead.

Sir, do you know me?
I am a spirit, I know: When did you die?
I am still, far wide!

I am scarce awake; let him alone awhile.
Do you have I been? Where am I?—Fair light?—

abus'd.—I should e'en die with pity, thus.—I know not what to say.—
These are my hands:—let 's see; prick. 'Would I were assur'd of my death.

O, look upon me, sir,
I have hand in benediction o'er me:—
I must not kneel.

Pray, do not mock me:
I am a foolish fond old man,
falling on my face;
upward; not an hour more nor less:—
I am mainly,

ignorant in my perfect mind.
I would know you, and know this man;
and know 's: for I am mainly ignorant of the world: and all the skill I have is in these garments; nor I know not what 's edge last night: Do not laugh at me;
I am a fool, I think this lady is Cordelia.

And so I am, I am.

Lear. Be your tears wet? Yes, faith. I pray, weep not
If you have poison for me I will drink it.

I know you do not love me; for your sisters
Have, as I do remember, done me wrong:
You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause

Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me.

Phys. Be comforted, good madam: the great rage,
You see, is kill'd in him: and yet it is danger
To make him even o'er the time he has lost.

Desire him to go in; trouble him no more,
Till further settling.

Cor. Will 't please your highness walk?

Lear. You must bear with me.
Pray you now, forget and forgive: I am old and foolish.

[Exeunt LEAR, COR., Phys., and Attendants.]

Gent. Holds it true, sir,

That the duke of Cornwall was so slain?

Kent. Most certain, sir.

Gent. Who is conductor of his people?

Kent. As 't is said,
The bastard son of Gloster.

Gent. They say, Edgar,
His banish'd son, is with the Earl of Kent
In Germany.

Kent. Report is changeable.

'T is time to look about; the powers o' the kingdom Approach apace.

Gent. The arbitrement is like to be bloody.

Fare you well, sir.

[Exit.]

Kent. My point and period will be thoroughly wrought, Or well, or ill, as this day's battle 's fought. [Exit.] of the duke if his last purpose hold;

I see, he is advis'd by aught of course: He 's full of alteration, and bring his constant pleasure.

[To an Officer, who goes out.]

My sister's man is certainly miscarried.
I am to be doubted, madam.

Now, sweet lord,
if goodness I intend upon you:
I am truly,—but then speak the truth,
and be my sister?

In honour'd love,
I have never found my brother's way to this place?

That thought abuses you.
I am doubtful that you have been conjunct with her, as far as we call hers.
I am by mine honour, madam.

I shall endure her: Dear my lord,
I am with her.

added by the modern editors. Malone says, "The line is, 'not an hour more nor less,' i.e., not an hour an indeterminate number, for such is fourteen." Why, who is speaking? One who speaks directly? No! one who immediately after is not in my perfect mind." It was the half-

Edm. Fear me not:—
She, and the duke her husband,—

Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, and Soldiers.

Gon. I had rather lose the battle than that sister
Should loosen him and me. [Aside.]

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be met.—
Sir, this I heard,—The king is come to his daughter,
With others, whom the rigour of our state
Forc'd to cry out. Where I could not be honest,
I never yet was valiant: for this business,
It toucheth us as France invades our land,
Not bolds the king; with others, whom, I fear,
Most just and heavy causes make oppose.

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason'd?
Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy:

For these domestic and particular broils
Are not the question here.

Alb. Let 's then determine with the ancient of war
On our proceeding.

Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you 'll go with us?

Gon. No.

Reg. 'T is most convenient; pray you go with us.

Gon. O, ho, I know the riddle: [Aside.] I will go.

As they are going out, enter EDGAR, disguised.

Edg. If e'er your grace had speech with man so poor,
Hear me one word.

Alb. I 'll overtake you.—Speak.

[*Exeunt EDMUND, REGAN, GONERIL, Officers,
Soldiers, and Attendants.*]

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter.
If you have victory, let the trumpet sound

For him that brought it: wretched though I seem,
I can produce a champion, that will prove
What is avouched there: if you miscarry,
Your business of the world hath so an end,
And machination ceases. Fortune love you!

Alb. Stay till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid it.

When time shall serve, let but the herald cry,

And I'll appear again. [Exit.]

Alb. Why, fare thee well; I will o'erlook thy paper.

Re-enter EDMUND.

Edm. The enemy's in view, draw up your powers.
Here is the guess of their true strength and forces
By diligent discovery:—but your haste
Is now urg'd on you.

Alb. We will greet the time. [Exit.]

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love;
Each jealous of the other, as the stung
Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take?
Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd,
If both remain alive: To take the widow,
Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril;
And hardly shall I carry out my side
Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll use
His countenance for the battle; which being done,
Let her who would be rid of him devise
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear and to Cordelia,
The battle done, and they within our power,
Shall never see his pardon: for my state
Stands on me to defend, not to debate. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Field between the two Camps.

Alarum within. Enter, with drum and colours, LEAR, CORDELIA, and their Forces; and exeunt.

Enter EDGAR and GLOSTER.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree
For your good host; pray that the right may thrive:
If ever I return to you again,
I'll bring you comfort.

Glo. Grace go with you, sir! [Exit EDG.]

Alarums; afterwards a retreat. Re-enter EDGAR.

Edg. Away, old man, give me thy hand, away;
King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta'en:
Give me thy hand, come on.

Glo. No further, sir; a man may rot even here.

Edg. What, in ill thoughts again? Men must endure
Their going hence, even as their coming hither:
Ripeness is all: Come on.

Glo. And that's true too. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, in conquest, with drum and colours, EDMUND; LEAR and CORDELIA, as prisoners; Officers, Soldiers, &c.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard;
Until their greater pleasures first be known
That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the first,
Who, with best meaning, have incur'd the worst.
For thee, oppressed king, I am cast down;
Myself could else out-frown false fortune's frown.—
Shall we not see these daughters and these sisters?

Lear. No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison;
We two alone will sing like birds i' the cage:
When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down,
And ask of thee forgiveness: So we'll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At doted butterflies, and hear poor rogues

Talk of court news; and we'll talk with
Who loses, and who wins: who's in, who's out,
And take upon us the mystery of things,
As if we were God's spies: and we'll wear
In a wall'd prison, packs and sects of great ones
That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them
Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,
The gods themselves throw incense. How Thee?

He that parts us shall bring a brand from
And fire us hence, like foxes. Wipe thine eyes,
The good years shall devour them, flesh and sin
Ere they shall make us weep; we'll see first.

Come. [Exeunt LEAR and CORDELIA]

Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.
Take thou this note; [giving a paper] go to prison;

One step I have advanc'd thee: if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy
To noble fortunes: Know thou this,—that
Are as the time is: to be tender-minded
Does not become a sword:—Thy great enemy
Will not bear question;—either say, thou
Or thrive by other means.

Off. I'll do't, my lord.

Edm. About it; and write happy, when done.

Mark,—I say, instantly; and carry it so
As I have set it down.

Off. I cannot draw a cart, nor eat dried
If it be man's work I will do it.

*Flourish. Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN,
and Attendants.*

Alb. Sir, you have shown to-day your valour
And fortune led you well: You have the
Who were the opposites of this day's strife:
I do require them of you, so to use them,
As we shall find their merits and our safety
May equally determine.

Edm. Sir, I thought it
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention and appointed guard;
Whose age has charms in it, whose title more
To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes,
Which do command them. With him I sent
My reason all the same; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at further space, to appear
Where you shall hold your session. At this time
We sweat and bleed: the friend hath lost his
And the best quarrels, in the heat, are carried
By those that feel their sharpness:—
The question of Cordelia and her father Requires a fitter place.

Alb. Sir, by your patience
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.

Reg. That's as we list to grace him:
Methinks our pleasure might have been done
Ere you had spoke so far. He led our power
Bore the commission of my place and person
The which immediacy may well stand up
And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot:
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More than in your addition.

Reg. In my right
By me invested, he compeers the best.

Gon. That were the most if he should bid
Reg. Jesters do oft prove prophets.

Know, my name is lost:

Which is that adversary?

Edg. What's he that speaks for Edmund earl of Gloster?

Edm. Himself;—What say'st thou to him?

Edg. Draw thy sword.

That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
 Thy arm may do thee justice: here is mine.

Behold, it is my privilege,
 The privilege of mine honours,

My oath, and my profession; I protest,—
 Maugre thy strength, place, youth, and eminence

Despite thy victor sword and fire-new fortune,
 Thy valour, and thy heart,—thou art a traitor:

False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father

Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious prince,

And, from the extremest upward of thy head,

To the descent and dust below thy feet,

A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou, "No,"

This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are bent

To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak,

Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom, I should ask thy name;

But, since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,

And that thy tongue some say<sup>a</sup> of breeding breathes

What safe and nicely I might well delay,

By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn:

Back do I toss these treasons to thy head;

With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart;

Which, (for they yet glance by, and scarcely bruise,)

This sword of mine shall give them instant way,

Where they shall rest for ever.—Trumpets, speak.

[Alarums. They fight. EDMUND falls.

Alb. Save him, save him!

Gon. This is practice, Gloster:

By the law of war,<sup>b</sup> thou wast not bound to answer

An unknown opposite; thou art not vanquish'd,

But cozen'd and beguil'd.

Alb. Shut your mouth, dame,

Or with this paper shall I stop it:—hold, sir:—

Thou worse than any name, read thine own evil:—

No tearing, lady; I perceive you know it.

[Gives the letter to EDMUND.

Gon. Say, if I do: the laws are mine, not thine:

Who can arraign me for 't? [Exit GONERIL.

Alb. Most monstrous!

Know'st thou this paper?

Edm. Ask me not what I know.

Alb. Go after her: she's desperate; govern her.

[To an Officer, who goes out.

Edm. What you have charg'd me with, that have I done

And more, much more: the time will bring it out;

'T is past, and so am I: But what art thou

That hast this fortune on me? If thou art noble

I do forgive thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charity.

I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund:

If more, the more thou hast wrong'd me.

My name is Edgar, and thy father's son.

The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices

Make instruments to plague us:

The dark and vicious place where thee he got

Cost him his eyes.

Edm. Thou hast spoken right, 't is true;

The wheel is come full circle; I am here.

Alb. Methought thy very gait did prophesy

A royal nobleness:—I must embrace thee;

Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I

Did hate thee, or thy father!

Edg. Worthy prince, I know 't.

Alb. Where have you hid yourself?

How have you known the miseries of your father?

Edg. By nursing them, my lord.—List a brief tale:—

And when 't is told, O, that my heart would burst!—

The bloody proclamation to escape

2. 7.

That follow'd me so near, (O our lives' sweetness!—
That we the pain of death would hourly die,
Rather than die at once!) taught me to shift
Into a mad-man's rags; to assume a semblance
That very dogs disdain'd: and in this habit
Met I my father with his bleeding rings,
Their precious stones new lost; became his guide,
Led him, begg'd for him, sav'd him from despair;
Never (O fault!) reveal'd myself unto him,
Until some half-hour past, when I was arm'd;
Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,
I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last
Told him our pilgrimage: but his flaw'd heart,
(Alack, too weak the conflict to support!)
Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,
Burst smilingly.

Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd me,
And shall, perchance, do good: but speak you on;
You look as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there be more, more woful, hold it in;
For I am almost ready to dissolve,
Hearing of this.

Edg. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too much, would make much more,
And top extremity.
Whilst I was big in clamour, came there in a man,
Who, having seen me in my worse estate,
Shunn'd my abhorr'd society; but then, finding
Who 't was that so endur'd, with his strong arms
He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he 'd burst heaven; threw him on my father;
Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him,
That ever ear receiv'd: which in recounting
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life
Began to crack: twice then the trumpet sounded,
And there I left him tranc'd.

Alb. But who was this?
Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who in disguise
Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service
Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman hastily, with a bloody knife.

Gent. Help! help! O help!

Edg. What kind of help?

Alb. Speak, man.

Edg. What means this bloody knife?

Gent. 'T is hot, it smokes;

It came even from the heart of—O she's dead.

Alb. Who dead? speak, man.

Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister
By her is poison'd; she confesses it.

Edm. I was contracted to them both; all three
Now marry in an instant.

Edg. Here comes Kent.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead!—
This judgment of the heavens that makes us tremble,
Touches us not with pity. [Exit Gentleman.]

Enter KENT.

O, is this he?<sup>a</sup>

The time will not allow the compliment,
Which very manners urges.

Kent. I am come
To bid my king and master aye good night;
Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot!—
Speak, Edmund, where 's the king; and where 's Cordelia?

See'st thou this object, Kent?

[The bodies of GON. and REGAN are brought in.]

Kent. Alack, why thus?

Edm. Yet Edmund was belov'd:

<sup>a</sup> The quartos, O! it is he.

The one the other poison'd for my sake,
And after slew herself.

Alb. Even so.—Cover their faces.

Edm. I pant for life: Some good I must Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send
Be brief in it,—to the castle; for my writ
Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia:—
Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run, O, run—

Edg. To who, my lord?—Who has the Thy token of reprieve.

Edm. Well thought on; take my sword,
Give it the captain.

Alb. Hasten thee, for thy life. [

Edm. He hath commission from thy wife
To hang Cordelia in the prison, and
To lay the blame upon her own despair,
That she foredid herself.

Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him he [EDMUND]

Enter LEAR, with CORDELIA dead in his arms, EDGAR, Officer, and others.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl!—O, you are men,
Had I your tongues and eyes I'd use them
That heaven's vault should crack:—She's dead,
—Ever!—

I know when one is dead, and when one liveth,
She's dead as earth:—Lend me a looking-glass,
If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,
Why then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end?

Edg. Or image of that horror?

Alb. Fall and

Lear. This feather stirs; she lives; if it be
It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows
That ever I have felt.

Kent. O my good master!

Lear. Prithee, away.

Edg. 'T is noble Kent,

Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors!
I might have sav'd her; now she's gone for ever:
Cordelia, Cordelia, stay a little. Ha!
What is 't thou say'st?—Her voice was ever
Gentle, and low; an excellent thing in woman:
I kill'd the slave that was a hanging thee.

Off. 'T is true, my lords, he did.

Lear. Did I not

I have seen the day, with my good biting finger
I would have made them skip: I am old now,
And these same crosses spoil me.—Who are they?
Mine eyes are not o' the best:—I'll tell you.

Kent. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and
One of them we behold.

Lear. This is a dull sight. Are you not

Kent.

Your servant Kent: Where is your servant?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you;

He'll strike, and quickly too: He's dead as

Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very

Lear. I'll see that straight.

Kent. That, from your first of difference
Have follow'd your sad steps.

Lear. You are welcome.

Kent. Nor no man else; all 's cheerless, Deadly.—

Your eldest daughters have fore-don'd<sup>b</sup> themselves,
And desperately are dead.

Lear. Ay, so I think.

<sup>a</sup> The promis'd end—the end of the world, from Scriptures. The "image of that horror" is the great doom's image of "Macbeth."

<sup>b</sup> Fore-don'd. We have previously had fore-don'd in the same sense of destroy.

owns not what he says; and vain it is to us to him.

Very bootless.

Enter an Officer.

Edgar is dead, my lord.

That 's but a trifle here.—

I noble friends, know our intent.

To this great decay may come

Ed: For us, we will resign,

As of this old majesty,

Asolute power:—You, to your rights;

[To EDGAR and KENT.]

I such addition as your honours

Are merited.—All friends shall taste

Of their virtue, and all foes

Of their deservings.—O, see, see!

My poor fool is hang'd!<sup>a</sup> No, no, no life:

A dog, a horse, a rat, have life,

<sup>a</sup> Fool is hang'd. We cannot avoid thinking in this place, meant to express a peculiar tenor from Lear's confused recollection of his regard toward the Fool, whom we have lost after the depth of his distress, during the storm. Lear said and knave, I have one part in my heart that's mine. And now, when the last and deepest calamity upon him, his expressions shape themselves out anew with which he views the present and the future in his "poor fool."

And thou no breath at all? Thou 'lt come no more.

Never, never, never, never, never!—

Pray you undo this button: Thank you, sir.—

Do you see this? Look on her,—look,—her lips,—

Look there, look there! [He dies.]

Edg. He faints! My lord, my lord,—

Kent. Break, heart; I prithee, break!

Edg. Look up, my lord.

Kent. Vex not his ghost: O, let him pass! he lutes
him

That would upon the rack of this tough world

Stretch him out longer.

Edg. He is gone, indeed.

Kent. The wonder is he hath endur'd so long:

He but usurp'd his life.

Alb. Bear them from hence.—Our present business

Is general woe. Friends of my soul, you twain

[To KENT and EDGAR.]

Rule in this realm, and the good state sustain.

Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go;

My master calls me,—I must not say, no.

Alb. The weight of this sad time we must obey;

Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.

The oldest hath borne most: we that are young

Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

[Exeunt with a dead march.]

In Coleridge's early sonnet 'to the Author of the Robbers,' his imagination is enchained to the most terrible scene of that play; disregarding, as it were, all the accessaries by which its horrors are mitigated and rendered endurable :—

" Schiller! that hour I would have wish'd to die,
If through the shuddering midnight I had sent
From the dark dungeon of the tower time-rent
That fearful voice, a famish'd father's cry—
Lest in some after-moment aught more mean Might stamp me mortal! A triumphant shout
Black Horror scream'd, and all her goblin rout
Diminish'd shruak from the more withering scene!"

It was in a somewhat similar manner that Shakspeare's representation of the murder of Duncan affected the imagination of Mrs. Siddons :—" It was my custom to study my characters at night, when all the domestic cares and business of the day were over. On the night preceding that on which I was to appear in this part for the first time, I shut myself up, as usual, when all the family were retired, and commenced my study of Lady Macbeth. As the character is very short, I thought I should soon accomplish it. Being then only twenty years of age, I believed, as many others do believe, that little more was necessary than to get the words into my head; for the necessity of discrimination, and the development of character, at that time of my life, had scarcely entered into my imagination. But, to proceed. I went on with tolerable composure, in the silence of the night (a night I can never forget), till I came to the assassination scene, when the horrors of the scene rose to a degree that made it impossible for me to get farther. I snatched up my candle, and hurried out of the room in a paroxysm of terror. My dress was of silk, and the rustling of it, as I ascended the stairs to go to bed, seemed to my panic-struck fancy like the movement of a spectre pursuing me. At last I reached my chamber, at night which she could never forget that night when all about her when she heard the owl shriek, amid in the fatal chamber,—and she saw of the assassin,—and, personifying rushed to dip her own hands in the blood is perfectly evident that this intensity carried the horrors far beyond the limits of emotion, and has produced all the effects of murder. No reader of the play, who regards this play as Mrs. Siddons represents it, probably for the first time, imperfect vision of the character such as she afterwards delineated it what to all of us must, under any name, be a work of art, however glorious, is reality. It was the isolation of truth by her own attempt to conceive the Macbeth, which made it so terrible. The reader has to regard it as a picture which combines and harmonises with nature which he is adequately prepared to see; and which,—even if we look at it as a picture which represents only that one part of nature which has still its own repose, its own harmony, its own chiaroscuro,—is to be seen as if by a preternatural light. Mrs. Siddons saw it as she has described.

The leading characteristic of this work is, without doubt, that which consists in the difference between a work of the highest order and a work of mediocrity. Without going to the length here especially mean the ability to create a scene of the highest order was ever made; and not make such a poet. If he is called upon to create a scene of the highest order, he must create it as if by a preternatural light.

THE END OF ACT IV. IN ENGLAND; THROUGH THE REST OF THE PLAY IN SCOTLAND.

ACT I.

Scene Place. Thunder and Lightning.

Enter three Witches.

Where shall we three meet again?

In thunder, or in rain?

The hurlyburly's done,

And win'st our son:

Which will be ere the set of sun,

The place?

Upon the heath:

To meet with Macbeth.

Thou'rt a slave to fate, to chance, to kings,

And to the ill-bewitched air.

Thou'rt fated, say they, that thou shalt never prosper
Till thou art murder'd: In the air
Thy true and natural spirits on this day
Have donned their smocks: For thou hast sworn
To do as they do teach: Which neither man
Nor mermaid shall perform.

Thunder. Enter a Soldier, bleeding, with a wound on his forehead.

Alas, good day! O, what a weary time!
Bring forth the blood-boltoned man,
Whose head smelt such a blast as blew the broom
In the north-west: Come, sith I've seene
Guns and the fumes thereof, but none yet
Of this black and white apparition:
Hee's here, and yet his bones are not
Planted: Alas, he's dead, and yet we see
The horrible tidings!

Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!

Thou'rt slain, and yet dost see
Thy death's-annals; thou'rt surpris'd
To behold thee bleed.

Hee's here, and yet his bones are not
Planted: Alas, he's dead, and yet we see
The horrible tidings!

Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!

Thou'rt slain, and yet dost see
Thy death's-annals; thou'rt surpris'd
To behold thee bleed.

Hee's here, and yet his bones are not
Planted: Alas, he's dead, and yet we see
The horrible tidings!

Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!

Thou'rt slain, and yet dost see
Thy death's-annals; thou'rt surpris'd
To behold thee bleed.

Hee's here, and yet his bones are not
Planted: Alas, he's dead, and yet we see
The horrible tidings!

Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!

Thou'rt slain, and yet dost see
Thy death's-annals; thou'rt surpris'd
To behold thee bleed.

Hee's here, and yet his bones are not
Planted: Alas, he's dead, and yet we see
The horrible tidings!

Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!

Thou'rt slain, and yet dost see
Thy death's-annals; thou'rt surpris'd
To behold thee bleed.

Hee's here, and yet his bones are not
Planted: Alas, he's dead, and yet we see
The horrible tidings!

Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!

Thou'rt slain, and yet dost see
Thy death's-annals; thou'rt surpris'd
To behold thee bleed.

Hee's here, and yet his bones are not
Planted: Alas, he's dead, and yet we see
The horrible tidings!

As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt

The newest state.

Mal. This is the sergeant,
Who, like a good and hardy soldier, fought
'Gainst my captivity:—Hail, brave friend!

Say to the king the knowledge of the broil,

As thou didst leave it.

Sold. Doubtful it stood;

As two spent swimmers, that do cling together,
And choke their art. The merciless Macdonwald (Worthy to be a rebel; for, to that,

The multiplying villainies of nature

Do swarm upon him) from the western isles

Of kerns and gallowglasses is supplied:

And fortune, on his damned quarry<sup>b</sup> smiling,

Show'd like a rebel's whore: But all's too weak:

For brave Macbeth, (well he deserves that name),

Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel,

Which smok'd with bloody execution,

<sup>a</sup> Of is here used in the sense of with.

<sup>b</sup> Quarry.—So the original. The common reading, on the emendation of Johnson, is quarrel. We conceive that the original word is that used by Shakspeare, the "damned quarry" being the doomed army of kerns and gallowglasses, who, although fortune deceitfully smiled on them, fell before the sword of Macbeth, and became his quarry—his prey.

Like valour's minion, carv'd out his passage,
Till he fac'd the slave;
Which ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to him,
Till he unseam'd him from the navel to the chaps,
And fix'd his head upon our battlements.

Dun. O, valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!

Sold. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection
Shipwracking storms and direful thunders break;*
So from that spring, whence comfort seem'd to come,
Discomfort swells. Mark, king of Scotland, mark:
No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd,
Compell'd these skipping kerns to trust their heels,
But the Norwegian lord, surveying vantage,
With furbish'd arms, and new supplies of men,
Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?

Sold. Yes: As sparrows, eagles; or the hare, the lion.
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks;
So they doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha,
I cannot tell:

But I am faint, my gashes cry for help.

Dun. So well thy words become thee as thy wounds;
They smack of honour both:—Go, get him surgeons.

[Exit Soldier, attended.]

Enter Ross.

Who comes here?

Mal. The worthy thane of Rosse.

Len. What a haste looks through his eyes!
So should he look that seems to speak things strange.

Rosse. God save the king!

Dun. Whence cam'st thou, worthy thane?

Rosse. From Fife, great king,
Where the Norwegian banners flout the sky,
And fan our people cold.
Norway himself, with terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyal traitor
The thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict:
Till that Bellona's bridegroom,<sup>b</sup> lapp'd in proof,
Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against point, rebellious arm 'gainst arm,<sup>c</sup>
Curbing his lavish spirit: And, to conclude,
The victory fell on us:—

Dun. Great happiness!

Rosse. That now
Sweno, the Norways' king, craves composition;
Nor would we deign him burial of his men,
Till he disburs'd, at Saint Colmes' inch,
Ten thousand dollars to our general use.

Dun. No more that thane of Cawdor shall deceive
Our bosom interest:—Go, pronounce his present death,
And with his former title greet Macbeth.

Rosse. I'll see it done.

Dun. What he hath lost noble Macbeth hath won.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Heath. Thunder.

Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?

2 Witch. Killing swine.

3 Witch. Sister, where thou?

1 Witch. A sailor's wife had chesnuts in her lap.
And mounch'd, and mounch'd, and mounch'd:—"Give me," quoth I:

* The word break is not in the original. The second folio adds breaking. Some verb is wanting; and the reading of the second folio is some sort of authority for the introduction of break.

<sup>c</sup> This is the original punctuation, which we think, with Teek, is better than <sup>d</sup> Point against point rebellious, arm 'gainst arm.

"Aroint thee," witch!" the rump-fed ronyon
Her husband 's to Aleppo gone, master o' the Turk
But in a sieve I'll thither sail,
And like a rat without a tail,
I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.

2 Witch. I'll give thee a wind.

1 Witch. Th' art kind.

3 Witch. And I another.

1 Witch. I myself have all the other,

And the very ports they blow,
All the quarters that they know
I' the shipman's card.

I'll drain him dry as hay:

Sleep shall neither night nor day

Hang upon his pent-house lid;

He shall live a man forbid:

Weary sev'n-nights, nine times nine,

Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine:

Though his bark cannot be lost,

Yet it shall be tempest-toss'd.

Look what I have.

2 Witch. Show me, show me.

1 Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb,
Wrack'd, as homeward he did come. [Drum]

3 Witch. A drum, a drum:

Macbeth doth come.

All. The weird<sup>e</sup> sisters, hand in hand,

Posters of the sea and land,

Thus do go about, about;

Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,

And thrice again, to make up nine:

Peace!—the charm 's wound up.

Enter MACBETH and BANQUO.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.

Ban. How far is 't call'd to Forres?—What

So wither'd and so wild in their attire;

That look not like the inhabitants o' the earth,

And yet are on 't? Live you? or are you aught

That man may question? You seem to understand

By each at once her choppy finger laying

Upon her skinny lips:—You should be women,

And yet your beards forbid me to interpret

That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can;—What are you?

1 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee,
Glamis!

2 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee,
Cawdor!

3 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! that shalt hereafter.

Ban. Good sir, why do you start; and seem

Things that do sound so fair?—I' the name of

Are ye fantastical,<sup>d</sup> or that indeed

Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner

You greet with present grace, and great prediction

Of noble having, and of royal hope,

That he seems rapt withal; to me you speak
If you can look into the seeds of time,

And say, which grain will grow, and which will Speak then to me, who neither beg, nor fear,
Your favours nor your hate.

1 Witch. Hail!

2 Witch. Hail!

3 Witch. Hail!

1 Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.

2 Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.

<sup>e</sup> Aroint thee.—See King Lear, Act III. Scene 4.

<sup>f</sup> Ronyon.—See As You Like It, Act II. Scene 7.

<sup>g</sup> Weird. There can be no doubt that this term is from the Anglo-Saxon weard, word spoken; and in a way that the word fate is anything spoken, weird and synonymous, and equally applicable to each weird as Macbeth's witches.

<sup>d</sup> Fantastical—belonging to fancy—imaginary.

Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none :
 Macbeth and Banquo !
 Banquo, and Macbeth, all hail !
 O, you imperfect speakers, tell me more :
 Methinks, I know I am thane of Glamis ;
 But what's Cawdor ? the thane of Cawdor lives,
 A gentleman ; and, to be king,
 Must inherit the prospect of belief,
 And so be Cawdor. Say, from whence Came this strange intelligence ? or why
 Didst thou heath you stop our way
 With prophetic greeting ?—Speak, I charge you.

[Witches vanish.
 The earth bath bubbles, as the water has,
 And some of them : Whither are they vanish'd ?
 And some to the air : and what seem'd corporal,
 Into thin air did melt.
 O, the wind.—'Would they had staid !
 For such things here as we do speak about Turn upon the insane root,
 To their own reason prisoner ?
 Your children shall be kings.

You shall be king.
 And the thane of Cawdor too ; went it not so ?
 For such a self-same tune, and words. Who's here ?

Enter ROSS and ANGUS.
 The king hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth,
 The news of thy success : and when he reads
 Thy venture in the rebels' fight,
 And his praises do contend,
 Who shall be thine, or his : Silenc'd with that Word, the rest o' the self-same day,
 In the stout Norweyan ranks,
 Instead of what thyself didst make,
 Of death, as thick as tale
 Between us and the o'ertop'd
 Post ; and every one did bear
 Of his kingdom's great defence,
 He down before him.

We are sent,
 From our royal master, thanks ;
 And bid thee into his sight, not pay thee.
 And, for an earnest of a greater honour,
 From him, call thee thane of Cawdor :
 In addition, hail, most worthy thane !

What, can the devil speak true ?
 The thane of Cawdor lives : Why do you
 Call me thane of Cawdor ?

Who was the thane, lives yet ;
 And every judgment bears that life
 Which serves to lose.
 As comin'd with those of Norway ;
 He rebel with hidden help
 Of thee, or that with both he labour'd
 In thy country's wrack, I know not ;
 His capital, confess'd, and prov'd,
 He own'd him.

Glamis, and thane of Cawdor :
 He is behind.—Thanks for your pains.—
 Ope your children shall be kings,
 And you shall be thane of Cawdor to me,
 Less than to them ?

That, trusted home,
 He kindle you unto the crown,
 Than thane of Cawdor. But 't is strange :
 For such a deed, to win us to our harm,
 The instruments of darkness tell us truths ;
 And honest trifles, to betray us
 In deepest consequence.—
 Adieu, I pray you.

Exit ROSS and ANGUS.
 I have read in an old book of medicine, which is called incantation.

Macb. Two truths are told,
 As happy prologues to the swelling act
 Of the imperial theme.—I thank you, gentlemen.—
 This supernatural soliciting
 Cannot be ill ; cannot be good :—If ill,
 Why hath it given me earnest of success,
 Commencing in a truth ? I am thane of Cawdor :
 If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
 Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair,
 And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
 Against the use of nature ? Present fears
 Are less than horrible imaginings :
 My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical,
 Shakes so my single state of man, that function
 Is smother'd in surmise ; and nothing is
 But what is not.

Ban. Look, how our partner's rapt.
Macb. If chance will have me king, why, chance
 May crown me,
 Without my stir.

Ban. New honours come upon him,
 Like our strange garments, cleave not to their mould,
 But with the aid of use.

Macb. Come what come may,
 Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.

Macb. Give me your favour :—
 My dull brain was wrought with things forgotten.
 Kind gentlemen, your pains are register'd
 Where every day I turn the leaf to read them.—
 Let us toward the king.—

Think upon what hath chanc'd ; and, at more time,
 The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
 Our free hearts each to other.

Ban. Very gladly.
Macb. Till then, enough.—Come, friends. Exeunt

SCENE IV.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALDIN, LENOX, and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor ? Are not Those in commission yet return'd ?

Mal. My liege,
 They are not yet come back. But I have spoke
 With one that saw him die : who did report,
 That very frankly he confess'd his treasons ;
 Implor'd your highness' pardon ; and set forth
 A deep repentance : nothing in his life
 Became him like the leaving it ; he died
 As one that had been studied in his death,
 To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
 As 't were a careless trifle.

Dun. There's no art
 To find the mind's construction in the face :
 He was a gentleman on whom I built
 An absolute trust.—O worthiest cousin !

Enter MACBETH, BANQUO, ROSS, and ANGUS.

The sin of my ingratitude even now
 Was heavy on me : Thou art so far before,
 That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
 To overtake thee. 'Would thou hadst less deserv'd ;
 That the proportion both of thanks and payment
 Might have been mine ! only I have left to say,
 More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe,
 In doing it, pays itself. Your highness' part
 Is to receive our duties : and our duties
 Are to your throne and state, children and servants ;
 Which do but what they should, by doing everything
 Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither !
 I have begun to plant thee, and will labour

To make thee full of growing.—Noble Banquo,
That hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known
No less to have done so, let me unfold thee,
And hold thee to my heart.

Ban. There if I grow,
The harvest is your own.

Dun. My plenteous joys,
Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow.—Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know,
We will establish our estate upon
Our eldest, Malcolm; whom we name hereafter
The prince of Cumberland: which honour must Not, unaccompanied, invest him only,
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all deservers.—From hence to Inverness,
And bind us further to you.

Macb. The rest is labour, which is not us'd for you:
I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful
The hearing of my wife with your approach;
So humbly take my leave.

Dun. My worthy Cawdor!
Macb. The prince of Cumberland!—That is a step
On which I must fall down, or else o'er-leap, [Aside.
For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires!
Let not light see my black and deep desires:

Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see. [Exit.

Dun. True, worthy Banquo; he is full so valiant;
And in his commendations I am fed;
It is a banquet to me. Let's after him,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome:
It is a peerless kinsman. [Flourish. Exit.

SCENE V.—Inverness. A Room in Macbeth's
Castle.

Enter LADY MACBETH, reading a letter.

Lady M. "They met me in the day of success; and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burned in desire to question them further, they made themselves air, into which they vanished. Whiles I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives from the king, who all hailed me, 'Thane of Cawdor';
by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with 'Hail, king that shalt be!' This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness; that thou mightest not lose the dues of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee.
Lay it to thy heart, and farewell."

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be
What thou art promis'd:—Yet do I fear thy nature;
It is too full o' the milk of human kindness,
To catch the nearest way: Thou wouldst be great;
Art not without ambition; but without The illness should attend it. What thou wouldst highly,
That wouldst thou holily; wouldst not play false,
And yet wouldst wrongly win: thou'dst have, great Glamis,
That which cries, "Thus thou must do, if thou have it:
And that which rather thou dost fear to do,
Than wishest should be undone." Hie thee hither,
That I may pour my spirits in thine ear;
And chastise with the valour of my tongue
All that impedes thee from the golden round,
Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem
To have thee crown'd withal.—What is your tidings?

Enter an Attendant.

Atten. The king comes here to-night.
Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say it;
Is not thy master with him? who, wer't so,
Would have inform'd for preparation.

Atten. So please you, it is true; our thane is coming:
One of my fellows had the speed of him;

<sup>a</sup> Metaphysical—i. e. unnatural.

Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely
Than would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him
He brings great news. The raven himself
[Exit.

That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements. Come, you spirits
That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me here
And fill me, from the crown to the toe, top-
Of direst cruelty! make thick my blood,
Stop up the access and passage to remorse;
That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace betwixt
The effect, and it!<sup>a</sup> Come to my woman's
And take my milk for gall, you murdering
Wherever in your sightless substances
You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thin
And pall thee in the dunest smoke of hell,
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the
To cry, "Hold, hold!"—Great Glamis Cawdor!

Enter MACBETH.

Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter!
Thy letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present, and I feel now
The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest love,
Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes
Macb. To-morrow,—as he purposes.

Lady M. O, na
Shall sun that morrow see!

Your face, my thane, is as a book, where May read strange matters:—To beguile the

But be the serpent under it. He that's cas Must be provided for: and you shall put
This night's great business into my dispatch
Which shall to all our nights and days to Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.

Macb. We will speak further.

Lady M. Only look
To alter favour ever is to fear:
Leave all the rest to me.

SCENE VI.—The same. Before the Hautboys. Servants of Macbeth attend.

Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALDIN, LENOX, MACDUFF, ROSSE, ANGUS, and others.

Dun. This castle bath a pleasant seat;
Nimble and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve,
By his lov'd mansionry, that the heaven's Smells wooingly here: no jutty, frieze,
Buttress, nor coigne of vantage, but this hill
Hath made his pendent bed, and proficuous
Where they most breed and haunt, I have

All our service is twice done, and then done double, and single business, to contend for honours deep and broad, wherewith loads our house: For those of old, dignities head'd up to them,
hermits.<sup>b</sup>

Where 's the thane of Cawdor?
I am at the heels, and had a purpose to be revoyr: but he rides well;
and his love, sharp as his spur, hath holp him before us: Fair and noble hostess,
I am a guest to-night.

Your servants ever love themselves, and what is theirs, in commitment; and audit at your highness' pleasure,
I will do it on my own.

Give me your hand:
I will go to mine host; we love him highly,
and will continue our graces towards him.
I will do it on my own.

against his murderer shut the door, to keep the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan is full of faculties so meek, hath been so just and equanimous, that his virtues doe like angels, trumpet-tongued, against the deep damnation of his taking-off;

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. He has almost supp'd: why have you left the chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M. Know you not he has?

Macb. We will proceed no further in this business:
He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought
Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,
Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M. Was the hope drunk,
Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept since?
And wakes it now, to look so green and pale
At what it did so freely? From this time,
Such I account thy love. Art thou afeard
To be the same in thine own act and valour,
As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that
Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem;
Letting I dare not wait upon I would,
Like the poor cat i' the adage?<sup>a</sup>

Macb. Prithee, peace:
I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more, is none.

Lady M. What beast was 't then,
That made you break this enterprise to me?
When you durst do it, then you were a man;
And, to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time, nor place,
Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:
They have made themselves, and that their fitness now
Does unmake you. I have given suck; and know
How tender 't is to love the babe that milks me:
I would, while it was smiling in my face,
Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless gums,
And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn,
As you have done to this.

Macb. If we should fail,—

Lady M. We fail.
But screw your courage to the sticking place,
And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep, (Whereto the rather shall his day's hard journey Soundly invite him,) his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassel so convince,<sup>b</sup>

Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason

Their drenched natures lie, as in a death,
What cannot you and I perform upon
The unguarded Duncan? what not put upon
His spongy officers; who shall bear the guilt
Of our great quell?<sup>d</sup>

Macb. Bring forth men-children only,
For thy undaunted mettle should compose
Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd,
When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two
Of his own chamber, and us'd their very daggers,
That they have done 't?

Lady M. Who dares receive it other
As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar
Upon his death?

Macb. I am settled, and bend up
Each corporal agent to this terrible feat.
Away, and mock the time with fairest show:
False face must hide what the false heart doth know.

[Exeunt.]

duce a jumble of the metaphor. Macbeth compares his intent to a courser: I have no spur to urge him on. Unprepared I am about to vault into my seat, but I overleap myself and fall.
It appears to us that the sentence is broken by the entrance of the messenger; that it is not complete in itself; and would not have been completed with side.

* We find the adage in Heywood's Proverbs, 1556:—"The cat would eat fish and would not wet her feet."

<sup>d</sup> Quell—subdue.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same. Court within the Castle.

Enter BANQUO and FLEANCE, and a Servant with a torch before them.

Ban. How goes the night, boy?

Fle. The moon is down; I have not heard the clock.

Ban. And she goes down at twelve.

Fle. I take 't, 't is later, sir.

Ban. Hold, take my sword.—There 's lustan'ry in heaven,

Their candles are all out.—Take thee that too.

A heavy summons lies like lead upon me,

And yet I would not sleep: Merciful powers!

Restrain in me the cursed thoughts that nature

Gives way to in repose!—Give me my sword;—

Enter MACBETH, and a Servant with a torch.

Who 's there?

Macb. A friend.

Ban. What, sir, not yet at rest? The king 's a-bed:

He hath been in unusual pleasure, and Sent forth great largess to your offices:

This diamond he greets your wife withal,

By the name of most kind hostess; and shut up

In measureless content.

Macb. Being unprepar'd,

Our will became the servant to defect;

Which else should free have wrought.

Ban. All 's well.

I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters:

To you they have show'd some truth.

Macb. I think not of them:

Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,

We would spend it in some words upon that business,

If you would grant the time.

Ban. At your kind'st leisure.

Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent,<sup>b</sup>—when 't is,
It shall make honour for you.

Ban. So I lose none,

In seeking to augment it, but still keep

My bosom franchis'd, and allegiance clear,

I shall be counsell'd.

Macb. Good repose, the while!

Ban. Thanks, sir; the like to you! [Exit BANQUO.]

Lady. Go, bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready:

She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed. [Exit Serv.]

Is this a dagger which I see before me,

The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:

I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.

Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible

To feeling, as to sight? or art thou but

A dagger of the mind, a false creation,

Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?

I see thee yet, in form as palpable

As this which now I draw.

Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going;

And such an instrument I was to use.

Mine eyes are made the fools o' the other senses,

Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still;

And on thy blade, and dudgeon,<sup>c</sup> gouts of blood,

Which was not so before.—There 's no such thing.

It is the bloody business which informs

Thus to mine eyes.—Now o'er the one half world

Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse

The curtain'd sleep: witchcraft celebrates

Pale Hecate's offerings; and wither'd murder,

Alarum'd by his sentinel, the wolf,

Whose howl 's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,

<sup>c</sup> Dudgeon—the handle of the dagger.

What do you mean?
He cried, "Sleep no more!" to all the murder'd sleep: and therefore Cawdor more, Macbeth shall sleep no more!"

Who was it that thus cried? Why, worthy your noble strength, to think of things:—Go, get some water, filthy witness from your hand.—Bring these daggers from the place? there: Go, carry them; and smear your brows with blood.

I'll go no more:
I think what I have done;
But in my sleep I dare not.

Infirm of purpose!
Daggers: The sleeping, and the dead, are but their pictures; 'tis the eye of childhood that fears a painted devil. If he do bleed, I'll gild my faces of the grooms withal, for I will smear their guilt. [Exit. Knocking within.]

Whence is that knocking?
How comes it, when every noise appals me?
Here's one! Ha! they pluck out mine eyes!
Neptune's ocean wash this blood and this coward's hands.
No; this my hand will rather than heaven's wash
My sin—
O, when will these comes—one red.<sup>b</sup>

Re-enter LADY MACBETH.

My hands are of your colour; but I shame to wear a heart so white. [Knock.] I hear a knocking at the south door:—retire we to our chamber; this business clears us of this deed; it is yet to come. Then! Your constancy is a man's offence.—[Knocking.] Hark! more knocking. Get on your nightgown, lest occasion call us, and we must answer. Be not lost with your thoughts;—know your deed, 'twere best not know yourself. [Knock.] Knock again with thy knocking; I would thou couldst! [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The same.

Enter a Porter. [Knocking within.]
Here's a knocking indeed! If a man were a thief, he should have old turning the key. Knock, knock, knock: Who's there, Belzebub? Here's a farmer, that hanged himself for expectation of plenty: Come in time; begone, begone!
enough about you; here you'll sweat for the trough silk—the spilizza of the Italians. This passage, and, in some degree, the expression in a line of Heywood ('Robert Earl of Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven: O, come in, equivocator. [Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock: Who's there? Faith, here's an English tailor come lither, for stealing out of a French hose: Come in, tailor; here you may roast your goose. [Knocking.] Knock, knock: Never at quiet! What are you?—But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no further: I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire. [Knocking.] Anon, anon; I pray you, remember the porter. [Opens the gate.]

Enter MACDUFF and LENOX.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed, that you do lie so late?

Port. Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock: and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Macd. What three things does drink especially provoke?

Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes: it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance: Therefore, much drink may be said to be an equivocator with lechery: it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it persuades him, and disheartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to: in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and giving him the lie, leaves him.

Macd. I believe, drink gave thee the lie last night.

Port. That it did, sir, i' the very throat o' me: But I requited him for his lie; and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring?

Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.

Enter MACBETH.

Len. Good morrow, noble sir!

Macb. Good morrow, both!

Macd. Is the king stirring, worthy thane?

Macb. Not yet.

Macd. He did command me to call timely on him; I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macb. I'll bring you to him.

Macd. I know this is a joyful trouble to you;

But yet 't is one.

Macb. The labour we delight in physics pain.

This is the door.

Macd. I'll make so hold to call,
For 't is my limited<sup>a</sup> service. [Exit MACDUFF.]

Len. Goes the king hence to-day?

Macb. He does:—he did appoint so.

Len. The night has been unruly: Where we lay,

Our chimneys were blown down: and, as they say,

Lamentings heard i' the air; strange screams of death;

And prophesying with accents terrible,

Of dire combustion and confus'd events,

New hatch'd to the woeful time,

The obscure bird clamour'd the live-long night:

Some say the earth was feverous, and did shake.<sup>b</sup>

Macb. 'T was a rough night.

Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel

A fellow to it.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. O horror! horror! horror!

Tongue, nor heart, cannot conceive, nor name thee!

<sup>b</sup> We here follow the regulation of the original. But we have adopted a punctuation suggested by a friend, which connects "the obscure bird" with "prophesying."

Macb., Len. What 's the matter?

Macd. Confusion now hath made his master-piece!
Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and soie thence
The life o' the building.

Macb. What is 't you say? the life?

Len. Mean you his majesty?

Macd. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight
With a new Gorgon:—Do not bid me speak;
See, and then speak yourselves.—Awake! awake!—

[Exeunt MACBETH and LENOX.]

Ring the alarm-bell:—Murder! and treason!
Banquo, and Donalbain! Malcolm! awake!
Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,
And look on death itself!—up, up, and see
The great doom's image—Malcolm! Banquo!
As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprites,
To countenance this horror! Ring the bell.* [Bell rings.]

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. What 's the business,
That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley
The sleepers of the house? speak, speak!

Macd. O, gentle lady,
'T is not for you to hear what I can speak:
The repetition, in a woman's ear,
Would murder as it fell.—

Enter BANQUO.

O Banquo! Banquo! our royal master 's murder'd!

Lady M. Woe, alas! what, in our house?

Ban. Too cruel, anywhere.
Dear Duff, I prithee contradict thyself,
And say, it is not so.

Re-enter MACBETH and LENOX.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance,
I had liv'd a blessed time; for, from this instant,
There 's nothing serious in mortality:
All is but toys: renown, and grace, is dead;
The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
Is left this vault to brag of.

Enter MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.

Don. What is amiss?

Macb. You are, and do not know 't,
The spring, the head: the fountain of your blood
Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.

Macd. Your royal father 's murder'd.

Mal. O, by whom?

Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done 't:
Their hands and faces were all badg'd with blood,
So were their daggers, which, unwip'd, we found
Upon their pillows: they star'd, and were distracted;
No man's life was to be trusted with them.

Macb. O, yet I do repent me of my fury,
That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you so?

Macb. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temperate, and furious,

Loyal, and neutral, in a moment? No man:
The expedition of my violent love
Outran the pauser reason.—Here lay Duncan,
His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood;
And his gash'd stabs look'd like a breach in nature
For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers,
Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers
Unmannerly breech'd with gore: Who could refrain

* The words "ring the bell" form part of the original text; and the stage direction, "bell rings," immediately follows. The commentators strike out "ring the bell," contending that these words also were a stage direction. But how natural is it that Macduff, having previously cried "ring the alarm-bell," should still repeat the order!

That had a heart to love, and in that heart
Courage to make his love known?

Lady M. Help me here!

Macd. Look to the lady.

Mal. Why do we hold her back?

That most may claim this argument for us!

Don. What should be spoken here,

Where our fate, hid in an auger-hole,
May rush, and seize us? Let 's away; we 're tan
Are not yet brew'd.

Mal. Nor our strong sorrow

Upon the foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady:—

[LADY MACBETH is carried]

And when we have our naked frailties hid,
That suffer in exposure, let us meet,
And question this most bloody piece of work,
To know it further. Fears and scruples shake us:
In the great hand of God I stand; and, though Against the undivulg'd pretence I fight
Of treasonous malice.

Macd. And so do I.*

All. So all.

Macb. Let 's briefly put on manly readiness,
And meet 't the hall together.

All. Well contented. [Exeunt all but Macb. and

Mal. What will you do? Let 's not count
them:

To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
Which the false man does easy: I 'll to England.

Don. To Ireland, I; our separated fortunes Shall keep us both the safer: where we are,
There 's daggers in men's smiles: the near in blood
The nearer bloody.

Mal. This murderous shaft that 's shot
Hath not yet lighted; and our safest way
Is to avoid the aim. Therefore, to horse;
And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,
But shift away: There 's warrant in that fall
Which steals itself, when there 's no mercy left. [Exit

SCENE IV.—Without the Castle.

Enter ROSSE and an Old Man.

Old M. Threescore and ten I can remember well Within the volume of which time, I have seen
Hours dreadful, and things strange; but this sorrow
Hath trifled former knowings.

Rosse. Ah, good father,
Thou see'st, the heavens, as troubled with man's act,
Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock, 't is day,
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp:
Is 't night's predominance, or the day's shame,
That darkness does the face of earth intomb,
When living light should kiss it?

Old M. 'T is unnatural,
Even like the deed that 's done. On Tuesday last
A falcon, tow'ring in her pride of place,
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd.

Rosse. And Duncan's horses, (a thing most strange and certain,)

Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race,
Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, long ere Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would Make war with mankind.

Old M. 'T is said, they eat each other.
Rosse. They did so; to the amazement of mine
That look'd upon 't. Here comes the good Macbeth.

Enter MACDUFF.

How goes the world, sir, now?

Macd. Why, see you not?

* This speech in the original belongs to Macbeth, but, without any explanation, it is given by all the modern editors to Macduff.

known who did this more than bloody deed?
 Ose that Macbeth hath slain.

Alas, the day!
 could they pretend?<sup>a</sup>

They were suborn'd:
 d Donalbain, the king's two sons, ay and fled; which puts upon them
 the deed.

'Gainst nature still:
 bition, that will ravin up fe's means!—Then 't is most like ay will fall upon Macbeth.
 is already nam'd; and gone to Scene,
 d.

Rosse. Where is Duncan's body?

Macd. Carried to Colmes-kill;
 The sacred storehouse of his predecessors,
 And guardian of their bones.

Rosse. Will you to Scene?

Macd. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.

Rosse. Well, I will thither.

Macd. Well, may you see things well done there;— adieu!

Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!

Rosse. Farewell, father.

Old M. God's benison go with you, and with those
 That would make good of bad, and friends of foes!
 [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

I.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.

Enter BANQUO.

hast it now, king, Cawdor, Glamis, all, women promis'd; and I fear
 t most foully for 't: yet it was said, stand in thy posterity;
 self should be the root, and father
 gs. If there come truth from them, e, Macbeth, their speeches shiine, verities on thee made good,
 t be my oracles as well,
 p in hope? But, hush; no more.

Ed. Enter MACBETH, as King; LADY as Queen; LENOX, ROSSE, Lords, d Attendants.

re's our chief guest.

If ne had been forgotten is a gap in our great feast,
 g unbecoming.
 night we hold a solemn supper, sir,
 nest your presence.

Let your highness
 on me; to the which, my duties ost indissoluble tie
 le you this afternoon?

Ay, my good lord.
 should have else desir'd your good advice hath been both grave and prosperous) council; but we'll take<sup>b</sup> to-morrow.
 ride?

ar, my lord, as will fill up the time nd supper: go not my horse the better, se a borrower of the night,
 our, or twain.

Fail not our feast.
 lord, I will not.

hear, our bloody cousins are bestow'd and in Ireland; not confessing arricide, filling their hearers invention: But of that to-morrow;
 rithal, we shall have cause of state,
 ntly. Hie you to horse: Adieu, rn at night. Goes Fleance with you?
 ny good lord: our time does call upon us.
 ish your horses swift and sure of foot;
 commend you to their backs.

[Exit BANQUO.]

ropose.

is generally altered to talk. It is difficult to imanecessary change. Who could doubt our mean-to say. "Well, sir, if you cannot come this will take to-morrow?"

Let every man be master of his time
 Till seven at night; to make society
 The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself
 Till supper-time alone: while then, God be with you.

[Exeunt LADY MACBETH, Lords, Ladies, &c.
Sirrah, a word with you: Attend those men our pleasure?

Attend. They are, my lord, without the palace gate.

Macb. Bring them before us.—[Exit Atten.] To be thus, is nothing;

But to be safely thus:—Our fears in Banquo
 Stick deep; and in his royalty of nature
 Reigns that which would be fear'd: 't is much he dares;
 And, to that dauntless temper of his mind,
 He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour
 To act in safety. There is none but he Whose being I do fear: and under him
 My genius is rebuk'd; as, it is said,
 Mark Antony's was by Caesar. He chid the sisters,
 When first they put the name of king upon me,
 And bade them speak to him; then, prophet-like,
 They hail'd him father to a line of kings:
 Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown,
 And put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
 Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand,
 No son of mine succeeding. If it be so,
 For Banquo's issue have I fil'd<sup>a</sup> my mind;
 For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd:
 Put rancours in the vessel of my peace,
 Only for them; and mine eternal jewel
 Given to the common enemy of man,
 To make them kings, the seed of Banquo kings!
 Rather than so, come, fate, into the list,
 And champion me to the utterance!<sup>b</sup>—Who's there?—

Re-enter Attendant, with two Murderers.

Now go to the door, and stay there till we call.

[Exit Attendant]

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

1 Mur. It was, so please your highness.

Macb. Well then, now
 Have you consider'd of my speeches? Know,
 That it was he, in the times past, which held you
 So under fortune; which, you thought, had been
 Our innocent self: this I made good to you
 In our last conference; pass'd in probation with you, How you were borne in hand;<sup>c</sup> how cross'd; the instruments;

Who wrought with them; and all things else, that might,
 To half a soul, and to a notion craz'd,

Say, Thus did Banquo.

<sup>a</sup> Fil'd—doiled.

<sup>b</sup> Utterance.—The French combat a-outrance.

<sup>c</sup> Borne in hand—encouraged by false hopes

1 Mur. Macbeth is dead; he is dead.
 Macb. I will not believe it without the sight of his blood.
 2 Mur. He is dead, he is dead.
 Macb. He is dead, he is dead.
 1 Mur. He is dead, he is dead.
 Macb. He is dead, he is dead.

1 Mur. Macbeth is dead; he is dead.
 Macb. I will not believe it without the sight of his blood.
 2 Mur. He is dead, he is dead.
 Macb. He is dead, he is dead.
 1 Mur. He is dead, he is dead.
 Macb. He is dead, he is dead.

2 Mur. I am one, we singe,
 Whom the wife blows and buffets of the world
 Have so incensed, that I am swollen with
 I do to spite the world.

1 Mur. And I another,
 So waxy with disaster, tugg'd with sorrows,
 That I would set my life on any chance,
 To mend it, or be rid on 't.

Macb. Both of you
 Know, Banquo was your enemy.

2 Mur. From my bed.
 Macb. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance,
 That every minute of his being thrusts
 Against my near't of life: And though I could
 With bare-fac'd power sweep him from my sight,
 And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not,
 For certain friends that are both his and mine,
 Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall Whom I myself struck down: and thence it is That I to your assistance do make love;
 Masking the business from the common eye,
 For sundry weighty reasons.

2 Mur. We shall, my lord,
 Perform what you command us.

1 Mur. Though our lives—

Macb. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour, at most,

I will advise you where to plant yourselves.
 Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' the time,
 The moment on 't; for 't must be done to-night,*
 And something from the palace; always thought
 That I require a clearness: And with him,
 To leave no rubs, nor botches, in the work,
 To evince his son, that keeps him company
 Whose absence is no less material to me

* In the preceding part of this speech a distinction is drawn between the catalogue and the valued life. The catalogue contains the names of all; the valued life, select names. So in those lines there may be a "station in the file" above that of the "same rank." The rank, then, is the row,—the file, those who stand from the row, for superior qualities. Is not this the meaning of the military term, rank and file, which is still in use?
 Macb. "I will advise you where to plant yourselves."
 1 Mur. "Acquaint you"—inform yourselves—"with the spy"—with a most careful inquiry—"of the time"—the time of Banquo's return.
 2 Mur. "I must be done to-night."

That is his father's murderer
 Of that dark deed, done
 I'll come to you.

2 Mur. Macb. I'll call upon you
 It is concluded—
 If it find heaven's punishment

SCENE II.—Dunfermline

Enter Lady Macbeth

Lady M. Is this a dagger
 Serv. Ay, madam, which Lady M. See it before
 For a few moments.

Serv. Madam, 'tis
 Lady M. Where our desire is gone
 'T is safer to be that which we
 Than, by destruction, doom'd

How now, my lord? why do you
 Of sorriest fancies your Using those thin air-creatures
 With them they think on 't
 Should be without suspicion

Macb. We have ourselves
 She'll close, and be herself
 Remains in danger of our
 But let the frame of things
 Ere we will cut our way in
 In the affliction of these times
 That shake us nightly: but Whom we, to gain our peace
 Throw on the fork of war,
 In restless ecstasy:
 After life's fitful fever,
 Treason has done his worst,
 Malice domestic, mutual
 Can touch him further!

Lady M. Come on—
 Gentle my lord, speak to me
 Be bright and jocular

Macb. So shall I, but Let your remembrance
 Present him eminence Unsafe the while, that we Must love our enemies
 And make our faces
 Disguising what they are

Lady M. Macb.
 Macb. O, full of scorpions
 Thou know'st that Banquo

Lady M. But in this Macb. There's a
 Then be thou jocund:
 His cloister'd flight,
 The shroud-borne bear,
 Hath rung night's yawning
 There shall be done a deed

Lady M. What's to be
 Macb. Be innocent
 Till thou applaud the deed

Lady M. What's to be
 Macb. Be innocent
 Till thou applaud the deed

* Peace.—For this word of peace, folio substituted peace; and some editors, The repetition of peace in Shakespeare's manner, and such as that of Macbeth's peace, which is another instance of the crime distorting language, much higher in the sentiment of peace than that of peace.
 1 Mur. Macb.
 2 Mur. Macb.

Mur. 'T is Banquo's then.

Macb. 'T is better thee without, than he within.

Is he despatch'd ?

Mur. My lord, his throat is cut ; that I did for him.

Macb. Thou art the best o' the cut-throats : Yet he 's good.
